The word Ghayzh (fury) is when one burns with hatred for an opponent. The meaning of the verse is that Allah the Almighty repulsed the unbelievers whose hearts were filled with fury at the fact that they were forced to leave without taking anything from the Muslims; He the Almighty says: '…they gained no benefit…' (al-Ahzab: 25). This does not refer to good in its general sense, but to what they perceived as good. So, the verse means that they did not achieve victory over Muslims, which would have been good for them but bad for Islam. Allah the Almighty inflicted such a reverse on the unbelievers that they were unable to ever come back from it, for after that defeat, they never again thought of attacking the Muslims. That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said after they withdrew in defeat, ‘They will never attack us again. We will, however, attack them.’(1) And, indeed, the conquest of Mecca came soon after. As for the saying of Allah the Almighty ‘…and Allah spared the believers from fighting…' (al-Ahzab: 25), it means that it was not your strength or fighting prowess that defeated the unbelievers, but Allah the Almighty Himself is the One Who took care of that, repulsing them and sparing you the need of fighting them. It is true that there were a few skirmishes but nothing came close to turning the fighting into a full-blown war. And, indeed, it would not have been in the best interests of the believers if a battle had taken place since there were only three thousand Muslims, while there were ten thousands of the idolaters. So, it was Allah’s Mercy to the believers that caused their victory. For this reason, Allah the Almighty ends the verse with His saying, ‘…He is strong and mighty.' (al-Ahzab: 25) meaning that He is All Powerful, All Strong in the sense that He gave you victory without you even engaging in fighting. In addition, He is Almighty in the sense that He Glorified is He was the Conqueror, not the conquered. This is what happened to Quraysh and its allies.

As for Banu Quraydha, Allah the Almighty says:

وَأَنزَلَ ٱلَّذِينَ ظَٰهَرُوهُم مِّنْ أَهْلِ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ مِن صَيَاصِيهِمْ وَقَذَفَ
فِى قُلُوبِهِمُ ٱلرُّعْبَ فَرِيقًا تَقْتُلُونَ وَتَأْسِرُونَ فَرِيقًا ﴿٢٦﴾

He brought those People of the Book who supported them down from their strongholds and put panic into their hearts.
Some of them you [believers] killed and some you took captive[26] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 26)

The word Zhaharuhum (supported them) refers to those who helped them. As for the saying of Allah the Almighty: '...from their strongholds…' (al-Ahzab: 26), it means from their citadels and fortresses. As for His saying: '…and put panic into their hearts…' (al-Ahzab: 26), it refers to fear, which is one of the hosts of Allah the Almighty. It was this terror that He the Almighty cast into the hearts of the unbelievers and which caused them to split up and made the sheer size of their army meaningless, since of what value are legions of soldiers who are all terrified out of their wits as Allah the Almighty says: '…they think every cry to be against them…' (al-Munafiqun: 4)! Did the Companions not tell us that when they were cleaning their teeth with their siwak (sticks), the unbelievers thought that they were sharpening their teeth to eat them? This is the level of terror by which Allah the Almighty gave victory to His believing slaves. As for the saying of Allah the Almighty: '…Some of them you [believers] killed…' (al-Ahzab: 26), it refers to those combatants who bore weapons against you. As for His saying: '…and some you took captive.' (al-Ahzab: 26), it refers to the women, children and those who were not armed.

(1) See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no. 4109 & 4110; Ahmad, Musnad, Hadith no. 4/262, from a Hadith narrated on the authority of Sulayman ibn Sard. Al-'Asqalani said in Fath Al-Bari (7/405), ‘This contains one of the signs of prophethood for he went on ‘umra (voluntary pilgrimage) the following year and then, when Quraysh blocked him from coming to the House, he made a truce with them which remained in effect until they broke it. And that was the cause that led to the Muslim’s conquering Mecca. So everything happened as he said it would.’

Allah the Almighty then says:

وَأَوۡرَثَكُمۡ أَرۡضَهُمۡ وَدِيَٰرَهُمۡ وَأَمۡوَٰلَهُمۡ وَأَرۡضٗا لَّمۡ تَطَـُٔوهَاۚ
وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖ قَدِيرٗا ﴿٢٧﴾

He passed on to you their land, their houses, their possessions, and a land where you had not set foot: God has power over everything [27] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 27)

As for the saying of Allah the Almighty: 'He passed on to you…' (al-Ahzab: 27), it means that He the Almighty gave you the land, houses and possessions of your enemies after they had been wiped out and defeated. As for the saying of Allah the Almighty: '…and a land where you had not set foot…' (al-Ahzab: 27), it means new places you, O Muslims, have never been to before. This part of the verse refers mainly to the land of Khaybar. It is as if Allah the Almighty were saying to them, 'If you wait a while, then you will take a lot from them.' He the Almighty then says: '… Allah has power over everything.' (al-Ahzab: 27) Thus ends the Quranic description of the tale of the clans.(1) But it would be useful for us to now consider the philosophical implications of the various things that happened in the story, and look at the numerous acts of heroism that took place during it, and the roles that those heroes played.

(1) Ibn Abu Shayba, Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abu Hatim all narrated that Qatada said about the saying of Allah the Almighty: 'He brought those people of the Book who=

The story(1) begins when two of the leaders of Banu Qurayzha, i.e. Huyayy ibn Akhtab and Sallam ibn Abu Al-Huqayq went to see Quraysh in Mecca and said to them, ‘We have come to help you bring an end to the Call of Muhammad. If you attack from below and we attack from above, then we can surround him and his followers, thus destroy them completely.’ Quraysh had a certain amount of discernment, so they said to Huyayy ibn Akhtab, ‘You are people who have a Book and have more knowledge in matters of religion than we do, so tell us whose religion is better: ours or Muhammad’s?’ They replied, ‘You are the ones who are upon the truth.’(2)

= supported them…’ (al-Ahzab: 26) that it refers to Banu Qurayzha who offered their aid to Abu Sufyan, kept a line of communication open to him and broke the pact they had made with Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him. Then, while he Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him was with Zaynab bint Jahsh, washing his head after she had already washed his side, Gabriel came to him and said, ‘Allah the Almighty pardons you! It is forty days since the angels last put down their weapons. Go forth to the Banu Qurayzha. I have cut loose the pegs of their tents, flung open their doors and left them confused and shaken up.’

So Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him set out, laid siege to them and called out to them, addressing them as the brothers of monkeys. So they replied to him, saying, ‘Abu Al-Qasim, you never used to use bad language!’ Then they came down under the agreement that their fate would be in the hands of Sa‘d ibn Mu‘adh. He had been an ally of theirs, so they hoped he would treat them with mercy and compassion. However, Abu Lubaba gestured to them what their fate would be, so Allah the Almighty revealed the verse: ‘O you who believe! be not unfaithful to Allah and the Messenger…’ (al-Anfal: 27). Then Sa'd ruled that their combatants be killed, their children be enslaved and their lands and property be distributed among the Emigrants not the Helpers. Thereupon (some of) the Helpers said, ‘The Emigrants have been given preference over us by being given that property,’ so Sa'd said, ‘You are people who already have property, whereas the Emigrants have not had any property of their own.’ It is said that Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him then said the Takbir and said, ‘You have judged them with the Judgment of Allah the Almighty!’ See As-Suyuti, Ad-Durr Al-Manthur fi At- Tafsir bi Al-Ma’thur, 6/591.

Quraysh heard these words pandering to their desires and wishful thoughts, and as the saying goes, ‘Wishful thinking is the bane of good sense.’ That is why they, i.e. the people of Quraysh did not engage with them, i.e. the Jews in any discussion about the matter but simply went along with them; they even neglected to bring up the way the people of the Book had used to deal with them before Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him appeared on the scene, or the fact that they had used to pray for victory over them, i.e. Quraysh through the awaited Messenger, saying, ‘The time is at hand of a new Prophet whom we will follow, and with whose support, we will kill you as ʿAd and the people of ’Iram were killed.’(1)

Quraysh missed an opportunity to call Huyayy ibn Akhtab to account and ask him why their opinion about Muhammad had changed. Then, after that, the Quran showed up both these groups of people: ‘Have you not seen those to whom a portion of the Book has been given? They believe in idols and false deities and say of those who disbelieve: These are better guided in the path than those who believe.' (an-Nisa’: 51) This was the first example of brainlessness and unsound reasoning in the battle. Quraysh, finding someone

Quraysh replied, ‘We maintain our ties of kinship, sacrifice camels, give water to drink in exchange for (laban), let our prisoners go and give water to the pilgrims, while Muhammad is a solitary palm-tree who has cut off his ties of kinship to us and who has been followed by those thieving pilgrims from Ghifar. So who is better than the other: we or him?’ They replied, ‘You are better and more surely guided.’ See Ibn Kathir, Tafsir, 1/513.*

(1) Mohamed ibn ’Ishaq narrated from 'Asim ibn 'Amr from Qatada Al-’Ansari that one of his teachers said, ‘By Allah the Almighty this story – meaning the verse: 'And when there came to them a Book from Allah verifying that which they have, and aforetime they used to pray for victory against those who disbelieve, but when there came to them (Prophet) that which they did not recognise, they disbelieved in him...' (al-Baqara: 89) – was revealed about us and about them – meaning about the Helpers and the Jews who were their neighbours. The Helpers said, ‘In the time of ignorance before Islam, we, the idolaters, subjugated them, the People of the Book, and held the upper hand over them, so they would say to us, ‘A Prophet will now be sent whom we will follow: his time is at hand, and when he arrives, we will kill you as 'Ad and the people of ’Iram were killed.’ Then when Allah the Almighty sent a Prophet from Quraysh, we followed them and they rejected him.’ See Ibn Kathir , Tafsir, (1/124).

willing to help them against Prophet Muhammad and his religion, seized the opportunity and gathered together its soldiers as well those from its allies from Banu Fudhara, Banu Murra, Ghatafan, Banu Asad, the people of Al-Ashja‘ and others. All of these tribes banded together to try to finish off the new religion. The first act of heroism that took place in this battle was not by an Arab, but by someone from Persia, the nation of fire-worshippers – May Allah the Almighty protect us from ever doing that. It was as if Allah the Almighty were committed to bring about the triumph of Truth even if that had to be through something false. The hero in question was the esteemed Companion, Salman Al-Farisi,(1) who had spent his whole life wandering the earth searching for the Truth until the winds of fate brought him to Medina; and it was there that he encountered Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and believed in him. By suggesting the construction of the trench to him peace and blessings be upon him Salman became the first hero of the battle. He said, ‘O Messenger of Allah, when the fighting became intense, we – meaning the Persians – built trenches,’ meaning that they placed ditches between themselves and the enemy. Both the Emigrants and the Helpers met this idea with approval and so both of them tried to claim Salman as one of their own. But when their dispute reached Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him he denied both of them and said, ‘Salman is one of us, the people of the House (Ahlu Al-Bayt).’(2) This was the greatest honour that could possibly have been given to Salman. This idea of Salman's is a proof that Allah the Almighty even conscripts falsehood to serve in the army of Truth – we had never even seen a trench before nor met the Persian people who came up with the idea, and yet, by means of this great Companion, Allah the Almighty conveyed it to us and made it serve in our defence as one of His Hosts. He did this so that we might know, as He the Almighty says, '…and know that Allah intervenes between man and his heart…' (al-Anfal: 24). We fully illustrated this point when we commented on the story of Pharaoh in which he slaughtered the children of the Israelites after hearing the prophecy that one of them would bring about his downfall. Then, one day, an infant came to him in a way, not normally expected, carried to him in a box floating upon the water. Everyone well-knows that the reason the infant's family did that to him was to get him as far out of the reach of Pharaoh as possible but, despite that, Allah the Almighty intervened between Pharaoh and the desires of his heart, thus caused him to be the one who took the child into his home and raise him as a son.

(1) Salman Al-Farisi was one of the foremost Companions: he originally came from a family of Magians in Isfahan. He travelled to Sham and Nisabin and read the books of the Persians, Byzantines and Jews. Then he heard about Islam, sought out Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and heard what he had to say. He did not become Muslim, however, until after he had been freed from the bondage of slavery. He used to weave together wool and eat barley bread bought with money he had earned. He died in 36 A.H. See Az-Zirkili, Al-‘Alam, 3/112.

(2) 'Amr ibn 'Awf Al-Muzni said, ‘In the year of the battle of the clans, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him dug a trench, beginning at the place where the palm trees were at their thickest at the edge of (the lands of) the Banu Haritha, and assigned work crews of ten people to every forty arm’s length of the trench. While this was being done, the Emigrants and the Helpers quarreled over Salman Al-Farisi who was a strong man, with the Helpers saying that he was one of them and the Emigrants saying the same. So, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Salman is one of us, the people of the House (Ahlu Al-Bayt).’ See Al-Bayhaqi, Dala’il An-Nubuwwa, 3/418; Al-Hakim, Al-Mustadrak, 3/598. Adh-Dhahabi, however, considered this Hadith to have a weak chain of narrations because of the presence of Kathir ibn 'Abdullah as one of the narrators.

A poet expressed this beautifully when he wrote:

If you find no concern in your children
Then know that hopes are often dashed and left unrealised:
The Moses who was raised by Gabriel became an unbeliever,
While the Moses who was raised by Pharaoh became a Messenger!

The second hero of this battle was a man called Nu'aym ibn Mas'ud Al-'Ashja'i.(1) He came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said to him, 'O Messenger of Allah, my heart has become favourably disposed to Islam, but there is not one of my people who knows that.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'What use are you alone? What you can do, however, (is to go among them) and use trickery on our behalf,'(1) meaning that 'use whatever means available to you to rid us of them – such as making them get lost on the way or go far away or instilling fear in them by telling them that our army is huge.' This is a man who was only the previous day an unbeliever, and yet look what effect faith had on his heart even though it had been there for but a short while. Nu'aym looked around and saw that Quraysh and its followers were coming from below and Banu Quraydha and its followers were coming from above. He wanted to create discord between the two parties, so he went to Abu Sufyan and said, 'Abu Sufyan, I am your friend and you know I have no connection to the religion of Muhammad. However, I have heard a rumour that Banu Qurayzha have made peace with Muhammad, saying that Quraysh and her allies do not live in Medina so, if they achieve victory, the victory will be theirs, but if they lose, then they will run home leaving Banu Qurayzha at the mercy of Muhammad. That is why they have decided not to fight by your side unless you leave ten of your top men with them as hostages.' After Abu Sufyan had heard these words, he went to his people and said to them, 'Stay here, this is not part of the homeland of Banu Qurayzha. They are planning to leave you to fight Muhammad alone, so if you want them to hold to their agreement to fight Muhammad, then you must ask them to give you some hostages to act as guarantors that they will support you. Then, after that, Abu Sufyan went to Banu Qurayzha to speak to them about this matter. He said to them, 'Our camels and horses have perished and we are not in a place where we are resident, so let us go and fight Muhammad now.' And this after they had already spent more than twenty days in consultation and making promises to one another. Banu Qurayzha, however, replied, 'Today is the Sabbath. We are not prepared to pervert our religion in order to fight Muhammad, and in any case, we are not going to participate in the fighting with you anyway unless you leave ten of your top men with us as hostages.' As soon as Abu Sufyan found out what Nu'aym ibn Mas'ud Al-'Ashja'i said to be true, he gathered together his people and said to them, ‘This land is not one in which we are resident and our camels and horses have perished, so let us save ourselves.’ When Nuʿaym ibn Masʿud came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and told him what happened, he peace and blessings be upon him felt a feeling of calm come over him and said, ‘Is there any man among you who will go to them and then come back and tell us what has become of them? He will be my close companion in Paradise.’ What he meant was that he wanted someone to insinuate himself among the ranks of the enemy and find out what they were up to. But despite the good news that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gave of the one who might perform this task, not one of those present stepped forward. This proved that the level of fear felt by the Muslims at that time was huge and that the danger they confronted was acute – the people were suffering from exhaustion, hunger and fear and so felt themselves unable to carry out this task that was asked of them. So, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him entrusted the task to a man named Hudhayfa ibn Al-Yaman. Hudhayfa said, ‘Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him however, said to me, “Do not do anything until you come back to me.” So I went and spent a night mingling with the army, sitting among the people. Then, when Abu Sufyan brought back his report from the Banu Quraydha, wanting to go away with those who were with him, he said to the people, out of fear that there might be a stranger among them, ‘You should all look at the person you are sitting next to in order to make sure that you know them.’ It was at this point that the ingenuity and quick thinking of Hudhayfa came to the fore: he said, ‘I quickly turned to the man on my right and said, “Who are you?” He replied, ʿMu‘awiyya ibn Abu Sufyan.’ Then I turned to the man on my left and said, ‘Who are you?’ and he replied, ‘ʿAmr ibn Al-ʿAs.(1)’ I then heard Abu Sufyan say to the people, ‘Our camels and horses have perished and this land is not one in which we are resident, so let us go and I will be the first of you to do so.’ And in his rush to leave, he mounted his camel without untethering it first.’ Hudhayfa said, ‘I decided to kill him so I got out my bow, strung it and placed an arrow in its notch. At that point, however, I remembered the words of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him “Do not do anything until you come back to me’ so I stopped myself from killing him. Then when I came back to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him I found him praying. When he felt my presence, and knowing it to be a very cold day, he made a gap between his legs, bade me come and sit at his feet and threw the end of his wrapper over me to warm me up. Then, after he finished his prayer, he said to me, ‘What is your news?’ so I related my story to him.(1)

(1) Nu'aym ibn Mas'ud 'Amir Al-'Ashja'i, Abu Salama, was a famous Companion who embraced Islam during the battle of the Trench. It was he who instigated the disagreement between the tribes of Qurayzha and Ghatafan, which led to Ghatafan leaving Medina. Nu'aym was killed at the battle of the Camel during the beginning of the Caliphate of 'Ali before 'Ali had come to Basra. It is also said that he died during the Caliphate of 'Uthman, and Allah the Almighty knows best. See Ibn Hajar, Al-'Isaba fi Tamyiz As-Sahaba, no. 8780.

(1) In his As-Sira An-Nabawiyya, Ibn Hisham says: 'Nu'aym ibn Mas'ud came to Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him and said, 'Messenger of Allah, I have become Muslim, and my people have no knowledge of that fact, so tell me what I should do.' Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'If you stay here with us you are but a single man, so, if you can, (go back to them) and use trickery to relieve us of them. War is deception.'

(1) In his Dala’il An-Nubuwwa (3/451), Al-Bayhaqi mentioned in a Hadith from Hudhayfa that, ‘Abu Sufyan felt that there was a stranger in their midst, so he said, “Let everyone take hold of the hand of the man sitting next to him,” so I tapped the man to my right and took hold of his hand, and tapped the man to my left and took hold of his hand.’ See Al-Hakim, Mustadrak, 3/31. In his Tafsir (3/471), Ibn Kathir mentioned another narration and attributed to Ibn ’Ishaq that Abu Sufyan said, ‘O people of Quraysh, let every man among you look to who is sitting next to him.’ Hudhayfa said, ‘So I took hold of the hand of the man beside me and said, “Who are you?” He replied, “I am so-and-so,”’ mentioning neither Muʿawiyya nor ʿAmr, and Allah the Almighty knows best.

After conscripting both Nuʿaym ibn Masʿud Al-’Ashja‘i and Hudhayfa to serve the Truth, Allah the Almighty then brought forth other armies that they were unable to see. That happened during an exceedingly cold and blustery night. A gale, which uprooted their tents, came and overturned their cooking pots and drove them back so that whoever remained fled as fast as they could. This is what is meant by the saying of Allah the Almighty: '…He is strong and mighty.' (al-Ahzab: 25) and ‘…none knows the hosts of your Lord but He Himself…' (al-Muddaththir: 31). Then, after Allah the Almighty repulsed the rage-filled unbelievers of Mecca and spared the believers the need of fighting them, He wanted to turn their attention to another front, that of the Banu Quraydha Jews. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him returned from fighting the clans, Jibril (Gabriel) met with him and said, ‘Have you laid down your arms, Muhammad, when the angels have not yet laid down their own weapons of war? Go and seek victory for yourself over the Banu Quraydha.’ So, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to his people, ‘If you are truly one who hears and obeys, then do not pray the ʿAsr prayer unless it is among Banu Quraydha.’(2)

(1) See Al-Bayhaqi, Dala’il An-Nubuwwa, 3/451; Ibn Kathir, Tafsir, 3/471.

(2) Ibn Hajar Al-'Asqalani narrated it with this wording in his commentary on Al-Bukhari [Fath Al-Bari 7/408] from something said by Ibn ’Ishaq. The original version of the Hadith is narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (4119) from a Hadith narrated on the authority of Ibn 'Umar that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said on the day of [the battle] of the clans, ‘Let none of you pray 'Asr until he is in (the houses of) the Banu Qurayzha.’

The Companions did not agree among themselves about what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him meant: some of them took his words literally and betook themselves to the houses of the Banu Qurayzha as quickly as possible, making an intention to pray the ʿAsr prayer there; while others, fearing that they might miss the time of ʿAsr, prayed it immediately and then left. Then, when the two groups gathered together with him peace and blessings be upon him he declared both opinions to be correct. This occurrence is one of the reference points in Islamic thought for the principle of ijtihad (personal reasoning). ‘Asr is an event, and events have a fixed time and a fixed place. Some of the Companions looked at the time element and saw that the sun was on the point of setting so they prayed; and others looked at the place element and so made sure that they did not pray until they were in the houses of Banu Qurayzha. And that is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him approved both groups.(1) Every Muslim should be wary of delaying a prayer beyond its time. The time of ‘Asr, for example, extends from the time in which an object’s shadow is twice as long as the object itself until sunset, but that does not mean that you delay its performance until the end of its time. It is true that if you pray at the end of its time, you incur no sin, but what guarantee do you have that you will still be living till the end of its time? Therefore, even though you incur no sin for praying a prayer at the end of its time, if you were to die then without praying that prayer you would be spending the last moments of your life in sin. And that is the reason why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘The best form of action is praying the prayer in its time.’(2) So the fact that a prayer’s time is prolonged does not give you an excuse to delay it. Another case of heroism in the battle of the clans was that of ʿAli ibn Abu Taleb. His heroism demonstrated itself when some of the unbelievers found a section of the trench narrow enough for their horses to leap over, thus allowing them to venture against the Muslims. After they had leapt to the other side, their horses patrolled the marshy area between the trench and Sal ‘Mountain. Then one of the unbelievers stepped forward – that unbeliever was ʿAmr ibn Wudd Al-‘Amiri(1) who was at that time considered to be the bravest and strongest warrior among all the Arabs and whose battle prowess was considered to be equivalent to that of one thousand horsemen. ʿAmr ibn Wudd Al-ʿAmiri stood in front of the Muslim camp brandished his sword and called out, ‘Who will meet me in battle?’ So ʿAli said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘May I fight him, Messenger of Allah?’ Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, ‘No, ʿAli, stay seated for it is ʿAmr.’ Then ‘Amr repeated his challenge and said, ‘Where is this Paradise that you promise to those who are killed in this way? Give me an answer!’ ʿAli again said, ‘May I fight him, Messenger of Allah?’ but he again replied, ‘No, ʿAli, stay seated for it is ʿAmr.’ Then, on the third time, ‘Amr said,

(1) This is an agreed upon Hadith. See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no .4119; Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 1770 in Kitab Al-Jihad in the chapter on ‘Going out to battle’ from a Hadith narrated on the authority of Ibn ʿUmar, in which he states that the time for the ʿAsr prayer arrived while some of the Companions were on the way (to the Banu Qurayzha), so some of them said, ‘We will not pray until we reach them,’ and others said, ‘Rather, we will pray now. That is not what he wanted of us.’ Then, when this was mentioned to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him he did not rebuke either party.

(2) Ibn Masʿud said, ‘I asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him what the best form of action was. He replied, ‘(Praying) the prayer in its time.’ ‘Then what?’ I asked. He replied, “Then jihad in the way of Allah the Almighty.’ This Hadith is agreed upon. See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, no. (2782); Muslim, Sahih, no (85) in Kitab Al-’Iman

I have become hoarse from calling out.
Is there not one man amongst your group who will fight me?
I stand here when brave men show themselves cowardly
As a true peerless warrior
In young men, bravery
And generosity is the best qualities.

Upon hearing this, ʿAli leapt to his feet and said, ‘Let him be mine, Messenger of Allah.’ So he peace and blessings be upon him gave him permission to fight. Then ʿAli motioned to ʿAmr and said,

Do not be hasty. One comes
To answer your call who is no weakling.

(1) He is ʿAmr ibn ʿAbd Wudd, a Qurayshi from the Banu Lu’ay. He was a horseman of Quraysh in the time of Ignorance before Islam, but he was still around after the advent of Islam without becoming Muslim. He lived until the battle of the Trench, and despite having reached the age of eighty, he took part in the fighting. ʿAli ibn Abu Taleb killed him in the year 5 AH. See Az-Zirikli, Al-‘Alam, 5/81.

A man of firm resolve and keen insight
Truth is the saviour of everyone successful:
Indeed I hope to be the cause
Of women mourning over your dead body
Killed by the blow of a spear
Which will be remembered as long as there's war' (1)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had at that time a loose-fitting piece of chain mail armour known as 'Dhat Al-Fudul, so he gave, it to ʿAli to wear. He also gave him his sword, Dhu Al-Fiqar, and his turban, As-Sahhab, which was wound around seven times. Then ʿAli went out to meet 'Amr in single combat. When they met, 'Amr struck him on the shield and split it. But ʿAli quickly aimed a blow with his sword at his shoulder and ʿAmr fell to the ground dead. As soon as he fell, ʿAli shouted out, 'Allah the Almighty is the Greatest.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him heard those words and said, 'The enemy of Allah the Almighty has been killed.' Then the dust of war rose and obscured the battle so that nothing could be seen. So ʿUmar went out to find out what had happened, and he found ʿAli wiping his sword clean on the armour of ʿAmr ibn Wudd and so called out, 'Allah the Almighty is the greatest.' So, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'By Allah, the enemy has been killed!' This event highlighted some of ʿAli's good qualities of character. When he returned from killing ʿAmr, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked him, 'Did you strip him of his armour? It is the best armour that any Arab possesses.' ʿAli replied, 'By Allah the Almighty because his private parts were to be exposed, I felt too ashamed to do that.'(2)

(1) These verses are mentioned in a context of this sort by Abu Bakr Al-Bayhaqi in Dala'il An-Nubuwwa (3/438 & 439).

(2) In his Dala'il An-Nubuwwa (3/439), Al-Bayhaqi said that the one who asked ʿAli that was ʿUmar ibn Al-Khattab. He related that ʿUmar said to him, 'Have you stripped him of his armour? There is no armour better than it among the Arabs.' ʿAli replied, 'When I struck him down, he turned his private parts towards me, so I felt too embarrassed, my cousin, to strip it from him.' Allah the Almighty knows best.

Then, pointing at ʿAmr(1), he recited the following:

In his stupidity he fought for bits of stone
While I rightly fought for the Lord of Muhammad
I turned away when I left his body prostrate upon to the ground
Lying like a stump between the rocks and the sand
I refrained from taking his garments even though
Were I the one fallen, he would have stripped me of mine.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said about this particular event: ‘Even if you were not to do anything else for Islam, (what you have done today) would have been enough for you.’ This is the reason those with gnosis of Allah the Almighty say that, by killing ʿAmr ibn Wudd, ʿAli became the subject of envy and was thus afflicted by the evil eye which led to him eventually being killed by Ibn Muljim. Because of this, they said that the most beloved blow in Islam was that delivered by ʿAli to ʿAmr ibn Wudd, and the most calamitous blow in Islam was that delivered by Ibn Muljim to ʿAli. Another case of heroism in the battle was that of Saʿd ibn Muʿadh(2) about which he said, ‘On the day of the battle of the clans, Hibban ibn Qays ibn Al-ʿAriqa struck me a blow and said, “Take that from me, the son of Al-ʿAriqa(3)!” So I replied, “Allah the Almighty make your face sweat in Hell!” When he hit me in the vein – and this vein is the one into which needles are injected and from which blood is let when people undergo cupping – I said to myself, “O Allah, if this is the final battle in which I take part between Quraysh, and us then grant me martyrdom. But if You know that they are going to come back another time, then prolong my life so I can take vengeance on those who drove out and insulted Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; and do not let me die until I have quenched my thirst for revenge on Banu Qurayzha.”’(1)

(1) In his As-Sira An-Nabawiyya (3/225), Ibn Hisham mentioned these verses and ascribed them to Ibn ’Ishaq. Then he said, ‘Most of those with knowledge of poetry doubt whether it was really 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb who said these verses.

(2) He is Sa'd ibn Mu'adh ibn An-Nu'man Al-Awsi Al-Ansari, one of the heroes of the Companions from Medina. He was the leader of the tribe of Aws and took part in the battles of Badr and Uhud. He was struck by an arrow on the day of the battle of the Trench and died as a result of that wound in the year 5 AH when he was 37 years old. See Az-Zirikli, Al-‘Alam, 3/88.

(3) Al-'Ariqa was Qilaba bint Sa‘d ibn Sahm. Her patronymic (kunya) was Umm Fatima, but she was known as Al-'Ariqa because of the beautiful way she smelled. She was the grandmother of Khadija, the mother of her mother Hala. See As-Suhayli, Ar-Rawd Al-’Unuf.

And it came to pass as he asked. After the siege of the clans, Banu Qurayzha had held out for approximately twenty-five days without any fighting, when finally negotiations brought the whole affair to an end; Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him appointed Saʿd ibn Muʿadh to be the arbiter in this affair. So, Saʿd passed judgment that the combatants of the Banu Quraydha be killed, their women, and children be taken into captivity and their wealth be confiscated. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him heard his judgement, he said, ‘You have passed judgment over them according to the judgement of the Lord of the seven heavens.’(2) Then the wound that Saʿd had received flared up again until it became so bad that he died of it. So they carried him to the tent of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had set up in the mosque, whereupon the angels came down and said to him peace and blessings be upon him ‘Who is this who has died? The throne of the Most Merciful shook on his behalf!’ Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, ‘It is Saʿd ibn Muʿadh.’(3)

(1) In his As-Sira An-Nabawiyya (3/226), Ibn Hisham and in his Dala’il An-Nubuwwa (3/441), Al-Bayhaqi mentioned it in with the addition, ‘O Allah the Almighty if you have appointed war between us and them, then grant me martyrdom by means of it, but do not let me die until You have given me satisfaction with respect to Banu Qurayzha.

(2) From Abu Sa'id Al-Khudri that people came down [from their fortresses] to hear the judgment of Sa'd ibn Mu'adh, so he was sent for and came on the back of a donkey. Then, when he had neared the mosque, Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Stand up for the best of you – or he said, ‘for your master.’ Then he said, ‘Sa'd, these people have come down [to hear and submit] to your judgment.’ Sa‘d replied, ‘Then I give judgment that their combatants be killed and their children be enslaved.’ Whereupon Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘You have passed judgment over them according to the judgment of Allah the Almighty – or he said, ‘the judgment of the King.’ See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no. 3804.

(3) In his Mustadrak [3/207], Al-Hakim mentioned that ‘in a Hadith from 'Abdullah ibn Ka'b ibn Malik that Sa'd lived for about a month after being wounded by an arrow until, on the command of Prophet Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him he passed judgment over Banu Qurayzha. Then, that night, after returning to the city of=

Allah the Almighty said: '… Some of them you [believers] killed and some you took captive.' (al-Ahzab: 26) As for the saying of Allah the Almighty: '…and a land where you had not set foot…' (al-Ahzab: 27) it means that Allah the Almighty gives the believers the good news that those lands would be conquered by them without them even having to fight. And, indeed, such was the case in most of the lands the Muslims came to: it was the noble conduct of the Muslims of that era that opened up most of those countries to them, not their weight of arms. By this, we are able to refute those who claim that Islam was spread by the sword. If Islam was truly spread by the sword, then whose sword was it that caused the very first Muslims to enter into Islam, since they were the weakest of people and were not even able to defend themselves?! No, it was nothing but the noble conduct they witnessed that caused them to take on the faith. We mentioned previously that 'Umar, a man known for his strength and severity, said when he heard the saying of Allah: 'Soon shall the hosts be routed, and they shall turn (their) backs.' (al-Qamar: 45) 'What hosts are those, when we as Muslims are unable to even defend ourselves?' showing how weak he saw the Muslims and how strong the unbelievers.(1) And if Islam had indeed spread by the sword, then all of the inhabitants of the lands conquered by Islam would have become Muslim and there would have been no need for the (jizya) tax in Islamic jurisprudence. But the fact that there is a jizya (tax) levied on those who do not believe proves the lie of that assertion and proves that there is no compulsion in religion in Islam. The reality was that the Islamic conquests guaranteed freedom of belief. Allah the Almighty says:

= Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him his wound erupted and he died. [At that moment], Gabriel came to him Allah's peace and blessings be upon him and said to him, 'Who is this for whom the gates of Paradise have been thrown open, and on whose behalf the throne of the Most Merciful has shaken?' Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him went out to where Sa'd was and found that he had died.' Ibn Hajar said in (Al-Fath) [7/124], 'The shaking of the throne signifies its joy and happiness at the arrival of his soul.'

(1) In his Tafsir, Ibn Kathir ascribed to Abu Hatim [4/266] that 'Ikrima said, 'When the verse: "Soon shall the hosts be routed, and they shall turn (their) backs." (al-Qamar: 45) was revealed, 'Umar said, "Which hosts will be routed? Which hosts will be defeated?" 'Umar said, "On the day of the battle of Badr, when I saw Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him leap into his armour and say, 'The hosts will be routed!' I finally understood the significance of the verse.'

'…so let him who please believe, and let him who please disbelieve…' (al-Kahf: 29) and pay the jizya (tax) to the Muslim treasury in exchange for certain services done for him by the state. Therefore, jizya, which some of you use as a reason to curse Islam is, in fact, a proof that Islam acknowledges your religion. The only reason the sword was used was to protect the ability to call people to Islam, if I want to present Islam to the people, I have the right to fight those who try to prevent me from doing that with weapons. I have the right to set the principles of Islam before the people. Then, if they believe in it, they are gladly accepted, but if they do not, then they come under our protection. Then Allah the Almighty transports us to the houses of the wives of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Allah the Almighty says(1):

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلنَّبِيُّ قُل لِّأَزْوَٰجِكَ إِن كُنتُنَّ تُرِدْنَ ٱلْحَيَوٰةَ ٱلدُّنْيَا وَزِينَتَهَا
فَتَعَالَيْنَ أُمَتِّعْكُنَّ وَأُسَرِّحْكُنَّ سَرَاحًا جَمِيلًا ﴿٢٨﴾

Prophet, say to your wives, 'If your desire is for the present life and its finery, then come, I will make provision for you and release you with kindness [28] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 28)

Someone might ask what the significance is of this incredible jump from speaking about the war against the clans and the Banu Qurayzha to mentioning this directive from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to his wives. The answer is found in the verse that ends the story of the battle of the clans, when Allah the Almighty says: 'He passed on to you their land, their houses, their possessions, and a land where you had not set foot…' (al-Ahzab: 27). It might well be that the wives of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him upon hearing this, demanded that he give them a portion of the wealth of those lands that had been opened up to him by Allah the Almighty and so Allah

(1) In his Tafsir, Al-Qurtubi (7/5422) said: 'Our scholars say that there is a connection between this verse and the understood meaning of the previous verses that it is forbidden to harm or wrong Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. And he had been disturbed by some of his wives when they made certain requests of him: it is said that they asked him for the good things of this world; it is said that they asked him for an increase in their maintenance payments; and it is said that it was their jealousy of one another that caused him pain.

the Almighty revealed the verse: ‘Prophet, say to your wives…’ (al-Ahzab: 28) to establish the fact that Islam does not afford any special privileges to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him or to his family. Indeed, not even the proceeds of (zakat) may be given to the descendent of the Banu Hashim. But the fact that this verse appears in the imperative form thus: ‘Prophet, say to your wives, ‘If your desire…’ (al-Ahzab: 28) proves that some of the Prophet’s wives did something that indicated their desire for the charms and good things of life. It is narrated by ‘Umar that they gathered together to ask Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for maintenance payments and that he be munificent towards them, after hearing what he said about the unbelievers [of Quraysh] when he said, They will never again attack us, but we will attack them’ (1), and after the verses had been revealed giving the Muslims the good news of those lands that would become theirs. As for the saying of Allah the Almighty: ‘…then come, I will make provision for you and release you with kindness’ (al-Ahzab: 28), it means that I do not have those charms and things of this world that you want.’ As for the word ta'alayn (then come), it normally means ‘Come here’, but here means ‘Rise above’. In other words, ‘Rise above the programs of mankind and the earth to the programs of the Creator of mankind and the Creator of the earth, for it is in the Program of Allah the Almighty that dominion is found, not in the baubles and charms of this world.’

This meaning of the word (ta'alaw) is also found in the saying of Allah the Almighty: ‘Say: Come I will recite what your Lord has forbidden to you…’ (al-An‘am: 151) meaning: rise above the laws of mankind and the laws of the earth to the laws of Heaven since the condition stipulated for those who draw up laws is that they not be the sole beneficiaries of those laws, and that they be fully cognizant of all of the secondary issues that might come up in relation to those laws. There will always be things that mankind is ignorant of no matter how powerful or knowledgeable they become, so the only one who should draw up laws for them should be their Creator. As for the saying of Allah the Almighty: '…umatti 'kunna…' (al-Ahzab: 28), it is translated as 'I shall provide for you'; it literally means 'I shall give you the legal compensation due to a wife when she is divorced by her husband'. This legal compensation is referred to in the saying of Allah the Almighty:(1) 'and for the divorced women (too) provision (must be made) according to usage; (this is) a duty on those who guard (against evil).' (al-Baqara: 241) As for the saying of Allah the Almighty: '...and release you...' (al-Ahzab: 28), release refers here to divorce. As for His saying: '…and release you with kindness.' (al-Ahzab: 28), this indicates that if a man and wife separate, they should separate in a becoming manner – in other words, their split should be amicable and kind, not vicious and spiteful. The reason for this is because the act of separating from one another is painful in itself, so Allah the Almighty wants to avoid there being two agonies in a single act: the agony caused by divorce and the agony caused by vicious and spiteful words. You may notice that the word (jamal) is often mentioned in the Quran in connection with difficult matters that cause people distress. For example, look at the saying of Allah the Almighty: '…so patience is good…' (Yusuf: 83). Patience is beautiful and goodly when it is not accompanied by complaints, feelings of exasperation or going beyond the limits of moderation. So Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is offering his wives an amicable divorce without rancor or ill-feeling if that is what they want for themselves – it was not for him to remain married to a woman who chose something else instead of him, no matter what that thing was that she chose. The scholars said a lot concerning whether offering a choice such as this to a woman is tantamount to divorce or not. They say that this process of offering her a choice is like handing over the right of divorce to the woman – it is the same as saying, for example, that the bond of marriage is in her hands. Then she is free to choose for herself – if she chooses the first option then the divorce comes about, but if she chooses the second option, then the marriage is still alright and the matter is at an end.(1) Allah's Command to His Messenger to say these words to his wives indicates that those sorts of thoughts must have occurred to his wives when they saw Islam conquer all those lands and amass all those riches and so they hoped for some of that to come their way. The Arabic word azwaj (wives) is actually the plural of the word zawj (spouse) which applies equally to both men and women. The word, however, does not mean 'couple', it does not mean both of them together as some people think. Rather, it refers to one for which another of its type exists (i.e. one of a pair). It is exactly the same as the word (taw'am), 'twin' which refers to a single being that is accompanied by another being that is like it. The proof of this is found in the saying of Allah the Almighty: 'And of everything We have created pairs…' (adh-Dhariyat: 49); it means male and female. The male on his own is a (zawj), and the female on her own is a (zawj). This division (into males and females) exists in all creatures. The word (zawj) also has the plural (zawjat).

(1) See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, no. 4109&4110; Ahmad, Musnad, Hadith no. (4/262) from a Hadith narrated on the authority of Sulayman ibn Ṣard. In a second narration in Al-Bukhari, it says, ‘We will go to them.’ Ibn Hajar said in (Al-Fath) [7/405], ‘This contains one of the signs of prophethood for he went on (‘umra) (voluntary pilgrimage) the following year and then, when Quraysh blocked him from coming to the House, he made a truce with them which remained in effect until they broke it. And that was the cause that led to the Muslim’s conquering Mecca. So everything happened as he said it would.’

(1) Ibn Kathir said in his (Tafsir) [1/297], 'Those scholars who viewed this form of compensation for divorced women as being obligatory used this verse as proof, regardless of whether or not the amount of the compensation was agreed in advance, and regardless of whether or not the woman was divorced before consummation. This was the opinion of Ash-Shafi'i, which was the position adopted by Sa'id ibn Jubayr and others of the (Salaf) and was that chosen by Ibn Jarir.

We notice with regard to the literary style of the verse that when Allah the Almighty proposes to His Messenger that he offers his wives the choice between the trinkets of this world and the delights of the Hereafter, He uses the word ('in) which indicates doubt and does not use the word idha which indicates certainty. This indicates that the accusation against them was not particularly strong, and that it amounted to no more than a few thoughts crossing the minds of a few of his wives.

As you know, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was married to nine wives at the same time: five of these wives were from Quraysh, namely; ʿA'isha, Hafsa, Umm Habiba, Sawda bint Zam'a and Umm Salama bint abu 'Umayya; four from outside Quraysh, namely; Safiyya bint Huyayy ibn Akhtab (whose father's story was mentioned in the story of the battle of the Confederates), Juwayriyya bint Al-Harith from Banu Mustaliq, Maymuna bint Al-Harith AL-Hilaliyya– and anyone who visits Tanʿim will find a well there called the 'well of Maymuna' – and Zaynab bint Jahsh from the Banu Asad. These were the nine mothers of the believers who were all married to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him at the same time. When(1) they came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asking him for maintenance payments, the boldest one amongst them was Hafsa bint ʿUmar! Words were exchanged between her and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so he asked her whether she wanted someone to come and decide between them. When she agreed, he sent for ʿUmar. Then, after ʿUmar had arrived, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to Hafsa, 'Speak your piece,' meaning that she should set out what she wanted. She, however, replied, 'No, you speak your piece first, and only say what is true!' Her words awoke feelings of anger in the heart of ʿUmar: indeed he became so angry that he went up to her and slapped her. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him tried to restrain him, but he still took hold of her and slapped her a second time. Then ʿUmar said to her, 'Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him only ever speaks the truth! By Allah the Almighty if it were not for the fact that Iwas in his salon, I would not have stopped beating you until you were dead!' Thereupon, the Messenger got up from where he was sitting in order to bring the argument to an end. Then he went to his room and secluded himself therein. Indeed, he stayed there, cutting off relations from everyone for a full month.(2)

(1) Ash-Shafi'i said, 'Offering a choice (takhyir) is an indirect declaration of intent (kinaya) – if a man offers his wife a choice, wanting her to choose between divorcing him or remaining under his matrimonial authority, and then she chooses herself, intending that choice to constitute a divorce, then the divorce is ratified. If she were to say, however, that she did not intend divorce by choosing herself, then her word is accepted.' Al-Qurtubi said in (Al-Mufhim) that when a woman offered the choice says she chooses herself, that choice of hers represents a divorce even though she has not uttered any word that indicates divorce itself. As for Al-Hafizh Ibn Hajar Al-'Asqalani, he said, 'But the most obvious meaning of the verse indicates that offering the choice does not bring about divorce in itself, but it is still necessary for the husband to instigate the divorce [after she makes her choice clear to him]. This is because the actual wording of the verse is: '…then come, I will make provision for you and release you…' (al-Ahzab: 28), means 'I shall release you after you have made your choice.'

Reflect on the saying of Allah the Almighty: '…If your desire is for the present life and its finery…' (al-Ahzab: 28). What description of this world could possibly be lower or more derogatory than calling it dunya (literally, ‘the lowest’)? And all the enjoyments in it are no more than decoration – in other words, delightful on the surface but lacking in any real substance. It is as Allah the Almighty says in another verse in the Quran: ‘Know that this world’s life is only sport and play and gaiety and boasting among yourselves, and a vying in the multiplication of wealth and children…’ (al-Hadid: 20).

(1) The story of the misunderstanding between 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the latter calling her father.

(2) The narrations disagree with one another regarding this matter: some narrates the protagonists of this event as being 'A'isha and her father Abu Bakr; and some narrates them as being Hafsa and her father 'Umar. For the first, See Ibn Sa'd, At-Tabaqat, 10/79, and for the second, see Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no. 2468 within the confines of a much longer Hadith. It is possible, however, that this event happened on more than one occasion. Allah the Almighty knows best.

Then Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him presents his wives with the second choice – the alternative to this world:

وَإِن كُنتُنَّ تُرِدْنَ ٱللَّهَ وَرَسُولَهُۥ وَٱلدَّارَ ٱلْـَٔاخِرَةَ
فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ أَعَدَّ لِلْمُحْسِنَٰتِ مِنكُنَّ أَجْرًا عَظِيمًا ﴿٢٩﴾

But if you desire God, His Messenger, and the Final Home, then remember that God has prepared great rewards for those of you who do good [29] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 29)

Anyone who reflects on the two sides of the choice they were presented with will find that, in reality, there is no comparison between the two.

One of the two sides was always going to be rejected since who would accept the life of this world in exchange for Allah the Almighty or the baubles of this world in exchange for Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him or nothing whatsoever in exchange for the life eternal in the Hereafter? Even if this world in which we live were not described as being dunya 'the lowest', it would still be incumbent upon us to do without in it.

The truth is that the prophet's wives understood this and so chose Allah the Almighty, His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and the life of the Hereafter, and who would be satisfied with anything else as an alternative! Praise is due to Allah!

Then Allah the Almighty describes the reward that is obtained by those who choose Him, His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and the life of the Hereafter: ' then remember that Allah has prepared great rewards for those of you who do good' (al-Ahzab: 29) A woman is muhsina ‘doer of good’ if she gives her husband more love and compassion than is required of her

يَٰنِسَآءَ ٱلنَّبِيِّ مَن يَأۡتِ مِنكُنَّ بِفَٰحِشَةٖ مُّبَيِّنَةٖ يُضَٰعَفۡ لَهَا
ٱلۡعَذَابُ ضِعۡفَيۡنِۚ وَكَانَ ذَٰلِكَ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ يَسِيرٗا ٣٠

Wives of the Prophet, if any of you does something clearly outrageous, she will be doubly punished – that is easy for God [30] (The Quran, al-Ahẓab: 30)

After offering the wives of the Prophet their choice and after they had chosen Allah the Almighty His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and the life of the Hereafter, Allah the Almighty wanted to give them a program and teach them principles that would make their lives easier for them. It is noteworthy indeed that the choices offered in the previous verse were words of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him from His Lord, while the words in this verse are directly from Allah the Almighty to the wives of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for He addresses them saying: 'Wives of the Prophet...' (al-Ahzab: 30).

The matter started with the words: 'O Prophet! Say unto thy wives…' (al-Ahzab: 28). Then they chose Allah the Almighty His Messenger and the life of the Hereafter, and it as if that choice made them worthy of being addressed directly by Allah the Almighty himself. It is as if they had fulfilled what had been required of them in the previous verse when Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to them, ta'alayn, '...well, then…' (al-Ahzab: 28).

We all know that, although the Arabic word nisa' 'women', translated as 'wives', is a plural; it does not have any etymological singular form.

No, the only way of referring to women in the singular is by using a different word entirely: 'imra'a. In Arabic, there are singulars of certain plurals that are often forgotten when the singular of another word is better-known or easier to use. That word is 'imra'a or mara; singular form for 'women' which is derived from the word 'imru' meaning 'man' This word, 'imru', is unique in the Arabic language in terms of the way it is inflected. Unlike the rest of words in Arabic, changes in syntactical inflection are not limited to the final letter but also impact the preceding letter, so you say, ''imru'u al-Qays said', 'I heard 'imra'a al-Qays' and 'I read to 'imri'i al-Qays.'

Some linguistic theoreticians said, ‘The word nisa’, ‘women’, is derived from a word that means delay or deferral because of the fact that the creation of women until after that of men.’ Therefore the singular of the word must be nas’ even though using that word would be an unnecessary burden.

After addressing them with the words: 'Wives of the Prophet!' (al-Ahzab: 30), Allah the Almighty mentions the first instruction in the program directed at them: '…if any of you does something clearly outrageous, she will be doubly punished–…' (al-Ahzab: 30). We notice, here, that when Allah the Almighty addressed the wives, he did not begin by saying, for example, ‘Whichever of you has taqwa (fearful awareness of Allah)’, but instead began by warning them against engaging in immoral conduct. The reason He did that because the legal maxim for legislation and reform is that 'The prevention of harm takes priority over the attraction of benefit.' Similarly, before we can perform wudu’ for the prayer, we must first make sure we are free of all physical impurities.

We mentioned the following scenario, as an example: Supposing that one person threw an apple to you, while at the same time someone else threw a stone at you, what would you do first, try to catch the apple or try to protect yourself against the stone? Without doubt, you would try to do the latter and protect yourself against the harm the stone might cause you. In the same way, if you want to iron your clothes and find them dirty, you would wash them first.

This is why Allah the Almighty began his instructions to the wives of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him by saying: '...if any of you does something clearly outrageous…' (al-Ahzab: 30). But is immoral conduct i.e. acts of sexual indecency on their behalf not somewhat far-fetched? Is one of the worst types of sin truly to be expected of the wives of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him? ‘Why not?’ Scholars reply. Did Allah the Almighty not address His own Prophet peace and blessings be upon him with the Words: '…if thou ever ascribe divine powers to aught but Allah, all thy works shall most certainly have been in vain...' (az-Zumar: 65)? Since it is well-known that there is no suspicion of shirk 'associating others with Allah' attached to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him the meaning of the verse must be, ‘O Muhammad, the fact that you have been chosen does not mean that you are above being taken to account.’ The same interpretation may be applied to the verse above dealing with his wives: in other words, the verse means, ‘If any of you were to commit some act of indecency, we would give her double the punishment and would not overlook her act simply because of her standing with Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. So do not make the mistake of thinking that your standing somehow mitigates your crime.’ 'If that had not been the case, then that would be the same sort of thing as commoners stealing and being punished while nobles steal and are let off.'(1)

So, the status that each of you holds lies not in the fact that you are wives of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him but lies in the extent to which you obey the commands of Allah the Almighty. If you do not, then know that there are wives of Prophets who did betray(2) their husbands. Read the following verse: 'For those who are bent on denying the truth Allah has propounded a parable in [the stories of] Noah’s wife and Lot’s wife: they were wedded to two of Our righteous servants, and each one betrayed her husband; and neither of the two [husbands] will be of any avail to these two women before Allah when they are told [on Judgment Day], ‘Enter the fire with all those [other sinners] who enter it!' (at-Tahrim: 10)

You might well ask, ‘If the ruling for the socially-manifest immoral behaviour is that their punishment be doubled, then what is their ruling when they are guilty of immoral behaviour that is not socially-manifest?

(1) This is from an agreed-upon Hadith. It is narrated by Al-Bukhari in his (Sahih) [6788]; and by Muslim in his (Sahih) [1688] in a (Hadith) from 'A’isha that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘O people, those who came before you went astray by letting off their nobles when they stole while they punished their weak for the same crime. I make an oath by Allah that if Fatima, the daughter of Muhammad, were to steal, Muhammad would cut her hand off.’

(2) Ibn Kathir said in his (Tafsir) [4/393], ‘When Allah says that ‘they betrayed them’, he does not mean that they cheated on them by having an affair but that they betrayed them with respect to their religion. Because of the inviolability of the Prophets themselves, their wives are protected from ever committing acts of sexual indecency.’ Ibn 'Abbas said, ‘They did not commit fornication. The betrayal of the wife of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him lay in the fact that she used to tell people that he was mad, while the betrayal of the wife of Lut (Lot) peace be upon him lay in the fact that she used to lead her people to her guests.’

This ruling is specific to the wives of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him according to scholars. If one of them were to commit a wrong action in the privacy of her own home, then that would be between herself and her Lord and would only be counted as a single sin restricted to her own person. However, if she were to commit a wrong action in the public domain, then that sin would be counted as double because the wives of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him are role models whose behaviour is closely scrutinised and imitated by other Muslim women. So, if one of them were to commit an act of indecency that would persuade others to also commit that act. And why should anyone else not do that act when one of the wives of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him did it?

The reason, therefore, for their punishment being doubled, is because when they are immoral, their immorality is not just limited to them but spreads from them to others. They would be making the house of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him home to bad role models and so would deserve their double punishment because they would have hurt his feelings, disrespected his home and preferred another to him by committing their act of indecency with him. All of this would merit their punishment being multiplied many times over. So if Allah the Almighty were to only double their punishment, that would be an act of kindness and mercy on His part because of their shared marital history with Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

In the same way, if one of them were to perform a good action, her reward would be multiplied, since she would have performed a right action for herself just like anyone else, but would also be providing others with a good example because of her position as role model to Muslim women.

Consider the Hadith of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him 'Whoever establishes a good sunna will be rewarded for it and the reward of everyone who acts by it until the Day of Rising; and whoever establishes a bad sunna will receive the wrong action for it and the wrong action of everyone who acts by it until the Day of Rising.'(1)

(1) It is narrated by Imam Ahmad in his (Musnad) [4/361 & 362] (al-Ahzab); by Ibn Majah in his (Sunnan) [207] (al-Ahzab); and by At-Tirmidhi in his (Sunnan) [2675] (al-Ahzab) in a (Hadith) from Jarir ibn 'Abdullah. At-Tirmidhi classified the (Hadith) as (hasan sahih).

It tells us that a person's reward for a good action is not only doubled, but is multiplied by as many times as the number of people who imitate him and put that good action into practice. There is a difference between the two Arabic words di'f the word which is used in this verse and du'f. The di'f of something is its exact equivalent, while the du'f is the loss of this equivalent and so is less.

Then He the Almighty says: '...for that is indeed easy for Allah.' (al-Ahzab: 30). It is as if Allah the Almighty were saying, 'the doubling of your punishment is an easy matter: your standing with Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him matters not to Me one bit. This is a matter that no one will question Me about and a matter in which I show no favouritism to anyone. I allow things to run in the way that they must and in that none may oppose Me. That is why so many rulings of Allah the Almighty in the Quran are followed by the Words: '…[but] behold, Allah is almighty, wise!' (al-Baqara: 220) His might means that the execution of the ruling is something inevitable and unavoidable and that none may oppose it.

This meaning is clear in the words Allah the Almighty spoke to 'Isa (Jesus), Peace be upon him: 'And lo! Allah said: "O 'Isa, son of Maryam! Did you say to men, 'Worship me and my mother as deities beside Allah'?" ['Isa] answered: "Limitless are you in your glory! It would not have been possible for me to say what I had no right to [say]! Had I said this, You would indeed have known it! You know all that is within myself, whereas I know not what is in Thy Self. Verily, it is You alone who fully know all the things that are beyond the reach of a created being's perception." [116] "Nothing did I tell them beyond what You did bid me [to say]: 'Worship Allah, [who is] my Lord as well as your Lord.' And I bore witness to what they did as long as I dwelt in their midst; but since You has caused me to die, You alone has been their keeper: for You are witness unto everything." [117] "If thou cause them to suffer – verily, they are Thy servants; and if You forgive them – verily, You alone are almighty, truly wise!"[118]' (al-Ma'ida: 116-118).

His words: '…and if You forgive them…' (al-Ma'ida: 118) require him to say: '…verily, You are forgiving, merciful!', but instead of them, Allah the Almighty says: '…verily, You alone are almighty, truly wise!" (al-Ma'ida: 118) because the sin into which the people had fallen was one which involved the pinnacle of their faith, for they had taken the divinity from Allah the Almighty and placed it in the person of ‘Isa. This is a sin for which common sense demands a severe punishment. Allah the Almighty is never questioned about what He does: He the Almighty punishes whomsoever He wills and forgives whomsoever He wills. If He the Almighty does forgive them, it is by means of His Attribute of Might; against which none may stand. It is as if common sense dictates that Allah the Almighty be asked why, given the seriousness of their crime, He did not punish them. That is why He the Almighty deals with them with the attribute of might against which none may stand and the attribute of wisdom which never misses the mark.

After mentioning immoral acts and their consequences, Allah the Almighty then mentions their opposite:

وَمَن يَقْنُتْ مِنكُنَّ لِلَّهِ وَرَسُولِهِۦ وَتَعْمَلْ صَٰلِحًا نُّؤْتِهَآ
أَجْرَهَا مَرَّتَيْنِ وَأَعْتَدْنَا لَهَا رِزْقًا كَرِيمًا ﴿٣١﴾

But if any of you is obedient to God and His Messenger and does good deeds, know that We shall give her a double reward and have prepared a generous provision for her [31]
(The Quran, al-Ahzab: 31)

The word '…is obedient…' (al-Ahzab: 31) means to submit to Allah’s Will completely and utterly and to humbly abase oneself in supplication before Him. Allah the Almighty chose the Arabic Word qunut (devout obedience) because He the Almighty does not want those who obey Him to pride themselves on their obedience and look down on others as a result. That is why the people of inward knowledge say, ‘Disobedience that brings about abasement and contrition might well be better than obedience which brings about self-importance and pride.’(1)

---

Or 'But if any of you is obedient to Allah…' (al-Ahzab: 31) means that you ‘go to such utmost lengths to do right action and be scrupulous that you reach the level of qunut’, i.e. complete submission and abasement to Allah the Almighty.

And the result of this devout obedience is that: '…We shall give her a double reward…' (al-Ahzab: 31). While the previous verse establishes that the punishment of the one who commits an indecent act will be multiplied, this verse establishes that the reward of the one who submits to Allah the Almighty abases herself and does a right action will be multiplied.

'…and have prepared a generous provision for her' (al-Ahzab: 31), i.e. We have just now prepared it for her, and it will be here waiting for her until she comes.

When you reflect on the literary style applied in these two verses, the extraordinary nature of its composition confronts you: when it mentions immoral conduct and the doubling of punishment, it uses the verb yuda'af 'double' in the passive voice, but when it mentions devout obedience, it says: '…and have prepared a generous provision for her' (al-Ahzab: 31), linking the action of the verb directly to Allah the Almighty. It is as if Allah the Almighty did not want to confront people with Himself in the position of punishing them but merely with the punishment itself.

By using the verb yuda'af in the passive voice, it indicates Allah’s mercy and the subtlety of His expression. Allah the Almighty loves all of His creation and wants to get them to love Him – He hopes for the one who is disobedient to come back into the fold and, when a believing slave of His repents, rejoices more than one who finds his camel after losing it in a waterless desert.(1)

In a Hadith, we find, 'Son of Adam, do not fear anyone who has dominion so long as I have dominion, and My dominion will never come to an end. Son of Adam, do not fear that your provision will become straitened, for My storehouses are full and will never become empty. Son of Adam, I have created you for worship, so do not play about - and by ‘play about’, He means

---

‘engage in useless action that brings no benefit’ – and I have assigned you your provision, so do not tire yourself out.'

By ‘tire yourself out’, He meant ‘Do not cause your heart to become distracted.’ There are different types of tiredness: there is tiredness of the limbs of the sort mentioned in the Noble Prophetic Hadith, 'Whoever spends his night exhausted by work and physical exertion, spends his night being forgiven.'(1) And when the Prophet Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him saw a hand that had been coarsened by hard work, he peace and blessings be upon him said, 'This is a hand that both Allah and His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him love.'(2)

Then there is the tiredness of the heart. Something that your heart is able to stand and you are able to bear does not tire you out. Henceforth, we find people whose hearts are free of concern calmly breaking rocks, humming tunes and singing songs to strengthen their resolve and help them keep going. Despite, all their strenuous efforts, you find them to be happy and content. An Arab poet showed wonderful understanding of this when he wrote:

A burden is not that which is borne on the backs of men.
No, a burden is that which preoccupies the heart.

So the meaning is, ‘Wear out your limbs but do not wear out your heart. Tiredness and exhaustion do not destroy one’s limbs; they only destroy one’s heart. Make your limbs weary with useful serious work that gives you with enough to fulfil your needs and have some left over for those who are unable to work for themselves.

(1) It is narrated by As-Suyuti with this wording in (Ad-Durr Al-Manthur) (Hadith 401) in a (Hadith) from Anas from the Prophet, and he ascribed the (Hadith) to Ibn 'Asakir; and it is narrated by Al-Haythami in Majma‘ Az-Zawa’id [4/63] in a (Hadith) from Ibn ‘Abbas who said that he heard Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him say, ‘Whoever spends his evening exhausted by work and physical exertion, spends his evening being forgiven.’ Al-Haythami said, ‘It is narrated by At-Tabarani in (Al-’Awsat), but there are a number of people I do not know in [his chain of narrations]. Al-Hafizh Al-'Iraqi said in his (Takhrij) of the (Hadiths) of Al-’Ihya’ [2/90], ‘There is weakness in [this (Hadith)].’

(2) Another (Hadith) narrated in this regard is that Messenger Muhammad Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘None of you will eat any food better than that which himself has worked for and earned,’ and that he himself only ate from what he himself worked for and earned. It is narrated by Al-Bukhari in his (Sahih) [2072] in a (Hadith) from Al-Miqdam ibn Ma‘dikarib.

Then He the Almighty says, 'If you are content with what I have allotted you, then I will bring rest to your heart and body and you will be one who is praised in My presence. If you are not content, however, with what I have allotted you, then, by My might and majesty, I will make the world your master: you will run around in it like a beast in the wild but will get nothing from it except that which I have allotted to you, and you will be one who is blamed in My presence. Son of Adam, I created the heavens and the earth and was not wearied by creating them, so should I be wearied by bringing you a loaf of bread? Son of Adam, I do not demand of you your work of tomorrow, so do not demand of Me your provision for tomorrow. Son of Adam, I do not forget those who disobey Me, so consider how it is with those who obey Me.'

Here we witness the words with which Allah the Almighty completes this Qudsi Hadith, 'Son of Adam, I love you, so by the right which I have over you, love Me.'(1)

So your Lord appears to you directly when He the Almighty wants to bring you something good or beneficial, but when it is something bad, He the Almighty points it out to you from a distance and draws your attention to it with gentleness and solicitude.

Another thing we notice in terms of the literary style of the verse is that when Allah the Almighty says: 'But if any of you is obedient to Allah…' (al-Ahzab: 31), addressing the wives of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him he uses the masculine form of the verb yaqnut (obeys), and not the feminine form taqnut. Then, later in the verse when he says: '…and does good deeds…' (al-Ahzab: 31) He reverts to the feminine form for the verb ta'mal (does). So, on one occasion, he takes the word into account and on the other occasion he takes the meaning into account. As we mentioned previously, the word man, 'who' is a relative pronoun that is used for the singular, dual and plural, and for both masculine and feminine.

(1) This section of the (Hadith) is narrated by Imam Abu Hamid Al-Ghazali in ('Ihya' 'Ulum ad-din) [4/296], and he said, 'In some books, it has, 'My slave, I love you as is your right [over Me], so by the right which I have over you, love Me.'

Another matter that gives us food for thought here is the fact that rizq (sustenance) or (provision) is described as being karim, ‘generous’ or ‘excellent’ in Allah's Words: '…and have prepared a generous provision for her' (al-Ahzab: 31). Rizq is the food, drink, clothing, lodging and appurtenances that a person receives in the course of his life, although the word may also be used to refer to matters which are not material such as knowledge, clemency etc. However, it is not the provisions that we receive in this world that are described as being generous.

No, the one who is described as being generous is the Provider Himself the Almighty. So, why then, in this verse, is provision described as being generous?

They reply that the difference between provision in this world and provision in the Hereafter is that provision in this world requires the presence of a medium between you and the Provider. That medium might be a father, an administrator, an employer, a merchant or someone else, but it is he who conveys your provision to you with his own hands and so he is the one who is described as being generous. In the Hereafter, however, your provision comes to you directly without there being any medium, so it is fitting that the provision itself be described as being generous. If provision may be described as being generous, then what about the True Provider himself

Then Allah the Almighty says:

بِٱلۡقَوۡلِ فَيَطۡمَعَ ٱلَّذِى فِى قَلۡبِهِۦ مَرَضٞ وَقُلۡنَ قَوۡلٗا مَّعۡرُوفٗا ﴿٣٢﴾

Wives of the Prophet, you are not like any other woman. If you are truly mindful of God, do not speak too softly in case the sick at heart should lust after you, but speak in an appropriate manner [32] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 32)

The word ahad ‘one’ is used in a number of different ways in the Arabic language. For example, when it comes to number, if we want to refer to eleven of something, we say ’ahad ‘ashar if the object being counted is masculine, and ’ihda ‘ashra if the object being counted is feminine, The word ahad is used, also, to refer to the singular, dual and plural, and both masculine and feminine, so you would say, ‘There is no one (ahad) with me, not one man or one woman, not two men or two women, and not many men or many women.’ That is why the word ahad is used in, Allah’s Words: 'and there is nothing that could be compared with Him.' (al-Ikhlas: 4)

Allah the Almighty says: '… you are not like any other [ahad] woman…' (al-Ahzab: 32). This is particular to them because things divide up into species with every species dividing up into types.

The human being, for example, is a species. Within that species there are males and females. Then, under each of these types, there are individuals. Such division of a single species into male and female would not have taken place without there being differences between them over and above their shared characteristics. So the limits imposed on them by being a single species are shared – they are both living creatures capable of speech and thought – but their differences make us divide them into two types, each with its own special characteristics that distinguishes it from the other.

Another good example is time, which may be described as the envelope for events: if those events are events of movement and motion, then that time is the day. If they are events of stillness and lack of motion, then that time is the night. So, night and day are two types under a single genus, time, and each of them has special characteristics which we must be aware of if we want to avoid mixing them up.

Reflect on Allah’s Words: 'Consider the night as it veils [the earth] in darkness, [1] and the day as it rises bright![2] Consider the creation of the male and the female![3] Verily, [O men,] you aim at most divergent ends! [4]' (al-Layl: 1-4)

Night and day are complementary and contrasting but without being contradicted. The same applies to males and females: each type has its own role and task that is specific to it. If you were to try to make the night into day or vice versa, or to make a man into a woman or vice versa, you would be going against the natural form chosen for it by Allah the Almighty.

We have already told you the story(1) of the man who passed by the chief of his village, found him beating his guard, so stood up in defence of the guard, saying, ‘Why are you beating him, uncle of Abraham?’ The chief replied, ‘I found him sleeping on the job’, so the man said, ‘He was sleeping because he spent the whole day irrigating your fields. An irrigator cannot also be expected to guard!’

(1) The story of the village Mayor who used to beat his guard

So, under every species there are types; types are not equal with each other, for if they were, they would simply be copies of each other and there would be no use in that. Every individual is different and has his own distinguishing characteristics. Therefore, do not think yourself superior to others since Allah the Almighty has distributed His gifts amongst all His creation: you might be superior in one thing but someone else will be superior in something else.

The reason for this is so that the connection formed between people in everyday life is one of mutual need, not one of some being preferred over others.

Therefore, a man who cleans the streets is superior to you by the fact that he performs a job that you have an aversion yourself to doing. If this worker were to perform a job for you, you would have to pay him a wage, whereas if he were to ask you a question – and you were a scholar, a dignitary or something similar – you would give him an answer without asking him to pay you something in return, even though you spent so many long years acquiring knowledge, reading books and listening to others until you reached the level, and obtained the distinction, whereby you were able to answer his query. Therefore, every single one of us, male or female, has his own unique personal individuality that sets him apart from others.

It is in this light that Allah the Almighty says to the wives of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him: '…you are not like any other [ahad] woman…' (al-Ahzab: 32). This is the special quality that sets them apart from other women. It is not women in general who role models are. No, rather that is a special characteristic of the wives of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him: they are the role models for all other women; they are the ones whose examples are there to be followed.

After this negation comes the proviso: Allah the Almighty says: '… If you are truly mindful of Allah…' (al-Ahzab: 32). In other words, it is not your marriage to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that sets you apart, it is the strength of your taqwa 'piety' of Allah the Almighty for there were wives of other Prophets who did not have taqwa.

Then Allah the Almighty says: '…not speak too softly in case the sick at heart should lust after you…' (al-Ahzab: 32), i.e. 'Cut off the path of indecency at its source! Do not go near that which leads to it and leave those matters about which you have doubt!' What is meant by 'over-softness in speech' is either when a woman addresses a man with a soft, broken and quavering voice, or when her words are accompanied by enticing glances or by her drawing close to him.

If you are forced to speak to men then beware of characteristics such as these '...in case the sick at heart should lust after you…' (al-Ahzab: 32). This means, 'It is not that I am accusing you of anything, but the simple fact is that none of you can vouchsafe for any of the men with whom you speak, for some of them might have sickness in their hearts.(1)Therefore, do not present them with any opportunity.'

Not being over-soft in speech does not mean that you should use harsh or crude words when you address people; rather, it means that you must keep things within the limits assigned to them. And this is why He the Almighty follows this with the Words: '…but speak in an appropriate manner…' (al-Ahzab: 32). The Quran, after prohibiting inappropriate unrestrained behaviour, presents us with the appropriate alternative, that is, qawl ma'ruf 'speaking in a kindly way'. When this term is being used to describe the speech of a woman, it means that she should moderate her words and listen with her ears without letting her eyes dwell upon the speaker because if she were to look at him like that, it might cause him to desire her and embolden him to proposition her, and that is what Allah the Almighty wants to prevent happening.

(1) Ibn 'Arafa said, 'Sickness of the heart is slackness with the truth; sickness of the body is slackness in the limbs, and sickness of the eye is slackness in the gaze – when an eye becomes sick it becomes lazy. An example of this is in His Words: '...in case the sick at heart should lust after you…' (al-Ahzab: 32), i.e. his heart is lax when it comes to carrying out the commands and prohibitions [of the Lord]' Ibn Manzur narrated this in (Lissan Al-'Arab: subject matter: (marada)). Ibn Kathir said in his (Tafsir), 'By sickness, it means (daghal) which is a form of defectiveness and corruption. The root meaning of daghal is a luxuriant and leaf bush within which the people of corruption conceal themselves.' (Lissan Al-'Arab): root: daghala).

That is why a story (1) is told of a man who saw his servant girl standing at the door of his house speaking to a handsome young man who was asking her about something. When he saw her remain there speaking with him for a long time, her master beat her and scolded her for her unbecoming conduct. Then, when another young man came the next day to ask her about the very same thing that the other man had asked her the previous day, she greeted him straight away with curses and imprecations, having been made aware of the sickness in the heart of that young man and those like him.

Later on, in another part of this same chapter, we find: 'O Prophet! Tell thy wives and thy daughters, as well as all [other] believing women, that they should draw over themselves some of their outer garments [when in public]: this will be more conducive to their being recognized [as decent women] and not annoyed. But [withal,] Allah is indeed much-forgiving, a dispenser of mercy!' (al-Ahzab: 59) The reason for this is because when a man comes upon a woman who is modest and covers up her physical endowments, he is not emboldened against her: he knows that she is not a cheap sort of woman, so he respects the boundaries she has set.

Wise people have said, ‘As for those women whom you see flaunting their assets to men who are not their relatives and insist on exposing themselves to men, it is as if they were putting a sign round their necks saying, ‘Open for customers’. It is as if they were telling those who paid them no heed to take note, thus arousing their passions and giving those men the courage to make a move on them.’ Allah the Almighty wanted the wives of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him firstly, to speak to people from behind a curtain, and secondly, to speak to them in a correct fashion without using a soft and quavering voice. For, by doing that, they do not expose themselves to evil; give no encouragement to the bawdy or irresponsible to make a move on them.

Then Allah the Almighty says:

(1) The story of the she- servant and the lad

وَقَرْنَ فِي بُيُوتِكُنَّ وَلَا تَبَرَّجْنَ تَبَرُّجَ ٱلْجَٰهِلِيَّةِ ٱلْأُولَىٰ ۖ وَأَقِمْنَ
ٱلصَّلَوٰةَ وَءَاتِينَ ٱلزَّكَوٰةَ وَأَطِعْنَ ٱللَّهَ وَرَسُولَهُۥٓ ۚ إِنَّمَا يُرِيدُ ٱللَّهُ
لِيُذْهِبَ عَنكُمُ ٱلرِّجْسَ أَهْلَ ٱلْبَيْتِ وَيُطَهِّرَكُمْ تَطْهِيرًا ﴿٣٣﴾

Stay at home, and do not flaunt your finery as they used to in the pagan past; keep up the prayer, give the prescribed alms, and obey God and His Messenger. God wishes to keep uncleanness away from you, people of the [Prophet's] House, and to purify you thoroughly [33] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 33)

The meaning of: '... 'Stay at home…' (al-Ahzab: 33) is do not go outside a lot. This is, in fact, the proper behaviour for women in general since, if a woman busied herself with what is required of her when it comes to running the household, serving her husband and children and looking after their best interests, she would not have enough time in the day to go out as well. That is why it is often the case that husbands come home to find their wives completely engrossed in their household chores. That situation can be a source of annoyance to some husbands because that means their wives cannot devote all their time to them. So, the woman who is bankrupt in her own home is the one who goes out a lot and fulfils the requirements of her home from outside of it.

If she were, however, to learn a simple handicraft, then she could fulfil the requirements of her home and put a little money aside for her husband. For example, some people have told us about the women of the Egyptian city of Dumyat, how they do every sort of work and help their husbands. Some girls there are even taught a trade, so when they get married they do not place a huge financial burden upon their fathers. No, quite the reverse, In fact, they have enough money themselves to put some aside and help their husbands out after they have married. As for the verb tabarraj 'flaunt', used in the verse: '...and do not flaunt your finery as they used to in the pagan past…' (al-Ahzab: 33), it is derived from the word burj meaning 'fortress' so the root meaning of tabarraj is to emerge or jut out from one's fortress. The meaning of the verse, therefore, is 'Do not come out of the fortress that is your clothing that covers you, and do not expose your bodily charms and assets which you are obligated to cover up.' As for: '…as they used to in the pagan past…' (al-Ahzab: 33), it refers to the way women – and by women, we mean slave girls and not freewomen – used to dress before the advent of Islam. In those days, they would expose their most alluring physical endowments for all to see – indeed, they often appeared to be almost naked and thought nothing of it. The situation was very much like what we have seen ourselves of the way women dress in sub-Saharan Africa. Freewomen in the time of paganism before Islam, however, were women of chastity and honour while at the same time slave girls were set up in brothels. This was the reason why the wife of Abu Sufyan(1) said to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him when he asked the believing women to pledge an oath that they not fornicate, ‘Do freewomen ever fornicate, Messenger of Allah?’ In other words, ‘that is something that freewomen detested even in the time of ignorance before Islam.’

Another of the meanings of the word burj is becoming wide or extended. So, according to that interpretation, the verse would mean, ‘Do not extend the circle of what is exposed outside the area delineated by the Shari'a, that is, the face and the hands.’

Elsewhere in the Quran, Allah the Almighty says: 'And [know that] women advanced in years, who no longer feel any sexual desire, incur no sin if they discard their [outer] garments, provided they do not aim at a showy display of [their] charms...' (an-Nur: 60).

It is astonishing to see women of the age of fifty or sixty today, putting powder and blusher upon their faces, feeling no embarrassment about the wrinkles thereon and having almost no feeling of their ages. Then He the Almighty says: '… keep up the prayer, give the prescribed alms…' (al-Ahzab: 33). The Quran frequently joins together prayer and zakat. Prayer comes first because it is the central pillar around which all the other duties of Islam are built. The act of zakat entails that you expend some of your wealth. Wealth is a derivative branch of action and action is a derivative branch of time and when you are in the prayer it is time itself that you expend and sacrifice. So, it is as if you expend 97.5% of it in the prayer, on top of the 2.5% you expend in zakat. Another thing that is understood from the payment of zakat being mentioned in this context is that women have their own individual financial responsibilities, separate from those of their fathers or husbands. The proof of this lies in the fact that Allah the Almighty commands them here to pay their zakat, 'to render their purifying dues'. However, modern society considers the money a woman has before marriage to belong to her father and after marriage to belong to her husband. Another thing modern society does when she gets married is to take away from her her father's family name and give her husband's family name instead. This is even harsher on the woman than taking away her money, since calling her by her husband's name neglects her own identity. Take a look at ʿA'isha Allah be pleased with her for example, we still call her ʿA'isha bint abu Bakr' – no one refers to her as 'ʿA'isha wife of Muhammad'.

(1) She is Hind bint 'Utba ibn Ar-Rabi'a. The transmissions about her before she became Muslim are well-known – she took part in the battle of Uhud as an unbeliever and did what she did to Hamza. She became Muslim on the day of the conquest of Mecca after her husband, Abu Sufyan, did so, and she died during the Caliphate of 'Uthman. (Al-'Isaba of Ibn Hajar 8/206). Ibn Sa'd mentioned in his At-Tabaqat (10/226) that this comment was made by her when the women pledged allegiance to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Hind was the mother of Mu'awiyya ibn abu Sufyan.

Then He the Almighty says: '…and obey Allah and His Messenger…' (al-Ahzab: 33) because the matter is not limited to simply performing the prayer and paying zakat – there are many other things that also require obedience to Allah the Almighty and His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. It is interesting to note that this verse places Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Apostle in conjunction with Allah the Almighty but only mentions the imperative verb 'pay heed' once: '…and obey Allah and His Messenger…' (al-Ahzab: 33). When we search through the Quran for this same command, we find that, on some occasions, the verb is repeated and, on other occasions, it is not.

So, one time, Allah the Almighty says: '...Pay heed, then, unto Allah, and pay heed unto the Apostle...' (at-Taghabun: 12). Another time, He the Almighty says: 'And pay heed unto Allah and the Apostle...' (Al-'Imran: 132). Another time, He the Almighty says: '...Pay heed unto Allah, and pay heed unto the Apostle and unto those from among you who have been entrusted with authority...' (an-Nisa': 59). Each of these different forms of the command has its own sense and its own meaning: When it says, 'pay heed to Allah the Almighty and pay heed to the Messenger', it is as if it is saying that one must obey

Allah the Almighty in terms of His general commands, but obey His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him in terms of their specifics. So Allah the Almighty gave us the general command to pray and pay zakat, then the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him clarified the general command for us and taught us the specifics of how it is done by saying to us, 'Pray as you see me pray'(1), and 'Take your religious rites from me'(2).

So, the reason that the verb was repeated here was because it deals with two forms of obedience: obedience to Allah the Almighty by fulfilling His general command, and obedience to the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him by taking from him its finer details. If the verb is only mentioned once, as in: 'And pay heed unto Allah and the Apostle...' (Al-'Imran: 132), it means that the command of Allah the Almighty and the command of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him happen to be identical, so only one act of obedience is necessary. Suppose that Allah the Almighty did an action and His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him did an action and that it was impossible to separate one's action from the other. The proof that this happens is found in the verse: '...And they could find no fault [with the Faith] save that Allah had enriched them and [caused] His Apostle [to enrich them] out of His bounty!' (at-Tawba: 74) Allah the Almighty did not say, 'and His Apostle enriched them' because some might say then that each one of them enriches according to his own ability. No, he only used one verb for both: '…save that Allah had enriched them and [caused] His Apostle [to enrich them]...' (at-Tawba: 74). Read also, the verse: '…the while it is Allah and His Apostle whose pleasure they should seek above all else, if indeed they are believers!' (at-Tawba: 62) Allah the Almighty did not use the dual pronoun and say yardawhuma, (seek their pleasure), no, He the Almighty used the singular pronoun and said yardawhu, (seek his pleasure).

(1) It is narrated by Bukhari in his Sahih (631); and by Ahmad in his Musnad (5/53) in a (Hadith) from Malik ibn Al-Huwayrith that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'When the time of the prayer arrives, call the (adhan) then call the iqama, then let the eldest amongst you lead the prayer. You should pray as you see me pray.'

(2) Jabir ibn 'Abdullah said, 'I saw the Prophet on the day of Sacrifice throwing (his stones) from the back of his camel, and telling us, 'Take your (Hajj) rites from me, for I do not know whether I will perform another Hajj after this one.' It is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (3/318); by An-Nasa'i in his Sunnan (5/270); and by Muslim in his Sahih (1297).

As for when He the Almighty said: '...Pay heed unto Allah, and pay heed unto the Apostle and unto those from among you who have been entrusted with authority...' (an-Nisa': 59), the reason He did not repeat the verb 'pay heed' for 'those among you who have been entrusted with authority' is because we are not obligated to obey those who have been entrusted with authority unless their commands correspond to those of Allah the Almighty and Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Then He the Almighty says: '…Allah wishes to keep uncleanness away from you, people of the [Prophet's] House, and to purify you thoroughly' (al-Ahzab: 33).

The word rijs 'all that might be loathsome', is the same as the word rijz which means filth and impurity, regardless of whether the filth is physical such as corpses and alcohol or abstract such as sins and wrong actions. These different types of filth are gathered together in the verse: '...Intoxicants, and games of chance, and idolatrous practices, and the divining of the future are but a loathsome evil of Satan's doing: shun it, then, so that you might attain to a happy state!' (al-Ma'ida: 90) The word rijs can also be used to mean hypocrisy and sickness. Although the Arabic word ahl is said to originally refer to the clan or close relatives of the husband, it became customary to use it to refer to a man's wife. A remnant of this usage is the way we use the word today: when we go to visit a friend, for example, we might say to him, 'The ahl is with me' or 'The group is with me' or 'The children are with me' meaning by all of those expressions that we are accompanied by our wives. Why do we use these expressions?

Because, they say, being covered up is the principle around which a woman's life is built. If her name itself is built upon the principle of being covered up, then most of her duties too are covered up within those of the man. It is rare indeed for rulings to be directed specifically at women. This is exemplified by the story (1) of 'Asma' bint ʿUmays (2) Allah be pleased with her the wife of Jaʿfar ibn abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him who was one of those who emigrated to Abyssinia. When she came back, she asked, ‘has anything been revealed in my absence concerning women?’ They replied that nothing had been revealed, so she went to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said, ‘Messenger of Allah, how great is our loss and disappointment! There are no rulings concerning us at all.’ Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied to her, ‘You are kept hidden and safe by your men.’'(1) Still, despite that, the following verse of Quran was revealed: 'Verily, for all men and women who have surrendered themselves unto Allah, and all believing men and believing women, and all truly devout men and truly devout women, and all men and women who are true to their word, and all men and women who are patient in adversity, and all men and women who humble themselves [before Allah], and all men and women who give in charity, and all self-denying men and self-denying women, and all men and women who are mindful of their chastity, and all men and women who remember Allah unceasingly: for [all of] them has Allah readied forgiveness of sins and a mighty reward.' (al-Ahzab: 35)

(1) The story of 'Asma' bint 'Umays with the Prophet Allah's peace and blessings be upon him

(2) She is 'Asma' bint ʿUmays ibn Al-Harith Al-Khath'ami. She was a Companion who became Muslim before the Prophet Allah's peace and blessings be upon him went into Dar Al-'Arqam in Mecca. She emigrated to Abyssinia with her husband Jaʿfar ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him. She was widowed when Ja'far was killed at the battle of Mu'ta in 8 AH and was then married by Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him=

You may also note in the verse: '... Allah wishes to keep uncleanness away from you, people of the [Prophet’s] House, and to purify you thoroughly' (al-Ahzab: 33), that, although it is talking about women, it observes the principle of keeping women covered by making use of the masculine form of the pronoun, kun, and not the feminine form kunna, in the words, '...to keep uncleanness away…' (al-Ahzab: 33) as well as in the words, '…and to purify you thoroughly...' (al-Ahzab: 33). However, it would also be correct to say that He the Almighty intended the phrase ahl al-bayt as referring to all the members of his household, be they male or female.

= with whom she had a son called Muhammad ibn Abu Bakr. Then, after Abu Bakr died, she was married by ‘Ali ibn Abu Taleb with whom she also had children. She died after ‘Ali. Abu Nu'aym described her as one of those who emigrated twice and prayed to both (qiblas). (Al-’A‘lam of Az-Zirikli 1/306)

(1) I could not find this particular (Hadith). However Ahmad narrated in his Musnad (6/256) in a (Hadith) from‘A’isha that, ‘Women are the (other halves) of men.’ This is also tnarrated by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (113). Al-Khattabi said in (Ma'alim As-Sunnan 1/79), ‘In other words, they are their equal in terms of character and natural attributes: it is as if they had been split off from men.’

وَٱذْكُرْنَ مَا يُتْلَىٰ فِى بُيُوتِكُنَّ مِنْ ءَايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ
وَٱلْحِكْمَةِ ۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ كَانَ لَطِيفًا خَبِيرًا ﴿٣٤﴾

Remember what is recited in your houses of God's revelations and wisdom, for God is all subtle, all aware[34]

'Remember what is recited in your houses…' (al-Ahzab: 34), O wives of the Prophet, '…of Allah's revelation…' (Al-'Imran: 34), i.e. the verses of the Noble Quran '…and [His] wisdom', i.e. the Hadiths of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Another interpretation is that the verse is making use of the Arabic stylistic device of having the adjective appear as a noun in conjunction with the word it is describing, so the meaning would be 'of the wise messages of Allah'. However, the first interpretation is preferable as long as there is some leeway in the matter. As for the meaning of wa-dhkurna, 'Remember…' (al-Ahzab: 34), we have already said that dhikr is the process of taking a piece of information from your subconscious and bringing it into your conscious mind. So the meaning of the verse is, 'Bring remembrance of Allah the Almighty into your mind and be constantly mindful of it. That is why Allah the Almighty says: '...and remembrance of Allah is indeed the greatest [good]...' (al-'Ankabut: 45), i.e. greater than any other type of worship since, as we mentioned before, other acts of worship require time, preparation and that you be free of distraction and responsibility, and entail a degree of hardship. The same is not true of dhikr: it can be on your lips at any time of day of night and without any preparation or hardship –your tongue can occupy itself with it regardless of the time and regardless of the state in which you are. This is indicated al-Jumu'a chapter: 'and when the prayer is ended, disperse freely on earth and seek to obtain [something] of Allah's bounty; but remember Allah often so that you might attain to a happy state!' (al-Jumu'a: 10) So, as long as dhikr is being mindful of Allah the Almighty no form of work or endeavour should prevent you from doing it. And, although dhikr is the lightest form of worship there is and the easiest for yourself to bear, it also weighs the heaviest for you in the balance.

Now reflect on this verse: 'Verily, in the Apostle of Allah you have a good example for everyone who looks forward [with hope and awe] to Allah and the Last Day, and remembers Allah unceasingly.' (al-Ahzab: 21) Part of the greatness of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him lay in the fact that never once, not even for an instant, did his heart cease to be engaged in the remembrance of his Lord. That is why it has come down to us that He peace and blessings be upon him said about himself, 'My eyes sleep, but my heart never sleeps.'(1) Then the verse is finished off by the words: '...for Allah is all subtle, all aware' (al-Ahzab: 34). Lutf (subtlety) is dealing with matters with delicacy and finesse and doing them well no matter how difficult they are to accomplish. We clarified this meaning previously when we mentioned that the smaller something is latufa, the greater its capacity for violence. The metal you place over your windows to protect yourself from wolves is different from that which you use to protect yourself from snakes and that which you use to protect yourself from mosquitoes and flies and so on and so forth. That is why we find that the deadliest diseases come from microscopic viruses that take us unaware. Doing things well entails penetrating deep into the heart of things no matter how slight or insignificant. So, for example, there might be an object that you want to get, but in order to access it you have to pass your hand through an opening which is too narrow for it. So, finding that your own hand is incapable of carrying out the task, you either enlist the help of a young boy to do it because his hand is much smaller and finer than your own, or you use a tool that is narrow enough to fit through the gap.

The attribute of Allah, al-Latif, the ‘Unfathomable’, is complemented by His attribute al-Khabir, the ‘All-aware’. If lutf is dealing with matters with delicacy and finesse and doing them well, then khibra knows the place in which they are found. Lutf is not possible without khibra. Then Allah the Almighty says (2):

(1) This Hadith is agreed upon. It is tnarrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (2113) in Kitab Salat At-tarawih; and by Muslim in his Sahih (738) in Kitab Salat Al-musafirin in a Hadith from 'A'isha Allah be pleased with her that she said, ‘Messenger of Allah, do you go to sleep before you pray the Wetr prayer?’ He replied, ‘'A'isha, my eyes may sleep but my heart never sleeps.’

Then, I heard nothing of it until one day I heard him call out from the pulpit, 'O people!' I was combing my hair at the time so I wrapped a cover round it, approached the door of the=*

For men and women who are devoted to God – believing men and women, obedient men and women, truthful men and women, steadfast men and women, humble men and women, charitable men and women, fasting men and women, chaste men and women, men and women who remember God often – God has prepared forgiveness and a rich reward [35] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 35)

We say that this verse was revealed in order to set the mind of ‘Asma’ bint ʿUmays Allah be pleased with her the wife of Jaʿfar ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him at rest, after her conversation with Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him regarding rulings, during which she had made the observation that those that had been revealed were mainly directed at men. It appears that she brought up the topic of women with Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and mentioned that there were Muslims and believers etc. amongst them just like men. In this verse, we notice that it mentions Islam first and then mentions faith. But which of these two comes first with regard to people? We find an answer to this question in the Words of Allah the Almighty: 'The Bedouin say, ‘We have attained to faith.’ Say [unto them, O Muhammad]: ‘You have not [yet] attained to faith; you should [rather] say, 'We have [outwardly] surrendered' – for [true] faith has not yet entered your hearts...’ (al-Hujurat: 14).

= mosque and stood to listen next to the palm branches, and I heard him say, 'Allah says: Verily, for all men and women who have surrendered themselves unto Allah, and all believing men and believing women…' Until the end of the verse’

It is narrated by At-Tirmidhi in his sunnan (3211) in a Hadith from Umm ‘Ammara Al-’Ansariyya Allah be pleased with her that she went to the Prophet Allah’s peace and blessings be upon him and said, ‘Everything I see seems to be for the men: I have not seen anything mentioned about women.’ Then this verse: 'For men and women who are devoted to Allah– believing men and women, obedient men and women, truthful men and women, steadfast men and women, humble men and women…' (al-Ahzab: 35) was revealed. At-Tirmidhi classified the (Hadith as (hasan gharib).

Islam is carrying out the obligatory acts of Islam regardless of whether one has or does not have belief in them. Islam is simply obeying rulings. Faith, on the other hand, is believing in the One Who made those rulings and affirming the One Who conveyed them to you. According to this, faith precedes Islam. This is why this verse was revealed, exposing those Bedouins who hid themselves behind their outward performance of acts of Islam that they did not believe in. But Islam can come after faith when you start to find the performance of those acts sweet and enticing – the acts themselves can attract you towards faith and affirmation. And that is why those Bedouins rejoiced and said, ‘Praise belongs to Allah’, when they heard, the verse says: '...for [true] faith has not yet entered your hearts...' (al-Hujurat: 14). The word in the verse lamma, not yet, is only used for things that have a possibility of happening. It is like when you say, ‘Our orchard has not borne fruit yet although orchards have borne fruit.’ What you mean is that it will bear fruit at some point in the future. About this matter, they say, ‘That is because there are many rulings whose maker you do not believe in until you have first tasted their sweetness. For example(1), there was a man who came to Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and asked permission to stay the night at his house and partake of his hospitality, so Ibrahim peace be upon him asked him what religion he followed.

He replied that he was a Magian 'Fire-worshipper', so Ibrahim peace be upon him shut the door in his face. His Lord the Almighty however, reprimanded him for that and said, ‘Ibrahim, do you really expect him to change his religion in exchange for one single night of your hospitality when I have provided for him his whole life despite the fact that he does not believe in Me?’ So Ibrahim peace be upon him hurried after the man and, when he caught him up, invited him to his home. So the man asked him, ‘Did you not turn me away just a short while ago? What happened?’ Ibrahim Allah’s peace be upon him replied, ‘My Lord reprimanded Me because of how I treated you.’ So the man said, ‘What an excellent Lord! A Lord who reprimands His loved ones for their treatment of His enemies! I bear witness that there is no God but Allah.’ This verse makes mention of ten attributes: it begins with that of Islam surrendering to Allah when it says men and women who have surrendered themselves unto Allah the Almighty and finishes with that of dhikr remembrance when it says men and women who remember Allah the Almighty unceasingly. It is as if Allah the Almighty had brought the desire of ‘Asma’ bint ‘Umays Allah be pleased with her into being through these ten attributes which men and women share and which contain the bases for all types of religious duty. This is a message from Allah the Almighty to show that women’s rulings are hidden within those of men, and that the bases for all those rulings are these ten attributes. The meaning of: '... obedient men and women…' (al-Ahzab: 35) are those who are constant in their worship of Allah the Almighty and obedience to Him, and do so with humbleness and humility. As for His Words: '…charitable men and women…' (al-Ahzab: 35), they indicate that women have their own independent financial obligations and are free to use their money how they wish without needing permission from their husbands to do so. If money comes into a woman’s possession through inheritance, a gift from her husband or any other means, no one has the right to dictate to her how she uses it. We clarified this matter previously when we discussed the topic of zakat. These are some of the distinctions that Islam grants women who, before Islam – and indeed in certain contemporary societies – were considered to be completely under the financial authority of either their fathers or their husbands. The Arabic word sadaqa, ‘alms’, is inclusive of zakat, ‘the obligatory alms tax’, since Allah the Almighty says: 'the offerings given for the sake of Allah are [meant] only for the poor and the needy, and those who are in charge thereof…' (at-Tawba: 60) using the word sadaqa.

(1) The story of the guest of Abraham Allah’s peace be upon him with his disbelieving guest

Sadaqa is the more general word, and it means that you affirm Allah the Almighty when He entrusts you with wealth which derives from your striving in the earth that He created. It is as if you were putting into practice what Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him did when he was asked by Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him what he had done with his share of the booty they had collected from the war and he replied that he had given it all away as sadaqa. Then, when the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him asked him what he had left for his family, he replied, ‘Allah and His Messenger.’ When the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him asked the same question of ʿUmar Allah be pleased with him he replied that he had given away half of it as sadaqa and kept half of it for his family.(1)

So each of them disposed of their money in a logical way that best befitted their respective characters, while one desires the growth and purification of one’s wealth by paying zakat, the only thing one desires when giving sadaqa is the face of Allah the Almighty and a reward in the Hereafter, It is as if the one who gives sadaqa desires nothing except to do good for another and acknowledge that the favour is from Allah the Almighty the Giver, since it was Allah the Almighty who granted him a level of wealth that he had not granted to the weak or incapacitated. Then Allah the Almighty mentions the religious duty of fasting: '…fasting men and women…' (al-Ahzab: 35). In all of the rulings in Islam, fasting is unique: Allah the Almighty put the reward for every single religious duty in the hands of its own specific cadre except for fasting for which there was no specific cadre. This is why Allah the Almighty says, '...except for fasting – it is Mine and I will reward people for it.'(2) In other words, it holds a high rank over all the other duties. But why is such a high rank granted to fasting?

They reply that it is because fasting is the only form of worship which human beings have never used to worship other human beings. It is possible, for example, when it comes to the testimony of faith, ‘there is no Allah except Allah’, for someone to use statements like it to praise others, such as when a person says to another, ‘there is no one in the universe except you: you are the one who brings benefit and you are the one who brings harm’, or to use statements like it to praise themselves, such as when a person says about himself, ‘I am the one and only leader.’ Similarly, when it comes to the prayer, we see people bowing and prostrating to other than Allah the Almighty in the same way that we bow and prostrate to Allah the Almighty and when it comes to zakat, we try and draw close to the great and mighty of this world by giving them or those around them money and gifts.

(1) It is narrated by Abu Dawud in his Sunnan (1678); by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (3675); and by Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak (1/414). Al-Hakim considered it (Sahih), and At-Tirmidhi classified it as (hasan sahih).

(2) An agreed-upon Hadith It is narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (1904); and by Muslim in his Sahih (2/806) in a Hadith from Abu Hurayra. This is a (Qudsi Hadith) from the Lord of Might.

But, has any human being ever said to another, ‘I will fast a month – or even a day – in order to draw closer to you’? No, this has never been said because fasting for one who is not your equal would be a source of bother to the one for whom the fast is being done, not the one doing the fasting. Do you not see that he would be forced to place the one doing the fasting under constant observation to check whether he had eaten or not?

No, this has never been said, because fasting is the only act of worship which human beings cannot use to draw closer to other human beings. Allah the Almighty says about it in a Qudsi Hadith, 'Every action that the son of Adam does is for his sake except for fasting – it is mine and I will reward people for it.'(1) In other words, its reward is outside those that have been fixed, as we mentioned earlier. The greatness of the religious duty of fasting lies in another direction too. This is that Allah the Almighty has made some things lawful for us and other things forever unlawful for us. So the one who takes on his religious responsibilities becomes accustomed to what is lawful but not to what is unlawful, thereby helping this doctrine to take firm root in his soul. And this continues until such a time that it no longer even occurs to him to partake of what is unlawful. So, for example, he never once thinks of drinking alcohol or eating carrion – with respect to him such things are anathema and completely finished with. Allah the Almighty wanted to make the pleasure of taking one’s religious responsibilities last for people, so He the Almighty made fasting obligatory on them, an act of worship during which people deny themselves during one day what had been lawful for them and what they had grown accustomed to the previous day in order that such self-denial should become habitual for them. There is a difference between the continuance of a habit and the pleasure that an act of worship brings. Reflect on the day of Eid of Fitr, for example: fitr (eating during the daytime) is something that is usual for you to do on other days throughout the year when you are free to either fast or not as you wish. However, when the day of Eid of Fitr comes, your Lord takes you out of the world of habit into the world of worship and makes a religious duty for you to have something to eat during the daylight hours before you go out to the Eid Prayer.(1) Then He the Almighty says: '...chaste men and women…' (al-Ahzab: 35). So the topic of guarding one's private parts comes immediately after that of fasting because fasting is abstaining from the appetites of both the stomach and the private parts: Allah the Almighty gave us the appetite of the stomach so that we could preserve our lives by means of eating and drinking. He gave us the appetite of the private parts so that we could preserve our species by means of marriage and procreation. We say that Allah the Almighty satisfied the wish of 'Asma' bint 'Umays Allah be pleased with her the representative of womankind, by mentioning the various different types of religious duty once in the masculine form and once in the feminine form. However, in doing that, He the Almighty took into account the need to keep women shielded. He the Almighty is still taking that consideration into account when He the Almighty says here '...chaste men and women…' (al-Ahzab: 35): when He the Almighty speaks of the men, He the Almighty says, '... '...chaste men and women…' (al-Ahzab: 35), but when He the Almighty speaks of the women, He the Almighty does not say 'all women who are mindful of their chastity' since matters relating to women should be protected and shielded from the public gaze. Then He says: '…men and women who remember Allah often–' (al-Ahzab: 35) Then, once again, returns to the matter of keeping women shielded when He says: '...Allah has prepared forgiveness and a rich reward (al-Ahzab: 35) using the masculine pronoun hum 'them', subsuming the matters of women within those of men. The reason this is done is to honour and protect women, not to disregard or ignore them as some have claimed. A form of this protection can be found in the words that we ourselves use to describe our wives when we refer to them saying, 'My family is with me' or 'The children are with me', or 'The gang are with me'. By saying those things, we seek to protect them and shield from harm, not to disregard or belittle them.

(1) An agreed-upon Hadith. It is narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (1904); and by Muslim in his Sahih (2/806) in a (Hadith) from Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him

(1) From Burayda Al-Aslami who said, 'Messenger Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him did not used to go out (to the prayer) on the day of the Eid of Fitr until he had eaten something; and he did not use to eat on the day of the (Eid) Sacrifice until he had returned (from the prayer), whereupon he would eat from the meat of the animal he had sacrificed.' It is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (5/353). Sheikh Sayyid Sabiq said in (Fiqh As-Sunna 1/268), 'Ibn Qudama said, 'With regards to hurrying to eat (before the prayer) on the day of the Eid of Fitr, I know of no difference of opinion (among the scholars).'

It is as if Allah the Almighty had satisfied Asma` bint `Umays Allah be pleased with her by including her on behalf of all the Muslim women in the same reward that will be provided for those male believers whose characteristics are mentioned in the verse in question so as to indicate women are also legally responsible.

We notice in the context of this verse that 'forgiveness' is mentioned before 'reward'. This is because of the principle that reads: 'The prevention of harm takes priority over the attraction of benefit'. Allah the Almighty prepares a reward for His worshippers for the good actions that they do even though He the Almighty derives no benefit whatsoever from those actions. No, the benefit that results from those acts returns solely to the one who is responsible for doing them – it is he who derives benefit from his acts of obedience and receives his reward for them in the Hereafter. As for Allah the Almighty He has no need of us, nor does our obedience avail Him anything, a point which is clear in the following Qudsi Hadith: 'O My slaves, if the first of you and the last of you, the jinn amongst you and the men, were all to have a heart the like of that of the most Allah-fearing person amongst you, that would not increase My kingdom in any way whatsoever. O my slaves, if the first of you and the last of you, the jinn amongst you and the men, were all to have a heart the like of that of the most immoral person amongst you, that would not decrease from My kingdom in any way.'(1)

So, we ourselves benefit from the religious duties for which we are responsible: they safeguard our well-being in this world and then we receive a reward for doing them on the Day of Resurrection. That is why we find so many of the messengers saying to their people, 'And no reward whatever do I ask of you for it…' (ash-Shu'ara': 109). It is as if they were saying, 'It would be reasonable for me, according to the customs of economics and exchange, to take some sort of reward for the task I am performing for you, that is, conveying Allah's Message to you, since I am doing you all a service. But what is there that you could give me, O poor ones, when I have a reward that is so high that no human being is capable of granting it? The verse says: '…my reward rests with none but Allah…' (Yunus: 72).

(1) See Muslim, Sahih, no. 2577; and At-Tirmidhi, Sunnan, on the authority of Abu Dharr Allah be pleased with him.

Allah the Almighty alone is capable of rewarding me in the manner that I deserve. The describing of the reward in the verse as being ‘mighty’ indicates that it will be large in size, valuable in nature and will last for a long time. These are the elements by which something is defined as being `azhim (great). How could any reward be greater than the one Allah the Almighty prepares for His worshippers in the Hereafter? Then Allah the Almighty says(1):

وَمَا كَانَ لِمُؤْمِنٍ وَلَا مُؤْمِنَةٍ إِذَا قَضَى ٱللَّهُ وَرَسُولُهُۥٓ أَمْرًا أَن يَكُونَ لَهُمُ ٱلْخِيَرَةُ
مِنْ أَمْرِهِمْ ۗ وَمَن يَعْصِ ٱللَّهَ وَرَسُولَهُۥ فَقَدْ ضَلَّ ضَلَٰلًا مُّبِينًا ﴿٣٦﴾

When God and His Messenger have decided on a matter that concerns them, it is not fitting for any believing man or woman to claim freedom of choice in that matter: whoever disobeys God and His Messenger is far astray [36]
(The Quran, al-Ahzab: 36)

The saying of Allah the Almighty ‘...it is not fitting for any believing man or woman…’ (al-Ahzab: 36) includes both men and women. Thus, this verse acts as an extension to the previous one, that is, it supports what comes before it. It also serves what comes after it, for it contains the main cause of that whole issue. It is narrated that this verse was revealed about 'Abdullah ibn Jahsh Allah be pleased with him and his sister Zaynab Allah be pleased with her when they refused to marry Zaynab to Zayd ibn Haritha Allah be pleased with him. So, from the point of view that they were the reason why the verse was revealed, the believing man referred to in the verse is `Abdullah ibn Jahsh Allah be pleased with him while the believing woman is his sister Zaynab Allah be pleased with her. But in its more general meaning, the verse refers to all believing men and all believing women alike.

(1) The cause of revelation of the verse. See Ibn Kathir, Tafsir Al-Quran Al-`Azhim, vol. 3, p. 489 and As-Suyuti, Asbab An-Nuzul, p. 220. As-Suyuti says: ‘It is narrated on the authority of Ibn `Abbas Allah be pleased with him that he said, ‘Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him married Zaynab bint Jahsh Allah be pleased with her to Zayd ibn Haritha Allah be pleased with him but she looked down on him and said, “I am better than him in terms of lineage.” She was a woman of passion prone to bouts of anger, so Allah the Almighty revealed: “When Allah and His Messenger have decided on a matter that concerns them, it is not fitting for any believing man or woman to claim freedom of choice in that matter…”’ (al-Ahzab: 36).

We mentioned the story(1) of Zayd ibn Haritha Allah be pleased with him previously, but it can be summarised as follows: he was stolen away from his family and sold as a slave in the slave market of Mecca, where he was bought by Hakim ibn Hizam who gave him to Khadija Allah be pleased with her the Mother of the Believers.

Khadija then gave Zayd to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who made him his freedman. Then, one day, while he was in the marketplace, a group of people from Zayd's tribe saw him and knew him at once, so they went and told his father that they had seen Zayd in the city. So, his father and his uncles came at once, told their story to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and asked him to allow Zayd to go back with them. So he peace and blessings be upon him said to them, 'Leave the choice to him: if he chooses you then, you can take him, but if he chooses me, then it will not be for me to hand him over to you.' Then, when Zayd returned, he said, 'By Allah, I would not choose anyone before Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.' For this reason, Messenger Muhammad wanted to honour Zayd for the way he had acted, so he adopted him in the manner that was practised by the Arabs at that time and called him 'Zayd ibn Muhammad'.(2) Then, when Allah the Almighty wanted to bring an end to this practice, as well as the practice of zhihar (equating one's wife with one's mother), He the Almighty revealed the following words: 'Never has Allah endowed any man with two hearts in one body: and [just as] He has never made your wives whom you may have declared to be 'as unlawful to you as your mothers' bodies' [truly] your mothers, so, too, has He never made your adopted sons [truly] your sons…' (al-Ahzab: 4). As man may only have a single heart, so too he may only have a single father, Allah the Almighty wanted to begin with the adopted son of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so that he might be a practical example to other people of what they should do. The adopted children, at the time, were to inherit from the adoptive parents after they passed away. In addition, it was forbidden for women who had been married to adopted children to marry their adoptive parents.

(1) The story of Zayd ibn Haritha Allah be pleased with him

(2) See As-Sirat An-Nabawayya of Ibn Hisham, vol. 1, pp. 248 – 249.

It's true that ending this practice was, in effect, an end of a corrupt social order that had engulfed the entire Arab peninsula, but at the same time, it was a proof that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him practised adoption in exactly the same way as the rest of the Arabs and that it was Allah the Almighty Who rendered these actions of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him invalid.

This opens the door for those who oppose him peace and blessings be upon him to set their tongues wagging and gloat over his misfortune, so Allah the Almighty handled the situation in the manner of a Lord Who sends out a command to bring aid to someone beloved to him: Allah Glorified is He did not revile the action of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. No, on the contrary He the Almighty classified his action as equitable and just. But His judgement was more equitable and more just, so He the Almighty says: '[As for your adopted children,] call them by their [real] fathers' names: this is more equitable in the sight of Allah…' (al-Ahzab: 5). It means, 'if you have made it part of justice and love to make yourselves the legal guardians of these children and give them your names, then know that it is not human justice, but that judgement of Allah the Almighty is more equitable and more just'. It is a great honour for Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to bring back his ruling to that of his Lord. It was a great honour for him peace and blessings be upon him that the matter of prohibiting adoption started with him: he peace and blessings be upon him made a ruling and then Allah the Almighty abolished it and replaced it with another, which is viewed as an extraordinary tribute to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; He the Almighty says: '…this is more equitable in the sight of Allah…' (al-Ahzab: 5) meaning that the action of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was equitable and just with respect to the laws of mankind, but he peace and blessings be upon him was sent to replace the laws of mankind with the laws of the Lord of mankind. This was how he peace and blessings be upon him was able to find his way out of this issue.

As for Zayd, Allah the Almighty recompensed him for the distress that he experienced as a result of losing his ascription of paternity to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him since he had reverted to simply being called Zayd ibn Haritha after being called Zayd ibn Muhammad; Allah the Almighty recompensed him and did justice to him by making his name the only name from amongst all the companions to be mentioned word-for-word in the Noble Quran; He the Almighty says: '...[But] then, when Zayd had come to the end of his union with her, We gave her to thee in marriage…' (al-Ahzab: 37). So the mention of Zayd Allah be pleased with him will remain forever in the Book of Allah that is recited out loud and whose recitation is used for the acts of worship until the Day of Resurrection. As for the connection of Zayd to the verse under discussion, '...it is not fitting for any believing man or woman to claim freedom of choice in that matter…' (al-Ahzab: 36), it is that he was married to Zaynab bint Jahsh Allah be pleased with her - Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had married him to her - and this verse was revealed about Zaynab and her brother `Abdullah(1).

As for the saying of Allah: '...it is not fitting for any believing man or woman to claim freedom of choice in that matter…' (al-Ahzab: 36), it means that it is this act of disobeying Allah and His Messenger is inconceivable to take place on the part of the true believers. The use of negation indicates that this matter is totally rejected, that is, as long as belief remains in their hearts (the hearts of believers), it is not possible for believing men and women to abandon the commands of Allah and His Messenger and put their own choices first; He the Almighty says: 'It is not fitting for any believing man or woman to claim freedom of choice in that matter…' (al-Ahzab: 36). If this were not so, then they could be said to possess any belief in either Allah the Almighty or His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him.

If you were to ask, 'How can that be so when Allah the Almighty has confirmed that we do indeed have choice?', we would respond by saying, 'There is a difference between choice in terms of doing one's religious duties - you can choose to do them or to not - and choice in terms of determining what is or is not a religious duty: the worshippers of Allah the Almighty have no say whatsoever in determining what their religious duties consist of. If I were to charge them with the performance of certain religious acts, then I would be the one determining their religious duties, whether or not they obey me, this would be an entirely different matter. Worshippers cannot suggest religious acts for themselves. No, I would be the one who imposes their duties on them. Then, they would have the choice of either obeying or rejecting what I have imposed on them'. However, as long as it is established that they believe in Allah the Almighty and in His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him it is inevitable that they will be content with what they have been commanded and will not turn away from it to something else. The story of the divorce of Zayd and Zaynab Allah be pleased with them and how Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him then married her is a one that has been exploited by orientalists and prejudiced scholars alike. They have had the nerve to say things about Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that should not be said of one such as him. For example, they say that he peace and blessings be upon him loved Zaynab Allah be pleased with her and wanted her for himself, so he commanded her to act badly towards Zayd so that he might divorce her and thus leave the way open for him to marry her. We say, in response, to them that, first of all, Zaynab bint Jahsh Al-Asadiyya was the daughter of the paternal aunt of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. He himself was responsible for looking after her money and arranging her affairs. She grew up under his supervision, so if he had indeed wanted her for himself, he could have married her first. The textual evidence for this is found in the Quran itself where Allah says: '...you hid in your heart what Allah would later reveal…' (al-Ahzab: 37). If you want to know that which Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was hiding within his heart, then your answer is to be found in the verse under study; He the Almighty clearly shows the profound wisdom behind this law in His saying, '…so that there might be no fault in believers marrying the wives of their adopted sons after they no longer wanted them…' (al-Ahzab: 37). This destroys all the false claims they make about Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

(1) He is `Abdullah ibn Jahsh ibn Ri`ab Al-Asadi Allah be pleased with him a Companion who was one of the early converts to Islam. He migrated to Abyssinia and then went to Medina. He was one of the commanders of the battles and was the brother-in-law of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him since he was the brother of Zaynab bint Jahsh Allah be pleased with her the Mother of the Believers. He was killed as a martyr on the day of the Battle of Uhud and was buried along with Hamza Allah be pleased with him in a single grave in 3 A.H. See Az-Zirikli, Al-`Alam, 4/76. Hamza ibn `Abd Al-Muttalib, the paternal uncle of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was the maternal uncle of `Abdullah ibn Jahsh since his mother was Umayma bint `Abd Al-Muttalib.

As for the claim that his heart was preoccupied with Zaynab, we reply by asking why they make out the preoccupation of the heart of Messenger Muhammad a sexual one? If they were to have followed the story right from the very beginning, it would have been obvious to them that it was nothing of the sort. For when he peace and blessings be upon him first sent someone to propose to Zaynab, both her brother, `Abdullah, and her sister, Hamna, thought that he had come to propose on behalf of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Then, when they found out that he had come to propose on behalf of his freedman, Zayd, they all became very angry, for how could a noblewoman from Quraysh, and indeed a cousin of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him marry a slave? But when they found out that it was a command from Allah the Almighty, they immediately submitted and agreed to the marriage. But even after Zayd and Zaynab Allah be pleased with them were married, she continued to look down upon him. Indeed, Zayd Allah be pleased with him felt as if she despised him because of the disparity between their classes, so he used to go to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to complain about how badly his wife was treating him and that she was making his life a difficult. He complained that the married life they shared was an empty shell, void of all substance or feeling. It was only his love for Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that prevented him from divorcing her, as well as the fact that he did not want to lose the tremendous honour he had acquired by being married to a woman who was a cousin of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Every single time Zayd Allah be pleased with him complained to him peace and blessings be upon him he used to say to him: '…Keep your wife and be mindful of Allah…' (al-Ahzab: 37). If he peace and blessings be upon him had truly wanted her for himself, then he would have told him to divorce her when he had the opportunity to do so and then the way would have been open for him. At this point, it is necessary for us to examine what the relationship between men and women: The Creator created men for women and women for men. This is why we find the Arab woman, Umm Iyas giving her daughter the following advice when Al-Harith proposed to her, 'My daughter, if one could be left without advice, then you of all people would be the least in need of it. If a woman were able to do without a husband by virtue of her parent's wealth and the strength of their need for her, then you of all people would be the least in need of him, but women were created for men, while men were created for them. If this advice could be dispensed with because of a person's good manners, then it would be dispensed with in your case. However, this advice can still serve as a reminder to those who are heedless, and a help to those who are heedful.'

We say, 'A man can live a life of the highest luxury in terms of food, drink, clothing and lodging, but despite all of that he will still himself be unable to do without a wife. The same is true for women. That is why Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'If I were to command any human being to prostrate to another, I would command a wife to prostrate to her husband.'(1) This is because her husband gives her what her father; mother and siblings give her and, on top of that, gives her things that they are all not able to give her. It is a demonstrable fact that women are for men and men are for women, no matter how many walls of power or might they build around themselves.

With regard to Zayd Allah be pleased with him the matter was a difficult one because Allah the Almighty had made three different stages in marriage, which are mentioned in His saying: 'And among His Wonders is this: He creates for you mates out of your own kind so that you might find tranquillity in them, and He engenders love and tenderness between you...' (ar-Rum: 21).

The first stage is when the husband finds tranquillity with his wife and begins to feel at peace with her. He feels at ease with her when she wipes the sweat from his brow and takes him into her embrace at the end of a day full of hardship and toil. If peace and tranquillity prove impossible due to the trials of everyday life, then there is love and affection to bring them together. Why should it not be so since, when you remain in the company of a friend for a long time, you will find affection towards him growing in your heart. You will find that there is a value in this affection that enables you to bear his mistakes and forgive him his trespasses. And if it is so with a friend, then how should it be with a wife? Is she not more deserving of this love and affection?

(1) See Ahmad, Musnad, 4/381, on the authority of `Abdullah ibn Abu Awfa that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'If I were to command any human being to prostrate to another, I would command a wife to prostrate to her husband. A woman has not fulfilled all the rights Allah has over her until she has first fulfilled all the rights her husband has over her. Even if he were to ask her to give herself to him, while she was on top of the camel-saddle, she should give herself to him.'

If this love is lacking in their relationship, then there is still compassion between them, meaning that they treat one another with mercy and tenderness when they grow old and infirm. However, Zayd Allah be pleased with him had reached a stage in his marriage wherein all three of these qualities, i.e. tranquillity, love and compassion, were absent because of the social differences between him and his wife. Another matter is that if we accept that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did indeed have thoughts (of marrying) Zaynab Allah be pleased with her then why do you interpret those thoughts to be his natural instincts? Why do you not interpret them in the light of the act of fairness? For he was the one who forced Zaynab Allah be pleased with her to marry Zayd Allah be pleased with him even though she was a noblewoman of Quraysh and he was a slave. So, because he was the one who got her into her predicament, he wanted to make it up to her by marrying her himself and making her one of the Mothers of the Believers.

Anyway, why should a messenger whom Allah the Almighty has described as being a human being not have desires of this sort when all of the messengers who preceded him had such desires. This is based on supposing that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did desire Zaynab Allah be pleased with her. However, people are lacking in good opinion.

This law was for sure a divinely revealed one, a point which is crystal clear by the fact that there was no enmity whatsoever among the three main figures in this story, namely; Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him his freedman Zayd Allah be pleased with him and his cousin Zaynab Allah be pleased with her. All of them were brought together through a bond of faithful purification, which enabled every one of them to meet defeat with high spirits without any feeling of hostility or resentment and to submit to the command of Allah the Almighty. As for those who understand the verse: '…you were afraid of people, but it is more fitting that you fear Allah…' (al-Ahzab: 37) as a source of disgrace to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they should know that there are two types of khashya (standing in awe): standing in awe of something that you fear might harm you and standing in awe in the sense of feeling shy. As for the act of ‘standing in awe’ referred to in ‘…you were afraid of people…’ (al-Ahzab: 37), it is that of feeling shy. It is enough that Allah the Almighty said regarding His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him(1): ‘…that, behold, might give offence to the Prophet, and yet he might feel shy of [asking] you [to leave]: but Allah is not shy of [teaching you] what is right….’ (al-Ahzab: 53). So the act of ‘standing in awe’ referred to Messenger Muhammad’s fear of what the disbelievers might say about him concerning his marriage to the ex-wife of his adopted son. However, those people did not know that Allah the Almighty had abolished the practice of adoption and so they had no case against him peace and blessings be upon him.

It was perfectly natural for Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to be afraid of what the disbelievers might say about him since he had come to abolish the customs and practices of the pre-Islamic period. He, also, was the first one to have to suffer the consequences of that change since it was firstly implemented on him personally. Such feeling of shyness that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him experienced regarding his marrying Zaynab Allah be pleased with her or to what the people might say, was only prompted by his desire to keep his reputation and honour clean of anything that might sully it or detract from it. As a matter of fact, Messenger

(1) This came about because when Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him moved in with Zaynab bint Jahsh Allah be pleased with her he prepared a feast of bread and meat and invited the people to come and partake of it. So, a group of people came, ate their fill and left; then another group came, ate their fill and left; (and this continued) until only three people remained who had not left yet. They sat therein chatting with each other while Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him wanted to be alone with his bride, Zaynab Allah be pleased with her. So he peace and blessings be upon him went out, then returned, then went again, then returned and continued doing that until he was informed that the people had left, for he was an exceedingly shy man. It was then that Allah the Almighty sent down the words: ‘O you who have attained to faith! Do not enter The Prophet’s dwellings unless you are given leave; [and when invited] to a meal, do not come [so early as] to wait for it to be readied: but whenever you are invited, enter [at the proper time]; and when you have partaken of the meal, disperse without lingering for the sake of mere talk: that, behold, might give offence to the Prophet, and yet he might feel shy of [asking] you [to leave]: but Allah is not shy of [teaching you] what is right….’ (al-Ahzab: 53). See Al-Wahidi, Asbab An-Nuzul, p.205 and Ibn Kathir, Tafsir, 3/503.

Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him always sought to protect himself against suspicion. This was why when some of his companions saw him with a woman and so steered clear of him in order not to cause him any embarrassment, he peace and blessings be upon him said to them, ‘Be at ease! She is Safiyya.’ When they replied, ‘We did not doubt you, O Messenger of Allah.’ He peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Satan is in the blood of the sons of Adam, flowing where it flows.’(1)

Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him wanted to shake off any doubts or suspicions with regards to his character. He wanted to make sure that no one needed to do him a good turn by covering for him. There is no greater proof of the shyness of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him than the story of `Abdullah ibn Sa`d ibn Abu As-Sarh, which reads: ‘When Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him entered Mecca after his victory over Quraysh, he ordered `Abdullah ibn Sa’d ibn Abi Sarh to be murdered, since he was wanted by Muslims for major crimes.(2) Then 'Uthman ibn 'Affan Allah be pleased with him stood up and begged Messenger Muhammad to have `Abdullah ibn Sa`d ibn Abu Sarh pardoned- i.e. he asked that he give him safe passage- but he peace and blessings be upon him did not respond and continued to wait for someone amongst the people to get up and go and kill him. 'Uthman Allah be pleased with him however, repeated his request again and again until he peace and blessings be upon him felt shy in the presence of 'Uthman Allah be pleased with him and so granted him his request, guaranteeing the safety of `Abdullah. Then, after his safety had been guaranteed, 'Uthman Allah be pleased with him took hold of 'Abdullah and led him away from the salon of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. After he left, he peace and blessings be upon him said to his Companions, ‘Was there not a single right-acting man among you who would have stood up and killed him?' He meant that he wished if this man could be killed by his companions, yet after 'Uthman Allah be pleased with him had asked pardon for him, the opportunity had been missed. So `Abdullah ibn Bishr Allah be pleased with him stood up and said, 'Messenger of Allah, your eye was fixed upon mine and I was looking into it waiting for a green light from you that I should kill him. But you did not give one' whereupon he peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'The treachery of the eye does not befit a Prophet.'(1) I would like to mention a story(2): we used to have a professor called Sheikh Musa Sharif Allah rest his soul who was a pious man. He taught us the interpretation of this verse. Before attending his class, we, students, used to get together to discuss previous lessons. He used to choose me from amongst all my fellow students, including the likes of Sheikh Hasan Jad, Dr. Khafaja Abu Al-`Aynayn and others, to tell him about the difficult points that had confronted us in the course of our discussions. So, one day, he called me by my mother's name which he had known from my father. So, I went up and stood before him, whereupon he struck me on the back of my neck in such a way that the problem which had been confronting us completely and suddenly resolved itself. It was exactly like when you strike someone suffering from hiccups on the back, so it goes away just like that. Then, the following day when the Sheikh told us this story of 'Uthman Allah be pleased with him he said, 'My boys, I saw 'Uthman last night with all of his shyness, so I said to him, 'How could you beg pardon for a man who said such-and-such about Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him?' He replied, 'Do you not know that Allah the Almighty loves those who repent and seek forgiveness?' Then I said to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him' - and notice that he did not say, 'I saw Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him'- 'What made you accept the intercession of 'Uthman?' He replied, 'Should I not feel shy in front of a man in whose presence the angels feel shy?'(3)

(2) The story of Sheikh Musa Sharif with Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi, Allah rest their souls.

(3) This expression is used by Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to refer to `Uthman Allah be pleased with him. On another occasion, Imam Muslim narrated=

So Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was, by nature, an exceedingly shy man.

Then Allah the Almighty says, '...whoever disobeys Allah and His Messenger is far astray' (al-Ahzab: 36). In this verse, there are three literary particles that are used for emphasis: the particle qad which is used to indicate assertion, especially when it is followed by a verb in the perfect tense; the use of the cognate accusative of dalal; and the use of the adjective 'far' to describe this act of dalal (going astray).

Dalal is defined as lacking the guidance necessary to find the path that leads to the goal. However, it is possible for someone to go astray from the path and then for someone else to come and guide him back to it. Those who rebel against Allah the Almighty and His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him however are described as going clearly astray, meaning that they are unable to ever find anyone to guide them back. The reason for that is because this path that we follow leads to the Hereafter and there is nothing of that sort allowed there. This is a glimpse of the interaction of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with 'Uthman ibn 'Affan Allah be pleased with him. 'Abdullah ibn Bishr Allah be pleased with him has served to clearly show us the quality of shyness possessed by Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Now, we can return to the topic under discussion which is the quality of faithful purification that linked Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to both Zayd and Zaynab Allah be pleased with them. Messenger

= that `Aisha Allah be pleased with her said, 'While Messenger Muhammad, was reclining on the bed in my apartment with his upper-leg or lower-leg uncovered, Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him came and sought permission to enter. So, he bade him enter, remaining in the same position that he was in, and talked with him. Then `Umar Allah be pleased with him came and sought permission to enter. So, he bade him enter, again remaining exactly as he was, and talked with him. Then `Uthman Allah be pleased with him came and sought permission to enter. So, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him sat up and straightened out his garments (and covered his leg properly). Then, after he had left, `Aisha Allah be pleased with her said, 'When Abu Bakr came in, you did not stir or seem particularly bothered; when `Umar came in, you did not stir or seem particularly bothered; but when `Uthman came in, you immediately sat up and straightened out your clothes. Why was that? Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'Should I not feel shy in front of a man in whose presence the angels feel shy?'

Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him always used to go and ask after Zayd Allah be pleased with him whenever he was absent. One time, when he peace and blessings be upon him went to ask after Zayd, he saw Zaynab Allah be pleased with her busy with her household chores, looking very pretty, so he said out loudly, ‘Blessed be Allah, the best of creators’, in exactly the same way, for example, that one of us might say: ‘Masha` Allah’ (What Allah wills!), when you see a daughter of yours looking very pretty. It was as if Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him wanted to make her feel good and give her spirits a boost that was large enough to counter the drop in spirits she had felt as a result of being forced to marry Zayd and live with him against her will. Then, when Zayd Allah be pleased with him came back, she said to him, ‘Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to ask after you and said to me, “Blessed be Allah, the best of creators.”’ So Zayd said to her, ‘Zaynab, I think that you should be married to Messenger Muhammad, since he loves you. I think that I should divorce you so that he could then marry you.’ When he said this, she appeared joyful, but also looked amazed as if she could not believe that, ‘If you divorce me, I will marry Messenger Muhammad?’

This conversation between them amounted to no more than words, but by Allah, if such had been uttered elsewhere to someone other than Zayd Allah be pleased with him they would have made that person jealous and he would not have acted like this! So, reflect deeply on this faithful purification with which Zayd Allah be pleased with him was endowed.

Allah the Almighty says about this matter:

وَإِذۡ تَقُولُ لِلَّذِيٓ أَنۡعَمَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَيۡهِ وَأَنۡعَمۡتَ عَلَيۡهِ أَمۡسِكۡ عَلَيۡكَ زَوۡجَكَ وَٱتَّقِ ٱللَّهَ
وَتُخۡفِي فِي نَفۡسِكَ مَا ٱللَّهُ مُبۡدِيهِ وَتَخۡشَى ٱلنَّاسَ وَٱللَّهُ أَحَقُّ أَن تَخۡشَىٰهُۖ فَلَمَّا
قَضَىٰ زَيۡدٞ مِّنۡهَا وَطَرٗا زَوَّجۡنَٰكَهَا لِكَيۡ لَا يَكُونَ عَلَى ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ حَرَجٞ فِيٓ أَزۡوَٰجِ
أَدۡعِيَآئِهِمۡ إِذَا قَضَوۡاْ مِنۡهُنَّ وَطَرٗاۚ وَكَانَ أَمۡرُ ٱللَّهِ مَفۡعُولٗا ﴿٣٧﴾

When you [Prophet] said to the man who had been favoured by God and by you, ‘Keep your wife and be mindful of God,’ you hid in your heart what God would later reveal: you were afraid of people, but it is more fitting that you fear God.

When Zayd no longer wanted her, We gave her to you in marriage so that there might be no fault in believers marrying the wives of their adopted sons after they no longer wanted them. God's command must be carried out [37]
(The Quran, al-Ahzab: 37)

The meaning of the saying of Allah: 'When you [Prophet] said to' (al-Ahzab: 37), is, 'Remember, O Prophet Muhammad, the matter of Zayd well and think of it carefully. Remember when you said to the one to whom Allah the Almighty showed favour by granting him, i.e. Zayd faith and to whom you showed favour, first by granting him his freedom, then by using human law to make him your son, third by marrying him to a noblewoman from Quraysh who was your own cousin despite his being a slave and finally by saying to him when you did: "Keep your wife and be mindful of Allah…" (al-Ahzab: 37).

But why did you say those words to him, O Prophet Muhammad? Was it out of fear that people might say that you married your adopted son's wife? How could that be when this is what Allah the Almighty himself intends to come to pass? He the Almighty wants to bring an end to the custom of adoption and wants to bring about its end through you. So, you have hidden a matter within yourself that Allah the Almighty brought out into public when He Glorified is He told you about this matter, affirming you that it will end through your hands by you marrying the ex-wife of your adopted son. Allah the Almighty then says, '…it is more fitting that you fear Allah…' (al-Ahzab: 37), meaning to stop fearing people! This is what made Allah the Almighty say in another verse: '… [and such will always be His way with] those who convey Allah's Messages [to the world], and stand in awe of Him, and hold none but Allah in awe…' (al-Ahzab: 39). We have previously made it clear that the fear felt by Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not the type of fear that one experiences when he is afraid of something that might harm him, but was a feeling of shyness by which he peace and blessings be upon him would deflect any doubts with regard to his character. Then the verse says: 'When Zayd no longer wanted her We gave her to you in marriage…' (al-Ahzab: 37). The word watar is used to refer to the things in a man's life that fit in with his lifestyle, but literally means 'aim' or 'need'. As we mentioned previously, a man's watar with respect to his wife (i.e. what he needs from her) is tranquillity. If that is absent, then it is love which keeps them together and if that is absent then there is a mutual feeling of tenderness. Zayd Allah be pleased with him went through all these stages and looked for all these qualities within his wife but did not find a single one - he found neither tranquillity nor love nor tenderness. So why then did he remain married to her? That was why he used to go to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to complain to him about what he had to endure from Zaynab Allah be pleased with her. In response, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would say to him: 'Keep your wife and be mindful of Allah…' (al-Ahzab: 37).

Now reflect again on the faithful purification of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Zayd and Zaynab Allah be pleased with them: 'after Zayd divorced Zaynab, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him left her to complete her `idda (period of waiting). Then, when she completed her period of waiting, he said to Zayd, 'Go to Zaynab and propose to her on my behalf.'(1) How incredible is that? Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him sent the divorcer to propose on his behalf to the divorcee! This indicates how much Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him trusted Zayd; it also indicates that Zayd's desire for Zaynab had run its course and that he no longer had any need of her, which is why he went in to see Zaynab and said to her, 'Rejoice, Zaynab, for Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has sent me to propose to you on his behalf.' She replied, 'By Allah, I will give no reply until I have first prostrated to Allah in thanks.' So Zaynab stood up to make her prostrations and Zayd returned to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to tell him what Zaynab had said. So, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him went to Zaynab's home and went in to see her without seeking her permission.'(1)

(1) See Ibn Sa`d, At-Tabaqat Al-Kubra, vol. 10 p.101. Anas Allah be pleased with him said, 'When the period of waiting of Zaynab bint Jahsh came to an end, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to Zayd ibn Haritha Allah be pleased with him 'I can find no one in my family whom I trust as much as you, so go to Zaynab and propose to her on my behalf.' Zayd Allah be pleased with him said, 'Rejoice, Zaynab, for Messenger Muhammad, has mentioned you.' But Ibn Sa`d is narrated to have said that when the waiting period of Zaynab ended, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him fainted. Then he came to, smiling, and said, 'Who will go to Zaynab to give her the good news that Allah the Almighty has married her to me from Heaven.' `Aisha Allah be pleased with her said, 'So Salama, the servant of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him rushed out to tell her about that, and so she gave her anklets.' See Ibn Sa`d, At-Tabaqat Al-Kubra, vol. 10 p.99.

Perhaps you wonder why Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him went in to see her without seeking her permission first? He did that, they say, because at that moment she had become his wife: as Allah the Almighty says, 'When Zayd no longer wanted her We gave her to you in marriage…' (al-Ahzab: 37). In other words, Allah the Almighty had married him to her from above the seven heavens.

This was why Zaynab, when she sat with the other wives of the Prophet- and this is another example of faithful purification- she used to say to them, 'I have a source of pride over the rest of you, for while all of you were given in marriage by your guardians, I was given in marriage by my Lord. So, do not any of you dare answer me back?'(2) This was not all; she also used to act boldly towards Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying, 'Messenger of Allah, there are three matters which allow me to act boldly towards you.' He would laugh and reply, 'What is the first matter?' So, she would say, 'The first is that I have the same grandfather as you; the second is that Allah the Almighty married me from above Seven Heavens; and the third is that my messenger in the marriage was not Zayd but was Jibril (Gabriel)'(3)

(1) This was said by Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him who said that Zaynab Allah be pleased with her replied to Zayd Allah be pleased with him saying: 'I will not do anything until I receive a command from my Lord.' So, she got up and went to her place of prostration. Then the verse: 'When Zayd no longer wanted her We gave her to you in marriage…' (al-Ahzab: 37), was revealed. So, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came and went in to see her unannounced.' See Ibn Sa`d, At-Tabaqat Al-Kubra, vol. 10 p.101; and Ibn Al-A`thir, Usdu Al-Ghaba vol. 7 p.125.

(2) See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no. 7420, on the authority of Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him who said that Zaynab Allah be pleased with her used to boast in front of the other wives of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him saying, 'Your families married you, but Allah the Almighty married me from above seven heavens.'

(3) See Ibn Hajar, Fath Al-Bari vol. 13, p. 412 as part of a mursal Hadith narrated on the authority of Ash-Sha`bi, using some of the words mentioned here. In this narration, Zaynab Allah be pleased with her said, 'Messenger of Allah, my right to you is greater than that of all your other wives, since I had the best man, the noblest Messenger and am the closest of them in lineage to you: it was the Most Merciful who married me to=

What greatness we have witnessed in this story! What faithful purification demonstrated by Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his companions! So he peace and blessings be upon him did not marry Zaynab Allah be pleased with her out of his own accord, but rather, he was married to her by the command of his Lord. That is why we say to those who love to dwell on this matter, thinking that it brings dishonour upon Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'You must understand the difference between zuwwij and tazawwaj: tazawwaj is when you marry someone yourself according to your own wishes, while zuwijja means that somebody else gives you away in marriage. The Quranic phrase: 'We gave her to you in marriage' (al-Ahzab: 37), includes the verb zawwaja (to give in marriage); the pronoun na (we) which is the subject and which refers to Allah the Almighty; the pronoun ka (you) which is the first object and which refers to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who is the one being addressed in the verse; and the pronoun ha (her) which is the second object of the verb zawwaja and which refers to Zaynab.

So, in this matter and with respect to his marriages to all his wives, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never went against the command of his Lord. So be fair in how you judge him since the matter was not decided by him peace and blessings be upon him but by his Lord the Almighty a fact which is clear in His saying, '[O wives of the Prophet!] Were he to divorce [any of] you, his Lord might well give him in your stead spouses better than you – women who surrender themselves unto Allah, who truly believe, devoutly obey His will, turn [unto Him] in repentance [whenever they have sinned], worship [Him alone], and go on and on [seeking His goodly acceptance] – be they women previously married or virgins.' (at-Tahrim: 5)

Then suppose, falsely, that Muhammad did so. What would have been wrong with him doing that? Polygamy was commonly practised at the time; it was not Muhammad who instituted it. Polygamy was also practised by the prophets and messengers who preceded him and you yourselves still practise it today.

= you from above seven heavens and it was Jibril (Gabriel) who brought news of that. As I am the daughter of your paternal aunt, there is not one other wife who is more closely related to you than me.' See At-Tabari and Abu Al-Qasim At-Tahawi in his book Kitab Al-Hujja Wa At-Tibyan.

As for those who accuse Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of expanding the parameters of the law for his benefit by marrying nine wives while constricting its parameters for his nation by only permitting them four, the response to them is that his wives are the Mothers of the Believers, thus it is impermissible for anyone to marry them after him peace and blessings be upon him. But that is not the case with other believing women, so, for example, if a man had seven wives, he would be obliged to divorce three and then those three would be free to marry someone else if they so wished. Therefore, it was incumbent upon him peace and blessings be upon him to hold onto all of his wives, while it was incumbent upon others to separate from any wives they had over the four that were permitted them.

Another thing: you think that Allah the Almighty was expanding the parameters of the law for Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in these matters, whereas the truth was that He was constricting them. Compare his position with that of all the other believers: they were allowed to hold on to four wives at any one time and then, if they divorced one or one of them died, they could replace her with another. Indeed, even if a believer divorced all of them or they were all to have died, he could still continue replacing them until he reached his divinely defined number. This means that ordinary believers had the right to marry a huge number of women, which is not allowed for Prophet Muhammad himself.

Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him on the other hand, despite the fact that he married nine, was addressed by Allah the Almighty with the following words: ‘No [other] women shall henceforth be lawful to thee – nor art thou [allowed] to supplant [any of] them by other wives, even though their beauty should please thee greatly…’ (al-Ahzab: 52). So, who has truly been restricted - Muhammad or his ummah?!

Another thing to be aware of is the difference between an exception in terms of the number and an exception in terms of the specified women themselves. Did Allah the Almighty except Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from the ruling in terms of its number, allowing him nine instead of four, or did He limit the exception to those specific women whom he married and no one else? The answer is that the exception was in terms of the specified women themselves, not the number, since, if it had been in terms of number, he would have been permitted to replace them with other women if any of them had died. No, the exception was limited to the specified women to whom he was married, so even if they were to have all died, he still would not have been permitted to marry any other wives after them.

Did the ruling remain thus for Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him until he passed away? The answer is ‘No’: it was like this at the beginning of his prophethood and then, when things settled down and Allah the Almighty had made His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him reach a significant position, He said to him, ‘Do what you want, for you are a guarantor from your nation.’(1)

There is something else we want to say: ‘Even suppose that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had had a choice in this matter and that it was not something already decided, did his action not lead to the abolishment of the practice of adoption? There is the matter of his mission: did Allah the Almighty strip him of it after he did what he did? Of course not, because there is no contradiction whatsoever between what Allah the Almighty wants and what His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him wants. Those who take Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to task for this matter are like those who take Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him to task for what is said of him in Allah’s words: ‘And, indeed, she desired him, and he desired her…' (Yusuf: 24) acting as if they were even more jealous of Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him than his Lord. Yes, it is true that Yusuf (Joseph) peace and blessings be upon him desired her, i.e. that he thought about her. We will not say to you that it is right for you to remain in the state of confusion in which you find yourselves, but we will ask you this: did Allah the Almighty strip Yusuf (Joseph) peace and blessings be upon him of his mission after he desired her? No, He did not, so we must conclude that his desire of her did not contradict his mission in any way. So, what you say about this matter is nothing more than a set of interpretations you have added yourselves.

(1) As is mentioned in the verse: ‘[know that] you may put off for a time whichever of them you please, and may take unto you whichever thou please...’ (al-Ahzab: 51). However, Al-Qurtubi, in his Tafsir, stated that he considered the position of those who considered this verse to abrogate the verse: ‘No [other] women shall henceforth be lawful to you...’ (al-Ahzab: 52), to be weak, which is why he favoured the interpretation that the purpose of the verse was to allow Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him leeway with respect to how much time he gave each wife - this verse meant that he no longer had to divide his time between them equally. Al-Qurtubi said, ‘This interpretation best fits what came before, and that is what is established in the Sahih from `Aisha Allah be pleased with her who said, ‘I used to be jealous of those women who gave themselves to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and say about them, ‘Does a woman give herself to a man?!’ Then, when Allah the Almighty revealed the verse: ‘[know that] you may put off for a time whichever of them you please...’ (al-Ahzab: 51), `Aisha Allah be pleased with her said, ‘By Allah, I do not see your Lord do anything except rush to fulfil your desires.’ See Al-Qurtubi, Tafsir, vol. 8, p. 5483.

Then the reason for the entire matter is mentioned: '…so that there might be no fault in believers marrying the wives of their adopted sons after they no longer wanted them…' (al-Ahzab: 37). Then the verse concludes in such a way that leaves no room for doubt with respect to the motives of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: '…Allah's Command must be carried out' (al-Ahzab: 37). In other words, this matter had to happen and could not have been left to any other person since that would have undermined the ruling abolishing the practice of adoption. So, the only reason for the marriage of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to the ex-wife of his adopted son was to remove the restriction from the Muslim community that prevented Muslim men marrying the ex-wives of their adopted sons and to show them that it was now permissible.

Allah the Almighty then says:

مَّا كَانَ عَلَى ٱلنَّبِيِّ مِنۡ حَرَجٖ فِيمَا فَرَضَ ٱللَّهُ لَهُۥۖ سُنَّةَ ٱللَّهِ
فِي ٱلَّذِينَ خَلَوۡاْ مِن قَبۡلُۚ وَكَانَ أَمۡرُ ٱللَّهِ قَدَرٗا مَّقۡدُورًا ﴿٣٨﴾

The Prophet is not at fault for what God has ordained for him.
This was God's practice with those who went before – God's command must be fulfilled [38] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 38)

As for the saying of Allah the Almighty 'The Prophet is not at fault…' (al-Ahzab: 38), it means that there is no sin or blame upon him Allah's peace and blessings upon him '…for what Allah has ordained for him.' (al-Ahzab: 38) In other word, how can you blame Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for doing something that Allah the Almighty ordained for him. Reflect on what He the Almighty says here: Allah says 'farada lahu' (Allah ordained for him) and does not say 'farada 'alayhi' (Allah made obligatory on him). As long as Allah the Almighty is the One Who ordained this, He is the One with whom the matter should be raised- Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him bears no sin in this regard.

This matter is almost like that of the Night Journey - when Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gave his people an account of what he had done on his Night Journey, they said to him, 'Muhammad, are you claiming that you went all the way to Jerusalem in a single night when we have to flog our camels half to death in order to get there in a month!'(1) This was a pretty senseless thing for them to say since Muhammad did not say, 'I journeyed', rather he said, 'I was taken on a journey.' The One Who took him on the journey was his Lord. So, it was not a matter of what Muhammad did, it was a matter of what Allah the Almighty did.

When we talked about this matter earlier, we gave a likeness or example to illustrate it - and the Highest Likeness belongs to Allah the Almighty. Our example went as follows: Suppose a man told you that he took his baby boy to the summit of mount Everest, would you then say to him, 'How can a baby boy climb mount Everest'?

However, we ourselves can now benefit from the statement of those who rejected the Night Journey, 'Muhammad, are you claiming that you went all the way to Jerusalem in a single night when we have to flog our camels half to death in order to get there in a month!' since the foolishness of a denier inevitably leads to the opposite of what himself intended by his inanity. Today, we take this statement of theirs as evidence against those who claim that the Night Journey was no more than a dream, or that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him travelled in spirit alone. For, if

(1) Ibn Hisham, As-Sira An-Nabawiyya, vol. 2, p. 4; says: 'On the morning after he had been taken on his Night Journey, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him went out to Quraysh and told them what had happened. Whereupon most of the people replied, 'By Allah, that is plain foolishness! By Allah, a caravan takes a month to go to Syria and a month to come back, so how can Muhammad go there and back in a single night?'

Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were to have said to them, ‘I saw in a dream that I went to Jerusalem’, they would not have said what they said.

So, the people must have understood Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to mean that he had gone to Jerusalem in body and spirit. If that were not the case, then why did they compare the way he went there with the way they went there themselves? This is what those who lived at the time of this event said, so how can people come along today and say that the Night Journey took place in his sleep, or that he travelled to Jerusalem in spirit and not in body?

The verse: ‘This was Allah’s practice with those who went before –’ (al-Ahzab: 38) either refers to the Prophet’s fellow messengers who came before him, or to those who practised polygamy before Islam. Therefore, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not an innovator when it came to this matter.

As for the saying of Allah, ‘Allah’s Command must be fulfilled’ (al-Ahzab: 38), you will notice that the previous verse finished with the words: ‘…And [thus] Allah’s will was done.’ (al-Ahzab: 37) So, based on that, it might be possible for someone to say, ‘Yes, His will was done at the time during which these events took place, but what about at other times’? So, Allah the Almighty says here: ‘…Allah’s Command must be fulfilled’ (al-Ahzab: 38), to indicate that what happened to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was pre-destined to come to pass, and that there is nothing that happens outside of Allah’s decree. It has been narrated in a sound Hadith that the pen has become dry from writing what has been written and what has been decreed.(1)

Allah the Almighty subsequently says:

(1) See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no. 1904, on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him who said to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘I am a young man and I am afraid to commit fornication since I cannot find any women to marry.’ He remained silent, so I repeated what I had said. Again, he remained silent, so again I repeated what I had said. Yet again he remained silent, so yet again I repeated what I had said. So, he said to me, “Abu Hurayra, the pen has become dry with regard to what you shall meet.”’ See Ibn Abu `Asim, As-Sunna, vol. 10, pp. 50 - 51; and An-Nasa`i, Sunnan, vol. 6, p. 59.

ٱلَّذِينَ يُبَلِّغُونَ رِسَٰلَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ وَيَخۡشَوۡنَهُۥ وَلَا يَخۡشَوۡنَ أَحَدًا إِلَّا ٱللَّهَۗ وَكَفَىٰ بِٱللَّهِ حَسِيبٗا ﴿٣٩﴾

[And with all] those who deliver God’s messages and fear only Him and no other: God’s reckoning is enough [39]
(The Quran, al-Ahzab: 39)

It is as if Allah the Almighty were taking us back to what He said about Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘…you were afraid of people, but it is more fitting that you fear Allah.’ (al-Ahzab: 38) So the messengers fear nothing when it comes to conveying what they are charged to convey from Allah the Almighty.

It is as if Allah the Almighty is denying that the fear felt by Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was a fear of conveying the message. On the contrary, the fear he felt was merely his feeling shyness and embarrassment about what the people might say about him, since they had no power whatsoever to harm him or cause him terror.

In this verse, it is noteworthy that the phrase: ‘[and with all] those who deliver Allah’s messages and fear only Him and no other…’ (al-Ahzab: 38), is a mubtada` (subject)(1) without a khabar (predicate) since the phrase: ‘…Allah’s reckoning is enough’ (al-Ahzab: 39) is not actually its predicate, but is merely a commentary on it. So where is this subject’s predicate? They reply that it is hidden and that the implicit meaning of the verse is, ‘as for those who convey Allah’s messages...it is not possible to level the accusation against them that they fear people when it comes to conveying what they are charged to convey’.

As for the saying of Allah the Almighty ‘…Allah’s reckoning is enough’ (al-Ahzab: 39), it means that you will never bring them to account, for only Allah the Almighty is the One Who will bring them to account. In this vein, we should know that one of the necessary consequences of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him being held to account is that, if he were to have done something that was not right for him to do, he would have been stripped of his mission and Allah the Almighty would have replaced him with another prophet. But none of that actually happened. Then the chapter returns to the subject of adoption, but in an entirely different context.

(1) It is permissible to consider the verse: ‘those who convey Allah’s messages [to the world]…’ (al-Ahzab: 39), to be an adjective describing Allah’s words: ‘...those that have passed away afore time...’ (al-Ahzab: 38).

Allah the Almighty says:

مَّا كَانَ مُحَمَّدٌ أَبَآ أَحَدٍ مِّن رِّجَالِكُمْ وَلَٰكِن رَّسُولَ ٱللَّهِ وَخَاتَمَ
ٱلنَّبِيِّـۧنَ ۗ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ بِكُلِّ شَىْءٍ عَلِيمًا ﴿٤٠﴾

Muhammad is not the father of any one of you men; he is God's Messenger and the seal of the prophets: God knows everything [40] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 40)

Allah the Almighty says, 'Muhammad is not the father of any one of your men…' (al-Ahzab: 40) because it was more important for the matter of adoption to be dealt with than for Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to be able to claim paternity over any of you (men). The benefit that a man derives from Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him lies not in the fact that he is his father, but rather in what Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him conveys to him from Allah and the divine program he brings that guarantees success and happiness in both the religious and temporal aspects of his life.

So, the joy you feel about Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him on account of him being a messenger is preferable to the joy you feel about him on account of him being a father. If this is not how you feel, then simply look around you and see how many people there are in the world who have fathers, and yet still their lives are wretched and without value.

The particle of negation in this verse, ma kana, implies denial and rejection - in other words, it rejects and denies that Muhammad is the father of any of your men. Now, reflect on the greatness of the literary structure used by the Quran in the phrase: '...of you men…' (al-Ahzab: 40) since Allah the Almighty did not say, as He the Almighty might have done, 'the father of one of you'. Why is that? They say that it is because Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was father to 'Abdullah, Al-Qasim and Ibrahim - they were all from them and the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was their father. So, in order to exempt those three from the generality of the statement, the verse used the words: ‘you men’ (al-Ahzab: 40) since none of them had lived long enough to actually become men. So, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was never a father to any of your men, even if he had been a father to some young boys who never reached adulthood or became men.

Then Allah the Almighty says, ‘but’ (al-Ahzab: 40) meaning Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him being a Messenger of Allah is more important than being a father of anyone of you. Allah the Almighty then says, ‘but is Allah’s Messenger’ (al-Ahzab: 40), and not only that but also ‘the Seal of Prophets’ (al-Ahzab: 40) meaning that he peace and blessings be upon him is the Messenger and Prophet who completes the chain of divine messages - no one will come after him with a new Message to rectify and amend what he brought.

This issue is one about which the Orientalists like to object. They say, ‘It says elsewhere in the Quran: ‘And, lo, Allah accepted, through the prophets, this solemn pledge [from the followers of earlier revelation]: “If, after all the revelation and the wisdom which I have vouchsafed unto you, there comes to you an apostle confirming the truth already in your possession, you must believe in him and succour him…”’ (Al-‘Imran: 81). And Muhammad is amongst those messengers with whom this pledge is made, as is proven by the verse: ‘And [remember] We did accept a solemn pledge from all the prophets – from you, [O Muhammad,] as well as from Nuh (Noah)…’ (al-Ahzab: 7).

So, one of their prime responsibilities of the prophets in the pledge Allah the Almighty made with them was to inform their people about the coming of a new Messenger and extract an oath from them that they would believe in him and succour him. An example of this is found in the good news `Isa (Jesus) peace and blessings be upon him gave his people about the coming of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when he said: ‘...and to give [you] the glad tiding of an apostle who shall come after me, whose name shall be Ahmad...’ (as-Saff: 6).

So how could Allah the Almighty possibly state that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was the Seal of the Prophets when he was one of them? Our response is this, ‘Yes, it is true that he was one of them, but while they were commanded to give their people the good news of a messenger coming after them, he was commanded to give his people the news that he was the Seal of the Prophets and messengers'.

That is why when a man claimed(1) prophethood during the reign of the caliph Al-Ma`mun, the caliph arrested him. Then, some months later, when another man appeared claiming prophethood, Al-Ma`mun thought it might be a good idea to have the two men meet face-to-face. So, he summoned the first claimant and said to him, 'This man claims that he is a prophet. What do you say about him?' The man replied, 'He is a liar: I have not sent anyone.' So, the man had ascended in his own eyes to the level of being a god, not simply a prophet!

Also there was a woman who claimed prophethood in the time of Al-Ma`mun: when he tried her, saying: 'Do you not know that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, "there will be no prophets after me(2)?"' She replied, 'Yes, but he did not say that there would not be any prophetesses after him!'

Then Allah the Almighty brings this topic to an end with His words: '…Allah knows everything…' (al-Ahzab: 39). Since Allah the Almighty has full knowledge of everything, none may object since it was He who sent the appropriate messenger to the appropriate place at the appropriate time and it was He who knew that the message of Muhammad would encompass every place and every time.

Then Allah the Almighty says:

(1) The story of the man who claimed to be a prophet during the time of Al-Ma`mun

(2) Ahmad, Musnad, vol. 1, p.182; said: 'One of the Hadiths that are narrated as proof that no prophets will come after Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is that of Sa`d ibn Abu Waqqas. He said, "Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked `Ali ibn Abu Taleb to stay behind in Medina when he went on the expedition to Tabuk, so `Ali said to him, 'Messenger of Allah, are you leaving me behind with the women and children?' Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'Are you not content that you enjoy a position to me like that of Harun (Aaron) to Musa (Moses), with the only difference being that there shall be no prophets after me?'"' See Ahmad, Musnad, vol. 1, p. 182.

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ ٱذۡكُرُواْ ٱللَّهَ ذِكۡرٗا كَثِيرٗا ﴿٤١﴾ وَسَبِّحُوهُ بُكۡرَةٗ وَأَصِيلًا ﴿٤٢﴾

Believers, remember God often [41] and glorify Him morning and evening [42] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 41- 42)

Our Lord the Almighty commands us to remember Him a great deal since dhikr ‘remembrance’ is the central pillar around which all the other acts of worship are built and is the easiest of them for the believer to do. That is why we find our Lord the Almighty commanding us to do it upon the completion of other acts of worship such as the prayer, Fasting and Hajj and that is why He the Almighty termed it the greatest in His saying: ‘…and remembrance of Allah is indeed the greatest [good]…’ (al-’Ankabut: 45).

‘Remembrance’ is the job of dhakira (the memory) which is a specific area of the brain. As we said before, when a human being receives information, it enters into his conscious mind, then, if he wants to store that piece of information for a time at which he might have need of it, he deposits it into either his memory banks (hafizha) or his subconscious. An example of this would be when you encounter someone you have met before: as soon as you see him, you remember and say to yourself, ‘I have not seen this man for over twenty years - the last time I saw him was in such-and-such a place’. Therefore, ‘remembrance’ is for things that are already present in a person’s conscious mind. ‘Remembrance’ is for matters which already actually exist in your mind having entered it at a particular time and place, but of which you have then been unmindful thereby relegating them to your subconscious mind or to your memory banks. So, what we want from you is that you do not leave these matters lost or forgotten in the subconscious or a distant region of the brain so that it would require a tremendous effort on your part to extract them, but rather that you place them in a region of the brain which is close to your conscious mind so you can recall them easily and without difficulty or strain.

This is exactly how your remembrance of Allah the Almighty should also be, for that is the vital matter of which you should always remain in constant remembrance. How could you forget to remember your Lord the Almighty when He took a solemn oath from you when you were still in your atomic state that you would remember him and got you to acknowledge that He was your Lord?

Allah the Almighty created intellect to take in information by making use of the means of perception available to us, as is mentioned in the Quran: ‘And Allah has brought you forth from your mothers’ wombs knowing nothing – but He has endowed you with hearing, and sight and minds so that you might have cause to be grateful.’ (an-Nahl: 78).

It is as if hearing and sight are the leaders for all other the senses. It is only through them that we come to know that which we did not know when we came forth from our mothers’ wombs. When it comes to actually taking in information, many people assume that people’s capacities vary according to the level of intelligence with which they are endowed, so one person might absorb a piece of information in one go while another might require several goes to absorb the same piece of information. This assumption is false: intellect is very much like a camera - it takes in information in a single go, but on condition that it is empty, ready to receive and not occupied with something else, since the conscious mind only has the capacity to handle one thought at a time. This matter is what we dealt with earlier when we commented on the verse: ‘Never has Allah endowed any man with two hearts in one body…’ (al-Ahzab: 4).

An intelligent person is one whose mind is not occupied with two matters at the same time; he does not think of one thing when his mind is busy with something else. When the conscious mind is empty, all people are exactly alike in their capacity to take in information. That is why successful teachers are those who are able to attract the full attention of their students, and give them no opportunity whatsoever to become preoccupied with something unrelated to the lesson at hand. And the only way they are able to do this is by treating their students with kindness and courtesy and actively involving them in the class by asking them questions from time to time. This keeps the student on his toes and does not allow him to become distracted since he is expecting to be questioned about the topic at any moment. That is why we see that the most successful form of teaching is that which involves discussion and debate. As for the method whereby the teacher does all the talking and the students simply listen, it places the teacher in one valley and the students in another, with each of them engaged in their own individual lines of thought.

We said previously that when a student knows how important a particular lesson is, he revises it while on his way to the exam and even while he is going up the stairs to the exam hall. Then, if that lesson comes up in the exam, he is able to repeat it word for word. Why is that? Because the time period he had for revision was so short and limited that it would not have allowed his mind to wander or become occupied with anything else. So, his intellect focused solely on the lesson, took in every single word, and recorded it into the conscious part of his brain. Then, when he needed to recall the lesson, it was there exactly as it was when he revised it. Why? Because the lesson had encountered a brain that was empty and free of distraction. Look at how our memory works and reflects on the greatness of the Creator: despite that the dhakira (memory) is only a tiny part of the brain, we find children under the age of eight who have memorised the entire Quran and are able, at any time, to recite it back to you. Yet we are amazed when a tape records a single lesson or two! The Quran is not simply a matter of mere memorisation; rather, one must carefully ponder over its letters and verses while reading it. This is because every letter of the Quran is entrusted to an angel, and these angels love those who love them. When you have a connection to the Quran, you recite it a lot which means that you love those angles. Then when you want to recall the Quran that you have memorised, the angels crowd together for you and the words of the Quran flow from your tongue very smoothly. But if you leave (reciting) the Quran, then it leaves you and slips from your memory, and that is why Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him warned us against leaving the Quran, saying: ‘Maintain (your recitation) of the Quran, for by Him in whose Hand is my soul, it slips away faster than a camel from its rope.’(1)

We also said previously that ‘remembrance’ is the only form of worship which costs you nothing and leaves your limbs free to do whatever it is you were doing: you do not have to put aside a particular time for it nor do you have to make a special effort for it, for there is no specified time for remembrance. One may remember Allah the Almighty standing, one may remember Him sitting and one may remember Him lying on his side, but all are counted among the people of remembrance. This is regarding the physical position that you adopt; the same is also true with regard to the time at which you do it: one may remember Allah the Almighty in the morning and one may remember Him in the evening, one may remember Him early and one may remember Him late, but all are counted among the people of remembrance. So, anyone who says, ‘Glory be to Allah, praise be to Allah, there is no god but Allah, Allah is the greatest and there is no power and no strength except through Allah the Most High the Magnificent’ thirty times in one day is written as one of the People of Remembrance. Also, anyone who gets up in the night, wakes up his family and prays two rak`as (units) is one of the People of Remembrance. So, remembrance of Allah is a simple matter: you can remember Him while chopping wood with an axe or writing down something with a pen; you can also remember Him Glorified is He while eating or while drinking, that is, whatever you are doing you can remember Allah the Almighty. So even though His remembrance, He is the greatest, it is also extremely easy for a believer to do. Then Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…and glorify Him morning and evening.’ (al-Ahzab: 42) As for the word tasbih (glorification), it means declaring it to be holy. As a matter of fact, to declare something to be holy means to declare it to be exalted. But what are we declaring Allah to be exalted above? We declare Him Glorified is He to be Exalted in His Essence, Attributes and Actions. So, while He has Existence, you have existence and so do the rivers and so do the mountains, yet His Existence is not like the existence of everything other than Him: Allah’s Existence, unlike any other thing, is not preceded by non-existence. This is with respect to His Essence. As for His Actions, He has actions just as you have actions. However, your Lord is Exalted above having actions that are like yours. This is what we were saying when we talked about the Night Journey and the Ascent. We mentioned the difference between making a journey and being taken on a journey. If Allah the Almighty is the One doing the action then do not look at the time it takes, since it is not you doing the action, it is He. Also, Allah’s Actions do not involve Him manipulating anything; rather, He simply says, ‘Be!’, and it is! We also said: ‘Even when we look solely at human beings, we find that the amount of time a particular action takes depends on the strength of the one doing the action. So, a small child might take an entire hour to move something that a large man might move in only a minute.

Therefore, by analogy and given the limitless nature of Allah's Power, it logically follows that His Actions would take no time whatsoever'. In the same way, we declare Allah the Almighty to be Exalted in terms of His Attributes: Allah has Hearing which is Exalted above being like your hearing, and a Face which is Exalted above being like your face and so and so forth. All of this is understood within the framework of the verse in which Allah says, '…There is nothing like Him: He is the All Hearing, the All Seeing.' (ash-Shura: 11) When you consider the verses dealing with glorification in the Quran, you will find that there are many of them. But glorification has a particularly special quality when it is used to open a chapter of the Quran, as in the beginning of the chapter of al-Isra` wherein Allah Glorified is He says, 'Glory to Him who made His servant travel by night…' (al-Isra': 1). The chapter begins by declaring Allah the Almighty to be exalted above the strange and marvellous events that are mentioned in it, which is why the verse says at the very beginning: 'Glory to Him who made His servant travel by night…' (al-Isra': 1). Allah's Transcendence and Holiness are established before His Acts. As well, He is Glorified before any glorifier has even been brought into being. In the same way, He is the Creator even before anything has even been created, that is, His Being a Creator came first before He even embarked upon creation. It is like when we talk about a poet: when we say, 'So-and-so is a poet', are we saying that out of the fact that we have actually heard one of his poems, or because he is a poet even before composing a poem? The answer is that he himself is a poet even before he composes a poem, because if he were not, he would never have composed it. So, if we follow the sequence of the glorification phrases used in the Quran, we find that Allah's Glorification was first established before any glorifiers actually existed, as shown in His saying: 'Glory to Him who made His servant travel by night…' (al-Isra': 1), that it was established again after He had created creation, as shown in His following saying: 'Everything in the heavens and earth glorifies Allah…' (al-Hashr: 1), and that creation continues to constantly glorify Him up to the present day, as shown in the following verse: 'Everything in the heavens and Earth glorifies Allah…' (al-Jumu'a: 1). Allah the Almighty was glorified, still is glorified and will continue to be glorified until the Last Hour, and that is why the True Lord commanded Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his ummah (followers of Muhammad) not to step outside of the ranks of those who glorify Him. Allah the Almighty says, '[Prophet], glorify the name of your Lord the Most High.' (al-A'la: 1)

The command to remember Allah the Almighty is followed immediately by the command to glorify Him, so it is if Allah were saying to you, 'Whenever you remember Him, also remember that He is Exalted above everything else in terms of Essence, Attributes and Actions'. It is in your own best interests as you journey through life that Allah does not have a partner, peer, or equal since that means that everyone will be under His Justice. So, O glorifier, declaring Allah the Almighty to be transcendent is in your own best interest.

We previously mentioned the saying of the country folk in this regard which reads: 'Whoever does not have a leader ought to have a larder'. So, the existence of one who is bigger than all the rest protects you from one of them arrogantly lording it over you. Therefore, Allah the Almighty being described with greatness and magnificence, is one of the greatest blessings with which we have been blessed. So, at the same time that you glorify and exalt Him the Almighty for being Exalted, praise and thank Him for not having a partner and for making all people equal before Him, praise and thank Him Glorified is He for the fact that His sayings and His commands apply to absolutely everyone, praise and thank Him for not taking a wife or having a son and for not having a familial link to anyone in His creation. How could we not remember Allah the Almighty glorify Him and praise Him when He is the One Who created all creatures?! And even before creating them, He assigned them purposes and goals, for creation is to bring something into life for a particular purpose. Allah the Almighty also created all what helps man in the fulfilling of his mission on earth, that is to say that mankind came into a universe that had already been readied to receive them and had been created for them before they were even brought into being. Then, instead of making you responsible for following His way of guidance, Allah the Almighty let you live and enjoy His Blessings without responsibility from the moment you were born until you reached the age of adulthood. When we say 'age of adulthood', we mean the age of maturity when you are able to make your way to Allah the Almighty intellectually by means of reflecting on His signs. The religion of Islam is not based on taqlid (the blind following of others), but rather on belief and conviction. We previously compared the maturing of a human being to the ripening of a fruit: a fruit does not become sweet until its seeds reach maturity and become fertile so that if they were to be planted in the ground, they would grow into plants. This is one of the signs of the Greatness of the Creator the Almighty for if fruits were to ripen and become sweet before their seeds had reached full maturity, all species of fruit would only be eaten once, and no one who came along after us would ever be able to benefit from them. The example we gave of this was the seed of the watermelon: when you find a seed that is hard and black, you know that the fruit is sweet, ripe, and fit to eat. The reason the Creator the Almighty made it like this was to ensure the preservation of species. Another thing: after you reached puberty, were you held responsible for absolutely every movement you make in the course of your life? And were your responsibilities a cause of restriction for you? When you reflect on the matters for which you are held responsible, you will find that they all fall within a narrow band of actions that Allah the Almighty has commanded you to do and not to do. Also, you will find that those actions represent less than five percent of the total actions that a man performs in the course of his life. So, with respect to the remaining ninety-five percent of your actions, Allah the Almighty has given you total freedom to either do them or not as you wish. How incredible is that! What compassion our Lord shows us by dealing with us in that way! If this proves anything, it conclusively proves that the Creator Loves His creation. So, does this not oblige us not to be unmindful of remembering Him? Does this not oblige us to glorify and thank Him every morning and every evening? In addition, greater still than everything we have mentioned here is the fact that Allah the Almighty made it in your own best interests to remember Him and glorify Him; He made it something that weighs heavily in the balance in your favour, and that is why He says in the very next verse:

هُوَ ٱلَّذِى يُصَلِّى عَلَيْكُمْ وَمَلَٰٓئِكَتُهُۥ لِيُخْرِجَكُم مِّنَ ٱلظُّلُمَٰتِ
إِلَى ٱلنُّورِ ۚ وَكَانَ بِٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ رَحِيمًا ﴿٤٣﴾

It is He who blesses you, as do His angels, in order to lead you out of the depths of darkness into the light. He is ever merciful towards the believers [43] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 43)

As for Allah’s saying: ‘It is He who blesses you’ (al-Ahzab: 43), the word used for bestowing blessings is salat which literally means supplication. The act of supplication takes place when someone asks another for something good. But someone only asks another who is capable of providing that good, so if this is the reality of salat, how are we to interpret it here? Does our Lord the Almighty supplicate to Himself?!

They reply: 'If the outcome of salat is asking for good, and if this good comes to pass when it is asked for, then the True Lord is the Duplicator and the One Who possesses all the keys to good; He is the One Who calls down Blessings on you, He is the One Who bestows blessings on you and He is the One Who treats you with compassion'.

The angels also call down blessings upon you since Allah Glorified is He says: 'and His angels' (al-Ahzab: 43). Elsewhere in the Quran, Allah Glorified is He has told us about them saying that they are '…honoured servants: they do not speak before He speaks and they act by His Command.' (al-Anbiya': 26-27) Allah Glorified is He also says about them '...who never disobey Allah's Commands to them, but do as they are ordered.' (at-Tahrim: 6) There are different groups of angels: some are charged with serving us and our interests upon the earth, some protect us from events that might come upon us suddenly, having been given power over those events by Allah the Almighty and some are noble, recording guardians. It is these very-same angels connected to us who were commanded to prostrate to Adam peace be upon him as is mentioned in the saying of Allah the Almighty 'When I have fashioned him and breathed My Spirit into him, bow down before him.' (al-Hijr: 29) This is an indication that they would later serve him, i.e. Adam. It is as if Allah the Almighty were saying to Satan: 'I asked you to prostrate to Adam and I asked the angels whom you are with (to prostrate to him), so if you are one of the angels, then you should comply; and if you are not one of them, but one whom I have placed in their company because of his obedience, then you must obey and prostrate since that is what those who are more exalted than you have done'. We provided an example to clarify this matter, saying: 'If it was announced in a governmental department that the president was going to visit this department on such-and-such a day and that the ministers also had to be there, lined-up to greet him, should that instruction not apply equally, if not more so, to the ministers' deputies'?

So, when Allah the Almighty told the angels to 'prostrate to Adam', out of the fact that Satan was there with them and was of a lower rank than them, it was obligatory for him to also prostrate. Even if your obedience had raised you to a rank higher than the angels, Satan, your obedience to Allah the Almighty must continue to be worthy of that rank. So, whichever way you look at it, you are to be blamed. But Satan was one of the jinn, a group of beings who were granted freedom of choice, and maliciously deviated from his Lord's Command. There is a further category of angels who have no interaction whatsoever with human beings or with the world of human beings; they are the exalted angels, the ones who are infatuated with love of their Lord. It was to this group of angels that Allah the Almighty was referring when He said to Satan after refusing to prostrate, '…Are you too high and mighty?' (Sad: 75) These exalted angels were not included in the command to prostrate to Adam peace be upon him since they had no knowledge of Adam peace be upon him and no connection to him. The most special of all these exalted angels are the Throne-bearers, for they are the noblest of them all. It is these angels who call down blessings upon you after Allah the Almighty has called down blessings upon you. Indeed, the True Lord gives us a clear indication of this role that they play in calling down of blessings and forgiveness upon us when He describes them in the Quran, saying: 'Those [angels] who carry the Throne and those who surround it celebrate the praise of their Lord and have faith in Him. They beg forgiveness for the believers…' (Ghafir: 7).

So, the noblest and the most special of all the angels glorify their Lord with praise and believe in Him. Here arises the following question, which is, 'what is the point of saying "…have faith in Him" (Ghafir: 7), after it has already been stated that they glorify Him'? They reply: 'It is because glorification can sometimes stem from fear and so the verse wants to make it clear that the glorification of these angels stems from faith and love, and that Allah the Almighty merits their glorification. The verse also mentions a further task of these angels, which is asking forgiveness for all those who believe. Even though they have no connection with people and are not charged with serving them, they still call down blessings upon them and ask for their forgiveness'. So, to sum up, we say that the salat of Allah the Almighty Who owns the call and has the power to respond, is His Mercy and Compassion to the believers; and that salat of those beneath Him is their asking Him, the All-Powerful

Owner the Almighty for good. So, they call on Allah the Almighty for the believers and ask Him to forgive them, even going to great lengths in their supplication and making impassioned pleas on their behalf, saying: '…Our Lord, You embrace all things in mercy and knowledge, so forgive those who turn to You and follow Your path. Save them from the pains of Hell.' (Ghafir: 7) They do not stop at merely asking Allah to save the believers from hell-fire, but also ask Him to grant them paradise as Allah Glorified is He says, '…and admit them, Lord, to the lasting Gardens You have promised to them, together with their righteous ancestors, spouses, and offspring: You alone are the Almighty, the All Wise.' (Ghafir: 8)

Then, on top of all of that, the angels add the following as Allah Glorified is He says: 'Protect them from all evil deeds: those You protect on that Day from [the punishment for] evil deeds will receive Your Mercy – that is the supreme triumph.' (Ghafir: 9) By Allah, even if he had wanted to and even if he were asking for himself, no believer could have come up with a supplication as inclusive or comprehensive as that of the angels, for after asking for them to be forgiven and kept safe from the hell-fire, they did not simply leave them standing on the ramparts, neither in paradise nor in hell, but yet asked Allah the Almighty to admit them into paradise, in accordance with His saying: '…Whoever is kept away from Hell and admitted to Paradise will have triumphed.' (Al-'Imran: 185)

This matter is one of those that the orientalists like to dwell on, claiming that it contradicts the Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in which he says: 'There is no day which dawns without two angels calling out (to their Lord), one of them saying: "O Allah, give compensation to those who give out (from their wealth)" and the other saying: "O Allah, give ruin to those who withhold (their wealth)."'(1) They say: 'How can you say that the angels ask good for people and that they ask bad for people'? In a sense, their objections are justified since the faculties with which they have been endowed make it impossible for them to correctly understand the subtle observations of the meaning of the Noble Hadith. In their view, the contradiction lies in the saying of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'O Allah, give ruin to those who withhold (their wealth)', since the first supplication is clear and contains no contradiction as it asks for good. The second one, on the other hand, asks for bad: 'O Allah, give ruin to those who withhold (their wealth).' If you were to reflect, however, on the way this expression is worded, you would find your answer. Is the 'ruin' that is mentioned given or taken? 'Ruin' is something that is normally assumed to be taken, but by the fact that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says, 'O Allah, give ruin to those who withhold (their wealth)', we know that it was something given, not taken, even though on the surface it appeared to be ruin and destruction. What the supplication is actually asking is for you to be rid of that thing which preoccupies you, captivates your attention, and brings down calamity upon you, so that you may then return to your Lord. So, while it appears on the surface to be a request for something to be taken away, it is in actuality a request for something to be given. Then the True Lord the Almighty reveals the reason why He and His angels call down blessings upon the believers, saying: '…in order to lead you out of the depths of darkness into the light.' (al-Ahzab: 43) It is if the way adopted by Allah the Almighty in telling us to do this and not to do that was the first part of His calling down blessings upon us, since it was the means by which He took us from the darkness into the light. Although the phenomena mentioned in this verse are physical, they are meant to be taken as a metaphor for the spiritual world. So, this is actually an example to what happens in the worldly life, that is, when there is light, you are able to see the path and follow it to its end without hindrance, but when there is darkness, you grope about blindly, quickly lose your way and wander around without direction or clarity of purpose, crushing those who are weaker than you and being crushed by those who are stronger. One of the things Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him instructed us to do was to turn off our lights before we go to sleep at night, saying: 'Extinguish your lamps when you go to sleep.'(1)

(1) See Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 1010.

(1) See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no. 3280. It is narrated on the authority of Jabir ibn `Abdullah that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'When night falls - or when the darkness of night has set in - hold back your children (from going out), for that is when Satan's minions are abroad, and only release them after an hour of the night has passed. Then close the door and mention Allah's Name, extinguish your lamps and mention Allah's Name, tie the mouth of your water-skin and mention Allah's Name, and cover over your utensils and mention Allah's Name, even if you lay something on top of them.'

Modern science has proven that sleeping under bright lights adversely affects a person's health, and prevents him from ever truly being at rest. It also warns against overexposing ourselves to the lights and rays that emanate from our televisions. Therefore, in the physical world, light has an important function as does darkness. Similarly, Allah's way of telling you to do this and not to do that is the spiritual light that protects you from injury, and gives you the necessary illumination to find the right way through life's myriad paths. That is why Allah Glorified is He says immediately afterwards: '…He is Merciful towards the believers.' (al-Ahzab: 43) But if this is how Allah the Almighty is raheem (a dispenser of mercy) towards the believers, then how is He towards the disbelievers? They reply that towards them, He is Rahman (Merciful) since the word rahman relates to Allah's Mercy in this world. In this world, Allah's Mercy and Bounty encompass believers and disbelievers alike. As for the word Raheem, it relates to Allah's Mercy in the Hereafter; it indicates that His Mercy in the Hereafter is only for the believers and no one else. Also, when He says: '...Allah is the Light of the heavens and the earth...' (an-Nur: 35), He does not mean it in the sense that it is an Attribute of His Essence, but rather in the sense that He is the One Who illuminates them. It is like when we call the lamps in the mosque 'the mosque's lights'. When we discussed this matter previously, we clarified it by mentioning what Abu Tamam says in a poem praising Al-Mu`tasim:

(He has) the bravery of `Amr and the generosity of Hatim,
The clemency of Ahnaf and the intelligence of Iyas

Amongst the Arabs, `Amr was held up as the epitome of bravery; Hatim as the epitome of generosity; Ahnaf ibn Qays as the epitome of clemency; and Iyas ibn Mu`awiyya as the epitome of intelligence. When Abu Tamam said these words, one of the men present in the court of the Caliph stood up and said to him, 'The commander of the faithful is greater than you say; how can you compare him to those uncivilised Arabs?' Then he started to say the following lines of poetry:

The panegyrists compare him in courage and generosity
With those who would be the least of servants if seen by him.

There are fifty thousand like `Antar in his army,
And a thousand like Hatim in his treasure houses

When he heard that, Abu Tamam bowed his head for a short while, then stood up and said:

Do not criticise me for finding in those beneath him,
A passing likeness in terms of courage and generosity
For Allah Himself compared the least of things to His Light,
Using the example of a niche and a lantern

So, spiritual light keeps you out of spiritual harm's way just as physical light keeps you out of physical harm's way, and that is why Allah Glorified is He says about His Light: '...light upon light!' (an-Nur: 35), i.e. physical light protects from physical harm and hindrance while spiritual light protects you from spiritual harm and hindrance, a point which is clear in His saying, '…Allah guides whoever He wills to his Light…' (an-Nur: 35); the light referred to here is the spiritual light by which believers are guided and by which they travel along the path. As for the disbelievers, the only sort of light they know is the physical light. If you were then to ask your Lord: 'Where can we find this light'? He would reply to you: '…shining out in houses of worship. Allah has ordained that they be raised high and that His Name be remembered in them, with men in them celebrating His Glory, morning and evening: men who are not distracted, either by commerce or profit, from remembering Allah…' (an-Nur: 36-37). If you desire the true light, then you will find it when you spend time alone with your Lord the Almighty in His House, for that is when His Light flows over you and illuminates your heart.

Before leaving this topic of Allah the Almighty and His angels calling down blessings on the believers behind, we should mention the blessings that we ourselves call down upon Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in accordance with the saying of Allah: 'Allah and His angels bless the Prophet- so, you who believe, bless him too and give him greetings of peace.' (al-Ahzab: 56) Salat of Allah the Almighty means mercy, tenderness and compassion, whilst salat of the angels means supplicating and entreating the One Who owns (everything), i.e. Allah Glorified is He. As for our own salat on Messenger

Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him it is thought by some to be a supplication which we make for him. That is not what it is, however, because when you say the prayer on Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him you say: ‘O Allah, bless Muhammad’. So, you do not bless him yourself, rather, you ask Allah the Almighty to bless him. But this begs the question: ‘how is it that you can ask Allah to bless Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him’? They reply that we can do that because every good that Allah gives Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is distributed amongst his ummah. Also, you should know that the True Lord does not leave Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to receive the blessings of all those who believe in him, without requiring him to respond in kind by making a similar prayer for them. He says: ‘…and pray for them- your prayer will be a comfort to them…’ (at-Tawba: 103). It is as if this prayer was Messenger Muhammad’s peace and blessings be upon him way of returning the greetings and prayers of those believers who prayed for him.

Allah the Almighty subsequently says:

تَحِيَّتُهُمۡ يَوۡمَ يَلۡقَوۡنَهُۥ سَلَٰمٞۚ وَأَعَدَّ لَهُمۡ أَجۡرٗا كَرِيمٗا ﴿٤٤﴾

When they meet Him they will be greeted with ‘Peace’– and He has prepared a generous reward for them [44]
(The Quran, al-Ahzab: 44)

This verse refers to what happens in the Hereafter, and the greeting that is mentioned, the salam (peace), is not given by us but rather is given to us by Allah the Almighty; it is like when He says elsewhere in the Quran: ‘“Peace”, a word from the Lord of Mercy.’ (Ya Sin: 58)

The mercy, compassion and tenderness that we receive from Allah the Almighty in this world shows itself in our doing the right thing at the right time, conducting ourselves with probity, feeling at ease and enjoying peace of mind. But despite all of this, we are still, sometimes, beset by trouble and misfortune. As for Allah’s Mercy in the Hereafter, it is perfect peace and nothing whatsoever happens to disturb it. Then there is enjoyment: human beings do derive enjoyment from the Blessings Allah the Almighty Who has bestowed upon them in this worldly life, but their enjoyment is spoiled somewhat by their fear that they will pass away. As for the enjoyment of the Hereafter, it is pure and completely unspoiled since the blessings in that abode are eternal, everlasting and never came to an end. They went from living in this life in a world of causes to living in the Hereafter with the Primary Causer; Glorified is He Who says with regard to Himself: ‘Who has control today? Allah, the One, the All Powerful’ (Ghafir: 16). But what is meant by the saying of Allah: ‘when they meet Him…’ (al-Ahzab: 44)? Is it referring to the Day of Resurrection? Or is it referring to the day their life comes to an end and they meet Him in death using the common idiom for death of ‘So-and-so met his Lord’? They reply: ‘The Angel of Death never comes to take the soul of a believer without first greeting him with the word, ‘peace’, which is why if he does greet someone in that way, then this means that that person is one of the people of peace. This is the first degree of peace. It is also possible, however, that ‘peace’ refers to the perfect peace which the believers encounter on the Day of Resurrection, for nothing will ever happen thereafter to disturb the peace they find on that day’.

That is why when Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was suffering from the throes of death, Fatima Allah be pleased with her having seen the pain he was in, said to him: ‘Oh what sorrow you are undergoing, my father!’, whereupon he peace and blessings be upon him said to her, ‘No sorrow will ever again afflict your father after today.’(1) What sorrow could Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him possibly feel after being transported to the vicinity of his Lord, to an abode of ultimate peace wherein fear no longer exists!

Then Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…and He has prepared a generous reward for them.’ (al-Ahzab: 44). The adjective used to describe ajr (reward) is karim (generous). This adjective is normally used to describe the one who readies the reward, not the reward itself, so the fact that it is used here to describe the reward means that the Lord’s Generosity spread from Him into the reward that He prepared until it too became generous. Another example of that is found in His saying, ‘…and have prepared a generous provision for her.’ (al-Ahzab: 31) Here, the generosity spread from the Provider to the provision because while provision in this world comes to you by means of some other creatures, provision in the Hereafter comes to you without any means whatsoever, that is, no one else plays a role in bringing it to you. So, since it comes to you without any effort on your behalf at the merest thought of it, it immediately appears in front of you, thus why should it not be described as being generous?! Then Allah Glorified is He says:

(1) See Ibn Majah, Sunnan, Hadith no. 1629, on the authority of Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him who said that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to Fatima Allah be pleased with her after hearing what she said: ‘No sorrow will ever again afflict your father after today, for that (time) has come for him which will come for every man until they come (before their Lord) on the Day of Resurrection.’ See the origin of this Hadith in Al-Bukhari, Hadith no. 4462.

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلنَّبِيُّ إِنَّآ أَرۡسَلۡنَٰكَ شَٰهِدٗا وَمُبَشِّرٗا وَنَذِيرٗا ﴿٤٥﴾
وَدَاعِيًا إِلَى ٱللَّهِ بِإِذۡنِهِۦ وَسِرَاجٗا مُّنِيرٗا ﴿٤٦﴾

Prophet, We have sent you as a witness, as a bearer of good news and warning [45] as one who calls people to God by His leave, as a light-giving lamp [46]
(The Quran, al-Ahzab: 45 - 46)

A witness is one who validates a claim or confirms a right on behalf of the one to whom it is due; and that is why judges always ask to hear the testimony of witnesses before delivering their judgement; they want to make sure that when they rule on a matter, their rulings are accurate and based on solid evidence and proof. That is why they say that judges do not rule according to what they know, but only according to the evidence that is laid before them. So, if a case came before a judge dealing with matters about which he had prior knowledge from his own private life, he would be required to leave that case and refer it to another judge in order to ensure that the eventual ruling was not based on what he knew but only on evidence alone. When you reflect on this matter, you will find that Allah the Almighty desires to distribute the responsibility for making the ruling amongst many people so as to ensure that the ruling is only issued after due process and proper weighing up of the evidence, thereby guaranteeing that justice is established.

For example, when an incident happens in our society, we go to the records office which makes a record of the event. That record is then transferred by a police officer to the district attorney's office, which in turn transfers it to the judge, so that he can make a judgement concerning it. Then the ruling is sent back to the executive authority who then carry it through. This process is circuitous but it has a point, that is, making sure that justice is done. If this is how it is with us, then how must it be when Allah the Almighty is the One Who bears witness, the One Who judges, and the One Who carries through the judgement? There is no doubt that this would guarantee that absolute justice is achieved. If you were to say, 'Then what is Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him bearing witness to'? They would reply: 'He peace and blessings be upon him is bearing witness to the fact that he conveyed his Message to his ummah in the same way that all the other messengers conveyed their messages to their people, as is shown in the saying of Allah: "What will they do when We bring a witness from each community, with you [Muhammad] as a witness against these people?" (an-Nisa': 41) So, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him will be a witness against this ummah to which he conveyed the Divine Message, just as all the previous messengers and prophets will witness against their nations. But you are singled out from your entire fellow messengers who came before you by the fact that you are their 'Seal', that is, no prophet will come after you. So, for that reason, I will assign people from amongst your ummah to play the same part with respect to you as the prophets played with respect to the messengers who preceded them.

That is why Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said in a Noble Hadith: 'The scholars of my ummah are like the prophets of the tribe of Isra`il.'(1) So, Allah the Almighty has guaranteed that there will be people in the ummah of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who would take on the task that the prophets had with respect to conveying the Message. This is the meaning of the saying of Allah: '…so that you may bear witness [to the truth] before others…' (al-Baqara: 143).

(1) Ash-Shawkani said, 'Ibn Hajar and Az-Zarkashi said that this Hadith had no basis.' Similarly, As-Suyuti said in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur, p. 309 that Al-`Ajluni said in Kashf Al-Khafa`, 1744: 'Some people added that (this Hadith) was not known to figure in any book of any note...' However, At-Taftazani, Fath Ad-Din Ash-Shahid, Abu Bakr Al-Mawsuli and As-Suyuti in Al-Khasa` is all indicated that its meaning was sound.

The word 'others' is used in its most general sense here, including Adam peace be upon him and every single one of his descendants until the Final Hour comes. If you were to ask how that could be, then we would reply: 'With respect to those people who came before you, you bear witness against them according to the testimony of the Quran that the messengers had actually conveyed their messages to their respective peoples. As for those who are yet to come, you are required to testify against them that you conveyed the Message to them just as Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is required to witness against you that he conveyed the Message to you'.

Therefore, in the ummah of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him there is a portion of prophethood represented in the fact that its members will be called upon to testify against people on the Day of Resurrection. That is why Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him prepared his ummah for this task by saying to them: 'Allah illuminates the man who hears my words, understands them and then conveys them to others to hear them, for perhaps the one to whom they are conveyed will understand them better than the one who hears them directly.'(1) In this regard, Allah the Almighty also says, 'We have made you [believers] into a just community…' (al-Baqara: 143), so why? The answer is '…so that you may bear witness [to the truth] before others and so that the Messenger may bear witness [to it] before you…' (al-Baqara: 143). This ummah is on the middle course in the sense that it is not characterised by extremes, neither going to excess nor falling short. It is very much like a set of scales whose two hands are in perfect balance, neither hand outweighing the other until something is placed into it. This is exactly how the community is perfectly balanced and neither tending to this side nor to that. Then Allah Glorified is He says, '…as a bearer of good news…' (al-Ahzab: 45) meaning that he peace and blessings be upon him was sent to those who believe in their reward from Allah the Almighty. The word bishara (glad tidings) is giving people the news of something good that is going to happen before it happens. As for the saying of Allah: ‘and warning’ (al-Ahzab: 45), the word ‘a warner’ means that he was also sent to those who do not believe in him to warn them against the punishment that will afflict them be Allah the Almighty. The Arabic word indhar is instilling fear in people’s hearts about something bad that will happen before it happens. As for Allah’s Glorified is He saying: ‘as one who calls people to Allah by His leave’ (al-Ahzab: 46), it means according to what He commands you to do, not according to what you come up with yourself, for many leaders and reformers throughout history have come up with programs and ideologies which they have promulgated amongst their societies in order to bring about reform. So, in order to clearly differentiate between these people and Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Allah Glorified is He says, ‘by His leave’ (al-Ahzab: 46). In other words, the way of guidance brought by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was directly from Allah the Almighty and it was only by a command from his Lord that he peace and blessings be upon him conveyed the Divine Message to you. There are three conditions that anyone calling others to the way of guidance must meet:

(1) See Ahmad, Musnad, 1/437; At-Tirmidhi, Sunnan, p. 2657-2658; Ibn Majah, Sunnan, 232.

The first condition is that the one calling others to the way of guidance does not profit from what he is calling people to. But as we have seen, no human being (not sent by Allah the Almighty) has ever met this condition: when the capitalists made their laws, they short-changed the workers; when the socialists made their laws, they short-changed those with capital and so on and so forth. The reason for this is that human beings have many conflicting desires, which shows itself in the fact that every single human being who comes to make a law does so according to his own personal desires or according to what serves his best interests. Then inevitably, even if it is after a long period of time, the deficiencies in those laws are shown up by everyday practice and the realities on the ground, which is why the legislators themselves come to recognise the shortcomings in the laws they have passed. So, they themselves revolt against them, rise up against themselves and go back to the laws in order to amend them.

The second condition is that he should have full knowledge of the likely repercussions of his laws being passed; and that not one single detail of the area he is legislating for escapes his attention, since that would necessitate him having to amend that law.

The third condition is that he should be wise with respect to the laws that he legislates - in other words, he puts things in their rightful place, not treating people with a double standard law. In addition, he should treat everyone who comes before him equally. When you reflect on these conditions, you will find that no one except for the True Lord fulfils all the three. Therefore no one should legislate laws for mankind except for the Lord of mankind.

We previously demonstrated this fact very clearly with an example we gave from real life: when it is dark, people need a bit of light in order to carry out the tasks they need to perform, so each person brings out what best suits him for producing that light. So, one person lights a candle, another lights a 'model 5' paraffin lamp and another lights a 'model 10' paraffin lamp. Yet, after the advent of electricity, we began to also see ordinary lights, fluorescent lights, neon lights, crystal chandeliers and so on.

So, you light up the darkness around you making use of whatever means are available to you. But what do you do when the sun rises and daylight appears? Do you continue to use those artificial lights? No, of course you do not. You switch them off because the light that the sun brings is according to the capacity of your Creator the Almighty not your own capacity. That is why we say: 'Switch off your lights for the sun of Allah has risen'. If this is how things are with respect to material light, then the same must also be the case with respect to spiritual light. So, when the light of divine legislation and the light of Allah's way of guidance come, then extinguish all other programs and all other forms of legislation.

Then He says, 'as a light-giving lamp' (al-Ahzab: 46). Here, the True Lord likens Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to a lamp or beacon. But do not think that this description belittles him peace and blessings be upon him since the type of lamp referred to here is not like one that lights up your room, for example, but is like the one mentioned in the saying of Allah: '…and make a blazing lamp' (al-Ahzab: 46), where the word 'lamp' refers to the sun. If you were to then ask: 'Why is Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him not being described as a sun'? The sun is described by the saying of Allah: "It is He Who made the sun a shining radiance…" (al-Ahzab: 46), and is clearly more powerful than a lamp'.

If you were to ask that, then they would reply: The words used here are the words of the Lord and they demonstrate a very precise and miraculous turn of phrase: it is true that the sun lights up the entire world. But the situation with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was different, since his ummah took on the responsibility of promulgating the religion after his lifetime. So, the analogy of a lamp for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is more apt since light can be taken from a lamp without decreasing its light in any way (i.e. you can use its light to light up another lamp or torch) but light can never be taken from the sun.

When the lights of guidance brought by Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they shone out upon the world, earlier systems of law no longer had any zone in which to operate. This fact is well expressed in the following line of poetry:

It is as if you were a sun and the kings' planets,
Since when it rises not even a single planet may be seen

Then Allah Glorified is He says(1):

وَبَشِّرِ ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ بِأَنَّ لَهُم مِّنَ ٱللَّهِ فَضْلًا كَبِيرًا ﴿٤٧﴾

Give the believers the good news that great bounty awaits them from God [47] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 47)

We say in our supplications: 'O Allah, treat us with bounteous fadl (grace) and not with `adl, (justice)' because justice is that you receive a reward equivalent to the action you did or that you get what is yours by right, while bounteous grace that you get more than is yours by right. Something of this sort is mentioned in the saying of Allah: 'Say [Prophet], "In Allah's Grace and Mercy let them rejoice…"' (al-Ahzab: 47).

(1) Ibn `Attiyya said, `Ubayy Allah be pleased with him said to us, 'In my view, this is the most hopeful verse in the Book of Allah since in it Allah Himself commands Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to give the believers the good news that He set aside for them a great bounty. And the nature of this great bounty is clarified elsewhere in the saying of Allah: "you will see them fearful because of what they have done: punishment is bound to fall on them- but those who believe and do good deeds will be in the flowering meadows of the Gardens. They will have whatever they wish from their Lord: this is the great bounty" (as-Sajda: 27).' See Al-Qurtubi, Tafsir 8/5470.

And there is the statement of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'None of you will enter paradise on account of his actions.' The companions said: 'Not even you, Messenger of Allah?' He replied: 'Not even me, unless Allah covers me with His Mercy.' Since when I weigh up my actions against the blessings that my Lord bestowed on me, both before I was created and up until the moment that I reached the age of responsibility, I find that even if I were to spend my entire life in perfect obedience to Him, I would never be able to pay off the debt that I owe Him.

And then there is also the fact that all the benefits for performing acts of worship and obeying our Lord reflect back on us - Allah the Almighty Himself derives no benefit from anything that we do. So, if we, not Allah the Almighty, are the ones who benefit from our worship and obedience, then His rewarding us for doing them is an act of pure bounteous grace on His part. The example of this that we gave - and to Allah belongs the Highest Example - was that of a son whom you encourage to revise throughout the year, presenting him with the necessary books and tools and financially supporting him. Then, when he succeeds in the exams at the end of the year, you give him some sort of prize or gift. That gift that you gave him was out of your bounty. Therefore, if you come across two people involved in a quarrel or feud and want to reconcile them with one another, say to them: 'Would you like me to judge between you with justice or with bounteous grace'? They will then reply to you: 'There is nothing better than justice', so say to them: 'No, that's not true. Bounteous grace is better than justice since justice is that you take your right from your opponent while bounteous grace is that you leave the right you have over your opponent in order to receive it from your Lord'. This is exactly what we see practised in the story of the slander between Abu Bakr and Misttah(1) when Abu Bakr peace be upon him pardoned him after Allah Glorified is He revealed the verse: ‘Those who have been graced with bounty and plenty should not swear that they will [no longer] give to kinsmen, the poor or those who emigrated in Allah’s way: let them pardon and forgive. Do you not wish that Allah should forgive you? Allah is Most Forgiving and Merciful.’ (an-Nur: 22) So, whoever wants Allah the Almighty to forgive him his wrong actions should first forgive his Muslim brother for the slips and wrong actions that he has committed.

(1) He was Misttah ibn Athatha ibn `Abbas ibn Al-Muttalib whose name was actually `Awf. As for Misttah, that was merely a nickname. His mother was the maternal aunt of Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him and so, because of their close family connection,=

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَا تُطِعِ ٱلْكَـٰفِرِينَ وَٱلْمُنَـٰفِقِينَ وَدَعْ أَذَىٰهُمْ
وَتَوَكَّلْ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ ۚ وَكَفَىٰ بِٱللَّهِ وَكِيلًا ﴿٤٨﴾

Do not give in to the disbelievers and the hypocrites: ignore the harm they cause you and put your trust in God. God is enough to trust [48]
(The Quran, al-Ahzab: 48)

At the beginning of this chapter, Allah the Almighty addresses Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by saying: ‘Prophet, be mindful of Allah and do not give in to the disbelievers and the hypocrites…’ (al-Ahzab: 3), while here, He addresses him with saying, ‘do not give in to the disbelievers and the hypocrites: ignore the harm they cause you and put your trust in Allah. Allah is enough to trust.’ (al-Ahzab: 48) The first verse was revealed at the beginning of Prophet Muhammad’s Mission when the disbelievers first started plotting against Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. So, if that was the case then, how do you think it was when Prophet Muhammad’s Mission became much stronger and his call to Islam much more open? They plotted against him all the more, of course! And that is why Allah Glorified is He refers to this matter once again: ‘Do not give in to the disbelievers and the hypocrites: ignore the harm they cause you...’ (al-Ahzab: 48). But that does not mean that I will forsake you; no, it merely means that I will be your representative as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…and put your trust in Allah. Allah is enough to trust.’ (al-Ahzab: 48). If you were to say: ‘How could Allah be a representative when the representative is beneath the principal’? We would respond: ‘The principal only appoints another to represent him when he finds himself unable to the task at hand and so chooses someone stronger than himself to do it on his behalf’.

= Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him used to send him provisions. Then when he became involved with the slanderers in spreading the lie about `Aisha Allah be pleased with her, Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him made an oath that he would no longer support him financially. Then Allah Glorified is He revealed the verse: ‘Those who have been graced with bounty and plenty should not swear that they will [no longer] give to kinsmen…’ (an-Nur: 22). So Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him went back to supporting him. Misttah died in the year 34 A.H. during the caliphate of `Uthman Allah be pleased with him. It is also said that he died in the year 37 A.H. and participated in the battle of Siffin on the side of `Ali. See Al-Isaba fi Tamyiz As-Sahaba, p. 7929.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓاْ إِذَا نَكَحۡتُمُ ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنَٰتِ ثُمَّ طَلَّقۡتُمُوهُنَّ
مِن قَبۡلِ أَن تَمَسُّوهُنَّ فَمَا لَكُمۡ عَلَيۡهِنَّ مِنۡ عِدَّةٖ تَعۡتَدُّونَهَاۖ
فَمَتِّعُوهُنَّ وَسَرِّحُوهُنَّ سَرَاحٗا جَمِيلٗا ٤٩

Believers, you have no right to expect a waiting period when you marry believing women and then divorce them before you have touched them: make provision for them and release them in an honourable way [49] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 49)

This verse discusses a sociological institution that is dedicated to the preservation of the species, for the preservation of humans is only truly feasible through marriage, since it is the means for propagation. The first stage of marriage is engagement. However, many people do not understand what engagement means nor where its limits lie with respect to the man or the woman. An engagement is simply when a girl’s suitor goes to her guardian and says to him: ‘If I were to put forward a request for your daughter’s hand in marriage, would I be worthy of acceptance?’, and the guardian replies ‘You are welcome to do so’. This is what is classified as an engagement and it may well be that he never actually asks for her hand. However, if he does ask for her hand then he has the right to see her a single time in the presence of her mahram relatives, since Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to a young man who wanted to get engaged to a girl: ‘Look at her (first), for it may produce love between you.'(1) It is astonishing that many people mix up the engagement with the actual marriage contract and think that it needs to be carried out in the same way. So, when the girl's guardian accepts the suitor, he agrees with him upon a certain amount of jewellery as dowry co-ordinates with him all the details of the marriage, allows him to sit beside his daughter and talk with her, and perhaps even allows him to spend time alone with her in private. If only they were to have made the engagement a contract, they would have extricated themselves from this difficult situation and made things much easier upon themselves! The advantage of an engagement is that if a suitor wants to break it off, all he has to do is go to the girl's guardian and say to him: 'I did ask you for the hand of your daughter, but I now release myself from what I asked you'. As for an actual contract, that can only be annulled, even before consummation, by divorce. So, do not make an arrangement which is an engagement in form, but a contract in substance.

In this noble verse, Allah the Almighty clearly tells us what the rulings are for when a man divorces his wife before moving in with her and consummating their marriage: 'Believers, you have no right to expect a waiting period when you marry believing women and then divorce them before you have touched them: make provision for them and release them in an honourable way...' (al-Ahzab: 49). The word nikah (marriage) is only used here to refer to the marriage contract since, if another meaning had been intended, Allah Glorified is He would not have said: 'before you have touched them' (al-Ahzab: 49), for the word mass (touching) is an indirect allusion to sexual intercourse, an activity that the Quran never mentions directly but always hides by using other words to allude to it. As for the ruling mentioned in the saying of Allah: '…you have no right to expect a waiting period' (al-Ahzab: 49), it means that a man who divorces (2) his wife before consummating his marriage with her cannot expect her to undergo a waiting-period. This is because there are several wisdoms behind the waiting-period: it gives a husband the chance to take his wife back in the case of a revocable divorce; and it allows enough time to be sure that the wife is not carrying a child in her womb. But sometimes the waiting-period is for neither of these reasons but rather for the fact that her husband has died and left her a widow. So, there is one ruling which governs the waiting-periods for divorces in unconsummated marriages and another ruling which governs the waiting-periods for divorces in consummated marriages. This difference also clearly shown when we look at what happens with respect to the dowry. If a woman is divorced before consummation then she only gets half of the dowry as Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of al-Baqara: '…then give them half of what you had previously fixed…' (al-Baqara: 237), and as He says here: '…make provision for them and release them in an honourable way.' (al-Ahzab: 49) If the (amount of the) dowry was mentioned in the contract, then she gets half of what was mentioned, but if it was not, then she gets half of the dowry that a woman of her sort would normally get. As for the waiting-period for a divorce that takes place after a marriage has been consummated, some elaboration is necessary since its length varies from case to case according to what best fits the case for which the waiting-period was legislated. As we mentioned before the Arabic word `idda (waiting-period) indicates that is something that is counted. So, if the woman is capable of menstruation, the waiting-period is three menstrual periods in order to make sure that her womb is empty. But surely one menstrual period would be enough to ascertain that, so why did Allah the Almighty make her have to wait three menstrual periods?

(1) Al-Mughira ibn Shu`ba narrated: 'I asked for a woman's hand in marriage, so Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked me if I had looked at her. When I replied that I had not, he said: "Then look at her, for it may produce love between you."' See Ahmad, Musnad, Hadith no. 4/ 245 & 246; At-Tirmidhii, Sunnan, Hadith no. 1087 and Ibn Majah, Sunnan, Hadith no. 1865. Al-Busayri said in Az-Zawa`id: 'Its chain of narrations is Sahih and its narrators are all trustworthy.'

= normal waiting-period of a woman whose husband died after consummation because of the saying of Allah: 'If any of you die and leave widows, the widows should wait for four months and ten nights before remarrying…' (al-Baqara: 234). The only reason she still must wait this waiting-period even though he did not consummate the marriage with her, is out of loyalty to him and in consideration of his rights. See Fiqh As-Sunna 2/342. Ibn Qudama said in Al-Mughni 9/78: 'Every non-pregnant woman whose husband dies leaving her a widow, regardless of whether he consummated his marriage with her or not, and regardless of whether she is free or a slave girl, has a waiting-period in months.'

wife back. So, in this particular matter, the law is made with the integrity of the family in mind. Do you not see that Allah the Almighty has prescribed the coming together of a husband and wife by means of a single phrase: ‘Marry me (to her)’, (to which the guardian replies): ‘I have married you (to her)’, but when it comes to divorce or separation, He has made there be three stages. Allah the Almighty has done this because He does not want to leave the way open for a moment of fleeting anger to revoke Allah’s saying when it comes to marriage. I remember that there was a tricky question that they used to ask: it was either ‘Do men having waiting-periods?’ or ‘Is there a waiting period that women can expect from men?’ The answer was: ‘Yes, there is a set of circumstances in which men have a waiting-period, and that is when he marries a woman, divorces her and then wants to marry her sister. In such a case, he must wait for the waiting-period to pass in order to marry her’. As for the waiting-periods of the other sorts of women, the one who has gone past the age of menopause must wait three months, the one who is pregnant must wait until after she gives birth and the one whose husband has died must wait four months and ten days. But what if a woman’s husband has died and she is pregnant, how long must she wait then? They reply that in such a circumstance her waiting-period is whichever of those two periods of time is longer-her pregnancy running its course or four months and ten days.

A question that might well have occurred to you is why the waiting-period of a divorced woman is only three months while the waiting-period of a woman whose husband has died leaving her a widow is four months and ten days. The reason, they reply, is because there is a difference between divorce and death in terms of the relationship of a man to his wife. The source of this difference lies in the phrase that the One Who created the male and the female made to join them together. That phrase is ‘Marry me. I have married you’, but on condition that it is uttered out loud in the presence of witnesses. And do not underestimate this phrase, for although you do not know what it does to the human form at an atomic level, you do know the effects it leaves behind. And we said, ‘Suppose, for example, that it came to your attention that a young man was in the habit of making improper advances to your daughter (behind your back). What would you do? There is no doubt whatsoever that you would be furious. Your blood would boil; you would feel jealously protective of her and would perhaps even go as far as to harm him. If, however, he were to have knocked on your door and asked you for her hand, you would have welcomed him with open arms, felt happy and everyone would have been pleased. So, what changed? What is the difference between the two scenarios? It is clear that the thing which really made you angry was the fact that he snuck up on her without the permission of her Creator and that is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says, 'Have taqwa (fear) of Allah with respect to women, for you have taken them on the security of Allah, and intercourse with them has been made lawful for you by the saying of Allah.'(1)

When a famous man known for being very jealous of his daughters came to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to invite him to marry one of them, he peace and blessings be upon him laughed and said, 'The lawful has cut off the nose of jealous protectiveness!'

By means of the marriage contract that joins the husband and the wife together in the light of the word of Allah, He causes a lawful impulse to come into being in each of the two parties. These two impulses then meet by virtues of a lawful act and under the law which joined the couple in matrimony.

Divorce is ordinarily accompanied by feelings of hatred; either the two parties hate each other or just one of them hates the other. Out of the fact that hatred resulting from divorce may cause the two parties to hate one another, Islam legislates that the waiting-period shall last for three months, or until the woman gives birth to her child.

But usually, in cases when the husband dies, the marriage is thus brought to an end by a divine decree; the wife still loves her husband and feels great sadness at his loss. Indeed, the tragedy of his death often causes her love for him to grow. In circumstances such as these, the impulse that linked them does not easily nor quickly fade away, so the Creator extended the length of the waiting-period so as to give the impulse enough time to die, thus ensuring that no fresh impulse comes into her heart while she still feels an impulse towards her late husband and leaves her feeling conflicted inside. That is why the waiting-period of the woman whose husband has died is longer than the waiting-period of the woman who has been divorced. The verse: ‘then divorce them before you have touched them’ (al-Ahzab: 49) indicates that the practice of divorcing women before the consummation of marriage had already existed among the previous nations, just as it exists today. In fact, it happens when the couple rush to contract their marriage even though the husband does not have the financial means necessary to support the wife or fulfil the costs of marriage. The man only hastens matters because of the personal benefit that such a tie will bring him.

History tells us of many families, especially purebred Arab families, who have done this for that reason. However, under such circumstances, those families never used to permit the husband to spend time alone with the wife even though he was contractually married to her. There are some wonderful stories of girls who conducted themselves with great honour in this matter. One that is typically related in this regard is the story of Buhaytha bint ``Aws ibn Haritha At-Ta`i and Al-Harith ibn `Awf, one of the noblemen of the Banu Murra. Al-Harith ibn `Awf had a close friend called Ibn Sinan. One night, when he was sitting and chatting with him, Al-Harith asked Ibn Sinan, ‘Do you suppose that even one man exists amongst the entire Arab race who would deny me the hand of his daughter if I asked for it?’ He said these words boastfully, proud of the position of nobility he enjoyed amongst his people. When his companion saw the state he was in, he replied, ‘Yes, there is someone who would deny you.’ ‘Who is that?’ asked Al-Harith, so Ibn Sinan replied, ‘It is ``Aws ibn Haritha At-Ta`i.’ When he heard that, Al-Harith immediately summoned his servant and said to him, ‘Prepare the carriage and take us to the house of `Aws ibn Haritha At-Ta`i.’ So, they went to see `Aws and found him sitting in the courtyard of his home. When `Aws saw Al-Harith, he bade him welcome, so Al-Harith went up to him. Then `Aws said, ‘Shame on you! What has brought you here?’ He left Al-Harith sitting on his camel. Al-Harith said, ‘I have come to ask for your daughter’s hand in marriage.’ `Aws replied, ‘You are not here!’ meaning that he did not think that he was worthy of her. So Al-Harith turned his mount around and went away, while an expression of relief came over the face of Ibn Sinan because what he had said to his companion had proven to be true. Then, when `Aws went back indoors and saw his wife, she said to him, ‘Who was that man with you who only stayed for a short time and did not dismount from his camel?’ He replied, ‘It was Al-Harith ibn `Awf, one of the noblemen of the Banu Murra.’ She then asked, ‘Why did you not invite him to dismount?’ He replied, ‘He was acting like a fool!’ She asked, ‘How is that?’ He replied, ‘He came to ask for my daughter’s hand in marriage!’ She said, ‘Amazing! Do you not want your daughters to get married?’ He replied, ‘Of course, I do,’ so she said, ‘If you will not allow them to marry the noblemen of the Arabs, `Aws, then who will you allow them to marry? Go and set things right with him!’ He replied, ‘How can I do that when I said what I said?’ She said, ‘Go after him and say, “When you came to see me, I was very angry about something that had nothing to do with you personally. Then, when I came to myself after you left, I realised what I had done. So I have come to apologise and to ask you to come back with me. You will have what you desire”.’ So, the man went outside but found that the riding party had already left. So, he set out after them until he had caught up with the riding party, whereupon Ibn Sinan turned around and said to Al-Harith Ibn `Awf, ‘Here comes `Aws. He has come after us.’ So Al-Harith said, ‘What will I do with him. Tell him to go away.’ So Aws called out to him: ‘Harith, stop for a moment’ - meaning, ‘wait’ - ‘and you will get what you want from me.’ When he heard that, Al-Harith rejoiced and went back with him. When `Aws got back to the house, he said to his wife, ‘Call down your eldest daughter.’ Then, when she came, he said to her, ‘My daughter, Al-Harith ibn `Awf, the nobleman from the Banu Murra, has come to ask your hand in marriage.’ She replied, ‘Don not do it, father.’ He asked her, ‘Why not?’ She replied, ‘I am a woman with a repulsive face’, i.e. a face that is so ugly that it repulses people - ‘and my manners are lacking’, i.e. defective. ‘He is not a cousin of mine who will honour the marriage because of his close family connection, nor is he a neighbour of yours who will honour it because he would be ashamed not to, so I am scared that he might see something in me that he does not like and divorce me. Then I would be left with that stigma.’ So Aws said to her, ‘Get up then and may Allah bless you.’ Then he said to his wife, ‘Call down your middle daughter.’ Then, when she came, he said to her exactly what he had said to her sister. She replied, ‘Don not do it, father.’

He asked her, ‘Why not?’ She replied, ‘I am a clumsy woman, a woman who does not do things well and I have not learnt any craft, so I am scared that he might see something in me that he does not like and divorce me. And then I would be left with that stigma.’ So `Aws said to her, ‘Get up then and may Allah bless you. Call your younger sister to come to me.’ This younger sister was Buhaytha, about whom the story is told. When her father presented the matter to her, she said to him, ‘Do as you see fit, father.’ He replied, ‘My daughter, I presented this matter to your sisters and they both refused.’ She said, ‘But I am the one who has the beautiful face, who is good with her hands and who has the noble character, so if he divorces me, Allah will not recompense him.’ So he said to her, ‘May Allah bless you.’ Then he went to Al-Harith and said to him, ‘You have been blessed, Harith, for I have married my daughter Buhaytha to you. May Allah bless both of you.’ Al-Harith replied, ‘I accept the marriage.’

Then Aws said to his wife, ‘Get your daughter ready and make a tent for her in the house courtyard.’ Then, when the tent was finished, Buhaytha was carried inside. Then Al-Harith went in after her. However, after only a very short time had passed he came back out, so Ibn Sinan said to him, ‘Have you completed your business with her?’ He replied, ‘No, by Allah, Ibn Sinan, I have not.’ Ibn Sinan asked him why he had not. He replied, ‘When I tried to get intimate with her, she said to me, ‘In the house of my father and my brothers? By Allah, that will never happen.’ So I came back out.’ When he heard this, Ibn Sinan said, ‘As long as she remains in the house of her father and brothers, she is never going to consent. Let us leave.’ So Al-Harith ordered that they leave. Then, after they had been riding for some time, Al-Harith said, ‘Ibn Sinan, you and the others go ahead’, i.e. and give us an opportunity to be together. So Ibn Sinan and the rest of the riding party went ahead, while Al-Harith stayed back with his wife and set up a tent. Then, when he went inside with her, she said to him, ‘O Allah! Do you want to treat me like some woman whom you have captured in war or a foreign slave girl?! By Allah, that is not going to happen! Nothing is going to happen until we reach your home and until you have held a party in my honour. You must sacrifice some animals for me, invite the Arab nobility and do what people like you normally do for people like me.’

The moral of the story is that today’s girls could do well to learn from it; Buhaytha did not give herself to her husband, nor did she accept his advances while she was in her parent’s home or while she was on the road. She did not climb down from anything that she felt was hers by right, even though she was already his wife. Everything did indeed come to pass as she wanted - the animals were sacrificed and the Arab nobility was invited. Then, when he came in to see afterwards and tried to get intimate with her, she said, ‘You mentioned your nobility to me, but I have yet to see any trace of it.’ He said, ‘How do you mean?’ so she replied, ‘Are you one who spends his time with women when the Arabs are killing one another?’ By this statement, she meant the war that was going on at that time between the tribes of `Abs and Dhubyan - ‘Go and make peace between them, then come back to your family. I am not going anywhere.’ So Al-Harith and Ibn Sinan went and made peace between `Abs and Dhubyan and took upon themselves the payment of the blood money of three thousand camels, which they paid over a period of three years to the families of those who had been killed. Then, when Al-Harith finished doing that, he went back to her and she said to him, ‘Now you may have what you want.’ This verse: ‘Believers, you have no right to expect a waiting period when you marry believing women and then divorce them…’ (al-Ahzab: 49) simply gives a way out to some of those people who want to disentangle from certain religious rulings that have placed them in a spot of bother, such as, for example, a man who has divorced his wife three times and thus has completely used up all of the divorces permitted to him by Islamic law. The ruling on such a man is that he is not permitted to marry this wife again until she has first married another man. Someone could come along basing his position on the verse above, and say that, as the word nikah (marriage) refers to the contract(1), the contract alone is enough for a woman who has been divorced three times. In other words, in order to make herself lawful once again for her first husband, she need only enter into a marriage contract with another man and does not need to consummate it. In response to this, we say, ‘But it has escaped your attention that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was entrusted by his Lord with the task of legislation, and it was his job to clarify the rulings that came down in the Book of Allah the Almighty and elaborate on them. For Allah the Almighty says, addressing his Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘...And upon you [too] have We bestowed from on high this reminder, so that you might make clear unto mankind all that has ever been thus bestowed upon them...’ (an-Nahl: 44). If the Sunnah of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had not had anything to say on this matter, then your understanding of the verse - that the marriage contract alone is enough to permit a wife to go back to her first husband again - would have been permissible. However, Prophet Muhammad is the one to whom Allah the Almighty entrusted the task of clarifying the Quran and about whom Allah the Almighty says, ‘...whatever the Apostle gives you [thereof], and refrain from [demanding] anything that he withholds from you...’ (al-Hashr: 7), that is, he peace and blessings be upon him is the one who has the right to legislate, and he did provide us with some clarification as to what is meant by Allah’s saying: ‘...unless she first takes another man for husband...’ (al-Baqara: 23). So, although Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him explained the word nikah as meaning the marriage contract, he provided further clarification of the true meaning of the verse when he peace and blessings be upon him said to the man, ‘Not unless she tastes his sweetness and he tastes her sweetness’(1) Therefore, a full understanding of the verse does not make it permissible for anyone to say that the contract alone is enough to allow a man to take back in marriage a wife who he has divorced three times. No, she must first taste the sweetness of her second husband and he shall also taste hers. In other words, they must consummate the marriage. The reason that Allah the Almighty made the ruling thus was to punish and discipline those men who fall into the habit of divorce, those men who find it so easy to utter the words of divorce, to the extent that those words are almost always on their tongue. It is due to the Mercy of the Creator and the importance Allah the Almighty attaches to the bonds of marriage that while He made a single phrase, 'Marry me- I have married you' sufficient to make a woman lawful for a man. Allah Glorified is He did not make a single phrase sufficient to separate them. No, instead, He made divorce be in three stages in order to leave space for the love and mercy between the two parties to reassert itself. If the man uses up all these opportunities, however, and divorces his wife for a third time, then he must be made to pay. This is accomplished by his wife properly marrying another man and doing the act with him, since there is nothing harder for the first husband to bear than that. One thing we notice here is the subtlety of the law: the difficulties that the law creates in certain matters are not because Allah the Almighty wants to make those matters difficult for people, but rather because He wants to scare them away from doing them. Allah the Almighty wants you to keep away from the words that bring about divorce and not to resort to them unless it is an absolute necessity.

(1) See Ibn Kathir, Tafsir, vol. 3, p. 497. Ibn Kathir says, ‘This noble verse contains several rulings, one of which is using the word nikah (marriage) to refer to the contract alone, and on that particular matter, there is no verse in the Quran which is clearer. There is a difference of opinion about the literal meaning of the word nikah and whether it refers to the contract, to the sexual act or to both. All three opinions exist. As for the way the word is used in the Quran, it is used everywhere else to refer to the contract and the sexual act that follows, except for this one verse where it is used to refer to the contract alone.’

(1) See Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 1433, Kitab An-Nikah, chapter 17 from a Hadith on the authority of `Aisha Allah be pleased with her ‘When the wife of Rifa`a Al-Qurazhi came to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and said, “I was Rifa`a’s wife, but he divorced me and the divorce was irrevocable. Then I married `Abd Ar-Rahman ibn Az-Zubayr, but his penis is like a limp edge of cloth (he is impotent).” [In another narration, it is added that when she said that, she took hold of the edge of her dress.] Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him smiled and said, “Do you want to go back to Rifa`a? You cannot do that until you have tasted his sweetness and he has tasted your sweetness.”’

That is why Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him taught us that, 'The most hated lawful act with Allah the Almighty is divorce.'(1) Because of this, there are those who object to divorce being a part of our law and even express their astonishment that a man can divorce his wife with only a single word after years of close companionship, love and affection. But what these people fail to observe is that while divorce is hated, it is still lawful. So, it is enough that Allah the Almighty has made it be in three stages, and has instructed that it only be resorted to when absolutely necessary; it is enough that Allah the Almighty has warned men against speaking the words of divorce lightly and saying them so frequently that it becomes habitual for them.

(1) See Ibn Maja, Sunnan, Hadith no. 2018; see also Abu Dawud, Sunnan, Hadith no. 2178, from a Hadith on the authority of `Abdullah ibn `Umar Allah be pleased with him.

We also note here that Allah the Almighty specified believing women in this verse, saying: ‘If you marry believing women’ (al-Ahzab: 50), even though believers are also permitted to marry the women of the people of the Book(1), be they Jewish or Christian. So, it is as if the verse contains a subtle indication from Allah the Almighty that any believing man who wants to marry should marry a believing woman and not allow anyone else into his bed. This is a sensible precaution with respect to his religion, since a believing woman may be trusted with his life, reputation, children and wealth whereas a non-believing woman may not be trusted with any of those things. We have seen young men from this society who have gone to the West and married foreign women, and whose marriages have then been beset by insurmountable problems: mothers do not forget that they are Jewish or Christian and so they fill the children’s heads with ideas and beliefs from their own faiths. So, believing men should choose believing women because they can trust them with their lives and homes. I would also like to mention when we ourselves travelled abroad and were asked when we got there, ‘Why do you allow yourselves to marry women from the people of the Book while at the same time forbidding us from marrying Muslim women?’ Some fathers used to bring their daughters who had been born abroad, such as in Germany for instance, back to Egypt with them, and those daughters used to argue this point and question why they were not allowed to go and marry German men in the same way that their fathers had gone and married German women. We used to respond to our daughters who lived there by saying to them, ‘A Muslim man is permitted to marry a woman of the people of the Book because he believes in her Book and believes in her prophet. But as for you, how can you get married to a man of the people of the Book who believes in neither your Book nor your Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him?’ Therefore, a Muslim man may be trusted with a woman of the people of the Book, while a non-Muslim man may not be trusted with a Muslim woman. Allah the Almighty then says: ‘...make provision for them and release them in an honourable way.’ (al-Ahzab: 49)

(1) Ibn Kathir says, ‘The saying of Allah ‘Believing women’ is an example of His using the majority to refer to the whole since all the scholars agree that, in terms of the ruling, there is no difference whatsoever between believing women and women of the people of the Book.’ See Ibn Kathir, Tafsir, vol. 3, p. 497.

On the same topic, elsewhere in the Quran, Allah the Almighty says, 'And if you divorce them before having touched them, but after having settled a dowry upon them, then [give them] half of what you have settled...' (al-Baqara: 237). Reconciling these two verses can be done as follows: the first one was revealed concerning those whose dowry had not yet been agreed upon, while the second was revealed concerning those upon whose dowry had been agreed. So, the one whose dowry has not been agreed gets a divorce gift: 'make provision for them' (al-Ahzab: 49), while the one whose dowry has been agreed gets half of it. Each verse deals with its own specific set of circumstances and so there is no abrogation involved here. There is nothing to prevent the man giving a woman whose dowry has been agreed a divorce gift on top of the half dowry that he is obliged to give her, according to some scholars. This opinion has much to recommend; justice entails giving her half of the dowry that had been agreed, while bounteous grace would be giving her a divorce gift as well as the half-dowry. Transactions between people should always be based on bounty, not just on justice, as our Lord Himself has taught us. As a matter of fact, Allah the Almighty deals with us on the basis of bounty, not justice. If Allah the Almighty were to have dealt with us with justice, we would all have perished and been destroyed.

This is why some of the most pious servants of Allah the Almighty say in their supplications, 'O Allah, treat us with bounteous fadl (grace) and not with `adl (justice)'; treat us with kindness and not according to our scales; and treat us according to decree and not according to reckoning. Yes, if there was nothing in the Hereafter except for the reckoning, none of us would earn anything. It has been narrated in a Hadith, 'He whose reckoning is argued about will be punished.'(1) Allah the Almighty says, 'Say, "In [this] Bounty of Allah and in

He whose reckoning is argued about on the Day of Resurrection will be punished.' An-Nawawi said in his commentary, 'The meaning is that most slaves fall short when their actions are weighed up, so if a person's accounts were properly reviewed and=*

His Grace – in this, then, let them rejoice: it is better than all [the worldly wealth] that they may amass!"' (Yunus: 58) One cannot experience joy unless one is first encompassed by the Bounteous Grace of Allah the Almighty and covered by His Mercy. We find in a Noble Hadith, 'None of you will enter Paradise on account of his actions.' The companions asked, 'Not even you, Messenger Muhammad?' He replied, 'Not even me, unless Allah covers me with His Mercy.'(1) If you were to ask, 'How can we reconcile the different statements in the Quran and Sunnah when it comes to the position and status of actions in Islam? For Allah the Almighty says in the Quran: "...Enter paradise by virtue of what you were doing [in life]!" (an-Nahl: 32) The reply would be, 'It is true that action has a special status in Islam, but when you worship Allah the Almighty you are not doing Him a service. No, it is Allah the Almighty Who has done you the service by legislating that you do worship. Even if that were not so, there is still the fact that Allah the Almighty with all His Attributes of Perfection, created you and created the whole universe for you. So, if Allah the Almighty assigns some task for you to do after that, He only does that with your best interests in mind, just as you charge your son with diligence, revision and study.

Then, if you were to place all your actions in one hand, then puts the blessings that Allah the Almighty has bestowed on you in the other hand, you will find that your actions never even come close to counterbalancing the blessings of your Lord. So, if Allah the Almighty rewards you after that in the Hereafter, it is purely on account of His Bounty and Mercy to you. The example we mentioned to illustrate this - and to Allah belongs the highest example - was that of a man saying to his son, 'If you succeed in your exams at the end of the year, I will give you a present or a reward'. Despite the fact that he is the one who derives all the benefit from his success, you still give him something extra because you love him and want the best for him. Therefore, we should deal with one other according to this principle, and we should make it part of our nature, especially in cases such as those when a woman has been divorced before her marriage has been consummated. If you were to ask, 'Why should a woman who has been divorced before her marriage has been consummated take a divorce gift as well as half of her dowry'? We would reply, 'They are to compensate her for the pain of separation. However, if she is the one who desires the divorce, she does not receive any part of the dowry or any divorce gift. On the contrary, she has to return to her husband everything that he gave her, as is mentioned in the Hadith of the woman who came to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to tell him that she no longer wanted to remain with her husband, so he peace and blessings be upon him said to her, 'Give back to him everything that he gave to you.'(1) Scholars call this type of divorce a khul`. Then, after mentioning the matter of the divorce gift, Allah the Almighty says, '...and release them in an honourable way.' (al-Ahzab: 49) Sarh, in its original meaning, is used to designate a particular type of fruit-bearing tree that is found in the desert. Sheep love to graze upon this tree, with the larger animals in the flock usually eating from the leaves at the top of the tree.

As for the smaller animals in the flock, the shepherd can make sure they are looked after if he is skilled in the art of shepherding. If he strikes the branches at the top of the tree with his staff, he can make some leaves from the tree fall to the ground, and these can then be eaten by the smaller animals. This is what is referred to in Allah's saying concerning the staff of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him: '...and with it I beat down leaves for my sheep; and [many] other uses have I for it.' (al-Kahf: 20) It has been narrated that one time when `Umar Allah be pleased with him passed by a shepherd, he addressed him, saying, 'O shepherd!' The shepherd looked up at the Commander of the

(1) See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no. 5273; from a Hadith on the authority of Ibn `Abbas Allah be pleased with him that the wife of Thabit ibn Qays came to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and said, 'Messenger Muhammad, I do not have any complaints about Thabit ibn Qays with respect to his character or his religion. However, I dislike disbelief in Islam.' So, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Will you give him back his orchard?' She replied that she would, so the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to Thabit, 'Accept the orchard from her and grant her a single divorce.' See also Ibn Maja, Sunnan, Hadith no. 2056. Ibn Maja mentioned the name of Thabit's wife, calling her Jamila bint Salul. In another narration no. 2057, he called her Habiba bint Sahl.

Faithful and replied, ‘Yes, O shepherd of ours’ - meaning, ‘I am a shepherd of sheep ,while you are the shepherd of shepherds, and shepherds do not act haughtily towards one another’, so `Umar Allah be pleased with him said, ‘At such-and-such a distance from here, there is a land in which there are some sarh (trees that are more beautiful and more fertile) than these, so take your flock there.’ This is a fine lesson in taking the responsibility for one’s flock upon oneself and showing concern for them. `Umar Allah be pleased with him was one of the best at bearing responsibility in this way. It is narrated that he and `Abd Ar-Rahman ibn `Awf Allah be pleased with them saw a group of travelling salesmen sheltering in the mosque, looking to spend the night there. When `Umar and `Abd Ar-Rahman Allah be pleased with them saw that some of the traders were carrying produce, while others were carrying the money they had made from the produce they had sold, they became frightened that that might persuade someone to try and steal from them. So, they themselves also spent the night in the mosque, staying awake the entire night until dawn in order to guard those travellers. And even today, it is common for farmers to say nasrah meaning to go out to the sarh (trees) when they go out to the fields in the morning; they also use the word naruh when they return from the fields in the evening. The word nasrah has entered common usage so that it is now used to describe any act of going out somewhere. This is where the common saying, ‘Give me permission to leave’, comes from: it is as if I was imprisoned and was asking you to release me. This is also how tasrih comes to mean releasing one’s wife. However, this release of the wife is described by Allah the Almighty in the Quran as being: ‘... in an honourable way.’ (al-Ahzab: 49)

Everything that is described in the Quran with the attribute of beauty, like this and like patience, Allah says, ‘patience in adversity is most goodly’ (Yusuf: 18), has some specific intrinsic worth. Since the release of a wife is usually accompanied by agitation and anger, the actual release should be carried out in a beautiful manner without any harshness or vehemence such as by saying to her, ‘This is what was fated to happen. I hope that Allah the Almighty gives you one who is better than me in exchange’ or whatever else the man thinks appropriate for helping to lessen her pain. The separation and tragedy of divorce are painful enough for her to bear, so where is the beauty in insulting and cursing in the process and hurting her by denying her some of her rights?! This verse deals with a matter that is very important with respect to families. It is something that is desired by Allah the Almighty Himself. Allah Glorified is He created a human vicegerent, namely; Adam peace be upon him and then created his wife from him so that Allah the Almighty could bring about through them man's vicegerency upon the earth. But why did Allah the Almighty grant them this vicegerency? They reply, 'So that mankind could enjoy what their Lord brought into being in His creation by means of His Power and Wisdom. It is like when you bring some tasty food to your children and then rejoice when you see them eat and enjoy what you have brought them. The reason you rejoice is because you have passed something brought about through your power to someone else - and to Allah the Almighty belongs the highest example!' Since Allah the Almighty put the vicegerent on the earth and set him the task of inhabiting it, as indicated in His words: '...He brought you into being out of the earth, and made you thrive thereon...' (Hud: 61); He had to then guarantee for that vicegerent the means to live and survive, which depend entirely on the existence of the means for the preservation of his species, since he could not live on his own in the world until the end of time. The continuation of life is dependent upon food and sustenance. That is why your Lord, before creating you and summoning you into existence, first created certain things for you: Allah the Almighty created the sun, the moon, the stars, the planets, the earth, the air and the water, thus prepared the way for His vicegerent by putting into existence all of things necessary for his survival. Read the following verse: 'Say, "Would you indeed deny Him who has created the earth in two days? And do you claim that there is any power that could rival Him, the Lord of all the worlds?' For He [it is who, after creating the earth, placed firm mountains on it, [towering] above its surface, and bestowed [so many] blessings on it, and equitably apportioned its means of subsistence to all who would seek it: [and all this He created] in four days.' (Fussilat: 9-10) So the storehouses are full to the brim with food '...and nought do We bestow from on high unless it be in accordance with a measure well-defined.' (al-Hijr: 21) Since it is the Creator of mankind Who decrees mankind's provision in advance, you do not have the right to say that there is a ‘population explosion’. Rather, you should acknowledge that it is you, through your own laziness and poor planning, who has fallen short in extracting the provision that is available to you. We notice something of this sort in the parable mentioned in Allah’s saying: ‘And Allah propounds [to you] a parable: [Imagine] a town which was [once] secure and at ease, with its sustenance coming to it abundantly from all quarters, and which thereupon blasphemously refused to show gratitude for Allah’s blessings: and therefore, Allah caused it to taste the all-embracing misery of hunger and fear in result of all [the evil] that its people had so persistently wrought.’ (an-Nahl: 112) An aspect of being ungrateful for the blessings that Allah the Almighty has bestowed on you is leaving them hidden because of your laziness and disability of making any effort to extract them. A generation’s laziness can make life miserable for the next generation. That is why when we first began to take note of this matter and started to irrigate and cultivate the deserts, our crisis, to a certain extent, even became worse. But if we had irrigated the deserts earlier, we would not be suffering from this crisis and would not be complaining of overpopulation and a lack of space. Allah the Almighty teaches that when a place becomes too small, we should not cling obstinately to it since there is plenty of space elsewhere, a fact which is clear in Allah’s saying, ‘Behold, those whom the angels gather in death while they are still sinning against themselves, [the angels] will ask, “What was wrong with you?” They will answer “We were too weak on Earth.” The angels will say, “Was, then, Allah’s Earth not wide enough for you to forsake the domain of evil?”’ (an-Nisa’: 97) That is why Allah the Almighty addresses this matter to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him even during the part of the night that he spends alone with Him, when Allah the Almighty says, ‘Behold, [O Prophet,] Your Lord knows that you keep awake [in prayer] nearly two-thirds of the night...’ (al-Muzzammil: 20) until the words: ‘...He knows that in time there will be among you, sick people...’ (al-Muzzammil: 20). ‘Sick people’ are those who are not able to work. Thus, those who are able to work should satisfy their own needs and the needs of those who are not able to work, ‘...and others who will go about the land in search of Allah’s Bounty, and others who will fight in Allah’s cause...’ (al-Muzzammil: 20).

From this, we understand that the law that Allah the Almighty has made for putting the life of mankind in order is built upon two pillars: travelling through the earth and walking through its broad trails where the means for one's physical survival are found; and fighting in the way of Allah the Almighty in order to preserve the call of Islam. The first of these two pillars is for the outer vessel and it is by means of that which we eat, drink, live and breathe. The second is for our values. If the Muslim ummah stops fulfilling either of these two pillars or becomes lazy with respect to them, then it will wither and die. Its wealth will become coveted by its enemies. That is why, today, you find that the undeveloped nations are poor and only survive because of the handouts they receive from the rich nations. This is because they were ungrateful of the blessings that Allah the Almighty gave them, left them hidden and did not try to extract them or implement them in any way leaving their lands unsettled and uncultivated. As for the rich, they have a surplus. They do not give it to the poor, however, but rather throw it into the sea or destroy it in order to maintain their economic supremacy. That is why we are able to say that all of the evil and corruption in the world stems from people being ungrateful of Allah's Blessings, either by leaving them hidden and not extracting them or by being miserly with them and not giving them to those who do not have. A sign of the importance of food that comes at the front of the list of things that oblige the worshippers of Allah the Almighty is to be grateful to Him; He says, 'Let them, therefore, worship the Lord of this House, who has given them food against hunger, and made them safe from danger.' (Quraysh: 3-4)

In the same way that Allah the Almighty has guaranteed his vicegerent on the earth the means for his survival, so too has Allah the Almighty also guaranteed him the means for preserving his species and having offspring. This is carried through the marriage system which Allah the Almighty legislated for His slaves. Allah Glorified is He legislated marriage so that children come into the world in such a pure and noble way, not in a dirty and ignoble way. The difference between these two lies in the fact that a legitimate child is welcomed proudly by its parents, while the other is not. In fact, if its mother does not get rid of the illegitimate child before it is born, she quickly gets rid it afterwards because it brings shame and dishonour down upon her and her family. So, Allah the Almighty legislated marriage to keep Muslim society pure, clean, and healthy, to make it worthy of being boasted about by Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him on the Last Day. It has been narrated in a Hadith: ‘Marry and procreate, for I will boast about you before the other nations on the Last Day’(1).

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلنَّبِيُّ إِنَّآ أَحۡلَلۡنَا لَكَ أَزۡوَٰجَكَ ٱلَّٰتِيٓ ءَاتَيۡتَ أُجُورَهُنَّ وَمَا مَلَكَتۡ يَمِينُكَ مِمَّآ

Should I marry her?’ The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him replied, ‘No.’ Then the man came another time and asked him again and he again said ‘No.’ Then the man came and asked him a third time and the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him answered, ‘Marry women who are loving and bear plenty of children, for I want your numbers to exceed that of other nations in the past.’*

(2) Ibn Kathir says, ‘The ruling in this verse is balanced, being neither too strict nor too lax. While the Christians do not allow men and women to marry unless they are removed from each other by at least seven generations, and the Jews allow men to marry their nieces, our perfect pure law came and demolished the excessive laws of the Christians, allowing men to marry their cousins, and forbade the overly lenient laws of the Jews whereby they permitted the marrying of nieces.’ See Ibn Kathir, Tafsir, vol. 3, p. 499.

obligatory for them concerning their wives and slave-girls – so you should not be blamed: God is most forgiving, most merciful [50] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 50)

The True Lord does not address Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by his first name (given name) as Allah the Almighty does with the other Prophets, like when He says, 'O Nuh (Noah)!', 'O `Isa (Jesus)!', 'O Musa (Moses)!', 'O Ibrahim (Abraham)!' and so forth. No, the Lord either addresses him peace and blessings be upon him by saying: 'O Apostle!' (al-Ma'ida: 41) or saying, 'O Prophet!' (al-Ahzab: 50) Calling someone by his first name indicates that he does not have any distinguishing characteristics since if he did have some distinguishing characteristic, he would be called by it. So, you would address him, saying, for example, 'O brave one!', 'O poet!' or something like that. Today, everyone shares the same names. So, addressing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with 'O Prophet!' and 'O Messenger!' was to honour him. Then Allah the Almighty says, '…We have made lawful for you the wives…' (al-Ahzab: 50). But what does Allah the Almighty mean by '...We have made lawful...' (al-Ahzab: 50), given that the discussion is centred on his wives?

Scholars reply, 'It means that they had been unlawful for him and then Allah the Almighty made them lawful for him, and this meaning is clearly indicated by the words of Allah the Almighty that follow immediately after: '...whose bride gift you have paid…' (al-Ahzab: 50). It is as if Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him worked firstly as matters are lawful, as proved by the fact that he paid them their dowries. Some scholars have an issue with calling a dowry an ajr, saying, 'How can a dowry be called an ajr when the word ajr literally means, "payment for a service rendered by a hireling for a hirer in a set period of time", and marriages do not have set periods of time, since a precondition of marriage is making the intention that the union be permanent'? In answer to this question, we say, 'It is not correct to read verses in isolation; rather, we should gather all the verses that are revealed on a particular issue and place them side by side so that we can arrive at a complete understanding of that issue'. Allah the Almighty says in another verse, addressing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in regard to his wives: '[know that] you may put off for a time whichever of them you please...' (put off your enjoyment of them) '...and may take to you whichever you please...' (al-Ahzab: 51), i.e. draw them to you. So, because you have the right to put off whichever of your wives you want and deny them their allotted turn and then bring others of them to you, it is as if the service rendered was only for a set period of time. So, it is fitting for the word ajr to be used for their dowries. In every phase and aspect of his life, Allah the Almighty granted Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the purest and noblest of positions. As for the saying of Allah, '... whose bride gift you have paid…' (al-Ahzab: 50), it indicates that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not benefit from any of his wives until he first paid them their dowries. This is even though it is permissible for men who have agreed upon a dowry with their wives to have sexual relations with them before actually paying them any part of it, since the whole or part of a dowry may be deferred. However, delaying the dowry does give the wife the right to refuse to sleep with her husband. And so, when she does permit him to sleep with her, it is an act of favour from her to him. So, the way chosen by Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was the most perfect.

He peace and blessings be upon him came in order to make it clear to people what has been sent down to them. Allah the Almighty made him a living example of how to behave in matters which people find difficult to confront by having him be the first one to do those things, as we already mentioned with regard to the matter of adoption. Similarly, with respect to polygamy, when he peace and blessings be upon him was sent, polygamy was a common practice amongst the Arabs and had even been practised by the prophets who came before him. Allah the Almighty however, wanted to limit the number of wives men were permitted in such a way that would still absorb the extra women in society but stop them from marrying as many as they wanted. So, Allah the Almighty commanded Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to say to his community, 'Any one of you with more than four wives should hold onto four of them and divorce the rest', while at the same time allowing him peace and blessings be upon him to keep the nine wives that he had. If this ruling were to have included Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as well, and he had held onto four and divorced the other five, those five would have suffered greatly since they would have been left hanging, neither being married nor being free to marry. That is because being the wives of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and Mothers of the Believers, they were not permitted to marry any other man after him peace and blessings be upon him.

Therefore, the ruling was different when it came to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. However, it should be noted that the nine wives that he was permitted to marry were those nine he was married to and no other: if any of them were to have died or been divorced, he would not have been allowed to marry anyone else to replace them, since Allah the Almighty addresses him, saying: 'No [other] women shall henceforth be lawful to you – nor are you [allowed] to supplant [any of] them by other wives, even though their beauty should please thee greatly...' (al-Ahzab: 52). We have clearly demonstrated to those Orientalists who take this matter up that the exception of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from the ruling was not in terms of number but was in terms of the specified women themselves. So he peace and blessings be upon him had to stop at those specific nine women to whom he was married and could not marry anyone else, while every other man in his community was free to marry many times that number so long as he did not have more than four at any one time. The verse: '…We have made lawful for you the wives…' (al-Ahzab: 50), was revealed before the verse: 'No [other] women shall henceforth be lawful to thee...' (al-Ahzab: 52), and yet it has been narrated from `Aisha Allah be pleased with her that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not die until after Allah had first given him the permission to marry whomsoever he wished.(1) How could that be?

Scholars reply that it was because Allah the Almighty wanted to give Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the distinction of showing loyalty to his wives. For, even though Allah the Almighty had given him permission to marry others, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never did out of loyalty to the wives he had. He peace and blessings be upon him did that because whenever he was greeted, he would either give a better greeting in response or respond in kind. He had previously seen a good gesture from his wives when he had offered them a choice and they had chosen him, preferring life with him to the baubles and finery of this world, so it was as if he wanted to return that gesture with one that was even better than it.

(1) See At-Tirmidhi, Sunnan, Hadith no. 3216; see also An-Nasa'i, Sunnan, Hadith no. 656 in a statement from `Aisha Allah be pleased with her. At-Tirmidhi classified it as Hasan.

The verse: '…We have made lawful for you the wives…' (al-Ahzab: 50), coming before the verse: 'No [other] women shall henceforth be lawful to you...' (al-Ahzab: 50) was also a proof of how he peace and blessings be upon him was honoured and given special treatment, since Allah the Almighty made it lawful for him before making it unlawful. Another example of him being honoured in this way is found in Allah's saying: 'May Allah pardon you [O Prophet]! Why did you grant them permission [to stay at home]…' (at-Tawba: 43), for the rebuke is preceded by the pardon. Another thing we notice in the verse: '…We have made lawful for you the wives…' (al-Ahzab: 50) is that Allah the Almighty uses the masculine form `azwaj for wives and not the feminine form zawjat. This is because the word zawj (spouse) applies to both men and women. Linguistically, zawj means one for which another of its type exists, i.e. one of a pair. It does not mean 'two' as some people think. It is like the word taw`am (twin) which also means one for which another of its type exists. An example of this is found in Allah's saying: '[His followers would have it that, in certain cases, any of these] four kinds of cattle of either sex [is unlawful to man]: either of the two sexes of sheep and of goats...' (al-An'am: 143). Then Allah says: '... and any slaves Allah has assigned to you through war…' (al-Ahzab: 50). We know that 'what your right hand possesses' means slave girls, but Allah the Almighty added the words: '...Allah has assigned to you through war…' (al-Ahzab: 50), as a precaution in order to indicate that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him only obtained his slave girls by legally-accepted means, that is to say from those who were captured in the course of war. He peace and blessings be upon him was directly at hand when the prisoner were captured, so he could be sure those women were actually slave girls, since some women who were sold at the time as slave girls in the slave markets were actually freewomen who had been illegally abducted and then forced in slavery. A prime example of that is what we witnessed in the story of Zayd ibn Haritha Allah be pleased with him. Therefore, when Allah the Almighty says: '...Allah has assigned to you through war…' (al-Ahzab: 50), Allah Glorified is He means 'those regarding whom you are one hundred per cent sure that they are slave girls and that they are from among the captives whom Allah the Almighty has made lawful for you'.

Allah the Almighty says: '... and the daughters of your uncles and aunts on your father's and mother's sides, who migrated with you. Also, any believing woman who has offered herself to the Prophet and whom the Prophet wishes to wed– this is only for you [Prophet] and not the rest of the believers…' (al-Ahzab: 50). Similarly, Allah the Almighty made it lawful for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to marry the daughters of his paternal uncles, the daughters of his paternal aunts, the daughters of his maternal uncles and the daughters of his maternal aunts. When we say 'paternal', we mean his relatives on his father's side; and when we say 'maternal', we mean his relatives on his mother's side. We note, however, that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never did marry any daughters of his paternal uncles, daughters of his paternal aunts, daughters of his maternal uncles or daughters of his maternal aunts. The reason Allah the Almighty made it lawful for him peace and blessings be upon him to marry these women mentioned was so that his family would look out for him in the future and support him in his task. When you reflect upon this verse, you will notice that the Arabic words for paternal uncles and maternal uncles are in the singular while the Arabic words for paternal aunts and maternal aunts are in the plural. Why is that? They say it is because the words for paternal uncle and maternal uncle are generic nouns, and generic nouns may be used for both singular and plural. And this is proven by the fact that, in the Quran, you find generic nouns with exceptions being made to them in the plural, as in: 'By time! Verily, man is bound to lose himself. Except for those who believe, and do good works, and enjoin upon one another the keeping to truth, and enjoin upon one another patience in adversity.' (al-'Asr: 1-3)

'Man' is a singular generic noun. The exception that is made to it is 'those who believe' which is in the plural. As for the Arabic words for paternal aunts and maternal aunts, they are not generic nouns and so they were used in the feminine plural.

Another thing: because paternal uncles are the brothers of the father, and presupposing that there are many of them, they enjoy the same status of the father. An example of this is in Allah's words: 'Nay, but you [yourselves, O children of Israel,] bear witness that when death was approaching Ya`qub (Jacob), he said unto his sons: "Whom will you worship after I am gone?" They answered, "We will worship your Lord, the Lord of your forefathers Ibrahim (Abraham) and Ismail (Ishmael) and Ishaq (Isaac)..."' (al-Baqara: 133). In this verse, the paternal uncle Ismail (Ishmael) was included in the general category of fore fathers. Another example of a paternal uncle being called a father is in Allah words: 'And, lo, [thus] spoke Ibrahim (Abraham) unto his father Azar...' (al-An'am: 74), since it is well-known that Azar was Ibrahim's (Abraham's) paternal uncle, not his father.

In another place in the Quran, the word for paternal uncle appears in the plural. This is clear in Allah's saying: '[All of you, O believers, are brethren: hence,] no blame attaches to the blind, nor does blame attach to the lame, nor does blame attach to the sick [for accepting charity from the hale], and neither to yourselves for eating [whatever is offered to you by others, whether it be food obtained] from your [children's] houses, or your fathers' houses, or your mothers' houses, or your brothers' houses, or your sisters' houses, or your paternal uncles' houses, or your paternal aunts' houses, or your maternal uncles' houses, or your maternal aunts' houses...' (an-Nur: 61). Here, both the word for paternal uncle and the word for maternal uncle appear in the plural. Why is that? They say that it is because it is the houses from which you are allowed to eat that are being discussed in this verse and the word for houses appears in the plural. Since the generic paternal uncle only has one house and multiple houses are mentioned, we must use the plural form a`mam for paternal uncles and the plural form `akhwal for maternal uncles. Then Allah the Almighty says, '... Also any believing woman who has offered herself to the Prophet' (al-Ahzab: 50). The Arabic word wahb means giving something to someone freely without seeking any recompense, So, when we say 'So-and-so wahaba (gave) you such-and-such', we mean that he gave it to you free of charge, not as part of a sale or in exchange for something else. That is why when this verse was revealed `Aisha Allah be pleased with her said, 'I am amazed that there could be a woman who values herself so lightly that she would give herself to a man for free without seeking any recompense!' Then when the following verse: '...Also any believing woman who has offered herself to the Prophet' (al-Ahzab: 50) was revealed, she Allah be pleased with her said to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'Messenger Muhammad, I see that Allah hastens with what you desire.' So he peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'If you were to have taqwa (fear) of Allah, `Aisha, then Allah would hasten what you desire.'(1)

What he peace and blessings be upon him meant was, 'Allah hastens what I want because I have hastened with what He wants: because I did everything that He requested of me, He makes whatever I want come to pass before I even ask it of Him'. The verse says: '...any believing woman...' (al-Ahzab: 50) because the ruling is specific to believing women; if the woman was from the people of the Book, it would not be valid for her to give herself to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for free. One question that arises from this ruling is: 'Is the act of offering herself to him peace and blessings be upon him for free enough to make her lawful for him?' They reply that it is not, for there must also be acceptance. So, if the woman were to say to him peace and blessings be upon him 'I give myself to you freely', he must first accept her offer before she becomes lawful for him. That is why Allah the Almighty attaches a condition to the offer, when Allah the Almighty says: '...who has offered herself to the Prophet and whom the Prophet wishes to wed–' (al-Ahzab: 50); the reason for this is because marriage is one of the matters for which both offer and acceptance are necessary. There has been some discussion about this matter among scholars: some of them(2) said that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never accepted any woman who offered herself to him freely, and others(3) said that he married four women who gave themselves to him freely, namely, Maymuna bint Al-Harith Al-Hilaliyya Allah be pleased with her Zaynab bint Khuzayma Umm Al-Masakin (mother of the poor) Allah be pleased with her Umm Sharik bint Jabir Allah be pleased with her and Khawla bint Hakim Allah be pleased with her. However, there is no riddle when it comes to this contradiction, since it is easy for us to reconcile these two statements when you look at the exact wording of what Allah the Almighty says: '... Also any believing woman who has offered herself to the Prophet and whom the Prophet wishes to wed–' (al-Ahzab: 50) Thus, it is possible that a woman offered herself to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him free of charge but he was not willing to wed her; and it is possible that a woman offered herself to him free of charge and that He peace and blessings be upon him wanted to honour her and give her a dowry anyway before marrying her. The word yastankihuha: 'to wed' (al-Ahzab: 50), is like yankihuha - both words mean exactly the same thing, like the words `ajila and ista`jala which both mean 'to hasten'. The implication of: '...this is only for you [Prophet] and not the rest of the believers...' (al-Ahzab: 50), is that Allah the Almighty singles out His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him with certain rulings that set him apart from the rest of his community. And the reason for that is because the task of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him does not only relate to himself but relates to all of mankind, not just his contemporaries but every single person who will set foot upon this earth until its Final Hour. This means that the concerns of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him are massive, both in terms of size and in terms of number, and this is indicated by Allah's words: 'Behold, We shall bestow upon thee a weighty message' (al-Muzzammil: 5). Allah the Almighty wanted there to be nothing to distract Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from this task of his. Allah the Almighty wanted His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to devote all his attention to fulfilling that task with which he was entrusted so that when he was in love with the process of conveying the message from Allah the Almighty and totally absorbed in it. All his personal desires and wants would die, leaving nothing in his heart except for his preoccupation with the task of calling to Islam. This is proven by the fact that when the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him first started to receive the revelation, he found it exhausting: his forehead would drip with sweat and he would run to his wife and call out to her, ‘Cover me! Cover me!’ or ‘Wrap me up! Wrap me up!’ Then, after that, Allah the Almighty wanted to relieve him of his suffering and remove the load that had weighed down his back and tired him out, so He caused the revelation to abate for a time so that the nerves and strength of the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him might have time to rest and recover. During that period, however, the sweetness of what had been revealed to the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him remained with him, and that sweetness caused him to long for the revelation to return. And the longing that you feel for something makes you forget the hardship and toil you went through to acquire it.

= the two books of Sahih strengthens and reinforces this opinion: it is narrated by Muslim that `Aisha Allah be pleased with her said, 'I used to be jealous of those who gave themselves to the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him free of charge and say, "Does a woman not feel embarrassed to offer herself to a man free of charge?" When it was revealed, "[know that] you may put off for a time whichever of them you please, and may take to you whichever you please..." (al-Ahzab: 51). I said to the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him "By Allah, I see that your Lord only hastens with what you want."' Al-Bukhari narrated that `Aisha, Allah be leased with her, said, 'Khawla bint Hakim was one of those who gave themselves to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for free.' This indicates that more than one woman did so.

In this regard, Allah the Almighty says, ‘By the bright morning hours, and the night when it grows still and dark. Your Lord has not forsaken thee, nor does He scorn thee. For, indeed, the life to come will be better for thee than this earlier part [of thy life]! And, indeed, in time will your Lord grant you [what you heart desires], and you shall be well pleased.’ (ad-Duha: 1-5) It is quite amazing that the idolaters said when the revelation stopped, ‘The Lord of Muhammad has forsaken him.’ So, when they thought him forsaken, they acknowledged Muhammad had a Lord who (they believed) had forsaken him, but when he was conveying the Message in secret and in public, they said he was a liar, a poet etc. The verse: ‘for, indeed, the life to come will be better for you than this earlier part [of your life]!’ (ad-Duha: 4) means that the return of the revelation will be better for you the initial stages of revelation since, when it first came to you, it was more than your strength could readily bear and so it tired you out. But when it comes back, you yourself will be calling for it come and longingly waiting for it. So, you will have gathered your strength and readied yourself to receive it and will, as a consequence, be able to bear it without effort or exhaustion. Thus, Allah the Almighty gave Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him what would make it easier for him to absorb himself completely in the revelation. So when, it did return, his forehead no longer dripped with sweat and he peace and blessings be upon him no longer became physically exhausted as he had in the initial stages of revelation because the potency of his longing and love had won out over the tiredness and exhaustion that had previously afflicted him. Then Allah the Almighty says, '...We know exactly what We have made obligatory for them concerning their wives and slave-girls– so you should not be blamed…' (al-Ahzab: 50), i.e. with respect to the number that they are limited to four and with respect to the dowry that is agreed upon at the time of the contract. The meaning is that everyone has a ruling and law that relates to them, so you, Messenger Muhammad, have a ruling that befits you and your community has a ruling that befits its members. While we are on the topic of polygamy and the rulings relating to wives, it is worthwhile reminding ourselves of the hue and cry that is raised by many of the enemies of Islam about 'polygamy', even though the practice of marrying more than one wife in Egypt is scarcely a noticeable feature of the society, let alone the epidemic that some people imagine it to be.

A survey was carried out and revealed that three men out of one hundred got married to two wives while those who got married to three wives are one out of every one thousand; yet those who got married to four are one in every two thousand. Thus, why do people make such noise about a matter that Allah Himself legislated? In addition, has not polygamy helped with allowing unmarried women to get married?

We see wives complaining and asking, 'Why would their husbands marry another after living with him and serving him for such-and-such a period of time'? In response, I ask such wives, 'Did that marriage harm you?' They would take 'yes' as an answer. Hence, I say, 'But that marriage brought benefit to another woman. Why do we then consider the affairs of married women and ignore the others? Do they not have the right to get married as well? In addition, those who accept being the second and the third wife only do so because they are unable to be the first and the second.' Moreover, we say to those who protest about polygamy that Allah has not made it compulsory; however, Allah's Wisdom decreed that polygamy is a recommended act and not an obligatory one. Thus, if you do not like polygamy, keep it to one wife.

Those who make this fuss about polygamy have raised an even bigger controversy about the practice of slavery in Islam. They accused Islam and Muslims, wondering how it is for a man to possess such-and-such a number of slave girls on top of his wives. However, it is well known that slavery was practised before Islam and continued to be practised throughout the world until common international law called for putting an end to it. On calling for freedom of all slaves, people began to release them to the level that some people bought them from others in order to secure their release. Certain slaves returned to their former owners, preferred to live under their protection and serve them because they were happy with their life under their masters' protection. Yet some of them took pride in their status as slaves and felt no shame to say that they were the emancipated slaves of such-and-such a family.

Anyone who examines the matter with a fair and unbiased eye will find that slavery is far from being a source of shame for Islam. It was actually a source of pride that slavery was restricted to only one way, namely; legally sanctioned wars. Thus, Islam did not come to institute the practice of slavery, but rather came to institute the practice of emancipation. It came at a time when slavery was practised everywhere. Slaves were sold here and there, and there was no way for freedom unless their master decided to emancipate them. Slavery was present in many ways. For example, debtors who found themselves unable to pay off their debts would sell themselves or their children to pay off their debts. Robbers and highwaymen would abduct free people and sell them in the slave markets and so forth.

However, when Islam emerged, it prohibited all the means of becoming a slave except for one, i.e. being taken prisoner in a legally sanctioned war. Wars did not even necessarily lead people to becoming slaves, as exchanges of prisoners and like-for-like transactions often existed. In addition, the social worth of a prisoner was taken into consideration. A leader, philosopher or great scholar would not be ransomed in exchange for just one ordinary man, but for as many as befitted his social value and status as the following verse proves: 'And afterwards either set them free as a favour or let them ransom (themselves) until the war terminates.' (Muhammad: 4)

The reason for this is because wars in Islam were not legislated to force people to adopt the religion, but rather to defend their right of choosing the religion they wanted. It is manifest through the fact that large numbers of non-Muslims continued to live in conquered lands for years after the conquest. These people, however, were required to pay jizya in lieu of the zakat that was paid by the Muslims and in exchange for services rendered to them by the Muslims' state.

One should reflect on the way that Islam treats prisoners. Here, we should stress that those unjust societies that criticise Islam on this particular point should know that capturing someone in a battle means that the capturer has complete power over him, and that he is free to kill him if he so wishes. But when the law intervenes and makes the prisoner your slave, it aims at sparing his blood and allowing you to derive some benefit from him through demanding a ransom or having him serving you directly. Therefore, the comparison here is not between slavery and freedom as some people mistakenly think, but rather it is between slavery and death.

Thus, the only reason that slavery was legislated with respect to prisoners of war was to spare their blood and give their captor a chance to profit from them. In addition, if there was no ransom or exchange of prisoners and prisoners were to remain in your possession, then you must know that they have certain rights that may never be violated, since they are fellow humans, created by Allah. Thus, Allah only permitted you to take possession of prisoners so that you spare their blood, not to humiliate them.

Read the words of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'Your slaves are your brothers. Allah has put them under your authority. If someone has his brother under his authority, he should feed him from what he eats, and clothe him from what he wears and not burden him with anything that will be too much for him. If you burden him with what will be too much for him, then help him.' What greater hospitality could be shown to a prisoner than this? First, Islamic law spares his blood and honours him by making him your brother and by respecting the common humanity through treating him well. Furthermore, it opens many ways for him to secure his freedom and emancipation. Although there is but a single door through which a person may become a slave, there are many doors through which he may exit from it, including expiation for one's sins that lie between him and Allah.

And even when there is no sin, Islamic law still encourages emancipating of slaves, in order to help one break through the difficult road. Allah says, ‘But he would not attempt the uphill road. And what will make you comprehend what the uphill road is? (It is) the setting free of a slave.’ (al-Balad: 11-13)

This is the case of a male slave and it also applies equally to a female slave. She receives the same good treatment as a male slave receives it. However, on top of that, she has a special position within the household of her master. She sees her mistress enjoy herself with her husband and the daughter of him gets married and moves to the matrimonial home with her husband and many other such matters. Since she cannot stand observing all that and may cause her to start to feel jealous, Allah honours her and makes her lawful to her master, allowing her to enjoy the same things as her mistress. In addition, if she delivers a child to her master, she becomes free as a result, which is another way of putting an end to slavery.

Allah concludes the verse we are studying saying that He ordained this in order that there will be no discomfort upon Prophet Muhammad and such is a privilege granted to him peace and blessings be upon him. Allah the Almighty says to His Prophet, ‘So that you can devote yourself completely to your difficult task, we do not wish to burden you with any sort of worry or anxiety whatsoever. Allah is Most Forgiving, Most Merciful.’ (al-Ahzab: 50)

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

تُرۡجِي مَن تَشَآءُ مِنۡهُنَّ وَتُـٔۡوِيٓ إِلَيۡكَ مَن تَشَآءُۖ وَمَنِ ٱبۡتَغَيۡتَ مِمَّنۡ عَزَلۡتَ فَلَا جُنَاحَ
عَلَيۡكَۚ ذَٰلِكَ أَدۡنَىٰٓ أَن تَقَرَّ أَعۡيُنُهُنَّ وَلَا يَحۡزَنَّ وَيَرۡضَيۡنَ بِمَآ ءَاتَيۡتَهُنَّ
كُلُّهُنَّۚ وَٱللَّهُ يَعۡلَمُ مَا فِي قُلُوبِكُمۡۚ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَلِيمًا حَلِيمٗا ﴿٥١﴾

You may make any of [your women] wait and receive any of them as you wish, but you will not be at fault if you invite one whose turn you have previously set aside: this way it is more likely that they will be satisfied and will not be distressed and will all be content with what you have given them. God knows what is in your hearts: God is all knowing, forbearing [51] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 51)

Speaking of the marital right of copulation, Allah says that Prophet Muhammad may put off the night of whichever of his wives that he pleases to another time and may embrace and take to his bed whichever of them that he pleases. In addition, Allah the Almighty reassures him peace and blessings be upon him that there is no blame upon him by desiring any of his wives and putting off another wife to another time.

Next, Allah Glorified is He says: '…this way it is more likely that they will be satisfied and will not be distressed and will all be content with what you have given them.' (al-Ahzab: 51) This means that both those whom you draw close to from among your wives and those whom you put off to another time will rejoice. They will all be content with their lot because they know that your wishes are a reflection of the command of Allah. Thus, the ones whom the Prophet of Allah takes shall rejoice because of his love to them and their pleasure at being in his company, and those whose time has been put off shall also rejoice because he peace be upon him kept on them, embraced them and drew them near to him at another time, which shows that they held an important role and a high rank. Furthermore, the fact that this happened as a result of what Allah legislated to him peace and blessings be upon him does not mean that he peace and blessings be upon him hated them or was forsaking them, but rather than that he, despite the difficulty it caused, was obeying and acting on the command of Allah and thereby got a reward for doing that.

It is a truism that every word in the Quran looks like a diamond with special rays shining from every individual atom within it. That is why they say the Quran is glittering due to the abundance of its bright rays that not one ray puts out the light of another, just like the words of the Quran.

The Arabic word for being satisfied appears very often in the Quran. Allah says, 'And Pharaoh's wife said, "A refreshment of the eye to me and to you."' (al-Qasas: 9) The literal meaning of the word is to settle down or dwell, as we say: 'someone settled down in a place and dwelled there'. It also means 'coldness', a meaning which is clear in the phrase 'Someone is qurrat al-`ayn', which bears the two meanings; for the eye gets attracted to something and does not move because of the beauty of this very thing since it has captured its gaze. In this regard, they say that so-and-so a person's gaze is transfixed. And for the opposite, they say that so-and-so a person has a wandering eye, meaning that his eye does not rest for long on any one thing.

In the language of politics, they say that so-and-so a person has an eye of aspirations, meaning that whenever he gets promoted to a particular post, he eyes up the post above it.

As for the meaning of coldness or refreshment regarding the eye in the phrase qurrat al-`ayn, this is an allusion to its being happy as the eye becomes warm at times of sadness and pain. It has recently been scientifically proven that the eyeball is a precise thermometer to the condition of the rest of the body and can be accurately used to determine how healthy or sick a person is.

Another example of the importance of the eye is shown by how it is used to indicate emphasis. For example, we say, 'So-and-so himself (literally 'with his eye') came to see me'. We previously mentioned the phenomenon of temperature equilibrium in the human body. We observed that it is one of the miracles of the human being that the temperature equilibrium is maintained within his body in an amazing way. The temperature varies from a body organ to another with each one maintaining a degree that best befits it. If we say that the temperature of the body as a whole stays constant at an ideal temperature of 37°C, which is amazingly the same even for people at the north pole and people at the equator, the temperature of the liver never drops below 40°C. However, the temperature of the eye never rises above 10°C because if it did, it would explode.

Thus, the gladness of the eyes of the wives of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon them, and their satisfaction lie in the acceptance of whatever he wanted with respect to bringing them close or putting them off to another time, because the main source for his desires was the command of Allah.

Then Allah says that the wives of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him will all be content with what you have given them, regardless of the circumstances. Allah finally concludes the verse saying that He knows what is in their hearts and that He is All Knowing and Forbearing. Thus, Allah the Almighty indicates that the mentioned contentment here was not limited to their outward forms, but rather was in their hearts. In other words, their hearts were content to carry out the commands of Allah, without any resistance in the innermost parts of their beings.

Allah is All Knowing and He fully knows what is in people's hearts, but He is All Forbearing. He does not recompense you for what He knows of in your hearts, for if He does so, it will completely tire you out. Reflect on the Forbearance and Mercy of Allah regarding the matter of starting things with uttering the phrase 'bismillah' (In the Name of Allah), Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him taught us that every action that does not begin with bismillah is cut-off from being blessed. When a human being embarks upon an action, he does not carry it out with his inherent power, but rather by means of the One Who created that subject for him. So, when you say, 'In the Name of Allah, I will do such-and-such a thing', you are, in fact, doing that thing in the Name of the One Who made that thing subjected to your use.

That is why Allah says: 'And He Who created pairs of all things, and made for you of the ships and the cattle what you ride on. That you may firmly sit on their backs, and then remember the favour of your Lord when you are firmly seated thereon, and say, "Glory be to Him Who made this subservient to us and we were not able to do it."' (az-Zukhruf: 12-13) Therefore, you must begin any action by saying 'In the Name of Allah' even if you are a sinful person. Beware of thinking that you are not worthy of saying those words, for Allah is Forbearing and All Merciful.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

لَّا يَحِلُّ لَكَ ٱلنِّسَآءُ مِنۢ بَعۡدُ وَلَآ أَن تَبَدَّلَ بِهِنَّ مِنۡ أَزۡوَٰجٖ وَلَوۡ أَعۡجَبَكَ
حُسۡنُهُنَّ إِلَّا مَا مَلَكَتۡ يَمِينُكَۗ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖ رَّقِيبٗا ﴿٥٢﴾

You [Prophet] are not permitted to take any further wives, nor to exchange the wives you have for others, even if these attract you with their beauty. But this does not apply to your slave-girls:
God is watchful over all [52] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 52)

We explained the meaning of this verse in the course of discussing the previous few verses, but it can be summarised here as follows: Allah started off by making these marriages lawful for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'Prophet, We have made lawful for you the wives whose bride gift you have paid.' (al-Ahzab: 50) Allah the Almighty then restricted what was lawful for him peace and blessings be upon him in this verse under study. Thus, Allah the Almighty starts with what is light and easy first and brings what is heavy and difficult afterwards, to let people know that Allah began His dealings with Prophet Muhammad with tenderness, compassion and sympathy and to show His Favours upon him. It is like the verse wherein Allah the Almighty starts with mentioning His Forgiveness before blaming the Prophet Muhammad: ‘Allah pardon you! Why did you give them leave?’ (at-Tawba: 43)

The verse we are studying clearly shows that the law legislated for the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with respect to his wives was different from that of the rest of his ummah. Allah has not ordained a specific number for Prophet Muhammad, but rather specified particular women as his peace and blessings be upon him wives. If He had permitted Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to marry nine wives, he would be unable to marry another nine if they were all to die. Also, if one of these wives were to die, he could not marry another one to replace her, that is, the exception that was made with respect to him peace and blessings be upon him however, was not in terms of number like the rest of his ummah, but rather in terms of the specified women themselves. This means that Prophet Muhammad was limited to those women and could marry no others. The wisdom behind this ruling lay in the fact that any woman other than the wives of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was free to marry again if she was divorced by their husband. His peace and blessings be upon him wives, however, could not do so since they were the Mothers of the Believers, thus were not permitted to remarry after him peace and blessings be upon him.

We made it clear that the matter of slavery was far from being a mark of shame for Islam, but rather, one of its greatest marks of distinction. Allah enabled the possession of slaves in order to protect them from being killed. Thus, the comparison here is not one between slavery and freedom, but rather between slavery and death, as we made clear earlier. Anyone who reflects upon the circumstances of male and female slaves under the protection of Islam will have no recourse but to recognise the great Wisdom of Allah in this matter.

Next Allah Glorified is He says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ لَا تَدۡخُلُواْ بُيُوتَ ٱلنَّبِيِّ إِلَّآ أَن يُؤۡذَنَ لَكُمۡ إِلَىٰ طَعَامٍ غَيۡرَ
نَٰظِرِينَ إِنَىٰهُ وَلَٰكِنۡ إِذَا دُعِيتُمۡ فَٱدۡخُلُواْ فَإِذَا طَعِمۡتُمۡ فَٱنتَشِرُواْ وَلَا مُسۡتَـٔۡنِسِينَ
لِحَدِيثٍۚ إِنَّ ذَٰلِكُمۡ كَانَ يُؤۡذِي ٱلنَّبِيَّ فَيَسۡتَحۡيِۦ مِنكُمۡۖ وَٱللَّهُ لَا يَسۡتَحۡيِۦ مِنَ
ٱلۡحَقِّۚ وَإِذَا سَأَلۡتُمُوهُنَّ مَتَٰعٗا فَسۡـَٔلُوهُنَّ مِن وَرَآءِ حِجَابٖۚ ذَٰلِكُمۡ أَطۡهَرُ لِقُلُوبِكُمۡ
وَقُلُوبِهِنَّۚ وَمَا كَانَ لَكُمۡ أَن تُؤۡذُواْ رَسُولَ ٱللَّهِ وَلَآ أَن تَنكِحُوٓاْ أَزۡوَٰجَهُۥ مِنۢ
بَعۡدِهِۦٓ أَبَدًاۚ إِنَّ ذَٰلِكُمۡ كَانَ عِندَ ٱللَّهِ عَظِيمًا ﴿٥٣﴾

Believers, do not enter the Prophet's apartments for a meal unless you are given permission to do so; do not linger until [a meal] is ready. When you are invited, go in; then, when you have taken your meal, leave. Do not stay on and talk, for that would offend the Prophet, though he would shrink from asking you to leave. God does not shrink from the truth. When you ask his wives for something, do so from behind a screen: this is purer both for your hearts and for theirs. It is not right for you to offend God's Messenger, just as you should never marry his wives after him: that would be grievous in God's eyes [53]
(The Quran, al-Ahzab: 53)

Allah Glorified is He tells clearly that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his ummah are obliged to act upon His commands. For, just as Allah the Almighty commanded Prophet Muhammad at the beginning of this chapter to remain conscious of Allah Glorified is He. He later commands his peace and blessings be upon him ummah to remember and obey Him; and just as Allah talks of a matter relating to the Prophet Muhammad, He then talks of a matter relating to his community when He says, 'Believers, you have no right to expect a waiting period when you marry believing women and then divorce them.' (al-Ahzab: 49)

After that, Allah Glorified is He says to Prophet Muhammad: 'Prophet, We have sent you as a witness, as a bearer of good news and warning.' (al-Ahzab: 45), to show how comprehensive the benefit he peace and blessings be upon him brought to his ummah was. Thus, Allah made his community repay him by calling down blessings upon him peace and blessings be upon him and exhibiting proper etiquette when they are inside his home. Therefore, Allah the Almighty calls out those who believe, saying: ‘Believers, do not enter the Prophet’s houses for a meal unless you are given permission to do so…’ (al-Ahzab: 53) because being responsible for one’s actions must be the characteristic of those who believe in Allah.

We have mentioned before that the Allah is the Lord and the True God. He is the Lord because He creates, brings up and bestows blessings and favours. This creation, upbringing and bestowal of blessings and favours are not specific to the believers but includes absolutely everyone that Allah called into being, regardless of whether they believe or not. The sun shines down upon everyone; the rain irrigates the land of the believer and the land of the disbeliever alike; and the land responds to everyone and yields up its produce. Anyone who makes good use of the means that Allah has given him through his attribute of Lordship reaps the reward and obtains a limited portion in this world. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Whoever desires the gain of the hereafter, We will give him more of that gain; and whoever desires the gain of this world, We give him of it, and in the Hereafter he has no portion.’ (ash-Shura: 20) Allah does not let the wage of those who do things well go in vain.

A believer who does not make use of the means of Allah, which is stretched out to him, and completely ignores it, lives in a state of backwardness and total reliance upon others. He lives his life begging from disbelievers in order to gain his power. Moreover, when the way is left clear for the disbelievers to make use of the means and they do all full due, they shall take the gifts that Allah has to offer, while it is all the more appropriate for believers not to neglect those same gifts and not allow themselves to fall behind the onward march of civilisation, even if it is the materialistic civilisation that has been created by today’s disbelievers.

As for morals and values, they have declined in these societies. This is proven by the fact that when you go to those countries and spend the night in a hotel, you find a printed message on the door of your room that says, ‘If thieves come into your room, do not resist them. Your life is the most valuable thing you have. And when you walk down the streets, you only take as much money as is absolutely necessary’. Thus, they have progressed in one area and regressed in another.

In addition, if you say that their progress in the economic sphere is the greatest manifestation of their civilisation, then look at Sweden. It is the country with highest income per capita. However, despite their material wealth, they have a very high incidence of psychological and nervous disorders, suicide, madness, deviancy, and many other such sociological disorders.

These countries have developed a materialistic civilisation because they have taken hold of the means of this world. Everyone does his job well using their work hours for work. You will not find anyone in the streets between the hours of eight and twelve, and you will not find anyone lounging around in coffee shops or wasting the hours he has set aside for work. Then, on their lunch breaks, everyone goes out to the restaurants to eat ready-made sandwiches and then hurry back to work. This is how a materialist society lives and anyone who does not work in such a society dies of hunger. Praise is due to Allah that the young men in our own societies have realised the importance of work and left behind the childhood characteristics that had lasted until they were thirty years old during which they were reliant upon their parents.

Allah Glorified is He in this verse in question teaches us the correct way of behaving with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. He makes him an example to all of us since he lived a life of abstinence in terms of his food, clothing, and dwelling. He had only a limited number of rooms for each of his wives and had no living room or reception room. It was thus necessary for his community to learn the necessary etiquette for visiting in such circumstances, especially with visiting the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him in his dwellings.

Allah orders the believers not to enter the Prophet’s houses for a meal unless given permission to do so. Houses have been specifically prepared for sleeping. This sleeping, in most cases, happens during the night because it is a time of peace and rest, unlike the day which is a time of movement and activity. It is necessary to have a place where you can find refuge during the night to rest from the hard work and toil of the day. This place is that where you can come back to. Therefore, a house is a place of rest, similarly as a person's wife is also a place of rest. A house is a place where a person's body finds its shelter and rest; whereas the wife is what gives a person's heart shelter and rest. They both are sources of rest for a person.

The Arabic word bayt is also used to refer to lines of poetry. Arabs were people of extraordinary eloquence and linguistic mastery; they named a line of poetry as such because lines of poetry are 'homes of meanings'. Just as we seek shelter in our houses and dwell therein, meanings dwell inside lines of poetry and thereby the lines impart wisdom in their own right.

Wisdom remains homeless until it finds shelter in a line of poetry that can be memorised and passed from generation to generation throughout the ages, as we still quote lines of poetry written by Al-Mutanabbi, Al-Ma`arri and Shawqi today.

Sleeping time depends on the circumstances of every person. Those who work during the day sleep during the night and those who work during the night sleep during the day, even though the genuine time for sleeping is at night. Thus, take care not to disturb someone during the time they have set aside for sleep, regardless of whether that time is during the night or during the day, that is, the time of work is for work and the time of rest is for rest. That is why wise farmers say, 'The one who guards' i.e. guards the fields during the night, 'does not plough', i.e. plough the fields during the day. That is because when a person works during the time, he customarily rests, that is, he does not do his job properly.

Regardless of whether the time of rest is during the night or during the day, when you reflect on those countries in the far north where the sun shines for three or even six whole months and then sets for three or even six months, do you see the people there working for three whole months and then sleeping for three whole months? Of course not! They divide each day up into a period of work and a period of sleep, regardless of whether it is night or day. One great aspect of the Quran is the way it makes provision for situations like these. Allah says, 'And one of His Signs is your sleeping and your seeking of His Grace by night and [by] day' (ar-Rum: 23). So, sleep is at night, but can also be during the day for those whose job demands them to work during the night.

The type of a house depends on the financial wherewithal of a person. However, what matters is that he has a place in which he can take shelter and relax. It does not matter how small it may be, even if there is only enough space in it for him to lay down on the ground. But if he does have a spacious house, it is better for him. Further, he who knocks on people’s doors should make sure to respect the sleeping time and not to knock at those times.

Similarly, as people differ in terms of the size of their houses, people also differ when it comes to the level of luxury and the means of rest at their disposal. Thus, since means of rest depends upon the financial capability of a person, everyone should be satisfied with what he has and the link between his job, his income and how luxurious he wants his lifestyle to look like. Before you decide upon an opulent lifestyle for yourself, get a job that is at the same level of opulence first to give the necessary means to pay for that lifestyle.

It is as the saying goes, ‘Stretch your legs as far your mattress is’. So, if your means offer you no option to live a fancy life, be content with that and if you are going to rebel against that and seek more, rebel against yourself first and find a job that provides you with such means that afford the lifestyle you seek. However, the biggest economic affliction that affects people today is that they first decide upon the type of lifestyle they want and then stretch their income to meet that lifestyle. Thus, their efforts are swiftly met by failure because their incomes fail to match up to their requirements. Things really ought to be the other way around. A person should determine his standard of living considering his means and income and thereby live a happy and relaxed life that is not weighed down by the burdens of expectation. Further, we must not forget to make sure that we earn our income and means of living lawfully and spend it in lawful ways.

In addition, since houses and the means of rest vary according to the means of their owners, then their psychological condition should also vary according to their means and thereby the hearts of the poor do not fill up with envy and spite against the wealthy. Therefore, we should be satisfied and content with what we have because perhaps that man of wealth you know might have inherited his wealth but still, even if he did not himself work hard to acquire that wealth, his parents, or his grandparents did. We have previously explained a man might get rest in his life after working hard for ten years; yet if he works for twenty, he might bring rest to his children, whilst his work of thirty years will bring rest for his grandchildren. Who is there who has sweated and toiled and has not received the fruit of his sweat and toil? So, whoever wants to be honoured and revered when he is old should work hard while young and strong before that day arrives when his strength fails him as Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was alluding when he said, 'Give the worker his due before his sweat dries.'(1)

As for those who loiter around in the streets or spend their days in coffee shops, they do not deserve to have that sort of noble life when they grow old; the same applies to those workers who do not show due care and attention to their work; they do not master it, they sit around watching their boss and waiting for an opportunity to skive off and waste time. It is a well-known fact that when someone acquires money illegally, that money shall be a source of evil and misfortune for him since he exerted no effort in acquiring it.

Read if you like the saying of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'When someone acquires his money through unlawful means, Allah will cause his wealth to be wasted in worthless pursuits.' He gained his money through ways against the law, thus the doors open for spending this money in matters that have absolutely no benefit whatsoever. We see people who live the lives of paupers with no sign of that wealth apparent on them or their children in spite of their enormous incomes and salaries.

People differ when it comes to the way they look at the wealth in other's hands. As for those who have strong faith; when they see someone blessed with wealth, they do not envy him but rather see it as an example of Allah's Bounty to His slaves. They pray to Allah to bless him and observe that such a person deserves this wealth and more besides because he has worked hard for it; a believer, upon seeing Allah's Blessings upon a person, says, 'It is what Allah wills. There is no power except in Allah. O Allah, bless him and bestow your Favour upon me'.

He sees the blessings of this world as a miniature model of how the blessings will be in the Hereafter. He says, 'If this is what man has made ready for himself, then how about what Allah has prepared for His creation!? Thereby, the delights of paradise will appear before him and he will advance towards them with a heart full of certainty and faith. This way of looking at the blessings in other people's hands represents happiness at other people's good fortune. As for those who lack faith, may Allah protect us from being among them, they resent those whom Allah has blessed with wealth, believing that they do not deserve it, thus envy them and desire that it be taken away. Feelings of this sort are a sign of a weak faith and dissatisfied with what Allah has decreed to pass in His creation.

(1) Narrated by Ibn Maja

On the other hand, we call mosques the 'Houses of Allah' because they are especially constructed to be places in which we go and stand in front of our Lord when we hear the call to prayer. That is why the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him warned us against bringing the matters of this world into the Houses of Allah. He warned us against concluding business transactions inside the mosque or using them as places to call for lost objects. There is no better proof of this than what the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said to a man who concluded a business transaction in the House of Allah; he said to him, 'May Allah make your business transaction void of all blessing.' Further, he peace and blessings be upon him said to a man who was calling out for his lost property in the mosque, 'May Allah not return your lost property to you.'

This is all because human beings live their whole lives for this world. Thus, they are not permitted to carry the affairs of this worldly life with them at times of prayers. The time of the prayer is set for meeting with Allah. It does not render your life's works inactive; however, it stocks you up with faith and gives you the strength to carry out the missions of your life. We previously compared this stock of faith to the charge of a battery. Do we say to someone who takes away a battery to recharge it that they have rendered the battery inactive?

Similarly, humans are created by Allah. So, do you think that a creation of His that presents itself before Him five times a day would go wrong? Therefore, when you pray, you use that meeting to stock up with certainty and faith and rid worries and problems. That is why the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to take refuge in the prayer when matters became serious. For when you are praying, you hand over all your problems to your Lord. Allah is Who gave existence to its means, so when you have difficulty with the means and cannot derive any benefit from them, leave it aside and resort to their Causer.

In addition, we have said that mosques are chosen by creation to be the Houses of Allah, but the Sacred House is chosen by Allah Himself and that is why Allah made it the main direction of all the mosques. Thus, when you visit it even for once in your lifetime, it will set right your entire life.

Now let us return to the topic of the houses of the Prophet Muhammad and how the believers should conduct themselves when they enter therein. Let us discuss the actions that must be considered when entering those houses of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in particular, since they possessed a special character as befit the importance of their owner.

Allah Glorified is He says, 'Believers, do not enter the Prophet's houses for a meal unless you are given permission to do so.' (al-Ahzab: 53) This commands the believers not to enter the Prophet's houses without permission since they are very cramped and there is no room in them for him to host guests at any time. Further, this permission to enter is conditional upon being offered food. However, even when you have been invited to a meal at one of the houses of the Prophet, do not go there before the appointed time. If lunch is at 2 o'clock, for example, do not show up at 10 o'clock since it would not be right for you to busy the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him when he has tasks that he needs to do within his house. Some tasks relate to his Lord, while others may relate to his family. That is what is meant by the saying of Allah: 'Do not linger until [a meal] is ready.' (al-Ahzab: 53)

Here, the believers, upon being invited by Prophet Muhammad to have a meal with him, are being warned against going early to his houses and waiting there for the food to be cooked. Rather, they should not go into his house except when the food is already cooked and prepared. They should wait until he says to them, 'Please come and eat'. However, Allah continues and says: 'When you are invited, go in; then, when you have taken your meal, leave.' (al-Ahzab: 53) Just as Allah forbids you from coming early before the meal and waiting around for the food to be cooked, He also forbids you from hanging around after the meal. What you should do as soon as you have finished eating is to disperse.

Dispersal is what happens when an object spreads out into a space that is larger than its size. This process of dispersal helps with realising the intended aims. Do we not spread out our clothes after washing them? Why do we do that? Because spreading out things that have been washed helps them dry out. If you were to leave them balled up in their own confined space, they would take weeks to dry. So, there is tremendous benefit in spreading things out and dispersing them. We previously explained this phenomenon by using the example of a cup of water. When you leave some water in a cup, travel for a few months and return, you would find the water still in the cup with its amount having barely decreased at all. However, when you pour that water on the ground in your room, it would dry up even before you make it out the door.

Thus, when Allah orders the believers to leave, He orders them to spread out, for the house of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is narrow and confined. Then everyone should go out to do his work. For what should a believer do after he eats his food? He should seek his provision in the broad trails of the earth and not laze around and be a burden upon others. Reflect upon what Allah says in the chapter of al-Jum`a: ‘But when the prayer is ended, then disperse abroad in the land and seek of Allah’s Grace.’ (al-Jumu‘a: 10)

Therefore, Allah Glorified is He commands His believing servants to disperse freely on the earth for a particular purpose, namely; working hard and seeking provision. What do you think you should do after eating your food? Is it appropriate to sit around in the house of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him do nothing when you know that he himself lives a life of abstinence in terms of every aspect of his life?

The Arabic word for disperse (intashiru) means to travel around/spread out as well. It is derived from a word used with water that means to overflow and fill up a larger space. Thus, dispersal or travelling around should be done in a systematised way, just as a drop of water falls on a bit of cloth and spreads out evenly in all directions, forming a circle. In the same way, when you disperse in the earth to seek provision, you must do so in a systematic and organised way so that people are not crammed together in one area while another is left empty and uncultivated with all its resources going to waste.

Allah wants us to disperse freely through the earth for two reasons: first to do so in search of provision and sustenance as Allah Glorified is He says, 'and others who travel in the land seeking of the Bounty of Allah.' (al-Muzzammil: 20)

To travel throughout the earth does not mean just dispersing freely over it, but rather to work hard and extract its resources since the Creator distributed food and crops equally throughout the land and dispersed resources over it. That is why the earth gives up Allah's Blessings anew every single day. The only things we used to know of the blessings of the earth were crops, but as the sciences progressed, new discoveries were made and new types of tools were developed and thereby we knew metals, minerals, oil and underground treasures that were hidden under Allah's Earth. We would never have come to know of any of these treasures without travelling throughout the earth and exploring it.

We used to be amazed at those people who lived in the desert and feel pity for them. We were wondering how they live in that dry, barren, and waterless condition and why they did not move somewhere else more hospitable. But now, after the discovery of oil, they have become the wealthiest of people with the treasures of this world at their feet. How did that happen? They clung to their lands and endured the times of hardship until the time came for them to harvest its treasures. If they had despaired of those lands, they would have never acquired all that wealth. Moreover, we already explained that the resources of the earth are divided up equally and we gave the example of a watermelon when it is cut lengthways. That is the case even if those resources are of many different types and vary from place to place

The second purpose of travel is to reflect on the signs of Allah in existence, for by travelling throughout the earth, one sees signs that do not exist in his homeland. In this regard, Allah says, 'Say, "Travel in the earth and see how He makes the first creation, then Allah creates the latter creation; surely Allah has power over all things."' (al-'Ankabut: 20) He also says elsewhere: 'Say, "Travel in the land, then see what was the end of the rejecters."'

(al-An'am: 11) What this means is that when we travel throughout the earth to seek our provision, it should be accompanied with reflection and contemplation on the Signs of Allah.

Next Allah the Almighty says: 'Do not stay on and talk, for that would offend the Prophet, though he would shy from asking you to leave. Allah does not shy from the truth.' (al-Ahzab: 53) This means that the believers should not remain seated after having finished eating to chat with one another in the house of the Prophet of Allah. This prohibition had a direct cause of revelation. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not make a wedding banquet for any of his wives except for Zaynab bint Jahsh Allah be pleased with her. On that occasion, he slaughtered a sheep and prepared a special dish.

When the people finished eating, they sat down to chat to one another. He peace and blessings be upon him waited for them to get up and go, but no one moved. His shyness prevented him from telling them to go. He wanted to show them his desire to go, so he himself stood up and went outside, but still no one got up. Further, he found more people sitting down outside the door. He went back inside and then the people finally sensed that he wanted them to leave. Anas Allah be pleased with him narrates that he went and told Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that they had gone and thereby he came back and went inside. Anas went to go after him, but he peace and blessings be upon him threw a veil between them as saying no one should enter, not even you. Hence, the verse was revealed because he peace and blessings be upon him wanted them to leave, but his shyness held him. The house of the Prophet was small and cramped and it was his wedding night. Therefore, it was not appropriate for them to sit around in his house. However, Allah says that He does not shy from the truth.

Thus, in the beginning of the verse, it talks about the etiquette of entering, the etiquette of asking for permission, the etiquette of eating and the etiquette of sitting in the house of the Prophet of Allah peace and blessings be upon him. Next, the verse talks about the etiquette relating to dealings with the wives of the Prophet Muhammad.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'When you ask his wives for something, do so from behind a screen: this is purer both for your hearts and for theirs…'

(al-Ahzab: 53). The word ‘something’ here refers to those household items that are not present with everyone. Usually in the past, there was one or two houses that have things of this sort in a neighbourhood, such as vessels, sieves, strainers, mortar and pestle and so on. Generally speaking, poor people do not possess items of this sort. Thus, they go to their neighbours and borrow such things from them. This is what Allah is referring to when He says, ‘Have you considered him who calls the judgment a lie? That is the one who treats the orphan with harshness. And does not urge [others] to feed the poor, so, woe to the praying ones, who are unmindful of their prayers. Who do [good] to be seen, and withhold the necessaries of life.’ (al-Ma‘un: 1-7)

When Allah demanded a special etiquette concerning entering the houses of the Prophet, eating and sitting therein, He did not forbid us from taking advantage of the household items that he had. Generally, one requests these household items by knocking on the door of the household that possesses them and saying, ‘Please give me such-and-such an item’. Further, that request is usually directed to the woman of the house since she is its mistress and is responsible for items such as those. Thus, when you request something like this from the wives of the Prophet, make your request from behind a screen, for ‘this is purer both for your hearts and for theirs’.

We previously said that perceptions, feelings, emotions, and beliefs that get implanted in a person’s soul manifest themselves in three distinct phases: first a faculty perceives, the psyche meets it with either love or loathing and finally the self tends to action. We gave the example of a rose. You first see its beauty in a garden; you smell its sweet and fragrant smell. This is the stage of perception via your sense of sight and sense of smell. That perception produces feelings of admiration and delight in your psyche which results in you reaching out your hand to pluck the rose. That is what we mean by inclination.

The law does not intervene in the stage of perception nor at the stage of emotion, but it does intervene at the stage of inclination. You can look at a rose as much as you wish and smell its beautiful fragrance. However, if you were to stretch out your hand towards it, we would say to you, ‘Stop! Do you have the right to the rose’? If you do then go ahead and take it, but if you do not, then you are forbidden from taking it since it does not belong to you. By saying this, we are not restricting your freedom since the same law that limits your freedom when it comes to infringing upon the property of others, limits their freedom when it comes to infringing upon your property. Thus, the law reassures you before taking anything away and thereby is in your own best interests.

We say that the law does not intervene except in the stage of inclination. It is not the case however when it comes to men and women. In such cases, the law steps in at the very beginning and makes even the stage of perception forbidden for you because when you see a beautiful woman and she is more beautiful than your wife or that you have yet to get married, her beauty causes you to become enamoured of her. This feeling of attraction will most certainly induce some form of inclination or action. How would inclination be like in such situations for there are certain conditions that must be met. The first is only acting in a way which is lawful and if there are no lawful avenues open to you, you either restrain yourself or trample upon the honour and dignity of others. That is why the law intervenes right from the start when it comes to this matter and does not let you fall into or incline towards something that is not lawful since there is no doubt that beautiful women arose certain specific urges in men.

Furthermore, a man who claims that looking at beautiful women does not arouse him is contrary to human nature even if he is already married. Beware of thinking that a beautiful wife will protect you from being affected by the beauty of others, for women are like wine. Every vintage has its own individual flavour. Thus, no matter how beautiful your wife is and no matter how much her appearance appeals to you, you will always find some new pleasing quality in another woman which is not in your wife. Therefore, Allah, out of His Mercy, forbids you from embarking even upon the first stage and makes looking at women forbidden.

If this is the ruling with respect to women in general, then how must it be with respect to the wives of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him? Thus, Allah addresses the believers saying: ‘it is not right for you to offend Allah’s Messenger.’ (al-Ahzab: 53) This is by looking to his wives since looking is a form of perception that stirs up feelings within the psyche. And, although it is true that you cannot proceed with these feelings since they are the mothers of the believers, but your heart would be occupied with them. And those thoughts and desires themselves cause offence and pain to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Thus, Allah says immediately afterwards: ‘just as you should never marry his wives after him.’ (al-Ahzab: 53)

It is narrated that a man saw `Aisha before the advent of the screen, got attracted, and said, ‘By Allah, when the Prophet dies, I will marry this rosy coloured girl.’ He thereby had to make penance for this statement, went to Hajj on foot and emancipated slaves so that Allah forgives him his trespass against the Prophet Muhammad.

Thus, the pronoun ‘this’ in the saying of Allah; ‘this is purer both for your hearts and for theirs’ refers to the command of Allah to ask the wives of the Prophet Muhammad from behind a screen. This command was a protection for both parties and for the believers’ hearts and then for the wives’. Then Allah says, ‘It is not right for you to offend Allah’s Messenger.’ (al-Ahzab: 53) This means that offending the Prophet Muhammad is not and will not be proper. In other words, the mere thought is considered offensive since it is related to a right of him peace and blessings be upon him. When Allah says, ‘just as you should never marry his wives after him…’ (al-Ahzab: 53), He, thus, honours him peace and blessings be upon him and his wives not only in the course of his lifetime but even after his death since they are the ‘Mothers of the Believers’ and since no one has the right to marry them after him peace and blessings be upon him.

It is a well-known fact that women hold a unique and special position to their husbands. It is quite normal in terms of human nature to see men encompassing all sorts of good characteristics. So, if he is a generous person, there is nothing that he would deny you if you ask him to either give it to you or loan it to you; he would give you money, give you furnishings from his home, lend you his car and so on, except when the request relates to his wife. For, when it comes to his wife, he is so jealous that he could not even bear you looking in her direction. And that is not only the case when she is in his possession; it is even true when he dislikes her or after he has divorced her since men even feel jealous when their ex-wives marry some other man.

Women are the only thing that occupy this position and that are so jealously guarded and attentively looked after. But why is that? It is because they are the receptacle of the future generation of offspring. It is as if Allah the Almighty wanted the community to have many children, but on condition that they come into the world by pure and virtuous means, so Allah the Almighty placed into the heart of men, love for their wives and jealous protectiveness towards them. In this regard, you should reflect on how Allah the Almighty described the Ansar (Helpers) when they welcomed the Emigrants and made rooms for them in their homes and gave them of their possessions. The description Allah the Almighty gives of them is loftier than any position occupied by the influential and powerful. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Those who were already firmly established in their homes [in Medina] …' (al-Hashr: 9). It is as if they were actually living in faith, a point which is clear in the saying of Allah: '…and firmly rooted in faith, show love for those who migrated to them for refuge and harbour no desire in their hearts for what has been given to them. They give them preference over themselves, even if they too are poor: those who are saved from their own souls' greed are truly successful.' (al-Hashr: 9)

The only thing which made the Ansar (Helpers) worthy of being described by the True Lord in this way was the fact that they preferred their brothers from amongst the Emigrants to themselves and gave them something that no man had ever before given to a fellow man. It is historically recorded that there were men from among the Ansar (Helpers) who offered to divorce one of their wives so as to allow their Emigrant brothers to marry. This definitively proves that the faith of these men was such that it overcame everything else in their lives and had even become more beloved to them than their own wives; their faith had subjugated their feelings of jealousy and protectiveness.

Then Allah Glorified is He says: 'that, verily' (al-Ahzab: 53); this part of the verse refers to what we mentioned earlier with respect to asking the Mothers of the Believers from behind a screen, and with respect to not causing pain or offence to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him or marrying his wives after him. All of that, as Allah Glorified is He says: '...would be grievous in Allah's Sight.' (al-Ahzab: 53) And how could you cause pain and offence to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when he himself was only sent to protect us from what brings us pain in this world and in the Hereafter?

Allah says:

إِن تُبۡدُواْ شَيۡـًٔا أَوۡ تُخۡفُوهُ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ كَانَ بِكُلِّ شَيۡءٍ عَلِيمٗا ﴿٥٤﴾

God has full knowledge of all things, whether you reveal them or not [54] (The Quran, al-Ahẓab: 54)

This verse is likely to give a warning: it is as if Allah the Almighty were saying to us, 'Beware of the thoughts that steal over you with respect to this matter, for nothing is hidden from your Lord and nothing escapes His Sight'. Even though people are not held to account for their innermost thoughts and desires, still such thoughts are forbidden when it comes to matters that relate to the rights of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. It is narrated in a Noble Hadith: 'Anyone who intends a wrong action but does not do it has a good action written for him.'(1) This is the ruling when it comes to matters in general. However, when the matter relates to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him it is not like this, since it is the will of the True Lord for all His Messenger's energy to be directed towards the task for which he was sent and for him to not be distracted by anything. What task could be greater than that of bringing guidance to the entire world, not only during his time upon this Earth, but from the moment his mission commenced until the coming of the Final Hour? As for the saying of Allah: 'Whether you do anything openly...' (al-Ahzab: 54), it refers to anything whatsoever regardless of what it is, a meaning which is also clear in the saying of Allah: '...or in secret, [remember that,] verily, Allah has full knowledge of everything.' (al-Ahzab: 54) The word `aleem (All Knowing), in terms of its morphology, indicates the utmost degrees of knowledge, for Allah's Knowledge is timeless and does not respond to events as they happen; Allah the Almighty knows what will happen before it happens, as it already happens and after it happens. That is why we say, 'For us, time is past, present or future, but for Allah the Almighty there is no past, nor present nor future, and that is why Allah the Almighty talks of the future as if it were in the past'. Read, for example, the saying of Allah: 'Allah's Judgement is coming, so do not ask to bring it on sooner…' (an-Nahl: 1). Allah the Almighty uses a past tense verb `ata (came), despite the fact that He says immediately afterwards: '…so do not ask to bring it on sooner…' (an-Nahl: 1).

Calling for something's speedy advent only happens when the time for the thing being called for has not yet come. So, the word `ata in our views means 'will come', but with respect to Allah the Almighty and His Knowledge, it has already happened since all times are the same for Him Glorified is He.

The saying of Allah: '...verily, Allah has full knowledge of everything.' (al-Ahzab: 54) means that Allah the Almighty had full knowledge and still has full knowledge. As long as Allah remains, He has full knowledge because change is not conceivable with respect to Him. So, Allah the Almighty had full knowledge in the past and still has full knowledge because He does not change. The word kana (was) does not mean here that His Knowledge resulted from events that you enacted, but that He knew of those events before you even enacted them.

This verse is one of the verses that the orientalists used (to call into question) and thought that the words used by Allah the Almighty here required amendment and correction. The orientalists always accuse us of considering the words of the Quran as being holy and thereby preventing us from using our intellects when we read them. They also claim that they examine them much more meticulously and have the courage to research them much more thoroughly, thereby enabling them to find the faults and shortcomings of the Quran.

Their objection against the saying of Allah: 'Allah has full knowledge of all things, whether you reveal them or not.' (al-Ahzab: 54), and similarly against His saying: '…Allah knows everything you do openly and everything you conceal.' (an-Nur: 29), goes as follows: they say that if Allah knows what we conceal, then where is the advantage and greatness in knowing what we do openly? We reply to these people, 'Beware of reading Allah's saying and judging them according to your whims without first believing that those words are from Allah the Almighty and that Allah the Almighty is the One Who says them. When you accept that, then you can use your intellect and reflect on them until you perceive the wisdom and inimitability of His sayings. When Allah Glorified is He says: 'Whether you do anything openly...' (al-Ahzab: 54), Allah the Almighty is not addressing an individual but addressing the seething masses of humanity. When a large mass of people are doing something openly, then you cannot determine the source of the actions made by people; you cannot trace back every sound to the person who made it, or every movement. The example we previously gave of this was that of a public demonstration where people's shouts and calls are mixed together into one great cacophony of sound. Then from among these people, we hear someone shout for the downfall of so-and-so. In such circumstances, would we be able to determine who exactly said that? The answer is 'no'. We would not be able to do so because of the mixed voices. However, the person spoke openly and announced the downfall of so-and-so to the masses at the top of his voice. You would be totally unable to determine who it was. Allah the Almighty however, knows the voice, the owner of the voice and what is produced by it. So, He traces back not only every single word, but also every single breath, to the one who uttered them. Those who try to hide themselves and their actions by doing this in a mass should beware: even if they may have confounded other people and successfully hidden from them, they will never be able to conceal themselves from Allah Who is not confounded by different languages, nor confused by different voices.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

لَّا جُنَاحَ عَلَيْهِنَّ فِيٓ ءَابَآئِهِنَّ وَلَآ أَبْنَآئِهِنَّ وَلَآ إِخْوَٰنِهِنَّ وَلَآ أَبْنَآءِ إِخْوَٰنِهِنَّ
وَلَآ أَبْنَآءِ أَخَوَٰتِهِنَّ وَلَا نِسَآئِهِنَّ وَلَا مَا مَلَكَتْ أَيْمَٰنُهُنَّ ۗ وَٱتَّقِينَ
ٱللَّهَ ۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ كَانَ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيْءٍ شَهِيدًا ﴿٥٥﴾

The Prophet's wives are not to blame [if they are seen by] their fathers, their sons, their brothers, their brothers' sons, their sisters' sons, their women, or their slaves. [Wives of the Prophet], be mindful of God. God observes everything[55]
(The Quran, al-Ahzab: 55)

After the verse of the screen: '…When you ask his wives for something, do so from behind a screen…' (al-Ahzab: 53), was revealed, the close relatives of the Mothers of the Believers complained about it and asked, ‘Does that even apply to us, Messenger Muhammad’? Then Allah Glorified is He revealed the following verse: ‘There is no blame upon women concerning their fathers…’ (al-Ahzab: 55). The saying of Allah: ‘There is no blame upon women…’ (al-Ahzab: 55) means that there is no objection or sin on or against any of these people who are mentioned here in case they come in to see their relative women since their position with respect to these woman is known and so there is nothing to be feared from them going in to see them. These people are fathers, sons, brothers, and nephews (both the brothers’ and sisters’ sides). As for the saying of Allah: ‘their women’ (al-Ahzab: 55), it is to be understood in the light of the grammatical rule of `idafa (genitive), which is used, linguistically, to convey one of three meanings: either the meaning of ‘from’ as in our saying, ‘ardab qamh’ or (an ardab of wheat); or the meaning of ‘in’, as in ‘the plotting of the night’, i.e. plotting in the night; or the meaning of ‘belonging to’, as in our saying ‘mal Zayd’ or (The money belonging to Zayd). This ‘belonging to’ can refer to something that is possessed either by someone or something that is a characteristic of him. So, the meaning of ‘the money of Zayd*’* refers to that money which is possessed by Zayd, but when you say ‘the bridle of the horse’, the bridle is not a possession of the horse, but rather, something which is specifically assigned to it. Here, in the saying of Allah: ‘their women’ (al-Ahzab: 55), the `idafa is used to convey both the meaning of ‘from’ and that of ‘belonging to’, i.e. women belonging to them or women from them, but not the meaning of ‘in’. When we say ‘women from them’, we mean women from their close family; and when we say ‘their women’, we mean women who are subordinate to them, like their servants, but on condition that they are believers since only a believer may be trusted to safeguard a believer. As for women from the people of the Book or disbelieving women, it is not correct that they serve a believing woman since they might give a description of her to their own people. That is why we note that the subtlety of the expression used here does not mention the paternal and maternal uncles, since a paternal or maternal uncle despite the fact that his position is almost that of a father, might well give a description of the girl to his own son. If, however, the paternal or maternal uncle does not have a son, then the underlying reason (for him not seeing the girl) is lacking, and so it becomes permissible for the girl to relax in front of him and display her charms to him and for him to go in to see her. As for the saying of Allah: ‘or their slaves’ (al-Ahzab: 55), we have said that the only people who can become slaves are those who have been taken prisoner in a legitimate war and in whose capture you have been directly involved. In other words, the act of serving is not allowed on the part of someone who was a freeman and then was kidnapped and sold as a slave. Then, after someone has been captured in a legal war, it is possible for you to take possession of him by buying, inheriting, or even being given him as a gift. These owned slaves could be women, in which case they would fall under the category of being ‘their women’; and they could also be children who have yet to reach the age of puberty as Allah the Almighty has indicated elsewhere in the Quran: ‘…or children who are not yet aware of women’s nakedness…’ (an-Nur: 31). Others who may enter into this category are the servants who work in a person’s house, such as doormen, drivers, and cooks. Islamic law gives a certain leeway when it comes to these people since society’s conventions shall refuse any relationship between these people and the members of the household.

These servants work in houses in which women and their beautiful daughters abide, and yet how many of these servants would ever be so bold as to even look at their mistresses? The reason for that is because social convention has placed a barrier between them. Then Allah Glorified is He says: ‘be mindful of Allah’ (al-Ahzab: 55). It is as if Allah the Almighty were saying here, ‘I have made clear to you what the ruling is when it comes to entering into the presence of a woman and I have made clear to you the different types of people for whom there is no objection against them coming in to see women, but know that which keeps you safe and watches over you when it comes to this matter is your taqwa (fearing) of Allah. It is your taqwa of Allah that moves you to obey Him and stops you from disobeying Him’. After your command to have taqwa of Him, it is enough for you to know that: ‘Allah was’ (al-Ahzab: 55), and still is ‘...witness unto everything.’ (al-Ahzab: 55)

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ وَمَلَٰٓئِكَتَهُۥ يُصَلُّونَ عَلَى ٱلنَّبِيِّۚ يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ
ءَامَنُواْ صَلُّواْ عَلَيۡهِ وَسَلِّمُواْ تَسۡلِيمًا ٥٦

God and His angels bless the Prophet – so, you who believe, bless him too and give him greetings of peace [56]
(The Quran, al-Ahzab: 56)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him brought good to his ummah, giving glad tidings to the believers and a warning to the disbelievers. He was eager to bring guidance to his ummah, as Allah the Almighty says, ‘A Messenger has come to you from among yourselves. Your suffering distresses him: he is deeply concerned for you and full of kindness and mercy towards the believers.’ (at-Tawba: 128) He used to feel pain and distress when anyone slipped from his fingers and stepped out of the arena of faith and belief. He used to charge himself with doing more to call people to Islam than he himself was physically capable of or was actually required to do so that his Lord even addressed him, saying: ‘But [Prophet] are you going to worry yourself to death over them if they do not believe in this message?’ (al-Kahf: 6)

It is well-known that nothing more was required of our Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him except to convey the Message, for guidance can only come from Allah the Almighty as shown by the fact that Allah Glorified is He says: ‘If We had wished, We could have sent them down a sign from heaven, at which their necks would stay bowed in utter humility.’ (ash-Shu'ara': 4) So, it was on account of the intensity and force of his eagerness to bring guidance to his people, that Allah the Almighty blamed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for making things too difficult for himself. Here, we stress that Allah the Almighty wanted him peace and blessings be upon him not to make things difficult for himself, as is shown by His saying elsewhere: ‘Prophet, why do you prohibit what Allah has made lawful to you in your desire to please your wives? Yet Allah is Forgiving and Merciful.’ (at-Tahrim: 1) This rebuke most closely resembles that you deliver to your son when he is working himself so hard in revising (for his exams) that you become worried about him. You are not criticising him for falling short, but rather for going to excess and trying to do more than that of which he is physically capable. In the same way, the greatest concern of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for his ummah became clear when Allah Glorified is He revealed the following verses about him: ‘By the morning brightness and by the night when it grows still, your Lord has not forsaken you [Prophet], nor does He hate you, and the future will be better for you than the past; your Lord is sure to give you so much that you will be well satisfied.’ (ad-Duha: 1-5) As soon as he peace and blessings be upon him received those verses from his Lord, he immediately applied them to his ummah and said, ‘In that case, I will not be well pleased if even one of my community is in the Hell-fire.’(1) If Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had this level of concern for you, then he is deserving of your prayers upon him, since every good thing that he acquired also extended to you, and was for your benefit as well as his. That is why Allah, Glorified is, He says: ‘Allah and His angels bless the Prophet- so, you who believe, bless him too and give him greetings of peace.’ (al-Ahzab: 56) As you probably noted, the verb: ‘bless’ has two subjects, which are Allah the Almighty and His angels. So, the True Lord joins His Blessing with that of His angels. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him once heard a preacher saying in his sermon, ‘Allah will reward anyone who has taqwa (fearing) of Allah and Messenger Muhammad and Allah will punish anyone who disobeys them both’, so he peace and blessings be upon him said to him, ‘You are the worst sort of preacher a people could have!’(2) Why did he peace and blessings be upon him say that?

They reply that he peace and blessings be upon him said that because the man joined together between Allah and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when he said, ‘disobeys them both’, instead of saying, ‘disobeys Allah and His Messenger’ and it is Allah the Almighty Alone Who has the right to join others with Himself, such as when Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…being spiteful was their only response to Allah and His Messenger enriching them out of His Bounty…’ (at-Tawba: 74).

It is never permissible for us to use a linguistic form that joins Allah the Almighty with anyone from His creation. Yes, Allah Glorified is He says:

(2) See Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 870; Ahmad, Musnad, Hadith no. (4/256 & 279) and Abu Dawud, Sunnan, Hadith no.1099.

'Allah and His angels bless the Prophet…' (al-Ahzab: 56). This is how it is said by Allah the Almighty; He joins with Himself any of His creation (the angels) that He so wishes. But it is not permissible for you to use this form unless you are reading it in the Quran. If you want to use your own words to express a similar concept, then it is incumbent upon you to say, 'Allah blesses Prophet Muhammad and the angels also bless him'.

That is why the scholars of tafsir(1) take great care when it comes to this matter and say that the saying of Allah: 'bless' (al-Ahzab: 56) is not the predicate for both the two subjects that precede it. Rather, there are some words elided, the implicit meaning of the verse thus is: 'Allah blesses Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the angels bless Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him'. If Allah the Almighty calls down blessings upon him peace and blessings be upon him and the angels call down blessings upon him peace and blessings be upon him then what about you? It is necessary and obligatory upon you to also call down blessings upon him peace and blessings be upon him; Allah Glorified is He says, '…so, you who believe, bless him too and give him greetings of peace.' (al-Ahzab: 56) We previously made it clear that salat (blessing) from Allah the Almighty has a particular meaning, blessing from the angels has a particular meaning, and blessing from the believers has a particular meaning. Salat came from 'supplication' which necessitates the existence of the one who supplicates, and the One to Whom the supplication is made and the one to whom we supplicate. So, for example, when I ask Allah the Almighty to forgive a person, I am the one who supplicates; a person is the one to whom we supplicate and Allah the Almighty is the One to Whom the supplication is made. But if the one who supplicates and blesses is Allah the Almighty then to whom is the supplication addressed? Therefore, the meaning of supplication cannot apply to the salat of Allah the Almighty. That is why we say, 'If you were to think deeply and imagine that a friend, for example, said to you, "I promise to give you such-and-such a thing tomorrow", that would be a promise from him about something which he has no power or control over. If he were to say to you, however, "I ask Allah to give you such-and-such", and attributed the act of giving to Allah the Almighty then there would be more hope in that thing to be realised, since the act of giving would be attributed to Allah the Almighty and so if He accepts the supplication, the desired outcome is achieved. And if Allah the Almighty is the One Who commands this gift to come to you, then it will come into your possession; of that there is no doubt'. So, salat from Allah the Almighty does not mean supplication, rather, direct implementation of His Commandments and a Mercy for all his creation. It is enough of a Mercy from Allah the Almighty to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that He made him the seal of the Messengers; no one will ever come to amend his Message. Would it not be enough for Prophet Muhammad to get Allah's Mercy, Blessing and Praise when Allah the Almighty links His Name with him?! Do not be surprised, for Allah Glorified is He addresses him saying: 'and raise your reputation high' (ash-Sharh: 4). What an honour that Allah has bestowed upon Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when Allah the Almighty accepts his intercession on the Day of Resurrection, not only on behalf of his ummah but also on behalf of the rest of creation! It is enough for him peace and blessings be upon him that Allah the Almighty addresses all the messengers by their personal names (except him peace and blessings be upon him) whom He addresses with an honorary title, such as when Allah Glorified is He says, 'O Prophet!…' (al-Mumtahana: 12), and 'O Messenger!' (al-Ma'ida: 41)

As for the salat of the angels, it is a supplication. Read the saying of Allah: 'Those [angels] who carry the Throne and those who surround it celebrate the praise of their Lord and have faith in Him. They beg forgiveness for the believers: "Our Lord, You embrace all things in mercy and knowledge, so forgive those who turn to You and follow Your path. Save them from the pains of Hell and admit them, Lord, to the lasting Gardens You have promised to them, together with their righteous ancestors, spouses, and offspring: You alone are the Almighty, the All Wise. Protect them from all evil deeds: those You protect on that Day from [the punishment for] evil deeds will receive Your Mercy-that is the supreme triumph."' (Ghafir: 7-9) If the blessings, supplication and asking forgiveness of the angels are directed to the whole of mankind, even to those who committed sins but repented to Allah, then imagine how their blessings would be when it comes to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the one who brings guidance to the entire humanity!

As for the salat of the believers, it refers to forgiveness. When they ask for forgiveness, they are not asking it for Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him but rather for themselves since he peace and blessings be upon him only came as a mercy for them. In addition, since he came as a mercy for them, they should never cease to venerate and revere him for even a moment. When a believer blesses him peace and blessings be upon him what does he actually possess to give him? What could we possibly give to him? Reflect on what you actually say when you bless him peace and blessings be upon him; you do not say, ‘I bless...’, but rather, you say, ‘O Allah, bless Prophet Muhammad’, or ‘Allah has blessed Prophet Muhammad’.

You ask the One Who is higher than you to bless him peace and blessings be upon him because you do not have anything whatsoever that you could give him peace and blessings be upon him. So, salat from Allah the Almighty is absolute and all-encompassing mercy, salat from the angels means supplication while salat from the believers is asking for forgiveness. For this reason, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was asked, ‘O Messenger Muhammad, that is the salat of Allah and that is the salat of the angels, so how should we send salat upon you?’ He replied, ‘Say, O Allah, send salat upon Muhammad and upon the family of Muhammad, as You sent salat upon Ibrahim (Abraham) and the family of Ibrahim (Abraham), and send blessings upon Muhammad and upon the family of Muhammad as You sent blessings upon Ibrahim (Abraham) and the family of Ibrahim (Abraham) among the nations. You are indeed Worthy of Praise, Full of glory.(1)

A companion once came to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said, ‘O Messenger of Allah, I have never seen you cheerful and happy like you are now’ whereupon the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him replied, ‘Jibril (Gabriel) just came to me and told me that whoever blesses me once, Allah will bless him ten times, ten good deeds will be written down on his behalf, and ten of his bad deeds will be erased.’(2) `Umar Allah be pleased with him narrated, ‘A man came to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and asked him, “What is the prayer upon you, Messenger of Allah?”

(2) See As-Suyuti, Ad-Durr Al-Manthur, p. (6/650); see also Al-Bukhari, Al-Adab Al-Mufrad.

He peace and blessings be upon him replied, “That is from the unseen. If you were to ask me about it, I would not say what it is. Allah has assigned two angels to me. When one of you says the prayer upon me, those two angels say, ‘May Allah forgive you’, then Allah, says, ‘Amen’ and the angels say ‘Amen’.””(1)

Glory be to Allah! Allah the Almighty says ‘Amen’ to the supplication of the two angels!

They say that, just like Hajj (pilgrimage), it is obligatory for the believer to say the prayer upon Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him once in his lifetime. However, it is also obligatory upon him to say every time a mention is made of him peace and blessings be upon him which is why he says in the Hadith, ‘The most miserly of all the misers is the one who does not pray upon me when I am mentioned in his presence.’(2) Then Allah the Almighty says afterwards: ‘...and give him greetings of peace’ (al-Ahzab: 56). You will notice that in the first part of the verse, Allah the Almighty says, ‘Allah and His angels bless the Prophet-…’ (al-Ahzab: 56), He does not say, ‘and give themselves up to him in utter surrender’, with respect to Himself and His angels, but then when He issues His command to the believers, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘...bless him too and give him greetings of peace’ (al-Ahzab: 56) adding the phrase, ‘give yourselves up to him in utter surrender’. The scholars explained this reason saying that this is because the prayer on Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is meaningless except when it is accompanied by surrendering to him; in other words, obeying him, following his commands and handing over the reins to him when it comes to every large thing and small thing in your life. If that were not so, then how could you say the prayer for him when you are actively disobeying his commands? Allah Glorified is He says, ‘By your Lord, they will not be true believers until they let you decide between them in all matters of dispute, and find no resistance in their souls to your decisions, accepting them totally.’ (an-Nisa’: 65)

One of the meanings of taslim (greeting of peace) is saying, ‘Peace be upon you, O Prophet’, as we say in the tashahhud. As-Salam (peace) is one of the Names of Allah the Almighty, so the meaning of ‘peace be upon you, Messenger of Allah’ is ‘may Allah the Almighty grant you protection so that no one will ever be able to harm you’.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يُؤْذُونَ ٱللَّهَ وَرَسُولَهُۥ لَعَنَهُمُ ٱللَّهُ فِى ٱلدُّنْيَا وَٱلْءَاخِرَةِ وَأَعَدَّ لَهُمْ عَذَابًا مُّهِينًا ﴿٥٧﴾

Those who insult God and His Messenger will be rejected by God in this world and the next – He has prepared a humiliating torment for them [57] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 57)

The Arabic word idha (harming) is the process whereby one person causes pain to another, regardless if it is done through words or actions. However, it is not suitable to use such an understanding of the word idha with respect to Allah the Almighty so what does it mean when it says that they cause pain to Allah the Almighty? They reply that Allah Glorified is He cannot be affronted by any action since they are incapable of that - that is something which is not possible. However, it is possible for Him to be affronted by words, and that would mean that, with respect to Allah the Almighty `idha` means incurring His Wrath by saying something that does not befit Him such as when they say, ‘Allah is poor, while we are rich’ (Al-‘Imran: 181); some of them even deny the Existence of Allah the Almighty; also when they say: ‘Allah is tight-fisted’ (al-Ma‘ida: 64) or ‘…Ezra is the son of Allah…’ (at-Tawba: 30). Falling under this category of harming Allah is what Allah the Almighty says in the following Qudsi Hadith, ‘My slave harms Me when it is not for him to harm Me: he curses time and I am time. The affair is in My Hands and I turn the night into day.’(1)

Is time to be blamed for the events that cause you pain? No, time is simply the envelope in which the event is contained. As for the Actor - it is Allah the Almighty. So, do not curse time, for time is Allah the Almighty. People themselves say: ‘There is only our life in this world: we die, we live, nothing but time destroys us.’ (al-Jathiya: 24)

All these are examples of statements that cause affront. However, we should look into them further and see whether they are simply barefaced lies, or truthful words that may be verified by evidence and proof. A person could say some words to cause you offence and yet you suffer no harm from them. In such circumstances, he incurs the sin for what he said and yet you are protected from their evil and their capacity to cause pain. So, these words that they utter really do cause pain and offence, but not to Allah the Almighty but rather to themselves; how is that? When Allah the Almighty put a successor (mankind) on Earth, Allah Glorified is He created the universe for him to inhabit before He even created him. So, mankind came into a universe that had already been readied to receive him - all the ingredients for his own survival and that of his species were already in place. Then, Allah the Almighty also prepared a law for him by which he could preserve and sustain himself so that, if anything went wrong, he would know how to fix it and make it right. That law was the divine way of guidance that Allah preserved in His Book. Read the saying of Allah: 'It is the Lord of Mercy Who taught the Quran. He created man and taught him to communicate.' (ar-Rahman: 1-4) The law of preservation existed in the Quran before mankind was even created because mankind is Allah's creation, and Allah the Almighty created them in the finest state and with the best of forms. Allah the Almighty wanted them to remain that way, well proportioned in every way. But, if this successor then leaves aside the law of preservation with which his Lord has provided then there is no doubt that Allah the Almighty will become angry, since He wants His creation to remain in that beautiful form in which He created them. Therefore, those who deny the Existence of Allah or associate others with Him, and those who say, 'Allah is poor while we are rich!' or 'The angels are Allah's daughters' or any similar statements, all incur His Wrath; since His successor did not fulfil what was required of him according to the divine way of guidance. We say to these people, 'Beware! Do not think that your disbelief has placed you outside the grasp of the True Lord the Almighty. On the contrary, you are within His Grasp and subject to His will - if He so wished, He could compel you all to obey Him and create you all in a right-acting form whereby it would be impossible for any of you to disobey, as He did with the angels. But He gave you free will with respect to those things He made you responsible for so that anyone who wishes to accept may do so and anyone who wishes to reject may do so, in order that Allah the Almighty would know the ones who come to Him through love and not compulsion'. The proof for this is that Allah the Almighty has created you in two distinct aspects - one aspect in which you have free will, which relates to those things you are held responsible for; and the other one in which you are completely within the Lord's Grasp which relates to your fate and destiny. So, as long as it is your wont to rebel against Allah the Almighty with respect to the things Allah the Almighty has commanded you with, why do you not also rebel against Him with respect to those things Allah the Almighty has destined for you such as death and poor health? And since you have chosen unbelief because He is your Lord and is required to help you get what you want, He will place a seal over your heart to stop belief ever getting in, and prevent your beloved unbelief from ever getting out. So, He brings you what you want - and that proves that your unbelief neither harms Him nor causes Him pain. It has been narrated in a Qudsi Hadith, 'My slaves, you will never attain to the extent of my benefit so as to be able to benefit Me, nor attain to the extent of my harm so as to be able to harm Me.' (1) If this world is a zone of free will when it comes to matters for which we are held responsible, that will not be the case on the Day of Resurrection. On that day, there will be absolutely no free will whatsoever - no one will have a choice with respect to anything. On that day, Allah the Almighty will say, 'Who has control today' (Ghafir: 16), but no one, whether king or slave, will reply. Allah the Almighty will provide the answer, saying, '…Allah, the One, the All Powerful.' (Ghafir: 16) All of what we have said here is with respect to what is meant by causing harm to Allah the Almighty. As for causing harm to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him he is a human being and so can be harmed by both actions and words. Just as they used to say about Allah the Almighty that He was poor, while they were rich, they used to say about Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that he was a soothsayer, a magician, a mad man and a poet. Then they went beyond that into the realm of action and caused him physical harm and pain. Was he not pelted with stones in Ta`if until his feet bled(1)? Was the embryonic sac of a camel's foetus not placed on top of his noble back when he was in Mecca?(2) Was his tooth not broken on the day of the Battle of Uhud?(3) Was his face not cut open and did he not bleed? So, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him like his Lord, was subjected to verbal abuse, but was also, on top of that, subjected to physical abuse; a human form of abuse that caused him physical pain. And the worst form of physical offence against him peace and blessings be upon him was what related to his wives and womenfolk.

That is why Allah Glorified is He says, '…It is not right for you to offend Allah's Messenger…' (al-Ahzab: 53), i.e. by going against that which he brought, making false accusations against him or subjecting him to physical pain and torture. But Allah the Almighty does not mention any of the ways of causing harm or pain to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by name except what relates to his wives when Allah Glorified is He says, '…just as you should never marry his wives after him…' (al-Ahzab: 53). He mentions this matter specifically and unequivocally, taking into consideration how human nature works. For, as we said before, men are able to give away to their companions and loved ones the most expensive and prized assets in their possession, but when it comes to their wives, they will not even permit another man to look at them. They guard their wives jealously and protect them from the gaze of others. An example of this is found in the conversation of Hudhayfa with his wife. He loved her greatly, so he asked her, 'Would you like to be with me in paradise?' She replied, 'Of course I would,' so he said, 'Then, if I die, make sure that you do not marry another man after me' - he was even jealously protective of her after his death - 'for I heard Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying, 'A woman will be for the last of her husbands (in Paradise)'.(4) However this Hadith is countered by another in which Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was asked, ‘Which of a man’s wives will be with him in Paradise?’ He replied, ‘the ones with the best character will be with him.’(1)

Some people think that these two Hadiths contradict each other, but, in actuality, there is no contradiction whatsoever between them, since the Prophet’s saying (for the last of her husbands) referred to something leaving one’s consciousness but not in terms of time. It would be much like if you were to have had an enjoyable trip in the company of one of your friends twenty years ago and then, when you reminded him of it, he would reply that it was the last enjoyment he had, despite the fact that he had enjoyed many journeys after that. In other words, that journey left the most lasting impression on his consciousness. So, the meaning of the Hadith is that she will be with the last of her husbands in terms of enjoyment; the one whose memory was the last to leave her consciousness even if he was an earlier husband in terms of time, by virtue of his good character. So, the meanings of the two Hadiths agree and there is no contradiction between them.

The jealous protectiveness that a man feels towards his wife is a matter that has been well documented in Arab history and literature. An example of this is found in the words of a poet(2):

I will love Da`d for as long as I live, but if I die
What sadness, for there will be one who comes and loves her as I did.

His infatuation for her was so great that it even extended beyond his death. However, this line of poetry is criticised by the fact that he is fretting about someone who will come and take his place in terms of the love he felt for his beloved. So, the following words, composed by another(3), are considered more eloquent:

I will love Da`d for as long as I live, but if I die
She may not fall in love after me.

(2) He is Nusayb ibn Rabah Abu Mihjan; he died in 108 A.H. and was the freedman of `Abd Al-`Aziz ibn Marwan. He was a poet of great renown. (Al-Mawsu`a Ash-Shi`riyya).

(3) He is `Abd Al-Malik ibn Marwan, the Umayyad Caliph who had found fault with the line of poetry composed by Nusayb.

Therefore, it can be seen that there are differing degrees of jealous protectiveness.

History tells us (1) that one of the Abbasid Caliphs –I believe it was Al-Hadi – used to love a slave girl named Ghadir; his love for her was so strong that he married her and, during one of the loving and intimate moments they spent in each other's company, he said to her, 'Promise me that if I die – and at the time he said that, he was not in the best of health – you will not marry anyone after me.' And so she gave him her word that she would not do so. But after Al-Hadi died, it was not long before Ghadir forgot the love she had felt for him and the sorrow she had felt at his passing – and, indeed, it is one of Allah's great mercies to us that everything in creation starts out small and gets bigger except for misfortunes which start out big and then get smaller. So, after a bit of time passed, Ghadir married Al-Hadi's brother. Then, one day, she woke up from her sleep, terrified and screaming so loudly that the entire palace heard her, so they gathered around her and asked her what is wrong. She replied, 'Al-Hadi came to see me in my dreams and said to me:

You broke your promise to me after
The inhabitants of the grave became my neighbours.
You married my brother in your treachery,
Truthful was he who named you Ghadir.
The new lover will not enjoy you,
Nor will calamities pass you by.
You will catch up with me before the morning,
And will become as I have become.

She barely said those words than she breathed her last breath and died. That is why Allah the Almighty takes these natural human instincts into account when imposing laws upon mankind. Do you not see that the waiting period for a woman whose husband had died was originally a full year, as is mentioned in the saying of Allah(2): 'If any of you die and leave widows, make a bequest for them: a year's maintenance and no expulsion from their homes [for that time].' (al-Baqara: 240) But then, this waiting period for widows was reduced to four months and ten days out of respect for this natural instinct that women also possess.

(1) The story of the caliph Al-Hadi with the slave girl Ghadir.

(2) Most of the scholars say that this verse is abrogated by the verse that comes earlier in the same chapter when Allah Glorified is He says, 'If any of you die and leave widows, the=

Then Allah the Almighty makes clear what will be the just requital for those who abuse Allah the Almighty and His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying: 'will be rejected by Allah' (al-Ahzab: 57) which means that He will exclude them from His Mercy: '…in this world and the next- He has prepared a humiliating torment for them' (al-Ahzab: 57). Allah the Almighty then gives us an indication that this just requital that He has prepared for those who abuse Him and Messenger Muhammad is not out of any form of partisanship to Him the Almighty or to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him which is proven by the fact that anyone who abuses a believing man or a believing woman will also be repaid for his abuse. Allah places believing men and believing women at the same level as Allah the Almighty and His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when it comes to wanting to abuse them and cause them harm.

Allah Glorified is He says:

وَٱلَّذِينَ يُؤۡذُونَ ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ وَٱلۡمُؤۡمِنَٰتِ بِغَيۡرِ مَا
ٱكۡتَسَبُواْ فَقَدِ ٱحۡتَمَلُواْ بُهۡتَٰنٗا وَإِثۡمٗا مُّبِينٗا ٥٨

And those who undeservedly insult believing men and women will bear the guilt of slander and flagrant sin [58]
(The Quran, al-Ahzab: 58)

When Allah the Almighty talks about the harm directed towards believing men and women, He specifies the particular type of harm with His saying: '...who undeservedly…' (al-Ahzab: 58) since there is another form of harm which Allah the Almighty has legally sanctioned – that harm is the punishment that Allah the Almighty has obliged us to inflict upon those who step outside the bounds Allah the Almighty has set for us, such as the hadd (legal punishment) for fornication, slander, drinking alcohol and so on. Although all these punishments cause pain and harm to believing men and women, that form of harm is sanctioned by the law and so the ones who carry them out are not punished as they would have been if they had harmed Allah the Almighty and His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. That is why Allah the Almighty says about those who commit unlawful sexual intercourse: 'If two men commit a lewd act, punish them both…' (an-Nisa': 16). The only reason Allah the Almighty legislated these hadd punishments, an infliction of harm upon believers, was to punish those who had overstepped His bounds and purify them of their sin, while at the same time acting as a deterrent for others. When `Umar Allah be pleased with him read the verse: 'and those who undeservedly insult believing men and women…' (al-Ahzab: 58), he started weeping, so one of the men who was sitting with him asked him, 'Why are you crying, Commander of the Faithful?' He replied, 'Because I have brought pain upon the believing men and women.' So, the man said, 'Commander of the Faithful, you only cause them pain in order to educate them and set them right. Allah the Almighty commands us to stone and cut off.' When he heard that, `Umar laughed and was happy.'(1)

Concerning the legal penalties laid down by Islamic law, Allah says, 'Do not let compassion for them keep you from carrying out Allah's law…' (an-Nur: 2). This is because compassion with respect to the bounds of Allah the Almighty is foolish and a false sort of mercy, for we are not more merciful towards creation than the Creator.

When Allah the Almighty emphasises a punishment and makes it severe He does so because He wants to deter us from overstepping His bounds and exposing ourselves to such punishments. When you read the saying of Allah: 'Fair retribution saves life for you, people of understanding…' (al-Baqara: 179), you might ask, 'How can there be life in death'? But yes, there is life in retribution because when you know that if you kill, you yourself will be killed, you will never dare to kill anyone. So, with this ruling, Allah the Almighty protects the person who intends to kill from committing his crime, and meanwhile protects the person to be killed from being a victim. So how can this be considered as an infliction of harm? The meaning of: ‘and those who undeservedly’ (al-Ahzab: 58) is ‘without them having committed a crime that merits pain or harm being afflicted upon them’. For the word(s) iktasabu ‘...undeservedly...’ (al-Ahzab: 58) which is(are) used here, we have said that there is a difference between the two verbs fa`ala and ifta`ala – fa`ala refers to an ordinary action that involves no trouble or exaggeration while ifta`ala refers to an action that does involve trouble and exaggeration. The same thing is true in terms of kasab and iktasab: kasab is when you take for something more than you gave for it, such as, for example, when you buy something for five and sell it for seven, making a profit (and this is why it is a linguistic custom to say kasab when what is gained is good and iktasab when what is gained is bad), such as in the saying of Allah: ‘…each gains whatever good it has done, and suffers its bad…’ (al-Baqara: 286), where laha (for) informs of what is possessed and `alayha informs of what is owed. That is because the lawful comes naturally and spontaneously, while the unlawful comes only after much effort, care and hard work. When you look at your wife, you do so easily and naturally, but when you look at a beautiful woman in the street, you do so guiltily and surreptitiously fearing that someone might see you doing it – this is the difference between the lawful and the unlawful.

(1) See As-Suyuti, Ad-Dur Al-Manthur, p. 6/657 and Al-Qurtubi, Al-Jami` li Ahkam Al- Quran, 8/5509.

There is only one verse in the entire Book of Allah in which the verb kasaba is used to refer to something bad, which is the saying of Allah: ‘Truly those who do evil and are surrounded by their sins will be the inhabitants of the Fire’ (al-Baqara: 81).

Why in this verse? As they say, it deals with those who have become accustomed to doing bad deeds – those whom bad deeds have surrounded them so thoroughly that they have become second nature, and have become so easy for them that they have taken on the characteristics of lawful acts so that they do them without difficulty. Indeed, they even declare openly that they are doing them and boast about them. It was their flauntering of their sins that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was referring to when he said, ‘All the sins of my followers will be forgiven except those of the Mujahirin (those who commit a sin openly or disclose their sins to the people).'(1) And part of what he said in this Hadith was, 'Allah screens it (bad deed) from the public and yet, in the morning, he himself exposed it.' This person who finds happiness in committing acts of disobedience and boasts of that is a professional at concealing all signs of perturbation when committing unlawful acts – he does them as easily as he would do acts that are lawful. And that is why the verb that is used here is kasab, since, for this person, doing wrong has become second nature. On the topic of the hardship and extra effort that unlawful acts require, I remember the story(2) of a man from our town called Sheikh Mustafa. One day, he went to the market to buy a cow and so he put the money he needed into his pocket. But so great was his anxiety and fear of thieves that he put his hand over his pocket and kept it there. But when he arrived at the market and they saw him with his hand clutching his book, all that did was tell them where their target was. But what tricks did they employ to rob him of his money? First one of them soiled his shoulders with camel dung and then rubbed himself up against Sheikh Mustafa until the Sheikh's clothes became soiled. Thereupon Sheikh Mustafa became angry and started to clean the dung off his clothes, completely forgetting the money that was in his pocket, so the thieves used that opportunity to steal it. In the same way that the unlawful is hard at work and comes at great expense, so the punishment for it also involves hard work and great effort so that the punishment befits the crime.

That is why Allah the Almighty says regarding the punishment of those who abuse believing men and women without their having done any wrong: ihtamal, and does not say hamal, for there is a difference between hamal and ihtamal: hamal is used for something that it is within your power to bear, while ihtamal is used when the thing is beyond your power to bear and even if you were to bear it, you would only be able to bear it with great difficulty. So, the punishment here is of the same sort as the action – it is characterised by hardship and great effort just as the original act of disobedience was. '…will bear the guilt of slander and flagrant sin…' (al-Ahzab: 58); buhtan, (slander) is saying something about another person which is not true - in other words, lying about him. Ithm, on the other hand, is committing a sin against another by saying something about him which is true but that he would dislike hearing, such as addressing a blind man, for example, with the words, ‘O! Blind man’!

(2) The story of Sheikh Mustafa and the purchase of the cow

That is why it is narrated in a Hadith that when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was asked, ‘Tell me how the matter stands if what I say about my brother is true? He replied: ‘If what you say of him is true, you have slandered him, and if what you say of him is not true, you have reviled him.’(1) That is you have told a lie about him. Allah the Almighty describes the word ithm here with the adjective mubin (manifest), for Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…flagrant sin…’ (al-Ahzab: 58). The word mubin means clear and obvious. Wrongdoing becomes clear either by you confessing to it or by their being indisputable evidence linking you to it. So, if we were to ask you, ‘You addressed this man with the words, “O! Blind man”, but would you yourself like someone to describe with a characteristic of yours that you did not like’? You would of course reply that you would not like that. So, the wrongdoing here is clear and your confessing to it is enough to make it so. You should always treat people in the way that you yourself would want others to treat you so, just as you would not like others to rob you, you should also not rob them.

And just as wrongdoing harms you, so too does it also harm them. Then Allah the Almighty moves on to another one of the courtesies connected to family life when Allah Glorified is He says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلنَّبِيُّ قُل لِّأَزْوَٰجِكَ وَبَنَاتِكَ وَنِسَآءِ ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ يُدْنِينَ عَلَيْهِنَّ مِن
جَلَٰبِيبِهِنَّ ۚ ذَٰلِكَ أَدْنَىٰٓ أَن يُعْرَفْنَ فَلَا يُؤْذَيْنَ ۗ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ غَفُورًا رَّحِيمًا ﴿٥٩﴾

Prophet, tell your wives, your daughters, and women believers to make their outer garments hang low over them so as to be recognized and not insulted: God is most forgiving, most merciful [59] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 59)

We notice that the first group towards whom the command is directed is the wives of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and then his daughters. This means that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not command his ummah to do anything that he himself was exempt from, but only commanded them to do something that he had first commanded the members of his own household to do. And commands of this sort are much easier to accept and much more likely to be implemented. It is as if he were saying, 'Before I command you to do something, I command myself first to show that I am not granted any special privileges'.

That is why we find mentioned in the story of the Muslim leader, Tariq ibn Ziyad(1), when he went to conquer Andalusia, he stood with his troops on one sea coast while his enemy were on the opposite coast. Then he said to his troops, 'My people, I will never command you to do anything that I exempt myself from. I will be the first of you to meet the enemy and will challenge their leader to single combat. Then, if I kill him, you will have been spared the trouble of fighting him, and if he kills me, then there will be no leader who needs you after me. I will be the first of you when it comes to fighting and will not send you into battle while I sit back and observe what happens.' This meant, 'I will not grant myself any special privileges'.

It was also by means of this principle of equality that `Umar Allah be pleased with him governed the people - he ruled over the world from Medina wearing a patched-up robe. One time, a man saw him sleeping under a tree like the common populace, so he said, 'You governed and were just, so you were able to feel safe and sleep, O `Umar.' `Umar Allah be pleased with him knew that the first place in which corruption would appear would be amongst his retinue, close relatives, immediate subordinates and the centres of power which had built up around him, so, whenever he wanted to make a decision regarding any matter relating to his subjects, he would first gather his relatives around him and warn them, saying, 'I have decided to issue a resolution concerning such-and-such a matter. And, by the One Who holds my soul in His hand, if anyone amongst you opposes any aspect of that decision, I will make an example of him to all the Muslims! People, beware of anyone who comes amongst you claiming some sort of connection to me so that you then give him something that belongs by right to someone who does not know me. For, by Allah, if any of you do that, I will make an example of him to the rest of the Muslims!'

(1) Tariq ibn Ziyad Al-Laythi was the one who conquered Andalusia. He was originally of Berber stock. He became Muslim at the hand of Musa ibn Nusayr who put him in command of twelve thousand troops, most of them Berbers themselves. He crossed the sea with them and took control of the mountain Jabal Tariq (Gibraltar) which was named after him. And he continued to conquer more parts of Andalusia with Musa ibn Nusayr. He was born in 50 A.H. and died in 102 A.H. at the age of 52. See Az-Zirikli, Al-`Alam, 3/217.

As the Quranic text was revealed with the wording: 'O Prophet! Tell your wives...' (al-Ahzab: 59), it indicates that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to pass on the text that came to him with the exact same wording with which Allah the Almighty revealed to him, that is, without changing it in any way whatsoever. If that had not been the case, he could have passed on that command to his wives by saying, 'O Prophet, your wives and daughters should draw over themselves some of their outer garments'. But the fact of the matter was that he conveyed the Quranic text in exactly the same form as it was revealed to him so that everyone might know that the command was from Allah the Almighty and that Muhammad was only conveying what Allah the Almighty Himself had commanded. So, if anyone wanted to argue about a particular command, he would have to argue with the one who originally issued this command. When this particular verse was revealed, Allah the Almighty had honoured the Prophet's nine wives and given them a choice (between this world and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him yet they had chosen him. Five of them were from Quraysh, namely; `Aisha, Hafsa, Umm Habiba, Umm Salama and Sawda bint Zam`a Allah be pleased with them; three from other tribes, namely; Maymuna bint al-Harith, Zaynab bint Jahsh, and Juwayriyya bint Al-Harith of Banu Mustaliq Allah be pleased with them; in addition to an Israeli descendant, Safiyya bint Huyayy ibn Akhtab Allah be pleased with her.

As for the children of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him it is known for certain that he peace and blessings be upon him sired both sons and daughters. All of his sons died young, but Allah the Almighty destined all of his daughters to live long enough to get married. Those daughters were Zaynab, Ruqayya, Umm Kulthum and the youngest, Fatima Allah be pleased with her who was the only one who lived after his peace and blessings be upon him death. As for Zaynab, Ruqayya and Umm Kulthum Allah be pleased with them they all died during the lifetime of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

There is a story about Fatima Allah be pleased with her which involved both laughing and crying. Some ascetic scholars used to understand the verse: 'and that it is He Alone who causes [you] to laugh and to weep.' (an-Najm: 43), as that Fatima Allah be pleased with her used to say when she was asked what caused her to laugh and weep? She replied: 'When I went in to see my father when he was ill, he said to me, "This is the illness from which I will die, Fatima", so I cried. Then, as I turned to leave, he gestured to me and said, "Fatima, you will be the first of the people of my family to join me", so I laughed.' So, this is the reason why Fatima Allah be pleased with her did not remain on this earth for longer than six months after Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had passed away.(1) Scholars have understood from this Hadith that souls meet after death and do not have to wait until they are resurrected, since if it is so, then the order in which people died would make no difference with respect to the order in which they met. Prophet Muhammad's words to her, 'You will be the first of my family to join me' indicated that he would meet with her directly after she died.

The actual point of reference in this story is indicated by what someone - I think it was companion `Ali - said to Fatima that Allah says: "and that it is He Alone who causes [you] to laugh and to weep" (an-Najm: 43), so Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him causes you to weep first and then to laugh, so as not to cause you to laugh and then to weep as his Lord does.'

(1) See: Ahmad, Musnad, 6/77 & 240 from a Hadith narrated on the authority of `Aisha Allah be pleased with her that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him summoned his daughter, Fatima Allah be pleased with her to his side and whispered something to her which caused her to cry. Then he whispered something else to her which caused her to laugh. `Aisha Allah be pleased with her adds, 'I asked Fatima what Prophet Muhammad had whispered to her that made her cry and what he had whispered to her that had made her laugh.' She replied, 'The first time he whispered to me, he told me about his death so I cried. Then, the second time he whispered to me, he told me I would be the first one of his household to follow him, so I laughed.'

As for Zaynab[1] Allah be pleased with her she married Al-`As ibn Ar-Rabi`[2] before it was forbidden to marry disbelievers. Al-`As was captured by the Muslims at the battle of Badr, so Zaynab Allah be pleased with her went to ransom him, giving a necklace that she had with her. 'When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saw it, he found that it was a necklace that had belonged to Khadija that she had given to her daughter. So, he said, 'If you find it proper to return the necklace to her and free the prisoner, then do it', thus putting the matter into the hands of those who were in the position to benefit from her. So they waived their right to the necklace.'[3] As for Ruqayya and Umm Kulthum Allah be pleased with them they faced so many difficulties in their lives, as follows: before prophethood, Ruqayya Allah be pleased with her had been engaged to `Utba ibn Abu Lahab, and Umm Kulthum Allah be pleased with her to his brother, `Utayba. Then, upon prophethood and Abu Lahab's hostility to Prophet Muhammad, Allah the Almighty Allah revealed the verses: 'Doomed are the hands of him of the glowing countenance, and doomed is he! What will his wealth avail him, and all what he has gained?' (al-Masad: 1-2) Abu Lahab thus said to his son `Utba, 'My head and your head are unlawful for me until you divorce Ruqayya', so he divorced

Zaynab died in the year 8 A.H. - i.e. two years before Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him himself died.*

He married Zaynab, the eldest of the daughters of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. He married her in the time of ignorance before Islam in Mecca, and did not become Muslim until quite late. She was staying with her father in Medina until he became Muslim and then she was returned to him. He was most commonly given the nickname of Abu Al-`As, but was also nicknamed, 'Jarw Al-Bathaa' – 'the puppy of the valley' and 'the trustworthy one'. He died in the year 12 A.H.*

(3) See Ibn Sa`d, At-Tabaqat, 10/31: 'He was taken prisoner during the battle of Badr by `Abdullah ibn Jubayr, so his brother `Amr ibn ar-Rabi` came to ransom him. Zaynab Allah be pleased with her the daughter of Prophet Muhammad, who was at that time still living in Mecca, sent with him a necklace that had belonged to her mother Khadija Allah be pleased with her. Khadija had given that necklace to her on the occasion of her marriage to Abu Al-`As.

her. Then, later on, ‘Utba walked past Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and did something in front of him in order to mock him, so he peace and blessings be upon him said to `Utba, ‘You have been eaten by one of the dogs of Allah.’(1) So, `Utba told his father what Prophet Muhammad had said in his supplication against him. Abu Lahab knew well that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was truthful and that his supplications were answered and not rejected, so he became frightened for his son and started to take great care to safeguard him, appointing people to even accompany him on his trading trips. For surprise, despite all of this, he still did not believe. And so it came to pass on one of his trading trips that `Utba was sleeping amongst his companions, surrounded on all sides by them. Then, one night, a lion came and snatched him from the midst of his people, leaving nothing behind of him except that by which he could be recognised. Some of those biased against Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him have commented on this story, saying, ‘Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said ‘dog’, but what actually took him was a lion. However, one of the people of gnosis responded, saying, ‘When a dog is attributed to Allah, it must be a lion (at the very least). For Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not say, ‘One of your dogs’, but said, ‘One of Allah’s dogs.’(2) This is what happened with respect to `Utba. As for `Utayba, he divorced Umm Kulthum Allah be pleased with her but did not subject Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to any harm. Indeed, they say that he was too shy to even face him peace and blessings be upon him and that is why Prophet Muhammad did not supplicate against him. As for the times of happiness in the lives of Ruqayya and Umm Kulthum Allah be pleased with them they were when Allah

(1) See Al-Bayhaqi, Dala`il An-Nubuwwa, 2/338 & 339; see also Al-Haythami, Majma' Az-Zawaai'd. 6/19. At-Tabarani traced the Hadith back to a mursal statement and said, ‘The chain of narrations contains Zuhayr ibn Al-`Ala` who is weak.’ It is also narrated by Al-Hakim, Al-Mustadrak, 3/539 in a Hadith from Abu `Aqrab who classified it as Sahih. As for Ibn Hajar, he classified it as Hassan. See Ibn Hajar, Fath Al-Bari, 4/39.

(2) See Fath Al-Bari, Ibn Hajar Al-`Asqalani, vol. 4, p.39: The word kalb may be used to refer to every rapacious beast of prey, including lions. Ibn Sayyidih said, ‘The word kalb has commonly come to mean the sort that barks, although taklib (rapaciousness) may also be used to describe panthers and birds of prey.’ Imam Malik said in the Muwatta`, ‘Every animal that bites, attacks and terrifies people, like lions, tigers, panthers and wolves, are rapacious.

the Almighty replaced `Utba and `Utayba with someone better than them both, for first Ruqayya Allah be pleased with her married `Uthman Allah be pleased with him and then, when she died, her sister Umm Kulthum Allah be pleased with her married him. And that was why `Uthman Allah be pleased with him was given the nickname ‘the possessor of two lights’. When `Uthman Allah be pleased with him married Ruqayya Allah be pleased with her a woman sang the following song:

The best thing that any human being has ever seen is Ruqayya and her husband `Uthman(1)

Look at how great their recompense was! For whom did Allah the Almighty replace `Utba and `Utayba with? They were replaced with `Uthman Allah be pleased with him and what a wonderful replacement he was! In addition, receiving recompense in matters such as these is only really feasible when one accepts one’s fate in similar situations. So, when a human being is struck by affliction, he should completely submit to Allah the Almighty hand the matters over to Him and say, as Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has taught us, ‘We belong to Allah and to Him we will return. O Allah, protect me during my affliction - whatever affliction is - and replace it with something better than it.’(2) If he says that in full knowledge of the fact that there is wisdom in everything that Allah the Almighty has decreed for us, then He the Almighty will certainly recompense him with something better. A famous story that illustrates this well is that of Umm Salama Allah be pleased with her. When her husband, Abu Salama Allah be pleased with him died, she felt extreme sadness at his departure. During her mourning, when some women came to see her to offer their condolences, one of them said to her, ‘O Umm Salama, say as Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘We belong to Allah and to Him we will return. O Allah, protect me during my affliction and replace it with something better than it.' When she heard that, Umm Salama Allah be pleased with her exclaimed, 'But is there anyone better than Abu Salama?', since, in her eyes, he was the best of people.

---

(1) The wording in the Tafsir of Al-Qurtubi (8/5510) is:
The best two people mankind has ever seen are Ruqayya and her husband `Uthman.

(2) See Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 918 in theJana`iz chapter from a Hadith narrated on the authority of Umm Salama Allah be pleased with her that she said, ‘I heard Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him say, “There is no Muslim who has been struck by affliction who says what Allah has commanded Him to say, ‘We belong to Allah and to Him we will return. O Allah, protect me during my affliction and replace it with something better than it’ except that Allah will replace it with something better than it.’ It is also narrated by Ahmad, Musnad, vol. 6, p. 309.

However, despite that, she accepted what Allah the Almighty had decreed. No sooner had her waiting-period come to an end than she heard someone knocking at her door, saying, 'Umm Salama, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him himself asks for your hand in marriage.' When she heard that, she laughed out loud because Allah the Almighty had indeed replaced Abu Salama Allah be pleased with him with someone who was better than him.(1)

After Allah the Almighty had first commanded the wives and daughters of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to take on this aspect of courtesy, He followed that by commanding the believing women to do the same, saying: 'Prophet, tell your wives, your daughters and the believing women to make their outer garments hang low over them so as to be recognised and not insulted: Allah is Most Forgiving, Most Merciful.' (al-Ahzab: 59)

The reason He does so is because the family of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him does not just extend to his wives and daughters, but to the entire world. The word used for women here, nisa`, is a plural for which there is no singular from the same root. While the word `azwaj (wives) has the singular form zawj, and the word banat (daughters) has the singular form bint; the word nisa` has a singular form derived from its meaning only, not of its etymological root, i.e.`imra`a. As it is difficult to say `imra`at, we say nisa` instead. Nisa` originally comes from the word nasi` (delaying); because the creation of the woman was delayed to be after the creation of the man.

(1) See, Ibn Sa`d, At-Tabaqat Al-Kubra, vol. 10, p. 87, in a Hadith from Umm Salama Allah be pleased with her that Abu Salama Allah be pleased with him said when he was on his deathbed, 'O Allah, give my family someone better than me as a replacement for me.' Then, when he died, I said, 'We belong to Allah and to Him we will return. O Allah, my affliction is reckoned in an account with You, so protect me during it.' I wanted to also say, 'Replace it with something better than it', but I kept on thinking to myself, 'Is there anyone better than Abu Salama?' However, I persevered until I actually said it. Then, when her waiting period came to an end, Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him proposed to her, but she rejected him. Then `Umar Allah be pleased with him proposed to her, but she also rejected him. So Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him sent a proposal to her and she responded, saying, 'Welcome to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his messenger.'...until the end of the Hadith.

Then Allah the Almighty mentions His command to the wives and daughters of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as well as the rest of the believing women, saying: '...to make their outer garments hang low over them...' (al-Ahzab: 59). The verb used in this command is yudnina. It is in the jussive case because it is the apodosis of the imperative qul (say). It goes like `uskut taslam or 'be quiet and you will be safe', or dhakir tanjah 'revise and you will succeed'. In the verse, there is an implied conditional: 'If you say "draw (your garments) closer to you", then let them draw (their garments) closer to themselves'. This is similar to what is found in Allah's words: 'Hence, [O Muhammad,] proclaim to all people the [duty of] pilgrimage: they will come unto thee on foot...' (al-Hajj: 27), since those who are being addressed here are the believing women, headed by the wives and daughters of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. If any one of them fails to submit to the command, they would be leaving one of the conditions of faith unfulfilled.

As for the meaning of the word idna`, it is bringing one thing close to another. The same root word is used by Allah the Almighty in the Quran to describe the fruits of paradise when He says: 'with its fruits within easy reach.' (al-Haqqa: 23), thus using the word daniya (easy reach). In other words, they are close by and easy to reach and pick. The meaning of the phrase 'draw their outer garments close to them' is to pull them up off the ground and cover their bodies with them. As for Allah's words 'low over them' (al-Ahzab: 59), they indicate that the garments shall cover the entire body, wrap around it completely and hang down as far as the ground.

As for the word jalabib (garments), it is the plural of the word jilbab about whose meaning there is some difference of opinion. Some people say that it is a garment which is worn over the top of an undergarment, such as an undershirt or a shirt and trousers. It is permissible for these undergarments to be short, but the jilbab itself must be loose, long and reach right down to the ground.(1) Other people said that a jilbab was a scarf that was used to cover the head and drawn over their breasts, i.e. the area just below their necks. However, that is not enough, for they must also be allowed to hang as far as the ground in order to cover the woman up completely since her entire body is considered to be an `awra (a private area). When it comes to garments, there are some that leave a woman uncovered, some that describe the contours of her body and some that attract other people's attention. However, it is a legal precondition in Islam for a woman's clothing that it should not expose her body, describe it or attract attention. But some women still wear clothes that they, in spite of covering their bodies completely and leaving no parts exposed, are very tight, describe the shape of her breasts and hips and magnify her feminine charms so much that it is almost as if she were not wearing any clothes at all.(1) A great literary expression of this may be found in the following statement written by one of them - and indeed, he is completely right in what he says - 'By going to extremes in making herself pretty and displaying her charms, a woman is insisting upon offering herself up to men.' In other words, she wants to attract their attention to her, and make those who are unaware of her notice her. It is as if she were saying to them, 'Here we are'! Although sometimes we give girls who have yet to be married a certain amount of leeway in this regard, since they might be considered to have an excuse, but what is the excuse of those who are married?! Then Allah the Almighty explains the wisdom behind this act of decorum when it comes to wearing clothes, saying: 'so' (al-Ahzab: 59), i.e. making one's outer garments hang right down to the ground and cover one's body completely, as well as making sure not to display one's feminine charms is 'to be recognised and not insulted' (al-Ahzab: 59).

(1) See Al-Qurtubi, Tafsir, vol. 8, P. 5511: He said, 'Jalabib is the plural of jilbab, which is a garment that is bigger than a khimar (headscarf). It is narrated from Ibn `Abbas Allah be pleased with him and Ibn Mas`ud Allah be pleased with him that it was a rida`, (cloak), and it is also said that it was a qina` (veil), but the soundest position is that it was a garment that covered the entire body.'

Muslim women are known by their modest clothes, and thereby prevent anyone from being so bold as to subject them to sexual harassment or molestation.

(1) See Al-Hakim, Al-Mustadrak, vol. 4, P. 187, Hadith from Dahiyya ibn Khalifa Al-Kalbi that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him sent him to Heraclius. Then when he returned, he peace and blessings be upon him gave him a qubtiyya (an Egyptian garment) and said, 'Make half of it into a shirt for yourself and give the other half to your wife to use as a head-covering. When he had followed (those instructions), Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Command her to put something on underneath, so that it does not describe the contours of her body.' Al-Hakim said, 'This Hadith has a Sahih chain of narrations even though neither of them (i.e. Al-Bukhari and Muslim) narrated it. Adh-Dhahabi, however, said, 'Part of the chain is cut off.'

A Muslim woman's dress and deportment tells you that she is not one of those cheap sorts of women who await any sort of signal from you, nor is she one of those women who exhibit themselves to men in a provocative way, seeking their full attention. Then, after that, Allah the Almighty uses the following words to complete the verse: 'Allah is Most Forgiving, Most Merciful.' (al-Ahzab: 59) The Attributes of Mercy and Forgiveness here tells that His Punishment is not retroactive - those occasions upon which we have overstepped the mark beforehand are pardoned and forgiven by the Mercy of Allah the Almighty. The important thing is how women act after hearing the command to draw their outer garments about them and cover themselves up. By means of acts of decorum of this sort, Allah the Almighty insures the life of the Muslim woman. How does He do that, you might ask? Our response is 'The reality of insurance is taking from you during those times that you are wealthy and have means, and giving it back to you during those times that you are in need and do not have means'. In the same way, Islam protects women and allows them to keep their pride and dignity.

Then Allah the Almighty says:

لَّئِن لَّمۡ يَنتَهِ ٱلۡمُنَٰفِقُونَ وَٱلَّذِينَ فِي قُلُوبِهِم مَّرَضٞ وَٱلۡمُرۡجِفُونَ فِي
ٱلۡمَدِينَةِ لَنُغۡرِيَنَّكَ بِهِمۡ ثُمَّ لَا يُجَاوِرُونَكَ فِيهَآ إِلَّا قَلِيلٗا ﴿٦٠﴾
مَّلۡعُونِينَۖ أَيۡنَمَا ثُقِفُوٓاْ أُخِذُواْ وَقُتِّلُواْ تَقۡتِيلٗا ﴿٦١﴾

If the hypocrites, the sick at heart, and those who spread lies in the city do not desist, We shall rouse you [Prophet] against them, and then they will only be your neighbours in this city for a short while [60] They will be rejected. Wherever they are found, they will be arrested and put to death [61] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 60 - 61)

Anyone who closely examines the procession of messages throughout history will notice that there were three different types of people that each messenger came into contact with in the course of spreading his message: those people who believed; those people who rejected; and those people who wavered between belief and rejection. This last group are the hypocrites. It is because whenever a messenger is sent, he is only sent to change the social condition of a people whose society has become so depraved and corrupt that people can no longer bear it. So, the people who are suffering in that society await the coming of a new messenger, and so they rush to believe in him as soon as he appears since he brings with him new social principles that contain no injustice, no subjugation, no tyranny, no bribery, and no corruption. Therefore, those who have been badly bitten by events and made miserable by corruption, hurry to become believers. Such was the case with the people of Egypt, for as soon as Islam entered their country, they rushed to accept it. Why? Because, before Islam appeared, they had been living in great misery under the yoke of the Byzantines. In this same way, Persia believed simply by hearing about Islam and seeing the excellent example of the Muslims, after undergoing years of corruption at the hands of the non-Muslim rulers who had ruled them previously.

In the very moment that people start suffering from corruption in terms of the conditions in which they live, they start to look for a saviour, and if one comes to them, they will follow him, especially if he is someone from among them who has a distinguished past and from whom they have never once experienced a lie or any form of defect. A good example of this is found in the story of how Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him entered Islam: no sooner had Prophet Muhammad announced that he was sent by Allah, Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him rushed to believe in him without asking about a single thing. Why did he do that? Because he knew Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to be truthful and trustworthy, and so he trusted him absolutely. Something similar also happened when Khadija Allah be pleased with her became a believer: no sooner had Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to her, disturbed by the experience he had had of the angel descending upon him, than she took him in her arms, set his mind at rest, told him that he was just and right and took him to see Waraqa ibn Nawfal to prove to him that he was in right and that Allah the Almighty had not abandoned him nor left him to his own accord. Part of what she said to him was, 'By Allah, you give hospitality to your guests, bear other people's burdens, help the destitute and give aid to those who have afflicted by calamities...'(1).

(1) See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no. 3; it is also narrated in six other places in his Sahih; see also Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 160 from a Hadith narrated on the authority of=

That is why the people of knowledge say that Khadija Allah be pleased with her was the first jurisprudent in Islam, even before Islam was revealed. As for the people of corruption and all of those who benefit from it, it is natural that they would oppose him peace and blessings be upon him, since they profit from corruption and tyranny and want that state of affairs to continue. They want their lordship, hegemony, and social position to remain as it was and for everyone else to remain enslaved to them, giving them all their resources and abasing themselves before them. Those who had enslaved the people and set themselves up as their rulers, and in some cases, their gods, knew that the Messengers Allah's peace and blessings be upon them had only come to bring their rule and false godhood to an end. Hence, they saw no option but to oppose the call and to reject it; they saw no option but to fight against it if they wanted to preserve their rule and temporal dominion. It is amazing that we find people amongst the general populace who become accustomed to this servitude and are content to be humiliated in this way and live under the protection of these people, no matter the consequences may be. These people and those like them are the ones who say: 'And they say, too, "Why was not this Quran bestowed from on high on some great man of the two cities?"' (az-Zukhruf: 31)

Even after Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came bringing them salvation, they continued to look to the 'great' men who had enslaved them. Both of these two groups (the believers and the disbelievers) are being logical and consistent with what is in themselves since the believer believes in his heart and articulates that belief with his tongue, while the disbeliever rejects in his heart and also rejects with his tongue since he does not utter the testimony of oneness. A human being is made up of a heart and an outer shell; thus when it comes to belief, they must both be in harmony with one another. As for the third group, i.e. the hypocrites, they are neither logical nor consistent with what is in themselves since they claim belief with their tongues, while their hearts are void of belief. They are cowards who outwardly show you love and affection but inwardly despise you, and that is why Allah the Almighty has placed them in the lowest levels of Hell. In addition, that is why the Arabs when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked them to say, ‘There is no god but Allah’ in order to bring an end to the dominion of the leaders of disbelief, refused to do so. Why? Because they knew that this statement was not just something that they had to say, but rather, it would bring with it consequences and responsibilities that they did not feel ready for, If it had simply been something that they could say and then that would be the end of it, they would have said it and the enmity between them and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would have come to an end.

This statement, ‘There is no god but Allah’ means ‘There is no worship except to Allah the Almighty; there is no humble submission except to Allah the Almighty; there is no legislation except for the sake of Allah the Almighty; there is no one who brings benefit except Allah the Almighty and so on. How could such meanings feel right to one who had become accustomed to worshipping and humbly submitting to other than Allah the Almighty?

When He the Almighty talks about hypocrites, He specifically mentions Medina, saying: ‘If the hypocrites, the sick at heart, and those who spread lies in the city do not desist…’ (al-Ahzab: 60). Hypocrisy did not appear in Mecca, the stronghold of unbelief and idolatry, but rather in Medina, the city where the Emigrants sought refuge with and where the majority of its inhabitants were people of the Book, people who were nearer to belief than to unbelief. So, why did this phenomenon appear therein?

The reason, they say, is because Islam was weak in Mecca and only became strong when the Muslims moved to Medina. Hypocrisy is a sign of the healthiness of Islam since had it not been strong, the hypocrites would have had no reason to pretend to be Muslims. So, the appearance of hypocrisy in Medina was a sign that Islam had become strong there and had become a force to be taken into account. So, those whose faith was weak and lacking became hypocrites and pretended to believe in order to partake of the good that Islam had brought and take advantage of the protection it provided. If that had not been the case, then there would have been no incentive for the weak (of faith) to become hypocrites. Yes, hypocrisy appeared in Medina, about whose inhabitants Allah the Almighty Himself says: ‘And [it shall be offered, too, unto the poor from among] those who, before them, had their abode in this realm and in faith – [those] who love all that come to them in search of refuge, and who harbour in their hearts no grudge for whatever the others may have been given, but rather give them preference over themselves, even though poverty be their own lot...’ (al-Hashr: 9); about whom Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Faith will draw back into Medina like a snake draws back into its lair.’(1)

It is also the Quran, however, that says about the people of Medina: ‘...and among the people of the [Prophet’s] City [too] there are such as have grown insolent in [their] hypocrisy...’ (at-Tawba: 101). But, by saying this, it is not saying that Medina is weak. On the contrary, this proclaimed the strength of Islam within it, since it had come to possess the level of power and might that made hypocrisy viable. Here Allah the Almighty says: ‘If the hypocrites…do not desist…’ (al-Ahzab: 60). As soon as you hear the words: ‘...not desist…’ (al-Ahzab: 60), you know that Allah the Almighty has made an oath by something and that this is the apodosis of His Oath clause. Allah the Almighty only makes an oath when the matter is of great importance. We, human beings, make oaths to place greater emphasis on what we want to say, such as when we say, ‘By Allah, if so-and-so does not do such-and-such, then I will do such-and-such.’ What Allah the Almighty says, however, is true and comes to pass without any oath, so how do you think it is when He does make an oath?! That is why some of the people of gnosis say when they hear Allah the Almighty make an oath, ‘Who is that who made the All-Generous so angry that He resorted to using an oath?’

The word munafiqun (...hypocrites...) is the plural of the word munafiq which is derived from root nafaqa’ of the jerboa. The jerboa is a small animal that resembles a mouse and lives in holes in the ground. The people of the desert know these animals well and hunt them by watching their holes and waiting for them to come out. However, these small animals have iniquitous and cunning minds. What is that they do? They construct two separate entrances to their holes; one well known and in the open and the other covered over by something. Then, when they feel the hunter's presence at that entrance, they hurry to the other. In this regard, they closely resemble the hypocrite who has the heart of an unbeliever and the tongue of a believer. You will notice that Allah the Almighty describes the hypocrites here in this verse with three different attributes: '…the hypocrites, the sick at heart, and those who spread lies in the city…' (al-Ahzab: 60), for the conjunction here, 'and', does not mean that those mentioned are three different groups. Rather, it is simply listing three different attributes of a single group.

(1) See Al-Bukhari, Sahih, Hadith no. 1876; and Muslim, Sahih, Hadith no. 147, in Kitab Al-’Iman, from a Hadith narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

These attributes are mentioned independently of one another because they were so clearly practiced amongst them that each one had almost come to represent its own separate group.(1) The Quran describes the hypocrites elsewhere as having a sickness in their hearts. Allah the Almighty says: 'And there are people who say, 'We do believe in Allah and the Last Day,' the while they do not [really] believe. [8] They would deceive Allah and those who have attained to faith – the while they deceive none but themselves, and perceive it not. [9] In their hearts is disease, and so Allah lets their disease increase; and grievous suffering awaits them because of their persistent lying. [10]' (al-Ahzab: 8-10) This indicates that the conjunction 'and' is being used to list a series of attributes for a single group, not a number of different groups. This is similar to how conjunction is used in Allah's words: 'And [it shall be offered, too, unto the poor from among] those who, before them, had their abode in this realm and in faith...' (al-Hashr: 9), for in this verse, both dar (realm) and 'iman (faith) are used to refer to Medina. The word murjifun '...they who, by spread 'If the hypocrites, the sick at heart, and those who spread lies in the city' (al-Ahzab: 60) is the plural of murjif, which is derived from irjaf meaning ‘the violent shaking that happens in an earthquake’. Allah the Almighty Himself uses this word when He says: ‘[Hence, think of] the Day when a violent convulsion will convulse [the world], [6] to be followed by further [convulsions]! [7]’ (an-Nazi‘at: 6-7) so, the murjifun are those who attempt to shake loose something that is stable and firmly rooted. The hypocrites are the same - whenever they see that Islam has become strong, they try to upset it and shake it loose in order to weaken it and bring about its end. These are those people whom we refer to in modern political speech as the ‘fifth column’. They are that group of people who spread rumours and falsehoods that undermine a nation’s solidarity and threaten its stability. The hypocrites often remained behind and said, ‘the tribe of so-and-so and the tribe of so-and-so have joined together in order to attack Medina and bring an end to Muhammad and the Message that he has brought.’ Their aim in spreading these rumours was to weaken the spirit of those Muslims who were new or weak. They even used this ploy against particular individuals. When they heard that someone was thinking about becoming Muslim or his heart was leaning towards it, they would come to him and say, ‘Do you not know that so-and-so was taken by his family - or taken by his master - and tortured until he died because he followed Muhammad?’ By such statements, they sought to turn people away from Allah’s Religion. So the murjif is the one who tries by means of lies and intrigue to turn the people of Truth away from that Truth, filling their ears with falsehoods and lies. That is why Allah the Almighty threatens them, saying, ‘If those hypocrites do not desist from spreading false rumours in Medina and trying to lead people astray, then they will have to answer to Us.’ This was at a time when the truce between the Muslims and the Jews and their followers from among the hypocrites was in effect, so it is as if Allah the Almighty is saying to them: ‘We said nothing of their crimes until Islam became strong and powerful. But Islam has now become strong and powerful, so if they break the contract they have made with us, we shall confront them.’ And it is an amazing thing that these murjifun thought that neither Allah nor His Messenger Muhammad knew of the lies they were spreading. He the Almighty says: ‘Or do they in whose hearts is disease think, perchance, that Allah would never bring their moral failings to light? [29] Now had We so willed, We could have shown them clearly to thee, so that you would know them for sure as by a visible mark: but [even so,] you will most certainly recognise them by the tone of their voice. And Allah knows all that you do, [O men;] [30]' (Muhammad: 29-30). The meaning of lahn al-qawl (tone of their voice) is twisting words so that they deviate from their meaning, such as when they greeted, him peace and blessings be upon him with as-samu 'alaykum, using the word sam (death) instead of the word salam (peace); or when they twisted the word ra'ina (look at us), saying instead ra'una (stupidity). Even stranger than that is what the Quran relates about them: '...and they say to themselves, 'Why does not Allah chastise us for what we are saying?' (al-Mujadala: 8)

---

(1) See Al-Qurtubi, Tafsir, 8/5513; Abu Razin said, 'They were one thing.' In other words, they had gathered together all of three of these attributes within themselves. It is also said that, among the hypocrites, there were some spread false rumours; some who followed women around in order to create doubts as to their chastity and some who tried to instill doubts into the hearts of the Muslims.

This statement of theirs indicates how stupid they truly are in two ways: firstly by the fact that they wish to be punished; and secondly by the fact that they say those words to themselves, not to other people and not even to one another. We know that, because 'they say' is in the plural and 'themselves' is in the plural, and so it is as if every one of them were saying those words to himself. So, how could a single one of them then not ask himself who it was who told Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him what they said to themselves in secret? Did that not prove that Muhammad had a direct connection to his Lord and that he would inevitably expose them and reveal the secrets concealed within their breasts? This shows the level of their stupidity. Anyone who studies the history of the Jews and hypocrites in Medina will find that Islam did not take them unawares, but rather made a pact with them, guaranteed their safety and security and gave them the space they needed to live their lives to the full, so long as they did not do harm to the Muslims. However, it reached Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that they were conferring secretly in wrongdoing and enmity, so he sent for them and forbade them from doing that. However, they went back to doing that a second time, as Allah the Almighty Himself relates about them: 'Are you not aware of such as have been forbidden [to intrigue through] secret confabulations, and yet [always] revert to that which they have been forbidden...' (al-Mujadala: 8). So, no course remained except to confront them, as the following lines of poetry by the poet(1) prescribe:

(1) The poet is Ibrahim ibn Al-'Abbas As-Suli, the most recognised writer in Iraq during the time that he lived. He was originally from Khorasan, but was brought up in Baghdad.=

Patience, but if it does not suffice, then follow it with a warning; and if that is not enough, then firm resolutions.(1)

That is why in the apodosis of the conditional clause: 'If the hypocrites, the sick at heart, and those who spread lies in the city do not desist, We shall rouse you [Prophet] against them…' (al-Ahzab: 60), Allah the Almighty says: '...We shall rouse you against them…' (al-Ahzab: 60). The verb in this apodosis nughriyann (give mastery) is derived from the word ighra', which is the name of an Arabic grammatical structure whose opposite is (attraction): it is to say something to make some act or matter beloved or attractive to the person you are addressing in order to make him do it, such as, for example, when you say to your son, 'Hard work! Hard work!'

As for warning, it is to scare someone away from some disagreeable matter in order to get them to steer clear of it, such as, for example, when you call out to them, 'Lion! Lion!' or say to them, 'Laziness! Laziness!' So the meaning of: '...We shall indeed give thee mastery over them, [O Muhammad]…' (al-Ahzab: 60) is 'We will give you power over them and make it desirable for you to confront and oppose them.' It is as if this act of confronting them had become something beloved and desirable, because it would serve as a means of paying them back for the fear and alarm that they had caused you. And while you have this mastery over them and possess strength and power coveted by others, they will never be able to remain in Medina with you. As for the saying of Allah, '...and then they will only be your neighbors in this city for a short while.' (al-Ahzab: 60), it refers to Medina. As for word qalil in the phrase: '...for a short while' (al-Ahzab: 60), it either refers to 'a few of them' or 'only a short period of time'. 'They will be rejected. Wherever they are found, they will be arrested and put to death.' (al-Ahzab: 61)

The mal'un (rejected one) is either one who is bereft of Allah's Mercy or who is exiled from Medina after their wicked innermost thoughts and intentions were revealed to all by Allah the Almighty. That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him expelled them from the Mosque, for, in their wickedness and iniquity, they had been attending the Mosque and even praying in the front row, thinking that it would keep their hypocrisy secret. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him however, would expel them by name, saying, 'So-and-so and So-and-so, get out of the mosque!'(1) He used to know them by name, and why should he not when Allah the Almighty said about him: 'Now had we so willed, We could have shown them clearly to you, so that you would know them for sure as by a visible mark...' (Muhammad: 30).

'...wherever they may be found...' (al-Ahzab: 61), i.e. 'they are found', '...they shall be arrested...' (al-Ahzab: 61), i.e. 'taken into captivity' '...and put to death' (al-Ahzab: 61) Here, we should note the exaggeration and emphasis in the phrase: '...and put to death...' (al-Ahzab: 61). In other words, kill them violently and do not let compassion get in the way of repaying them for the wrongs they have committed against Islam and the Muslims. (Kill them) because the nature of a hypocrite whose hypocrisy is innate has become so poisoned and polluted that it can never ever become pure again - hypocrisy is in their blood and constantly accompanies him wherever he goes. Indeed, their nature is such that it is inevitable that they will ultimately be expelled from any place in which they settle. Thus, although Allah the Almighty has split mankind up into different nations, He has placed every nation within its own land, giving them a level of internal cohesion such that they do not split into other societies and maintain their own identities. This means that they each have specific places and locations by which they are known. And in each of these countries, the quarter in which the Jews resided was well known, but it was inevitable that people would eventually come to realise their ignominy and shameful behaviour and so expel them or wipe them out. The last example of this was what took place in Germany. Allah the Almighty speaks truly when

And you, O So-and-so, get up!' Thereupon, their fellow Muslims got up and took charge of expelling them from the Mosque.' See also (Zad Al-Masir) of Ibn Al-Jawzi (3/492).*

He says about them: ‘And lo! Your Lord made it known that most certainly He would rouse against them, unto Resurrection Day, people who would afflict them with cruel suffering...’ (al-A‘raf: 167).

Then Allah the Almighty says:

سُنَّةَ ٱللَّهِ فِي ٱلَّذِينَ خَلَوۡاْ مِن قَبۡلُۖ وَلَن تَجِدَ لِسُنَّةِ ٱللَّهِ تَبۡدِيلٗا ﴿٦٢﴾

This has been God’s practice with those who went before.
You will find no change in God’s practices [62]
(The Quran, al-Ahzab: 62)

After Allah the Almighty explains how His enemies will meet their end by being slain and how His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him will be victorious, He makes it clear that this is not some new development in terms of how He deals with His Messengers, but, on the contrary, has been a Sunna (usual practice) that He has followed and repeated again and again throughout history. Look at the previous Messengers sent by Allah the Almighty - is there even one whom Allah the Almighty sent and then deserted or abandoned and gave His enemies the final victory over him? A Sunna is a way that someone follows and that corresponds to his nature, that he repeats time and again and that he never abandons. So, if something happens once or twice, it cannot be called a Sunna - it must be something that is of a continuous and repetitive nature. In this particular case, Sunna refers to truth overcoming falsehood: ‘...with those who went before…’ (al-Ahzab: 62) i.e. those who have passed away from previous nations, Allah’s Sunna of giving Truth victory over falsehood still stands, and it will continue to stand until the Final Hour is established. ‘...You will find no change in Allah’s practices.’ (al-Ahzab: 62) Yes, it will never be altered or changed in any way because this is Allah’s Sunna. It is Allah’s Sunna, and Allah the Almighty has no equal or partner who can change what He has caused to be, nor emend any judgement He has caused to pass. Then, after making this clear, Allah the Almighty wanted to let us know that the Way of Guidance brought by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from His Lord, containing His Commands and Prohibitions and the means for us to be rid of our enemies, must be respected since it will hand all of mankind over to another life where their reception will be totally dependent upon the actions that they have done; another life in which they will live with the One Who is the cause of all, not with secondary causes. So, beware of thinking that Allah the Almighty created you, and gave you your provision and the blessings and comforts you take for granted in this world, and that that is the end of the matter and that anyone who abandons His Way of Guidance will escape His Punishment. No, rather, you must always remember that it is to Him that you will return and that you will never slip from His Grasp.

Allah the Almighty then says:

يَسۡـَٔلُكَ ٱلنَّاسُ عَنِ ٱلسَّاعَةِۖ قُلۡ إِنَّمَا عِلۡمُهَا عِندَ ٱللَّهِۚ
وَمَا يُدۡرِيكَ لَعَلَّ ٱلسَّاعَةَ تَكُونُ قَرِيبًا ٦٣

People ask you about the Hour. Say, 'God alone has knowledge of it.' How could you [Prophet] know? The Hour may well be near[63] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 63)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was often asked about the Last Hour. Indeed, asking questions about matters about which we are held legally accountable is a healthy sign, since to ask such questions is a sign that someone believes in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him loves his religious duties and wants his life to be based on Islamic principles right from the start. Presupposing that Islam came upon certain practices that had been carried over from the time of ignorance before Islam and affirmed them, it is to be expected that people would come and ask what the position of Islam was concerning them, seeking by that to safeguard their religion and make sure they were doing the right thing. Allah the Almighty however, wanted to make matters easy for people, so He said: 'O you who have attained to faith! Do not ask about matters which, if they were to be made manifest to you [in terms of law], might cause you hardship...' (al-Ma'ida: 101). Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Leave me with what I have left to you, for those who came before you were only destroyed because of their excessive questioning of their prophets, and their opposition to them.'(1)

(1) See Ahmad, Musnad, 2/247; Muslim, Sahih, no. 1337, in Kitab Al-Hajj; and by Ibn Maja, Sunnan, no.2 in a Hadith from Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him. The actual wording of=

So, the type of question that is sought is that which is about matters that a Muslim is held responsible for, even when those matters had been carried over from the time of ignorance before Islam. And, indeed, there were many matters and practices from that time that Islam affirmed, such as blood money, for example, the payment of which pre-dated Islam, was practiced by the pre-Islamic Arabs, and was then confirmed by Islam. Allah the Almighty commands Muslims to ask about matters such as these when He says: '...and if you have not [yet] realised this, ask the followers of [earlier] revelation.' (an-Nahl: 43) As for asking about the Last Hour, the Last Hour is an unseen matter that only Allah the Almighty knows so there is no use in asking someone about it. That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied when he was asked when the Last Hour would be, 'What have you prepared for it?'(1) thus directing his questioner to the question he should have been asking and with which he should have concerned himself. This noble verse: 'People will ask you about the Last Hour...' (al-Ahzab: 63) came down after the battle in which the affront to Allah the Almighty His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and the believers took place. Those who instigated this affront were those who did not believe in Heaven, or in Allah or in the fact that a transmission had come down from Allah the Almighty to them through the medium of a Messenger.

The reality of the matter, however, was that their effrontery against Allah the Almighty did not harm Him the Almighty but merely harmed themselves since harm does not reach Him the Almighty. Allah the Almighty desires nothing but

= the Hadith is as follows: 'Leave me with what I have left to you, for those who came before you were only destroyed because of their excessive questioning of their Prophets, and their opposition to them. So when I command you to do something, do as much as remove as of it as you can, and when I forbid you to do something, stop doing it.'

(1) Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him narrated that a desert Arab said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'When will the Last Hour be?' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'What have you prepared for it?' The man said, 'Love of Allah and His Messenger.' So Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'You will be with those whom you love.' It is narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (2639); and by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (6167 & 6171). In the wording of the version narrated by Al-Bukhari, the man said, 'I have not prepared lots of prayers for it nor fasting or charity. But I love Allah and His Messenger,' so the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'You will be with those whom you love.'

good for them since they are His slaves and His creation. So when they abandon the program that He the Almighty has set up for them, they are harming none but themselves. As for their causing harm to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they caused harm to both his person and his family. They subjected him to the type of effrontery that any self-respecting human being would reject, attacking him both physically and verbally. But despite that, prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him bore it with patience and stoicism, as did his Companions against whose persons and property abuse had also been directed. Anyone who reflects upon this will find meaning and philosophical significance in this abuse, for it was something that Allah the Almighty Himself wanted in order to test the believers and find out - and Allah knows best - which of them were firm in their faith.

That is why Allah the Almighty says: ‘Do men think that on their [mere] saying, "We have attained to faith," they will be left to themselves, and will not be put to a test?’ (al-’Ankabut: 2) We have already previously made it clear that faith is not merely a phrase that is said. Rather, it is a responsibility that demands action. It is for that very reason that the disbelievers of Mecca refused to utter the words of faith - they were fully aware of their true significance because they were a people who understood the power and meaning of words. The unshakeable resolve and stoicism of prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the believers prove that they had compared the degree of harm that human beings with their limited capacities could cause them in this world and that which Allah the Almighty could cause them in the Hereafter. Since the degree of harm that Allah the Almighty could cause them in the Hereafter would be consistent with His power and capacity, it is not something from which anyone could possibly escape. So, we say that there was a wisdom and philosophical significance to the abuse since, Allah the Almighty could have seized the enemies of His religion with the seizing of One Who is Almighty, All-Powerful if He the Almighty had so wished, just like He the Almighty seized the people of Noah by means of the Flood, the people of Pharaoh by drowning them and Qarun by making the ground swallow him up. But, instead, Allah the Almighty wanted them to receive their punishment at the hands of His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the believers. Indeed, if a general punishment had come down upon them, they would probably have said that it was simply a natural disaster like earthquakes and volcanoes. That is why Allah the Almighty says, addressing the believers: ‘Fight against them! Allah will chastise them by your hands, and will bring disgrace upon them, and will succour you against them...’ (at-Tawba: 14). Then Allah the Almighty comforts and consoles His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with the words: ‘...And whether We show you [in this world] something of what we hold in store for those [deniers of the truth], or whether We cause you to die [before that retribution takes place – know that, in the end], it is unto Us that they will be brought back.’ (Ghafir: 77) Thus, there are two ways in which Allah the Almighty responds to this abuse: one in this world by giving His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him victory over them, like when He the Almighty says to him: ‘[Yet] the hosts [of those who deny the truth] shall be routed, and they shall turn their backs [in flight]!’ (al-Qamar: 45); and one in the Hereafter on the Day of Rising. That is why He the Almighty says: ‘People will ask you about the Last Hour...’ (al-Ahzab: 63). The question which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was asked was directed towards two matters, the first of which was in order to show him up and give him something that he would find impossible to answer. There were certain matters which the Jews knew about from their own books and prophets, so they wanted to embarrass prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by asking him questions about them, thinking that he would be unable to respond because he was illiterate, having never learnt to read or write, and had never received instruction from any teacher. However, Allah the Almighty helped His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and taught him the answer. Then, when he answered their questions correctly, they would be overcome with fury and try to pick holes in his answer in order to prove to themselves that Prophet Muhammad did not really know the answer. An example of this was the question they asked about the People of the Cave when they asked him how long they had remained there. Allah the Almighty replied to them by saying: ‘And, ‘They remained in their cave three hundred years’; and some have added nine [to that number]!’ (al-Kahf: 25)

They replied, ‘According to what we know, they remained there for three hundred years, so where do you get those extra years from?’ But they were ignorant of the fact that divine rituals in religion are always measured according to the lunar calendar and not according to the movements of the sun. This is because the sun can only tell us when days begin and end, not when months begin and end. As for the Arab lunar calendar, it does have a sign that distinguishes the months from each other and that is the appearance of the new moon at the start of each month. If you were to compare the lunar year to the Christian solar year, you would find the lunar year to be shorter than the solar year by eleven days. Therefore, three hundred Christian years is the equivalent of three hundred and nine Muslim lunar years. It is as if they wanted to show Muhammad to be ignorant, so Allah the Almighty showed them that they were the ignorant ones. And it is amazing that the Jews would object to this method of reckoning time, since it was the very same method of measuring time that was used by Moses Allah’s peace be upon him in worshipping his Lord. Did Allah the Almighty Himself not say: ‘and [then] we appointed for Moses thirty nights [on Mount Sinai]; and we added to them ten, whereby the term of forty nights set by his Sustainer was fulfilled...’ (al-A‘raf: 142)?

Allah’s words: ‘...and some have added nine [to that number]’ (al-Kahf: 25) are eloquent and miraculous in terms of the way they are expressed since they indicate that the extra nine years came about from within the three hundred years and are not outside of them. Then they asked him about a man who wandered the earth, so Allah the Almighty sent down the words: ‘And they will ask you about The Two-Horned One...’ (al-Kahf: 83). That should have been enough to show them the truthfulness of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and make them ask themselves how he could possibly know such things when he was illiterate and had never received instruction from any teacher. That is why we say that, although it is a defect for any human being to be illiterate, it was a mark of honour and distinction with respect to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him since it proved their accusations that a human being had instructed him to be false. Rather, it was his Lord who instructed him.

In the same way, the community to whom the Quran was revealed was also illiterate. This fact was also a mark of honour with respect to them, if their community had been noted for its culture and learning, people would have said that Islam was simply an example of them taking their civilisation to the next level. But the fact is that they were an illiterate people governed by means of a tribal system whereby each individual tribe had its own structure and laws and its own leader. But despite that, a person came from amongst those people with a universal system of governance that was suitable for administrating the entire world from then until the end of time. And that is not possible without a Divine Way of Guidance. So, with respect to the Arabs, illiteracy was a mark of honour. Another mark of honour was their inability to imitate the Quran or produce anything like it, since the fact that Allah the Almighty challenged them with the literary style of the Quran proves how great they were when it came to using language - one does not challenge one who is weak in something, one only challenges those who are strong and proficient. So, the fact that Allah the Almighty challenged the Arabs to do this bears witness to the fact that they were the most eloquent of creation and the most skilled in the use of language. So the miracle that was sent to them was in that field in which they were unsurpassed.

Then the Jews asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about the Last Hour: ‘People will ask thee about the Last Hour...’ (al-Ahzab: 63). When it says that they asked about the Last Hour, it means that they asked about the Day of Rising, since they denied its occurrence. Indeed, it was in their own best interests that such a day never comes since, on it, they would be questioned and taken to task for the crimes that they perpetrated in this world, including tyranny, associating others with Allah the Almighty, quarrelsomeness, slander, and spilling the blood of others. If these people were to look at matter of the resurrection and reckoning with their intellects - not with Quranic texts - they would discover that it is something that is completely logical and that will inevitably come to pass. Take us, for example: we were contemporaries of the rise of the Communist Party in Russia in 1917 and saw how they seized the feudal lords and capitalists in their country and punished them, doing terrible things to them and confiscating their possessions and holdings as a repayment for the injustice that they had visited upon the people. To these communists we used to say, ‘It is indeed logical to seek retribution from those who have oppressed you, but what about all those other tyrants and oppressors who died before your time or slipped from your grasp because you were unable to get to them in time? By Allah, if some people were to come to you and lead you to the place where one of these tyrants was living, would you not praise him and thank him for his help? So how about if he were to say to you that he would fetch the tyrant himself, then take him to task and exact vengeance upon him? Would that not be of help to you in your task of taking revenge upon the tyrants and oppressors?' That is why we say, 'Communists should be the first people to believe in the Day of Rising, the Resurrection, and the Reckoning, since on that day they can set matters right and get recompense from those who slipped from their grasp.' Another thing - do you not, whatever legislative system you follow, strive to create systematised and organised laws? What are laws but sets of rules that define for citizens what it is they can and cannot do? Do these laws of yours not contain the principle of rewarding those who do right and punishing those who fall short? It is inevitable in every society that there will be people who operate outside the system and so deserve to be punished. But what will the punishment be for those who, despite the extent of their corruption and tyranny, are able to deceive the entire society and conceal their crime?

Therefore, we must believe that there is another power from whom nobody can hide, whom nobody can deceive and from whom nobody can flee; a power that knows people's secret crimes, exposes them and calls them to account for them. This inevitably and naturally drives you to believe in Allah the Almighty as well as in the fact that He the Almighty is All-Aware and All Knowing: '...and not a leaf falls but He knows it; and neither is there a grain in the earth's deep darkness, nor anything living or dead, but is recorded in...' (al-An'am: 59).

Why do you deny that the Rising will occur when your own earthly organisations and governments enlist spies and intelligence operatives and listen in to the hushed whispers of the people in order to find out who is trying to operate unnoticed by the law? Is it not an example of Allah's bounteous grace that He the Almighty knows what is kept hidden from you and retaliates against your opponents on your behalf? It is natural and instinctive for man to believe in the Rising and Reckoning which is why you find those who deny them are those who have transgressed against themselves and fear the punishment that awaits them on that day. So, the only thing left for them is to deny it and refuse to acknowledge its occurrence. For them, it is as if fleeing from it solves the problem. The chapter of al-Kahf (the cave) provides us with a good example of one of these people, and that is the companion of the garden who said: ‘And neither do I think that the Last Hour will ever come...’ (al-Kahf: 36), after having transgressed against himself and been ungrateful for the blessings that Allah the Almighty had given him, And then when he came to and came back to his nature, he said: ‘...But even if [it should come, and] I am brought before my Sustainer, I will surely find something even better than this as [my last] resort!’ (al-Kahf: 36) Because his instinct to reject was more dominant, he used an expression of doubt when he said: ‘...But even if [it should come, and] I am brought before my Sustainer...’ (al-Kahf: 36). In other words, ‘And even supposing that I am brought before my Lord on the Day of Rising, He will have something in store for me there that is better than what he gave me in this world, for just as He honoured in this world, He will also honour me there.’

This is, however, a wrong-sighted and foolish belief, since Allah the Almighty only honours in the Hereafter those who honour themselves in this world by following the Divine Program He the Almighty has set up for them. Those who do not honour themselves by following Allah’s Divine Program here will never be honoured by Him there. We often hear people say, ‘I make my supplication, but Allah did not answer me’, especially women. One time, a woman came to me, complaining that she had turned in supplication to Allah the Almighty and yet, despite that, her daughter had not married, her son had not got such-and-such and her husband had not got such-and-such. So I said to her, ‘Lots of good things have come to you. Firstly, you have the knowledge that you have a Lord with whom you can take refuge in times of hardship, unlike those about whom Allah the Almighty says: ‘yet when the misfortune decreed by us befell them, they did not humble themselves...’ (al-An‘am: 43). Let me ask you something: did you first answer Allah the Almighty with regard to the things He the Almighty asked of you, so that now you are in a position to expect Him to answer you with regard to the things you ask of Him? Did you answer Allah the Almighty with regard to this hair of yours? Did you answer Him with regard to your see-through clothes and the way you have changed Allah’s creation?’ The only response that she had to this was to say, ‘By Allah, my heart is pure and I harm no one...etc.' So, you take Allah the Almighty to task for not answering you when you supplicate to Him, but do not take yourselves to task for not answering Him when He the Almighty calls on you, despite the fact that He the Almighty called on you first. If you first strive to answer Allah's call to you, then you can be confident that He the Almighty will answer your call to Him. Now, let us return to the topic at hand, which was our discussion of the question that was related in the Noble Quran. By asking about the Last Hour, the questioner either wants to gain certainty that it is going to happen or thinks that it is taking too long to come, and wants it to happen now. Questions appear often in the Book of Allah the Almighty and the reason for that is because the Quran was not revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in one go. No, rather, it was revealed in instalments according to the events that unfolded around him in order to give people the opportunity to ask questions about them. And these questions either came about as a challenge to prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him or a request for more information about the rulings which Allah the Almighty had sent down to His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Such latter form of question came from those who were passionate in their belief and wanted every movement they made in life to be based completely upon the guidance their faith brought them. These people even ask about matters whose roots stretched back into the time of ignorance before Islam. Why did they ask when these actions had been affirmed by Islam? Because they wanted the actions upon which their lives were built to be based on worship, not pre-Islamic custom. When dealing with questions such as these, the Quran says on one occasion: 'And they will ask you about [woman's] monthly courses. Say: 'It is an impurity...' (al-Baqara: 222). So, when prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was asked this question, he did not say, 'It is a vulnerable condition' because he was not the one giving the answer, he was merely passing on a message from Allah the Almighty for it was Allah the Almighty who had said those words. So Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, '...Say: 'It is an impurity...'(al-Baqara: 222). The word qul (Say) is part of what Allah the Almighty said to me, and I am transmitting what He the Almighty said, word for word, exactly the same as He the Almighty said it to me.

Amazingly, some people call for the omission of the word ‘say’ from the Quran on the basis that it adds nothing new to the meaning. In fact, this word in question proves the truthfulness of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the fact that what he brought was divine and not out of him. He is no more than a conveyor of Allah’s Message. Allah orders him to ‘say’ and he conveyed it exactly as it was. For example, Allah says, ‘And they ask you as to what they should spend. Say, “What you can spare.”’ (al-Baqara: 219) Allah the Almighty also says elsewhere: ‘They ask you as to what they should spend. Say, “Whatever wealth you spend, it is for the parents and the near of kin.”’ (al-Baqara: 215)

However, the Arabic word for ‘say’ sometimes appears in the Quran linked to the conjunction fa and sometimes not. Why is that? This is one of the miraculous features of the linguistic construction of the Quran. Whenever it is used directly without the conjunction, it indicates that the question has already been asked such as the question in the verse that reads: ‘They ask you concerning the new moon. Say, “They are times appointed for [the benefit of] men and [for] the pilgrimage.”’ (al-Baqara: 189) While when it is linked to the conjunction, it indicates that the question had not been asked yet but would be asked in the future, as in the saying of Allah the Almighty: ‘And they ask you about the mountains. Say, “My Lord will carry them away from the roots.”’ (Ta Ha: 105) Thus, it means when they ask you in the future about the mountains, say, O Prophet Muhammad, ‘My Lord will carry them away from the roots’. The answer was prepared in advance for a question that would inevitably be asked by them. Such is another instance of the miraculous nature of the Noble Quran as they could have abstained from asking that question. However, no way anyone can contradict the Speech of Allah or His Knowledge!

Since Allah says that they will say it, they will most definitely say it. Similarly, is the case we made very clear when we discussed the verse that reads: ‘Perdition overtake both hands of Abu Lahab and he will perish. His wealth and what he earns will not avail him. He shall soon burn in fire that flames and his wife, the bearer of fuel, upon her neck a halter of strongly twisted rope.’ (al-Masad: 1-5) Allah decreed that this stubborn disbeliever would die as a disbeliever and that he and his wife would end up in the Hellfire. Abu Lahab and his wife heard these verses and knew that they were true. Yet, they did not believe, not even hypocritically, while others whose disbelief and stubborn rejection of Allah were even stronger such as `Amr ibn Al-`As and Khalid ibnul Walid, among many others, did believe in Allah.

That is because the One Who passed that judgement and informed us that Abu Lahab would never believe, knew that he would meet his end in that state, no matter how often he was warned. Abu Lahab was a striking example of the inanity of disbelievers for if he were to have gone to one of the assemblies of Quraysh after the revelation of those verses and announced his acceptance of the religion of Islam; he would have embarrassed the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and proved the falsehood of the Quran. Nevertheless, he did not and would never do it despite that he was a human being with free will.

Moreover, there is only one verse in the Quran where the answer for the question appears without being preceded by the word 'say', whether linked to the conjunction or not. That verse reads: 'And when My servants ask you concerning Me, then surely I am very near.' (al-Baqara: 186) Why is that? Scholars observed that the question here is related to Allah and thereby He answers it directly with no intermediary. The question was about something which was near and directly connected to you, thus the answer is also direct and immediate.

Before, we mentioned the aspects of the words relating to what they ask you. Next comes the Hour, about which they asked. The Arabic word for the Hour is the same as a clock (a well-known instrument) which tells the time during the day or night, equally for there is no hour longer than another. The clock or sundial that the Arabs invented was a repeater clock using water. It was a tank from which drops of water were dripping. Every drop of water that fell would cause the hands of the clock to make an equal move. The reason a clock used the same word as hour was because the hour was the shortest division of time for day and night known of at that time. It was only after that that we came to know of the minute, the second, and the milliseconds.

The Arabs in particular, were so keen to calculate time, thus thought of creating an instrument to measure it because Islam is based entirely around acts of worship with prescribed times during which they must be performed. Hence, they invent the clock. Therefore, it seems that Allah, by calling the Day of Judgement an Hour, is using the nature of human beings; He is saying that the Hour that you are waiting for is like that instrument of measuring the times that make up the movements of your lives. That is why Shawqi Allah rest his soul said:

Every heartbeat that a man has is telling him
That life is minutes and seconds

Allah Glorified is He refers to both the technical hour and the Hour saying: ‘And at the time when the hour shall come, the guilty shall swear [that] they did not tarry but an hour.’ (ar-Rum: 55) Thus, Allah brings together the Hour that refers to the Day of Judgement and the hour that is part of our days and nights. Thus, the meaning of the verse under discussing is that people will ask whether the Day of Judgement exists or not. However, when you tell them it does exist, they will say, ‘Then bring to us what you threaten us with, if you are of the truthful ones.’ (al-A‘raf: 70)

Allah mentions the inquiry of people about the Last Hour twice in the Quran. The first one occurs in the verse we are discussing, while the second is in the chapter of ash-Shura where Allah says, ‘Allah it is who revealed the Book with truth, and the balance, and what shall make you know that haply the hour be near?’ (ash-Shura: 17) We first notice that the Arabic word for near is not in the feminine form even though the word Hour is feminine. The scholars said that the reason for this is that it refers to the time when the Hour will occur and the word for time is masculine. Thus, the meaning of the verse is, ‘And what shall make you know that haply the hour be near’. Some of the grammarians say that the Arabic word for near has the morphological form fa`il which remains the same regardless of whether it is in the masculine or feminine as in verse where Allah says, ‘and the angels after that are the aiders’ (at-Tahrim: 4).

We notice that in the first verse, Allah adds the verb ‘to be’ in the first verse, whereas, in the second verse, He omits it. Why is this? Scholars say that is because there are two types of questions that were asked about the Last Hour, one about whether it existed or not and the other about a secondary matter that followed on from the fact that it did exist.

In our grammar lessons, we teach our students about (kana) and her sister verbs. Grammatically speaking, kana is a defective past tense verb that puts the predicate in the nominative case and the object in the accusative case. However, it can sometimes be used as an intransitive complete verb, making do with its subject, as in the verse: ‘And if [the debtor] is in hardship’ (al-Baqara: 280). Thus, Allah replies in these two verses to those who asked questions about the Last Hour, either because they denied its existence or because they believed in it but wanted to know when it was going to come.

As for the statement: ‘what shall make you know’ (ash-Shura: 17), it means who informed you of such-and-such a time as you ask someone; ‘did you know of something’?

In ‘Ilm al-Usul (the science of the principles of Islamic Jurisprudence), they divide knowledge into two types: ‘ilm al-diraya (the science of comprehending the text of Hadith), and ‘ilm al-riwaya (science of the narration of prophetic tradition). Ilm al-riwaya is like the one who memorises the Noble Quran in all its seven, ten, or fourteen variant readings, without knowing the meanings of its verses. This is because He, only, has the knowledge of the Quran, at the level of riwaya. As for the one who specialises in the commentary of the Quran and understanding its rulings and meanings, his knowledge is called knowledge of diraya. From this, we can say that diraya is: knowing something in a detailed way, while riwaya is: knowing something in a general way

It is due to Allah’s wisdom that those who have memorised the Noble Quran are — except in a few cases — not themselves scholars; for when scholars fail to remember a word while reciting the Quran, they are often driven by their learning to insert another word with a similar meaning, such as, for example, replacing tabayyanu (check it) with tathabbatu(1) (verify it); whereas those who have memorised the Quran by riwaya alone, when confronted by the same situation, will not recite beyond that point until they remember the word they have forgotten. It is by this that Allah Glorified is He preserves His Words.

(1) Allah Glorified is He says: ‘(Hence,) O you who have attained to faith, when you go forth (to war) in Allah's Cause, use your discernment...’ (an-Nisa’: 94).

One thing we notice about this word (diraya) is that sometimes it comes in the present tense, as in: wa ma yudrika '...How do you know?' (ash-Shura: 17), and sometimes it comes in the past tense, as in: wa ma adraka 'what made you know...' (al-Mursalat: 14). Each of these two usages has its own special significance: when Allah Glorified is He says: '...How do you know?...' (ash-Shura: 17), it means that there is no way that anyone could ever tell you about this matter, not now and not in the future; whereas when Allah Glorified is He says: 'what made you know...' (al-Mursalat: 14), it indicates that it was not possible for anyone to tell you about this matter before, but it is possible for Us to tell you about it now.

Examples of this (wa ma adraka) include Allah's words: 'And what makes you know what Saqar [scorching Fire] is? It spares nothing and leaves nothing.' (al-Muddaththir: 26-28) He also says: 'And what made you know what the Day of Judgement is? Woe, that Day, to the deniers.' (al-Mursalat: 14-15) He also says: 'The Inevitable Hour. What is the Inevitable Hour? And what made you know what the Inevitable Reality is?' (al-Haqqa: 1-4) He also says: 'The Striking Calamity. What is the Striking Calamity? And what could make you know what the Striking Calamity is?' (al-Qari`a: 1-4) He also says: 'But he has not broken through the difficult pass. And what could make you know what [breaking through] the difficult pass is? It is the freeing of a slave. Or feeding on a day of severe hunger.' (al-Balad: 11-14)

He also says: 'But as for one whose scales are light, his refuge will be an abyss. And what could make you know what that is? It is a Fire, intensely hot.' (al-Qari`a: 8-11) He also says: 'and what made you know what the Day of Recompense is? Then, what made you know what the Day of Recompense is? It is the Day when a soul will not possess for another soul [power to do] a thing; and the command, that Day, is [entirely] with Allah.' (al-Infitar: 17-19) He also says: 'Indeed, We sent the Quran down during the Night of Decree. And what made you know what the Night of Decree is? The Night of Decree is better than a thousand months.' (al-Qadr: 1-3)

So, every time the phrase, 'And what made you know...' is used, it means that you did not know about it before, but Allah Glorified is He will tell you about it now or in the future. As for wa ma yudrika: '...How would you know?' (al-Ahzab: 63), it means that the matter under discussion is unknown and will remain unknown since Allah Glorified is He is not going to tell you about it. The timing of the Last Hour falls under this category: 'How would you [Prophet] know? The Hour may well be near.' (al-Ahzab: 63)

The True Lord did not inform us of its time because, sometimes, things can be more clearly shown by being left concealed. Allah Glorified is He, for example, keeps the time of our death secret from us, so, no human being knows when he will die. This concealment makes us expect it in every moment of our lives, and that makes death all the more real for us.

In the same way, Allah Glorified is He hides laylatu al-Qadr (the Night of Decree) among the final ten nights of Ramadan because He does not want you to simply to strive to worship Him on a single night, but wants you to strive to worship throughout those ten nights so that your reward is increased and so that you come to love worship for its sake and not simply for the reward that it brings.

Similarly, Allah Glorified is He has hidden the timing of the Last Hour from us so that we may be in a state of constant expectation, awaiting it at every moment. Such a state is more conducive towards going straight and fearing to commit acts of disobedience since, for all you know, the Last Hour might come when you are engaged in an act of disobedience to Allah Glorified is He. So, it is precisely by keeping it obscure that it is made manifest.

It is one of the aims of the True Lord to make sure that rulings apply at all times since, if man were to know when his appointed time is, he would be on the loose (make his way through life without restraint): he would do whatever bad things he want to do and then repent just before he dies. That is the reason why Allah Glorified is He does not make death have a cause. So, when someone dies without a cause, you say that he died because he was dying. He spoke truly who said, 'When death comes without any cause, it is the cause.'

May Allah have mercy on Shawqi for what he wrote about death when he said:

> When it comes to death and what causes it, man is powerless
> For he is held hostage by the contents of his book
> By your life, the one who dies by the claws of a lion

Is the same, at the moment of death, as he who dies by its fangs
If death overlooks you, then every medicine will be of benefit,
But if it does not, then medicine will be one of its helpers.

How often do we see sick people die because of an injection that they are given by the doctor to cure them or because their operation was unsuccessful. A poet spoke truly when he said:

Glory be to the one who inherits doctors and their medicine
And shows the patient death at the hands of his doctors

Despite this, Allah Glorified is He, due to His kindness and mercy, has given us signs that tell us when it is coming; both minor signs and major signs. That is why the True Lord says about the Last Hour: 'The Hour is coming, though I almost keep it hidden...' (Ta Ha: 15). That is, 'I have almost removed its hiddenness by the minor and major signs I have given of its coming, for it is close at hand.' We said, before, that the hamza in ukhfiha is a hamza of removal .i.e., remove its hiddenness. It is very much like the hamza in a'jama (obscurity), for you say a'jama al-kitab' .i.e. he removed the obscurity and ambiguity of the book by putting in the diacritic dots on the letters. It is for that reason that books that clarify the meanings of words are known as ma'ajim (lexicons). This meaning of removal can also be added to a verb by doubling its middle radical, as in qashshartu al-burtuqala meaning, I removed the qishra (peel) of (the orange).

As for: '...How would you know?...' (ash-Shura: 17), it means, 'No one will tell you about it nor will I'. In the same way that the True Lord withheld the knowledge of the Final Hour from creation, He also withheld it from His beloved Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. If He were to have told anyone about the Last Hour, He would have told His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him even if that meant telling Him in secret without him then conveying it to others, but this never happened. This is why when the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was asked about the Last Hour, He peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'The one who is asked (he himself) knows no more about it than the one who asks.'(1)

(1) It is narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih 50; and by Muslim in his Sahih 10 in Kitab Al-'Iman in a Hadith from Abu Hurayra that among what Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him said=

Then, the True Lord says:

إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَعَنَ ٱلْكَٰفِرِينَ وَأَعَدَّ لَهُمْ سَعِيرًا ﴿٦٤﴾
خَٰلِدِينَ فِيهَآ أَبَدًا ۖ لَّا يَجِدُونَ وَلِيًّا وَلَا نَصِيرًا ﴿٦٥﴾

God has rejected the disbelievers and prepared a blazing fire for them [64] There they will stay permanently, with no one to befriend or support them [65] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 64-65)

By la'ana the unbelievers, means that He has removed them out of His mercy and sent them far way in this world '...and prepared a blazing fire for them.' (al-Ahzab: 64) That is, it is a fire that flares up, blazes and burns fiercely. This is what happens to them in the Hereafter on that day about which Allah Glorified is He says: 'We shall say to Hell on that day, 'Are you full?' and it will reply, 'Are there no more?'' (Qaf: 30)

This blazing fire will remain forever, never going out, and '…There they will stay permanently...' (al-Ahzab: 65). We have heard some scholars say about the word abada (eternally or permanently), that it is mentioned in every verse that talks about the delights of paradise but never mentioned in reference to the punishment of the unbelievers on the Day of Rising. However, those who say this cannot have read the Quran thoroughly, for the phrase: '…There they will stay permanently...' (al-Ahzab: 65), containing the word abada (permanently), is mentioned twice with reference to the unbelievers: the first time, here in this verse which we are currently discussing; and the second time in the chapter of al-Jinn when Allah Glorified is He says: '...Whoever disobeys Allah and His Messenger will have hell's fire as his permanent home.' (al-Jinn: 23)

The fact that Allah Glorified is He mentions the word abada in every single verse that refers to the delights of paradise but only twice when the verse refers to the people of hellfire is one of the ways that His Mercy to His slaves

= to the Messenger of Allah Glorified is He peace and blessings be upon him when he had taken on the form of man was, 'Messenger of Allah Glorified is He, when will the Last Hour arrive?' The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'The one who is asked knows no more about it than the one who asks.'

manifests itself, since it shows that His mercy precedes His anger, thus emphasising to the believers that the delights of paradise will abide forever. By contrast, when He refers to the recompense of the disbelievers, He says khalidin fiha (timelessly in it) without using the word abada, (permanently). Perhaps the reason He does that is to soften the hearts of those disbelievers so that they might incline to the Path of Allah Glorified is He Who was merciful to them.

In these two verses, He only mentions the word abada, (permanently) to establish the principle. It is part of Allah's mercy to us that He gives the good news first and then gives the warning as gently as possible. This divine act of wisdom is purposeful and has often borne considerable fruit since it was a doorway through which many disbelievers embraced the faith and became believers. We previously mentioned the story (1) of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and the guest who came and knocked on his door. When Ibrahim peace be upon him asked him about his religion and discovered that he was not a believer, he shut the door in his face, and the man went on his way. However, Allah Glorified is He straightaway criticised His Prophet, Ibrahim peace be upon him for doing so and said to him, 'Ibrahim! I have given him what he needs from my kingdom for his entire life despite the fact that he disbelieved in Me, so do you want him to change his religion for one single night of your hospitality?' Consequently, Ibrahim peace be upon him hurried after the man until he caught him up and invited him to come back and enjoy his hospitality, so the man said, 'Did you not just deny me your hospitality a short while ago?' Ibrahim peace be upon him replied, 'Yes, but my Lord reproached me for what I had done to you.' When he heard that, the man said, 'What an excellent Lord! A Lord who reproaches His pious worshippers on behalf of His enemies! I bear witness that there is no deity but Allah and that you are the Messenger of Allah.'

The disbelievers' permanent stay in hellfire will be '...with no one to befriend or support them.' (al-Ahzab: 65), i.e. no possessor (other than Allah) who would take care of them, '...or support them.' (al-Ahzab: 65) That is, there will be none to help or defend them.

(1) The story of the guest of Ibrahim peace be upon him with his disbelieving guest

Then, the True Lord says:

يَوْمَ تُقَلَّبُ وُجُوهُهُمْ فِي ٱلنَّارِ يَقُولُونَ يَٰلَيْتَنَآ أَطَعْنَا ٱللَّهَ وَأَطَعْنَا ٱلرَّسُولَا۠ ﴿٦٦﴾

On the Day when their faces are being turned about in the Fire, they will say, ‘If only we had obeyed God and the Messenger’ [66] (The Quran, al-Ahẓab: 66)

After mentioning the eternity that the unbelievers would spend in the Hellfire, the True Lord, then, provides a description of the state they will be in when they are there, saying: ‘‘On the Day when their faces are being turned about in the Fire...’ (al-Ahzab: 66). Tuqlabu is the verb, while taqlib is the noun which means changing something from one state to another. Another example of its usage is found in Allah’s words: ‘[Prophet], do not be deceived by the disbelievers’ [lucrative] trading to and fro in the land: this is only a brief enjoyment, after which Hell will be their home—a miserable resting place!’ (Al-‘Imran: 196-197) That is, the trips they used to make between Syria and Yemen, the trade they used to conduct on those trips and the wealth they accumulated on account of that trade.

As for Allah’s words, ‘On the Day when their faces are being turned about in the Fire...’ (al-Ahzab: 66), they mean when the angels turn them over. So, every time one side of their bodies is fully cooked, they turn them on to their other side, just as we do when we are cooking a kebab skewer over the fire in order to ensure that every part of the kebab is cooked.

The reason that the face is specifically mentioned is because it is the noblest part of the body by which a person is identified. Indeed, both wajahah (Honour) and wajih (Honourable), which are two words indicating nobility and honour, are derived from wajh, the Arabic word for face. Being the noblest part of the body, all the other parts of the body protect and defend it. We previously posed the following hypothetical question: if a car were to speed past you and spray your face and clothes with mud, what would you do? You would first turn your attention to your face and remove the muck that had landed there and then you would move on to your clothes.

To understand the important position that the face occupies, you should read Allah’s words: ‘What about the one who will only have his bare face to protect him from his terrible suffering on the Day of Resurrection?…' (az-Zumar: 24). The punishment that he will be subjected to will be so severe that he even uses the noblest part of his body, his face, as a shield to protect him from it.

Taqlib could also mean being moved from one punishment to another. The True Lord paints numerous pictures for us of how the faces of the unbelievers will be when they are in the Hellfire, may Allah Glorified is He protect us from that. In one place, He says: 'On the Day of Resurrection, you [Prophet] will see those who told lies against God, their faces darkened…' (az-Zumar: 60). In another, He says: 'and on that Day there will be the sad and despairing faces* of those who realize that a great calamity is about to befall them.' (al-Qiyama: 24-25)

Thus, the face does not take on a single form in the hellfire, but takes on many different forms and appears in many different states, indicating the many different forms of punishment and pain to which they will be subjected. The face is the primary guide to identify a person and what is going on inside of him. So, for example, when a companion of yours changes towards you, you notice that in his face and ask him: 'what are you turning your face away from me?' Those disbelievers say — while they are being overturned and tossed into the fire: '…"If only we had obeyed Allah and the Messenger."' (al-Ahzab: 66) It was those same people who, yesterday, had been giving affront to Allah Glorified is He, His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and the believers.

As for the word yalaytana (derived from layt) in: '…If only we had...' (al-Ahzab: 66), it is used to indicate wishful thinking: a wish the self wants and fixates itself upon even though it is highly unlikely to ever come about. In fact, generally speaking, it is used to indicate that which is impossible, just as the poet once said:

> If only that youth could return one day
> And be told what old age had done.

And also in the verse of another:

> If only the planets could be brought close to me so I could arrange them
> Into necklaces in your honour since my words alone do not gratify you.

One's youth never returns nor are the planets brought close to anyone. These are merely things for which the selves wish. It is exactly the same for the disbelievers who wish, in the Hereafter, that they had obeyed Allah and obeyed His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. There is no way that those wishes will be of any avail, since the time for doing that will have already passed.

Then, the True Lord mentions their counter argument as to why they did not obey Allah Glorified is He and they did not obey His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when He says:

رَبَّنَآ ءَاتِهِمۡ ضِعۡفَيۡنِ مِنَ ٱلۡعَذَابِ وَٱلۡعَنۡهُمۡ لَعۡنٗا كَبِيرٗا ٦٨

And 'Lord! We obeyed our masters and our chiefs, and they led us astray [67] Lord! Give them a double punishment and reject them completely' [68] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 67 - 68)

Sadah is the plural of sayyid: a leader of others whose orders are obeyed and are changed by no one. As for kubara'a, they are those who take on positions of authority among their people according to how great the service that they do for them is. Masters and chiefs do not occupy such positions for nothing, but rather attain them because of the gifts and capabilities within them that make them worthy of such positions. That is why people have no objection to addressing them with the words, 'My master.' They have paid the price for their leadership and so they are the true leaders and masters.

Leadership can also be taken by force and the might of arms, without the leader presenting anything that makes him worthy of leading his people. This is a usurpation of leadership and people hate it. Therefore, Islamic Law does not disregard true leadership or the nobility and status that certain people occupy in society, but considers that to have monetary value in what can be called 'Faces Company', in which each partner's capital is not his money, but rather his honour, his position in society and the love and respect that people have for him.

People love this true leadership where the leadership is taken by right because they love to reap its benefits. The same is not true with stolen leadership where the leadership has been taken by force. The people derive no benefit from it whatsoever. On the contrary, it brings them harm and consumes their possessions and resources.

For this reason, slave-hood is a concept that we despise when it refers to the enslavement of one man to another because slave-hood gives the good of the slave to his master. By contrast, all pride lies in slave-hood being for Allah Glorified is He, whereby the slave takes good from his Master.

Reflect on how Allah Glorified is He made slave-hood to Him a mark of nobility for our master, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and a means of honouring, when He addresses him, saying: ‘Glory to Him who made His servant travel by night from the sacred place of worship to the furthest place of worship…’ (al-Isra’: 1) So, Muhammad’s slave-hood to Allah Glorified is He was what allowed him to reach a station with his Lord that no other human being had ever managed to reach. The poet(1) spoke truly when he said:

It is sufficient pride for me that I am a slave
Welcomed without need for appointments, by his Lord
He, in His sanctity, is the Most Mighty,
But I meet with Him whenever and wherever I wish!

If you want to meet your Lord, the matter is in your hands, for it is you who specifies the time and place of the meeting: whether in the street or at home; whether at work or in the mosque. The only thing you have to do is perform wudu’ and say Allahu akbar (Allah is the Greatest), and you are at once in the Presence of your Lord. Then, it is you who brings the meeting to an end if you want to, for your Lord does not become tired of your company until you become tired of His. What greater honour could there be than this?

On the other hand, if you wanted to meet a president or a minister in this world, there would be many bridges you would have to cross and obstacles you would have to overcome before you would be able to do so. Even then, you would have no say with respect to the arrangement of the meeting. He would specify the time and place and even what you would be permitted to say during it. Then, he would bring it to its end.

(1) From a poem written by Sheikh As- Sha’rawi himself

By contrast, your slave-hood to Allah Glorified is He is different, for your Lord is the One Who asks you to come into His Presence and He is the One Who grows angry when you do not respond to His invitation. What an excellent lord your Lord is! What an excellent form of slave-hood your slave-hood to Him is!

Here, in the verse we are discussing, the disbelievers throw the blame at the feet of their masters and chiefs, saying: '…'We obeyed our masters and our chiefs, and they led us astray.' (al-Ahzab: 67) By this, they want to take revenge upon their masters and chiefs, and give themselves some relief by seeing them also being punished as payment for plunging them into idolatry and encouraging them to commit acts of disobedience. They will say: ''Lord! Give them a double punishment...' (al-Ahzab: 68), i.e. give them double the punishment because their misguidance was doubled too: they were themselves misguided and they misguided others.

In another part of the Quran, the True Lord tells us what the disbelievers say on the Day of Resurrection: '…'Our Lord, show us those jinn and men who misled us and we shall trample them underfoot so that they may be among the lowest of the low.'' (Fussilat: 29)

Indeed, there are many verses in the Quran in which the conversations which circulate among the disbelievers are related and the accusations that they level at one another, such as what Satan is narrated as saying: '...'I had no power over you except to call you, and you responded to my call, so do not blame me; blame yourselves. I cannot help you, nor can you help me. I reject the way you associated me with God before. A bitter torment awaits such wrongdoers.'' (Ibrahim: 22) They were not content with their leaders receiving double the punishment, but also wanted them to be rejected; not just rejected, but rejected completely: '...and reject them completely.' (al-Ahzab: 68) The rejection is because they themselves went astray, and it should be complete because they led others astray.

One thing we notice here is that whenever the Lord is addressed, no vocative particle is used. Why is that? Because, they say, the vocative uses different particles depending upon the distance between you and the addressee. You use the vocative to ask someone to come to you. If someone is right beside you, you say, for example, 'Mohamed, do such-and-such'; if someone is some distance away, you say, 'a Mohamed...'; if someone is even further away, you say, 'ya Mohamed...'; and if they are a very long way away, you say, 'aya Mohamed...'. The further you are from the addressee, the more extended the vocative particle, and the more you raise your voice.

So, what should you say when you call your Lord, since even if you are not close to Allah Glorified is He, He is close to you? You should not use any vocative particles whether those for calling a close one, nor those for calling a far one. That is why the word rabbi (my Lord), to address the Lord, appears in sixty-five verses in the Quran without a vocative particle. The first instance of that is the call of Ibrahim peace be upon him: '…'My Lord, make this land secure...' (al-Baqara: 126). The last is that of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him: ''My Lord, forgive me, my parents, and whoever enters my house as a believer. Forgive believing men and women...'' (Nuh: 28).

Sufficient proof of this closeness of Allah Glorified is He is found in His words: 'We created man — We know what his soul whispers to him: We are closer to him than his jugular vein.' (Qaf: 16) Therefore, when the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was asked, 'Is Allah near so we should commune with Him or far away so we should call out to Him?'(1) So, Allah Glorified is He revealed the words: '[Prophet], if My servants ask you about Me, I am near...' (al-Baqara: 186).

Indeed, Allah Glorified is He is close to us, and any distance that develops between you and Him is from you alone. The time when a slave usually finds himself closest to his Lord is when he is in trouble and distress, even if he had been far from Him before those troubles started. There are only two verses in the Book of Allah in which the Lord is addressed with the vocative particle ya, the first in His words: 'The Messenger has said, "O my Lord, my people treat this Quran as something to be shunned."' (al-Furqan: 30) The second is when He says: 'The Prophet has said, 'O My Lord…' (az-Zukhruf: 88).

(1) It is transmitted by As-Suyuti in 'Asbab An-nuzul p. 30 and he attributed it to Ibn Jarir, Ibn Abu Hatim, Ibn Mardawayh, Abu Shaykh and others in a Hadith from Mu'awiyya ibn Hayda who said, 'A desert Arab came to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and said, 'Is our Lord close to us so that we may converse intimately with Him or far away so that we must call Him?' The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him remained silent until Allah Glorified is He revealed to him, 'And if my servants ask thee about Me – behold, I am near...' (al-Baqara: 186).

These two verses are relating the words of the Prophet, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so why was the vocative particle not used except when it was Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who was calling upon his Lord? Some said: because our master, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was so passionate and concerned about his people being guided and his call being victorious and successful that his Lord even addressed him, saying: '[Prophet], are you going to worry yourself to death because they will not believe?' (ash-Shu'ara': 3)

The Messenger of Allah Glorified is He peace and blessings be upon him had gone through such difficulty that he had begun to see the victory as slow in coming, so Allah Glorified is He revealed the following words to him: 'We support Our messengers and the believers in the present life...' (Ghafir: 51).

Despite this, the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the believers with him were very shaken, as Allah Glorified is He Himself says: '...and they were so shaken that even [their] messenger and the believers with him cried, 'When will Allah's help arrive?'…' (al-Baqara: 214) Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was frightened that he had gone far from his Lord, but that farness was simply a misgiving of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him or an accusation that he had levelled against himself.

When Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him went to call on his Lord and complain to him that his people had abandoned the Quran, he addressed him from the station of one who is far, saying, Ya rabbi (O My Lord). It was as if he thought there was some shortcoming in himself or that he had failed in his task, and that had placed him far away from his Lord. His Lord showed him that he was in the right and emphasised his call, even going so far as to make an oath by it. The True Lord says: 'Consider his cry, "O My Lord, truly these are people who do not believe." So turn away from them and say, "Peace": they will come to know.' (az-Zukhruf: 88-89) In other words, Allah Glorified is He is saying, 'I swear by your call, Muhammad, in which you said: '…"O my Lord! My people treat this Quran as something to be shunned."' (al-Furqan: 30) The True Lord swears by what He wishes on what He wishes: He swears by the angels and by inanimate things, and He swears by the plants but never once does He swear by any jinn or human being except the Messenger

Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in His words: ‘By your life [Prophet], they wandered on in their wild intoxication.’ (al-Hijr: 72) La’amruka means: ‘by your being granted life’ or ‘by your life, O Muhammad!’

Just as He swears by His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so, too, does He swear by his words: Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Consider his cry, ‘O My Lord, truly these are people who do not believe.’’ (az-Zukhruf: 88)

Then, the True Lord addresses His believing servants, saying:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ لَا تَكُونُوا۟ كَٱلَّذِينَ ءَاذَوْا۟ مُوسَىٰ
فَبَرَّأَهُ ٱللَّهُ مِمَّا قَالُوا۟ ۚ وَكَانَ عِندَ ٱللَّهِ وَجِيهًا (٦٩)

Believers, do not be like those who insulted Moses – God cleared him of their allegations and he was highly honoured in God’s eyes [69] (The Quran, al-Ahzab: 69)

After speaking about those who caused affront to Allah Glorified is He, His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the believers, He clarifies that such behaviour is not something that is specifically directed against Muhammad, but has been the prevailing response against every messenger of Allah Glorified is He peace be upon them. Moreover, the prohibition against giving offence to Muhammad does not mean this behaviour is allowed with any of his fellow messengers peace be upon them. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘O Believers, do not be like those who insulted Moses. Allah cleared him of their allegations…’ (al-Ahzab: 69).

Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had two distinct relationships in the course of delivering his message, one with the people of Pharaoh and one with the tribe of Israel. But Musa peace be upon him was not a messenger to the people of Pharaoh, he was only sent to the tribe of Israel. And that is why Musa and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them said to Pharaoh: ‘…‘We are your Lord’s messengers, so send the Children of Israel with us and do not oppress them…’ (Ta Ha: 47). So, his main aim was to free the tribe of Israel from the enslavement of Pharaoh. As for calling Pharaoh to believe in Allah Glorified is He and showing him miracles to convince him to do that, he did that as a sideline to his main call to the tribe of Israel. Despite this, Musa peace be upon him was not safe from Pharaoh's attempts to harm him. Pharaoh said about him: '...'this messenger who has been sent to you is truly possessed.'' (ash-Shu'ara': 27) Pharaoh also said: 'Am I not better than this contemptible wretch who can scarcely express himself?' (az-Zukhruf: 52)

It was natural for Musa peace be upon him to suffer harm at the hands of Pharaoh since he had come to show the falseness of his self-proclaimed divinity; but how was it that he also suffered offence at the hands of the tribe of Israel, a people whom he can come to save from the clutches of Pharaoh, the torment and servitude which had been their daily lot in life?

Scholars said that the tribe of Israel gave offence to Musa peace be upon him by causing affront to the One Who sent him, Allah Glorified is He, when they said about Him: '…'Show us Allah face to face'...' (an-Nisa': 153); and when they said: '…'So Allah is poor, while we are rich…'' (Al-'Imran: 181).

Moreover, they gave offence to Musa peace be upon him when they said in protest about the Manna and Quails with which Allah Glorified is He had provided them: '…"Moses, we cannot bear to eat only one kind of food, so pray to your Lord to bring out for us some of the earth's produce, its herbs and cucumbers, its garlic, lentils, and onions." He said, "Would you exchange better for worse? Go to Egypt and there you will find what you have asked for...' (al-Baqara: 61).

It is known that mann (manna), was a type of liquid resembling honey that fell from the trees in the early morning like morning dew; and that salwa were birds closely resembling Quails that Allah Glorified is He drove into their arms so that they did not have to tire themselves at all to get them. However, they were a people who did not believe in the Unseen and did not want that ready-made food. Rather, they wanted something tangible which they could grow and prepare by themselves.

Then, they abused Musa peace be upon him personally by accusing him of killing his brother Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him when they both climbed the mountain(1) and Harun peace be upon him died there. They said, 'Musa harboured feelings of rancour towards his brother so he killed him.' For this reason, Allah Glorified is He made the angels carry the body of Harun peace be upon him past the tribe of Israel so that they could see that it was whole and uninjured. That is the meaning of Allah's words: '...Allah cleared him of their allegations…' (al-Ahzab: 69).

(1) According to Ibn Abu Hatim, this was what 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb may Allah be pleased with him said. Ibn Kathir mentioned it in his Tafsir 3/520 in his commentary on this verse, saying, 'Musa and Harun peace be upon them went up the mountain and Harun peace be upon him=

Others said, 'Rather, they accused Musa peace be upon him of having something wrong with his body because of the fact that he was so shy and modest, being very careful to always keep himself properly covered whenever he bathed or went to the toilet saying that he only did that in order to cover up some physical defect he had.'

Some of them said that he had leprosy, while others had the effrontery to accuse him of having something wrong with his reproductive organs. Allah Glorified is He wanted to show him to be free of that which they ascribed to him, so, one day, when Musa peace be upon him went into the river to bathe, Allah Glorified is He commanded the rock on which he had placed his clothes to take them far away. So, Musa peace be upon him ran after the rock, calling out, 'O rock! My clothing! O rock! My clothing!' and the people saw him to be free of the defects of which they had accused him.(1)

= died there. So, the tribe of Israel said to Musa peace be upon him 'You killed him because he was shyer and easier on us than yourself.' They continued to abuse him in that way until Allah Glorified is He commanded the angels to take up the body of Harun peace be upon him and carry him past the circles of the tribe of Israel and tell them about his death. None know where he is buried except from the vulture and Allah Glorified is He made it deaf and dumb.'

(1) From Abu Hurayra may Allah be pleased with him that the Messenger of Allah Glorified is He peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Musa peace be upon him was a shy man who kept himself fully covered. His shyness was so great that no portion of his skin was left visible. So, the tribe of Israel abused him on account of that and said, 'It can only be the fact that he has some defect in his body that causes him to cover himself thus - he must have leprosy or scrotal hernia or plague or some such thing.' Allah Glorified is He wanted to show Musa peace be upon him to be free of that which they ascribed to him. So, one day, Musa peace be upon him went alone to a secluded spot, placed his clothes upon a rock and bathed himself. Then, when he finished and had come back to the rock to take his clothes, the rock suddenly began to run away with them. So Musa peace be upon him took hold of his staff and walked naked, his body in the best form that Allah Glorified is He had created. And in that way Allah Glorified is He cleared him of the accusations that had levelled against him. Then the rock came to a halt so Musa peace be upon him took his clothes, put them on and struck the rock such a blow with his staff =

It is also said that when the dispute between Qarun (Korah) and Musa peace be upon him came to a head, Qarun (Korah) hired a woman who was a prostitute to stand up in front of the people and accuse Musa peace be upon him. So, Allah Glorified is He willed it that when the people gathered around her, she said instead, 'Qarun (Korah) did such-and-such,' thereby clearing Musa peace be upon him of that which he had been accused.(1)

The True Lord says here: 'O Believers do not be like those who insulted Moses— Allah cleared him of their allegations…' (al-Ahzab: 69), first clearing him of defect and then establishing his nobility and honour

The True Lord says: '... and he was highly honored in Allah's eyes.' (al-Ahzab: 69) What greater honour could there possibly be than for Allah Glorified is He Himself to establish the innocence of Musa and show up the lies of his enemies? This great honour demonstrated that his hopes and supplications were accepted. Thus, no one would ever again have the effrontery to ascribe any defects to him or accuse him of a crime that he had not done because they knew that Musa peace be upon him had a Lord who protected him and defended him.

It is an example of the just way in which Allah Glorified is He deals with His creation that He recompenses anyone who is falsely accused of a crime that he has not done, by covering up a crime that he has actually done and not exposing him to the people: one in exchange for the other. This applied except for one thing in the case of Musa peace be upon him: when he saw that his Lord has responded to his supplication, he was almost deceived by the extent of the generosity of his Lord towards him, and so he said, ‘O my Lord, since they said such-and-such about me. I ask you to prevent any more false sayings about me.’ So Allah Glorified is He replied, ‘O Musa, I did not do this for Myself (prevent people from speaking untruthfully of Allah), so how is it that I should do that for you?’ This meant that what they were saying about Allah Glorified is He was even worse than that.

= that, by Allah Glorified is He, it left three or four or five deep gashes in it. That is the meaning of Allah's words: 'O you who have attained to faith! Be not like those [children of Israel] who gave offence to Musa ...' (al-Ahzab: 69). It is narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih 6/436.

(1) It is narrated by As-Suyuti in ad-Durr Al-Manthur 6/436. He attributed it to Ibn Abu Shayba in Al-Musannaf; Ibn Al-Mundhir; Ibn Abu Hatim; Al-Hakim who classified it as sahih; and Ibn Mardawayh from Ibn 'Abbas may Allah be pleased with him that they accused him of fornication, and brought the woman forward, saying to her, 'Will you testify against Musa peace be upon him?' So Musa peace be upon him said to her, 'I entreat you to say nothing but the truth.' So she said, 'If you entreat me to tell the truth, then by Allah Glorified is He, they summoned me and gave me a wage in exchange for accusing you of fornicating with me. I bear witness that you are innocent of that, and that you are the Messenger of Allah Glorified is He.' So Musa peace be upon him fell to the ground in prostration to his Lord, weeping.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He allowed disbelief to remain so that the hearts of all those who were treated ungratefully for whatever good they made could be at rest. It was as if He were saying, ‘Do not be sad, for I am your Creator and your Provider. Yet, they still disbelieved in Me and were ungrateful for what I had granted them.’ Then, the true Lord says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ ٱتَّقُواْ ٱللَّهَ وَقُولُواْ قَوْلًا سَدِيدًا ﴿٧٠﴾ يُصْلِحْ لَكُمْ أَعْمَٰلَكُمْ
وَيَغْفِرْ لَكُمْ ذُنُوبَكُمْ ۗ وَمَن يُطِعِ ٱللَّهَ وَرَسُولَهُۥ فَقَدْ فَازَ فَوْزًا عَظِيمًا ﴿٧١﴾

Believers, be mindful of God, speak in a direct fashion and to good purpose [70] and He will put your deeds right for you and forgive you your sins. Whoever obeys God and His Messenger will truly achieve a great triumph [71]
(The Quran, al-Ahzab: 70 - 71)

We previously discussed the meaning of taqwa, (being mindful and fearful of Allah), which is to shield yourself from your Lord’s Wrath. The True Lord has two types of attributes: those of Majesty and those of Beauty. The attributes of Beauty are bounteous favour, mercy, forgiveness, richness, benefit etc., while the attributes of Majesty are compulsion, revenge, seizing by force and so on. Thus, taqwa is to place between yourself and your Lord’s attributes of Majesty a shield that will protect you from them, for you will not be able to bear the grip or vengeance of Allah Glorified is He. Despite this, one of the men of knowledge said, ‘Strive to be fully with your Lord.’ That is possible because, by putting up a shield between yourself and your Lord’s attributes of Majesty, you are drawing near to His attributes of Beauty.

If you find yourself confused by the fact that Allah Glorified is He says: wa ittaqu Allah, ‘…“Beware of Allah...’ (al-Ma‘ida: 112) and: wa ittaqu an-Nar, ‘Beware of the Fire...’ (Al-‘Imran: 131), then you should know that the fire is a soldier in the army of Allah’s Wrath and that; whoever has taqwa of Allah Glorified is He automatically has taqwa of the fire. Thus, there is no contradiction.

As for the meaning of Allah’s words: ‘...speak in a direct fashion and to good purpose’ (al-Ahzab: 70), the word sadidan means: true words lead to the truth. The word sadid is derived from the sadad (aiming) of an arrow when it hits the target and does not miss. Your target, in saying those words, is to find delight in The Essence of Allah Glorified is He in the Hereafter, and to throw aside the means of this world and live with the Causer of means.

In this world, when you want to eat, you must look to the food that has been prepared for you and consider the time, the effort, and the money it needed to be prepared. By contrast, in the Hereafter, the mere fact of your thinking about something causes it to appear in front of you. This state of being fully with your Lord is something you must assiduously strive to attain to.

Then, the True Lord mentions what will result from us speaking true words: ‘He will put your deeds right for you and forgive you your sins. Whoever obeys Allah and His Messenger will truly achieve a great triumph.’ (al-Ahzab: 71) That is: this will happen in the Hereafter. He described the triumph as mighty because, in this world you receive Allah’s gifts through the means He granted you, whereas in the Hereafter, you receive Allah’s gifts directly from the Essence of Allah Glorified is He; and there is nothing greater or mightier than this!

Then, the True Lord says:

إِنَّا عَرَضۡنَا ٱلۡأَمَانَةَ عَلَى ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضِ وَٱلۡجِبَالِ فَأَبَيۡنَ أَن
يَحۡمِلۡنَهَا وَأَشۡفَقۡنَ مِنۡهَا وَحَمَلَهَا ٱلۡإِنسَٰنُۖ إِنَّهُۥ كَانَ ظَلُومٗا جَهُولٗا ﴿٧٢﴾

We offered the Trust to the heavens, the earth, and the mountains, yet they refused to undertake it and were afraid of it; mankind undertook it – they have always been inept and foolish [72] (The Quran, al-Ahẓab: 72)

The word ‘ard (offer) is parading an exhibit before those to whom the exhibit is directed. An example of this is a military parade, where soldiers who are representatives of the army and other weapons are paraded before the leader such as in the story of Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him that Allah Glorified is He tells us about: '[Mention] when, there were paraded before him, in the afternoon, well-bred light-footed horses.' (Sad: 31) Another example of this is when you say: 'aradtu 'I presented the matter to so-and-so,' meaning, 'I told him about it so that he could form an opinion about it and say whether he accepted it or not. So 'ard is offering a choice and incurs no obligation.

The True Lord says that He offered the trust to His creation - i.e. the entirety of creation, including mankind, the animals, the plants, and inanimate objects - to see which of them would accept the responsibility of bearing it and which would refuse. The implication of there being an offer is that there are ones who will accept and ones who will reject.

Therefore, we say that it is mistake to say that the earth, the sky, the mountains, and so on are compelled and have no free will. Rather, we must amend the expression somewhat and say that they are compelled by their own free will, since when Allah Glorified is He offered them the trust, giving them the choice of whether they wanted to bear it or not, they were afraid of it and said, 'Let us escape this trial through the gate of grace…' (rather than putting ourselves to the risk of opening the door of wronging ourselves), and chose not to have choice or free will.

In common usage, the word amana (trust), customarily means either money or objects of value which you are afraid to lose, and so you entrust someone with them: a person you believe will look after them until such time that you need them again. It is not for you to take a cheque from the one with whom you entrust your money nor to bring forth witnesses, since if you did, it would not have become a trust. Thus, there is no way of proving its existence except through the trustworthiness of the one who took it—if he chooses, he can admit that he has it and gives it back, and if he chooses, he can deny it.

Thus al-amana (a trust) is the self's carrying the burden of being capable to choose actions…etc. If the self is compelled by means of a cheque or by the testimony of witnesses, then it is no longer termed an amana (a trust).

The amana which the True Lord offered to His creation was the amana of free will— choosing the ability to choose to believe or not to believe; to obey or not to obey. Every creation apart from mankind refused to bear that trust as they felt no enthusiasm at the time it was offered to them; the same time they will bear the trust, for fear that when the time comes to give it back, their conscience fails them.

There is a difference between the time of receiving and bearing a trust and the time of giving it back. Those who only take notice of the time of receiving the trust accept it, but those who also take note of the time of giving it back refuse it. That is because, despite one's best intentions to give it back, circumstances might change; conscience might change or something might happen to you that puts you in need of it and forces you to make use of it. Then the time of giving it back to its rightful owner arrives and you are unable to do so.

Everything in existence refused to bear the burden of the trust and chose to have no free will and be fully controlled by the Creator, apart from man because he was as his Lord described him: '...inept and foolish.' (al-Ahzab: 72)

That is how the righteous servants of Allah Glorified is He reach the station of true slave-hood to Allah Glorified is He—by directing their own free will according to the Will of their Lord. Allah Glorified is He is the One Who gave them the choice between believing and disbelieving and they choose to believe; He is the One Who gave them the choice between obeying and disobeying and they choose to obey. So they directed their free will towards that which their Lord loved, and entered into the ranks of His slaves who have been brought near.

It is as if you had relinquished your lower self's choice to act as it pleased, and accordingly became like the heavens, mountains, and earth when they gave up their own free will in favour of the Will of their Lord. Moreover, you arrived at the point where—despite the fact that you are endowed with free will—you chose to only follow the path that your Lord had laid down before you.

At this point, it pleases some to ask, 'How could the trust possibly have been offered to the heavens, mountains and earth when they are inanimate objects, how did they refuse?' They may ask many other similar such questions. Our reply to them is this: 'You have walked straight into a maze! Was the offer made by you to the inanimate objects so that they were not able to understand, or was it made by their Lord and Creator?'

When you see an action is done by you or done by Allah Glorified is He, beware of disassociating the action from the actor. Allah Glorified is He says: 'How could He who created not know His own creation, when He is the Most Subtle, the All Aware?' (al-Mulk: 14) He is their Creator and is the One Who addresses them, and you have not denied that. Moreover, Allah Glorified is He taught some of his Messengers peace be upon them the language of the birds, allowing them to communicate with them and understand what they were saying like His Prophet Sulaiman peace be upon him whom He states his saying: '...we have been taught the speech of birds, and we have been given a share of everything...' (an-Naml: 16). He also says about him: '…Sulaiman smiled broadly at her words...' (an-Naml: 19).

Furthermore, He says about the mountains singing the praises of their Lord with David (peace be upon him): '…"You mountains, echo Allah's praises together with him, and you birds, too."…' (Saba': 10) Yes indeed, the mountains praise and glorify their Lord in every moment. But the thing that distinguished Dawud (David) peace be upon him was the fact that his glorification was in perfect harmony with that of the angels so that it seemed that they were all one single group singing one single song.

So, the Creator addresses whatever of His creation He so wishes to, and if He were to have taught you how to speak to inanimate objects, you would also have been able to address them. Reflect, for example, on the story of the Hoopoe bird whom Sulaiman peace be upon him sent to the people of Sheba and whom, when he got there, found them worshipping the sun instead of Allah Glorified is He. Reflect on that bird's perfect understanding of the doctrine of tawhid (oneness of Allah). So, relax and attribute the action to the one who did it. By doing so, you will be at peace. Indeed, in your own daily lives, there are good examples for you of this. Say, for example, that your son was to come into the house with an appearance that showed you that he was hit by somebody: would your first question to him not be, 'Who did this to you?' You must first establish who the perpetrator is before you can form any judgement or come to any decision regarding the matter. If the perpetrator was your neighbours' son, for example, then you would have moved heaven and earth to bring him to rights, but if your son were to have said instead, 'Uncle So-and-so hit me', you would have calmed down and said to the boy, 'You must have done something to deserve being punished thus.' Then, if you were to have gone to see that uncle later, you would have found out that your son had indeed done something bad. Thus, one action can be both bad and good—the important thing is who actually did the action.

The different verses of the Quran support one another when it comes to this matter, and enable us to understand it better since the One Who says: '"We offered the Trust to the heavens, the earth, and the mountains...' (al-Ahzab: 72), also says: '... There is not a single thing that does not celebrate His praise...' (al-Isra': 44). Every single thing in creation extols the glory of Allah Glorified is He. This proves that everything in existence is able to express itself. We are amazed when we hear scholars say that this communication is simply mute expression and not spoken word, for that opinion is refuted by the words of Allah Glorified is He Himself: '...though you do not understand their praise…' (al-Isra': 44).

We are able to understand one aspect of their glorification when we see the harmonious way in which the different elements of creation are knitted together and the wondrous order of things. Yet the True Lord tells us that we will never understand their glorification. The glorification He is referring to must be one that is actually spoken and no one can understand that glorification except for those whom Allah Glorified is He has acquainted with their language. We do not think it is farfetched for things to glorify their Lord when we look around and see members of various parties or professions communicate with one another using sign language and ciphers that no one else can understand.

Indeed, it is possible for you to hear words in your own language that you do not understand the meaning of, let alone all the other different languages used by the different races of mankind. If you are unable to understand certain meanings in your own language, and if you do not understand the language of other peoples who are from your own species, then why do you reject the notion that other species in existence also have languages by which they communicate with one another and express themselves?

Furthermore, are all languages and means of communication actually spoken? Are there not, for example, sign languages that some people use to communicate with and understand others? Despite all of this, there are certain forms of communication and certain expressions that are the same in every language and that everybody is able to understand such as the ability of those who are mute to understand each other, and such as laughter and weeping; for there is no such thing as Arab laughter or French weeping.

‘Bearing the trust’ means taking it on and putting it into practice, as Allah Glorified is He Himself says when He discusses the meaning of bearing a burden: ‘Those who have been charged to obey the Torah, but do not do so, are like asses carrying books…’ (al-Jumu‘a: 5).

They did bear it in the sense of taking it as a way and memorized it, but they did not bear it in the sense of actually implementing that way and putting it into practice. Thus, in Allah’s eyes, their likeness became that of a donkey that carries a load of books but cannot actually benefit from them. This, in itself, is not a criticism of donkeys or an accusation that they are stupid as some people claim; for it is not a donkey’s job to understand, but merely to carry. The one who accepts a path without benefiting by it or putting it into practice resembles the donkey in this matter, adopting a characteristic specific to donkeys—carrying things they do not understand.

When it comes to other matters, donkeys understand well enough and carry out their tasks in ways that human beings may well be unable to do. For example, it is a well-known fact about donkeys that they never forget a place they have been to before and never lose track of the way even if a long time has passed. However, human beings often lose their way on paths they have walked some time before. Even if you were to allow a donkey absolute freedom of movement, it would take you back to the same place. So which of the two is stupid, the human, or the donkey?

Therefore, some people ask, ‘why do they accuse donkeys of stupidity?’ Some people answered: ‘Because they try to assign a task to them that Allah Himself did not assign them. Donkeys were created to carry things, but you want them to have a level of understanding about things that rational human beings may themselves lack.’

We said previously, ‘If you were to try to make a donkey jump over a trench that was too wide for it to be able to get to the other side, it would never obey you no matter how hard you beat it and would refuse to make the jump, whereas, if it is something it is capable of, it looks at the trench as if it is calculating its exact width, and then leaps over it without you forcing it. This behaviour indicates it is a being that has a good grasp of the consequences of its actions and understands what it is doing.

Hence, a thing cannot be viewed in isolation of the task for which it was made, and cannot be asked to do any more than that. As an example for this, we mentioned the iron rod. The beauty of the iron rod is seen in its straightness, but if you were to want it to be a hook, it could only be made fit for that task by bending it. So, when it is bent, you cannot say that it is crooked because that crookedness is the very thing that makes it right for its task.

That is why we said when we discussed Allah’s words: ‘...for the ugliest of all voices is the braying of asses (Donkeys).”’ (Luqman: 19) This is not a criticism of the voice of the donkey because Allah Glorified is He made donkeys’ voices high in that way because of the fact that they live in the wild countryside and often disappear from sight behind rocks or trees or simply wander off far from their owners. So their voices were made thus in order to indicate where they were and to help their owners to find them.

Loud high-pitched voices are only ugly when they are not performing a task and are used out of place. A single thing might be diversified, but its task requires it to be unified. For example, if the blood—upon which a human being’s life depends—clots while still inside the veins, it leads to paralysis of the limb and needs an injection of medication in order to start flowing again. By contrast, if the blood becomes too liquid, it leads to haemophilia, meaning that, if a person were to be cut, the bleeding would not stop and the wound would not scar over because the blood did not clot and block places from which it was coming out. So, clotting of the blood is necessary outside of the veins and liquefaction of the blood is necessary inside the veins. There is wisdom to both of them when they are in their rightful place.

As for Allah’s words: ‘...and were afraid of it...’ (al-Ahzab: 72), they mean that the earth and the mountains were afraid at the time of taking on the trust, out of fear that when the time came to give it back, they would be unable to do so. So '...mankind undertook it...' (al-Ahzab: 72) because of his capacity to think, to choose (for himself) and try things out, However, sometimes, his thinking brings harm upon him.

As previously illustrated, human being might stuff himself to eat his favourite meal; thus, he distends his stomach until he suffers from indigestion and becomes ill, whereas, when animals such as donkeys and buffaloes, are full, they will not overeat because they are governed by a natural instinct that does not permit them to go to excess. This instinct preventing animals from going to excess is a defining characteristic. Hence, man is described in Allah's saying as: '... They have always been inept and foolish' (al-Ahzab: 72). The Arabic morphological form used in these two adjectives emphasises the intensiveness of the man's incompetence and ignorance. It is understandable that someone could do wrong to others because he thinks that he could get benefit somehow from them, however it is unbelievable to do wrong to himself by denying it good things or bringing harm; that defies logic and is a sure sign of stupidity. When someone disregards an act of obedience to satisfy a temporary worldly desire for himself, he denies it infinite good and limitless pleasure; he is his own self's enemy. Therefore, Muslim scholars say that the person's inner self is the worst of enemies. If his enemy is another person, he is able to notice and take precautions against him, but when the enemy is inside him, the matter is much more difficult.

Allah Glorified is He has made it clear that the gravest wrong deed is to associate others with Allah, as He the Exalted says: '... for, behold, such [a false] ascribing of divinity is indeed an awesome wrong!' (Luqman: 13) This wrongdoing brings no harm to Allah, but only to the person who associates others with Him. Accordingly, the person, after being described as a wrongdoer, he is then described as an ignorant and foolish; this is a sure sign of his ignorance and lack of knowledge. The Arabic description here indicates the compositional wisdom of Allah's words which denotes the extremely oblivious person, who falls into error and turns away from truth because of ignorance.

لِّيُعَذِّبَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلْمُنَٰفِقِينَ وَٱلْمُنَٰفِقَٰتِ وَٱلْمُشْرِكِينَ وَٱلْمُشْرِكَٰتِ
وَيَتُوبَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَى ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ وَٱلْمُؤْمِنَٰتِ ۗ وَكَانَ ٱللَّهُ غَفُورًا رَّحِيمًا ﴿٧٣﴾

God will punish the hypocrites and the idolaters, both men and women, and turn with mercy to the believers, both men and women: God is most forgiving, most merciful [73]
(The Quran, al-Ahzab: 73)

It is remarkable that the previous verse ends with the two descriptions: '... Inept and foolish' (al-Ahzab: 72), while this verse ends with Allah's Attributes: '... Most Forgiving, Most Merciful' (al-Ahzab: 73). Thus, the descriptions of the wrongdoer 'inept' and 'foolish' are counterbalanced by Allah's Attribute 'Most Forgiving' and 'Most Merciful' respectively. Allah Glorified is He forgives those who transgress and do wrong, and dispenses mercy to those who are ignorant. Indeed, the layout of the Quran is a way of manifestation of Allah's Mercy.

Allah the Almighty is known by those who believe in Him to be 'Most Forgiving' and 'Most Merciful', but they should not let Allah's Attributes fool them into thinking that they can transgress and commit wrong action, relying on the fact that He will forgive them and act mercifully towards them. Thus, they say with reference to Allah's words: 'Mankind, what has lured you away from Allah' (al-Infitar: 6). This means that man is deluded with Allah's Mercy and Generosity, the matter which makes him disobeys or reject Him.

Thus, mankind has been taught to refer their aberration to Allah's Generosity. In rural communities, a farmer may say to another, 'Why do you not stand still in your prayer? Why do you fidget so much? Do you not know that if you were to owe a shilling to someone, it would not be right to give him a worn-out coin?' The other replies, 'By Allah, if he were generous, he would accept it!'

The verse raises another key issue, as Allah says: 'Allah will punish the hypocrites and the idolaters, both men and women...' (al-Ahzab: 73). The purpose of offering the trust to mankind and making them responsible for their actions was neither to punish them nor to impose the ruling on them because the Arabic verb 'will punish' is prefixed by a particle for consequence, not for causation. Allah the Almighty made mankind responsible for their actions so that they would follow Him, not so that they would be punished. This particle merely indicates what will eventually result, as in Allah's saying: ‘Pharaoh’s household picked him up—later to become an enemy and a source of grief for them...’ (al-Qasas: 8). When the Family of Pharaoh took Musa (Moses) peace be upon him in, they did so to be a source of delight to them, not to be their enemy. But what eventually happened was that he became their enemy and source of grief. So, the particle is used when the person does an action for a specific reason, whereas it results in another consequence to demonstrate the stupidity of the doer of the action.

As for Allah's words ‘The hypocrites and the idolaters, both men and women...’ (al-Ahzab: 73), hypocrisy is earlier defined. It is worse than disbelief because the disbeliever is at least consistent with his beliefs; within his heart and on his tongue. His words conform to his heartedly belief; whereas, the hypocrite is not consistent with himself, as he believes in one thing and says the other. The hypocrite outwardly displays belief while keeping his true feelings of disbelief hidden; i.e. his thoughts are conflicted. Therefore, he deserves to be called the worst of enemies and to be positioned in the lowest level of the hell-Fire. His treachery and deception show his bad soul that apparently appears to be with you, but is, in reality, the enemy. Furthermore, this verse shows that Allah clearly draws a distinction between the punishment that is due to the hypocrites and idolaters, and the recompense that is due to the believers. Allah Glorified is He does not conjoin mercy with punishment in the same phrase; but rather, He the Almighty separates the two verbs from each other in two different sentences by repeating the subject of the verbs, to make sure that each requital is kept separate from the other, and that the rulings are kept apart. As previously mentioned, Allah the Exalted shows His Attributes of Majesty in dealing with the disbelievers and the hypocrites, and the Attributes of Beauty in dealing with the believers; each of them is used in its own specific and independent context.

Saba'

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of S*aba'* (1).

ٱلْحَمْدُ لِلَّهِ ٱلَّذِى لَهُۥ مَا فِى ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ
وَلَهُ ٱلْحَمْدُ فِى ٱلْءَاخِرَةِ ۚ وَهُوَ ٱلْحَكِيمُ ٱلْخَبِيرُ ﴿١﴾

Praise be to God, to whom belongs all that is in the heavens and earth, and praise be to Him in the life to come. He is the All Wise, the All Aware [1]
(The Quran, Saba': 1)

'Praise be to Allah...' (Saba': 1) is Allah's saying uttered by Him to teach people to say Praise is directed towards Allah who merits being praised on account of His Beautiful Attributes; contrariwise, dispraise is directed towards someone who merits criticism on account of his awful characteristics.

The person might praise something without any interest simply because he likes its characteristics worthy of being praised such as when people praise the manufacturer for perfecting a product without serving any purpose.

So, applause sometimes takes place because the object is praiseworthy; nonetheless, they have no impact upon the commending person in any way.

(1) The chapter of al-Ahzab is the 33rd chapter in the order of the Noble Quran. It is a chapter revealed in Medina and comprises of 73 verses. It was revealed to address the hypocrites' criticism of Messenger Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him and the harm they were inflicting upon him, the issues surrounding his marriages to women and especially his marriage to his cousin Zaynab bint Jahsh Allah be pleased with her and the correct courtesy that must be shown upon entering the apartments of Prophet Muhammad Allah's peace and blessings be upon him. The chapter of Al-Ahzab was revealed in Medina just after chapter of Al-'Imran and just before the chapter of Al-Mumtahana. It was the 89th chapter to be revealed in terms of the order of revelation. See As-Suyuti, Al-Itqan fi 'Ulum Al-Quran, 1/27.

Undoubtedly, praise becomes obligatory especially when the effects of praising, glorifying, and exalting Allah influenced the person

Thus, it is said that, ‘Every act of praise, even if it is directed towards a human being, in reality comes back to Allah Glorified is He because when a human being is praised, he is only applauded due to a good trait granted to him by Allah the Almighty. Accordingly, all acts of praise, without exception even if to a human being, are in fact praise to Allah.’

The phrase: ‘Praise be to Allah...’ (Saba’: 1) appears 38 times in the Quran, five times of which appear at the very beginning of al-Fatiha, al-An‘am, al-Kahf, Saba’ and Fatir chapters.

Allah the Exalted begins these chapters with praise because He has formed creation from absolutely nothing, so they owe Him praise for that blessing. Afterwards, Allah the Almighty provided mankind with the essential elements of life with regard to the material needs of the human being such as the abundant foodstuffs ensuring the preservation of life, then the ability to thereby procreate ensuring the preservation of the species. However, the human being is also required to lead his life in perfect harmony with others, so it is imperative that they support and coordinate each other. Otherwise, creation would have destroyed itself.

This mutual support would be impossible, but for the presence of the way adjusting this coexistence and curbing people’s whims and desires in this world. Otherwise, some people would set affairs right, while others destroy. As for the Hereafter, Allah prepares people in a different way to something better because they live in this world with each other, but in the Hereafter, they will live with Allah, the Original Causer.

In this world, people pay attention to worldly means; they sow, reap, cook, bake, weave, spin, etc.; whereas, in the Hereafter, they live by the Will of Allah, the Original Causer. In this life, they fear to miss the worldly delights, but in the Hereafter, the delights will be unceasingly everlasting. The enjoyment in this world is limited to the capabilities of the human being, whereas, the enjoyment in the Hereafter is unrestrictedly granted by the Power of Allah.

Hence, Allah Glorified is He created people and gave them blessings out of nothing, set out the way protecting values and regulating life even before creation. Before Allah created mankind, He created the entire universe subservient to him such as the craftsman who assigns a particular function to his handiwork before making it.

Thus, Allah the Almighty says: 'He is the Lord of Mercy [1] who taught the Quran [2] He has created man: [3] and taught him to communicate [4]' (ar-Rahman: 1-4). The way that is mentioned in the Quran has been laid down at first to assign the task and designate the laws that will preserve the mankind, before his creation.

Anyone, who reflects on the verses of praise with which these five chapters begin, will find that they encompass all these stages, for in the beginning of al-An'am chapter: 'Praise belongs to Allah who created the heavens and the earth and made darkness and light; yet the disbelievers set up equals to their Lord!' (al-An'am: 1) Allah the Exalted speaks about the beginning of creation. Then He says: 'He is the one who created you from clay…' (al-An'am: 2), this being the first stage of creation

Then, in the beginning of al-Kahf chapter, Allah mentions the matter of putting the way and the values into place, saying: 'Praise be to Allah, who sent down the Scripture to His servant and made it unerringly straight' (al-Kahf: 1). This is the governing law that curbs whims and appetites and regulates the life so that human beings are mutually supportive rather than being mutually opposing.

In the beginning of Saba' chapter, in the verse under discussion, Allah Glorified is He mentions praise in the Hereafter: 'Praise be to Allah, to whom belongs all that is in the heavens and earth, and praise be to Him in the life to come…' (Saba': 1). Praise in the Hereafter is compounded and multiplied because Allah, in this world, is praised for creating the means by which people live. But in the Hereafter, there are no means – but rather, the one who directly causes things is Allah the Exalted. So, praise in the Hereafter is greater because man lives with Allah Himself.

Moreover, Allah says, in the beginning of Fatir chapter: 'Praise be to Allah, Creator of the heavens and earth, who made angels messengers with two, three, four [pairs of] wings. He adds to creation as He will…' (Fatir: 1). People praise Allah for the values and the way He lays down for them through His angels, who are Allah's messengers to human beings; some of them are guardians, others direct their affairs and the third group prostrates to them.

The chapter of al-Fatiha, Um Al-Kitab (the Epitome or the Mother of the Quran), combined all these matters, as Allah says: 'Praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the Worlds' (al-Fatiha: 2). The Lord is the Creator and the Provider, as Allah says: 'The Lord of Mercy, the Giver of Mercy [3] Master of the Day of Judgement [4]' (al-Fatiha: 3-4). Afterwards, Allah highlights the importance to follow the way: 'It is You we worship; it is You we ask for help [5] Guide us to the straight path: [6] The path of those You have blessed, those who incur no anger and who have not gone astray [7]' (al-Fatiha: 5-7). As al-Fatiha combined the beginning and the end of the creation as well as the life in this world and the Hereafter; thus, it is called the Opening (Epitome) of the Book, the seven Oft-repeated verses and the Mother of the Quran.

Thus, Allah teaches people to glorify Him by saying: 'Praise be to Allah...' (Saba': 1). As people are different from each other in their gifted talents, capabilities as well as in way and word-choice of glorification; the well-educated is dissimilar to the illiterate person in choosing words to glorify Allah. Accordingly, Allah soothes people that He the Exalted teaches them the most preferable wording of praise to Him.

In the Noble Hadith, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him praised and extolled Allah, as follows: '"Glory be to You, we cannot count Your praises. You are as You have lauded Yourself"(1) In giving a long sermon on the way of praising Allah, the lecturer says, 'All praise is due to

(1) It is narrated in Musnad Ahmad (6/58 & 120), and in Sahih Muslim (486) excerpted from the Hadith narrated by 'Aisha Allah be pleased with her as she said: 'One night I missed the Messenger of Allah from his bed. I searched for him. My hand fell over his feet while he was in prostration with his feet erect. He was supplicating: "Allahumma inni a'udhu biridaka min sakhatika, wa bi-mu'afatika min 'uqubatika, wa a'udhu bika minka, la uhsi thana'an 'alaika, Anta kama athnaita 'ala Nafsika (O Allah! I seek protection against Your Wrath in Your Pleasure. I seek protection in Your Pardon against Your chastisement; I am not capable of enumerating praise of You. You are as You have lauded Yourself)."'

Allah' and he does have fallen short at all. This particular wording taught by Allah is another blessing that deserves praise because it puts everyone on an equal footing in praising and extolling Allah's Graces.

When someone praises Allah for having taught this formulation of praise, he says, 'All praise is due to Allah'. So, there is a continuous chain of specific unchanged form of praise that never comes to an end; the person praises Allah for teaching him this form of praise and so on. The significance is that the person continues to praise Allah forever; thus, He is incessantly praised.

As previously mentioned, the different times on earth and the difference between the time in the east and that in the west ensure that Allah is being worshipped unceasingly and continuously in every moment of the day. In every single minute round the clock, the prayer is being performed, the phrases of supplication; 'Allah is the Greatest', 'I bear witness that there is no deity but Allah' and 'I bear witness that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah' are repeatedly proclaimed as well as all acts of worship are carried out. The whole universe constantly worships and supplicates to Allah in a wondrous perfect order; the most important thing is that the human maintains it well.

As for Allah's words '... and praise be to Him in the life to come…' (Saba': 1), it is already made clear that praise in the Hereafter is greater and more substantial than that in this world because people live in this world with means granted by Allah, whereas they live in the Hereafter with the Essence of Allah, the Original Causer. In this world, bliss is limited and terminable; whereas, bliss, in the Hereafter, is everlasting. Hence, Allah says on the Hereafter: '... And the last part of their prayer, "Praise be to Allah, Lord of the Worlds"' (Yunus: 10).

Allah the Exalted says, relating the words of the believers in the Hereafter: 'And they will say, "Praise be to Allah who has kept His promise to us and given us this land as our own. Now we may live wherever we please in the Garden." How excellent is the reward of those who labour!' (az-Zumar: 74) Additionally, Allah also says '"Praise be to Allah, who guided us to this: had Allah not guided us, we would never have found the way"' (al-A'raf: 43).

Upon being asked on the reason of praising Allah for owning the earth and the heavens, the reply is that the most remarkable thing is the people being served by Allah’s blessings that they do not possess. The stupendous thing is that He is benefiting them by means of things that are not in their possession, for the heavens and the earth are Allah’s possessions, but despite that He the Almighty places them under their service.

Likewise, a person who does not buy a car for himself, despite his affordability, because he has many brothers owning cars and every day, he rides in one of theirs; the matter which costs him nothing, So, it is a remarkably greater advantage to get benefit from others’ holds than to benefit from one’s own possessions. Whatever Allah the Almighty possesses of blessings, He places them for people’s benefit; the matter which deserves their praise to Him. O Allah! Do not deprive us of Your blessings!

Another notable thing is that Allah soothes His slaves that he is the only Controller of the Dominion of the earth and the heavens; otherwise, they would have been barred from them. Allah the Exalted has the sole ownership of the Dominion and Power where He has no partner to prevent His blessings from reaching them.

Therefore, when Allah says to something: ‘… “Be”, and it is’ (Al-‘Imran: 47), He knows that it cannot be but to ‘be’, as Allah says about the earth: ‘obeying its Lord as it rightly must’ (al-Inshiqaq: 2). Allah Glorified is He never says ‘Be’ to something without being sure that it will certainly obey Him.

Hence, as previously said that Allah firstly testifies that there is no deity but Him before He asked people to bear witness: ‘Allah bears witness that there is no god but Him…’ (Al-‘Imran: 18). This testimony is from Allah to Himself because He is the Controller in His creation with no partner.

Afterwards, the angels and then His slaves who have knowledge bore witness, as Allah says: ‘Allah bears witness that there is no god but Him, as do the angels and those who have knowledge…’ (Al-‘Imran: 18).

The testimony of Allah is testifying from Himself to Himself, however that of the angels is based on witnessing, whereas that of His slaves who possess knowledge is based on knowledge and proof.

It is also noticed that Allah says: ‘... To whom belongs all that is in the heavens and in the earth, and praise be to Him in the life to come…’ (Saba’: 1).

He repeats the relative pronoun in Arabic ‘in the heavens and in the earth’. This is similar to the way Allah says with respect to glorification on one occasion: ‘Everything in the heavens and in the earth glorifies Allah…’ (al-Jumu‘a: 1). Whereas, on another occasion, Allah says: ‘… Everything in the heavens and earth glorifies Him…’ (al-Hashr: 24).

There is a difference between the two kinds of expressions, as there are some common creations shared by the heavens and earth, some creations that exclusively belong to the heavens and others that only belong to the earth.

Thus, when Allah wants to take account of them all, He says: ‘…Everything in the heavens and earth…’ (al-Hashr: 24), whereas, when He wants to distinguish between them or to distinctively mention each group on its own, He repeats the pronoun and says: ‘... All that is in the heavens and is in the earth and praise be to Him in the life to come…’ (Saba’: 1).

The heavens and the earth are the outside cover encompassing all blessings that are found therein, so whoever owns the cover, owns also the contents.

Then, Allah concludes this verse by saying: ‘... He is the All Wise, the All Aware…’ (Saba’: 1). The All-Wise is the One Who puts things in their rightful places, and no one can do this except Allah, the All-Aware, the One Who has full knowledge of the intricacies and hidden details of things.

Subsequently, Allah illustrates an example that shows this wisdom and knowledge, as He says:

يَعۡلَمُ مَا يَلِجُ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ وَمَا يَخۡرُجُ مِنۡهَا وَمَا يَنزِلُ مِنَ
ٱلسَّمَآءِ وَمَا يَعۡرُجُ فِيهَاۚ وَهُوَ ٱلرَّحِيمُ ٱلۡغَفُورُ ٢

He knows all that goes into the earth and all that comes out of it; He knows all that comes down from the heavens and all that goes up to them. He is the Merciful, the Forgiving [2]
(The Quran, Saba’: 2)

The verb ‘goes into’, meaning ‘is merged into’, is also used in another verse: ‘He makes the night merge into the day and the day into the night…’ (Fatir: 13). Allah makes each of them merge into the other, so the increase in the length of the night decreases the length of the day and vice versa. This causes the difference between times.

There are things that go into the earth without the interference of mankind such as, the rainwater that comes down from the sky. From rain, people take their own needs while the remaining seep into the ground, as Allah says: '…Guides it along to form springs in the earth…' (az-Zumar: 21).

Furthermore, the implanted seeds go into the earth to feed people to guarantee the preservation of their lives. These foodstuffs come about as a result of seed multiplication for many times over. Moreover, the dead corpus buried into the ground goes also into the earth. There is a significant point of comparison between the implanted seed and the buried corpus that is mentioned in Allah's words: 'From the earth We created you, into it We shall return you, and from it We shall raise you a second time' (Ta Ha: 55). By following the same thought process, as the grain sprouts into seven ears, which in turn produce a hundred grains, also the dead corpus buried into the ground after death, will lead a better life after death as well as its disgraces will be covered over.

As for Allah's words 'He knows all that comes down from the heavens' (Saba': 2), what are things that descend from the heavens? Life-preserving rain comes down from the sky. But for water, everything would have died, with respect to the material aspect of human's existence. However, as for his spiritual existence, angels come down with the values and the approach that will bring life to his heart and soul. Guarding angels who administer the affairs of all created beings also come down, about whom Allah says: 'Each person has guardian angels before him and behind, watching over him from (by) Allah's Command... ' (ar-Ra'd: 11).

Some people do not actually grasp the meaning of this verse, asking, 'How can angels protect him from the Command of Allah the Almighty; whereas, Allah's Command ought to be carried out, so how can they protect him against it'. The verse means that their protection stems from the command of Allah - not a voluntarily deed resulting from themselves.(1)

(1) It is narrated by Ibn 'Abbas Allah be pleased with him that: 'Allah's protection is from His Command by His Command.' This is narrated by Abu Ash-Sheikh, who added: 'By=

Allah Glorified is He shows His Power of sending down rain; however the process of filtering water in laboratories requires a lot of money, time, and effort to produce it. Conversely, Allah's Power filters water for human beings without being even aware of this. The heat of the sun evaporates the water which rises and forms clouds, afterwards the winds drive the clouds to the place where Allah sets His will to fall down to the ground as rain. Allah's Wisdom decrees that the water surface covers three quarters of the earth to be as wide as possible so that there could be enough rain to meet the needs of all living organisms.

This phenomenon is illustrated by a glass-full of water which, if left exposed to the air for a month, will only decrease by a few centimetres, but if it is poured onto the ground, if would dry up quickly because water surface area is expanded so it is easily evaporated. Rainwater is the sweet and cold potable water used to quench the thirst of humans, animals, and birds, to water the crops and the high ground and, whatever remains, to be guided along to form springs in the earth, until it is needed. Rain is one of the greatest signs of Allah's Power.

Allah's saying: '... And all that goes up to them...' (Saba': 2) means the act of rising up, as that being mentioned in Allah's saying: '... Good words rise up to Him and He lifts up the righteous deed...' (Fatir: 10). Rising up means that the reactions of people towards Allah's Commandment imposed upon them are gone up

It is noticed that Allah uses the literary style of the words, as He uses the preposition (in) rather than (to) in the Arabic verse: '... And all that goes up in (to) them...' (Saba': 2). It is known that prepositions have intrinsic meanings, but other words should be attached to them to be able to express and understand such meanings. So when the preposition (in) is used in conjunction with another word, it has the meaning of being contained within something, such as, 'water is in the cup', but if you were to use it on its own, it would not indicate any meaning whatsoever.

= the permission of Allah.' It was narrated by Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abu-Hatim. Sa'id ibn Jubayr narrated, 'He protected it for them by His Command of Allah.' This version was narrated by Ibn Jarir. These were narrated by As-Suyut in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (4/612).

The scholars thought that many linguistic expressions contained particles that were thought to be additional or express the meaning of a totally different particle. An example of this is their interpretation of Allah's words: '... And all that goes up in (to) them...' (Saba': 2) that (in) here has the meaning of (to) because it holds some aspect of the meaning of something contained.

Another instance clarifies this issue, as Allah says: '... Then crucify you (in) on the trunks of palm trees...' (Ta Ha: 71). Some scholars say that (in) here means 'on' the trunks of palm-trees. However, this is an imprecise interpretation of Allah's saying since the word (in) here bears both meanings; (in) and (on).

Crucifying someone is tying him up onto another thing, the matter which is expressed by the preposition (on). Nevertheless, this somewhat falls short, since if the person wants to use the preposition (on), he should say, 'I will most certainly crucify him strongly on the trunks of palm-trees,' thereby making the parts of the crucified person enter into the cross on which crucifixion takes place. Yet, the only way to convey the exact full meaning of crucifixion, without adding the word 'strongly' is by using the particle (in) to convey both the meaning of being tied onto something as well as that of being contained within it.

To further illustrate this point, if a matchstick is tied loosely with a fine thread onto somebody's hand or finger, the thread barely holds the matchstick in place. But if the matchstick is tied forcibly with the thread, the matchstick will be pushed so far into the skin that it almost disappears within it. This is the same form of crucifixion intended by the verse; forcibly crucifying the victim to the crucifix by using nails ropes or something else.

Similarly, Allah says: '... And all that goes up in (to) them...' (Saba': 2) because (to) does not convey the intended meaning, It only conveys the meaning of final destination, such as, 'I travelled from Cairo to Alexandria', while the sky is not the final place to which good words ascend, but rather, their final destination is Allah. The sky which is defined as everything that is above earth is no more than the path that channels them to their final destination.

This meaning of the preposition (to) is also clear in Allah's words: 'Hurry towards your Lord's forgiveness...' (Al-'Imran: 133). The preposition (to) is used because forgiveness is the final destination towards which believers rush. However, Allah says: 'They are the ones who race into (towards) good things...' (al-Mu'minun: 61) because 'good works' are not the final destination to which they are rushing, but rather, they are the stages through which a believer rises, Once the believer reaches a good thing, he looks out upon another better one. So, good works resemble the path on which he moves, rather than a target at which he aims.

Similarly, Allah says about those who denied the Messengers: '... But they tried to silence them...' (Ibrahim: 9). Some scholars allege that this means that they put their hands to their mouths. Contrariwise, this is not the case because the verse expresses their full rejection of the faith principles that had been brought by the messengers. When the Messengers brought the faith principles, the disbelievers rejected the means and said, 'Save your words! They will not avail you with us at all.' Afterwards, they placed their hands inside their mouths and chewed on their knuckles in exasperation and fury against what they had heard from their messengers. This meaning could not be expressed except by this formulation.

Then Allah Glorified is He says: '… He is the Merciful, the Forgiving' (Saba': 2). Allah's Attribute, the Merciful, means 'the One Who prevents any harm happening right from the beginning, as in Allah's words: 'We send down the Quran as healing and mercy to those who believe...' (al-Isra': 82). The word 'Healing' means that the person was afflicted by an illness arising from heedlessness, so the Quran reminds and heals him of that heedlessness. In case that there is no heedlessness, then the Quran is a mercy that prevents illness from taking place right from the beginning, The word (Merciful) is an intensive adjective derived from the word (mercy).

In the same way, (Forgiving) is an intensive adjective derived from the word (forgiveness). Allah often emphatically uses this particular Attribute throughout the Quran because He created man and knows that he will not always keep to the Straight Path. Rather, it is inevitable that he will, one day, go astray from it, hence Allah says: '... Our Messenger has come to make clear to you much of what you have kept hidden of the Scripture and to forgive much [you have done]...' (al-Ma'ida: 15).

But for the Attributes of Mercy, Pardon and Forgiveness, sinners would go on acting sinfully and would feel despair of returning back to the Straight Path. That person is called the loser, who disturbs the whole society; but if he knows that Allah forgives his wrong actions and accepts his repentance, then he will repent and seek Allah's forgiveness.

Allah establishes repentance to grant mercy to the whole creation and do them a good turn. As Allah forgives the sinner, He shows mercy to the whole society by sparing them from his evil and shows mercy to the sinner by sparing him the consequences of his sins. Hence, Allah says: '... He turned to them in mercy in order for them to return [to Him]…' (at-Tawba: 118). This means that Allah establishes repentance in order to open the way before the sinners to travel back to Allah, so they could leave their wickedness and evil means to keep them from turning into tyrants.

On reflecting on Allah's words: '... If you tried to count Allah's blessings you could never calculate them...' (Ibrahim: 34), it is found that there are two verses of the Quran starting with this exact wording, but each ends differently from the other. In the first verse, Allah says: '... If you tried to count Allah's blessings you could never calculate them: man is truly unjust and ungrateful' (Ibrahim: 34). In the second verse, He the Almighty says: 'If you tried to count Allah's blessings, you could never take them all in: He is truly most forgiving and most merciful' (an-Nahl: 18).

Some people may object to this verse because the word (blessing) appears in the singular form in Arabic which cannot be counted. The refutation of this objection is that the blessing that may ostensibly seem to be single actually comprises many different ones. This has become clearer as science has advanced and people have become aware of the different elements that make up a thing. Apple, for example, appears to be a single blessing, but science shows that it contained many different elements and benefits.

In addition to the blessing itself, there is the giver and the receiver. As for the blessing, there is so much grace included within one blessing so that it can never be counted or computed. Thus, Allah uses the word 'if', indicating doubt, instead of saying, 'when', because nobody can be eager to count the blessings, i.e. they are not expected to be countable. Indeed, no one has ever dared to try to count Allah's blessings even after the establishment of universities and colleges specialising in statistics, which enumerate everything except this. The impossibility of attaining this matter is based on the fact that counting process implies the possibility of having an accurate evaluation of the blessing; the matter which cannot be achieved.

Concerning the receiver of the blessings, the man, he is a persistently wrongdoer for himself and the others and a stubbornly ingrate for the blessings he receives. If he is taken to task for that, then he would be deprived of that blessing, but he is protected from being deprived because Allah, the Giver of the blessing, is All Forgiving and All-Merciful.

وَقَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ لَا تَأْتِينَا ٱلسَّاعَةُ ۖ قُلْ بَلَىٰ وَرَبِّى لَتَأْتِيَنَّكُمْ عَٰلِمِ
ٱلْغَيْبِ ۖ لَا يَعْزُبُ عَنْهُ مِثْقَالُ ذَرَّةٍ فِى ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَلَا فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ وَلَآ
أَصْغَرُ مِن ذَٰلِكَ وَلَآ أَكْبَرُ إِلَّا فِى كِتَٰبٍ مُّبِينٍ ﴿٣﴾

Still, the disbelievers say, ‘The Last Hour will never come upon us.’ Say, ‘Yes, by my Lord, [it will], by Him who knows the unseen! Not even the weight of a speck of dust in the heavens or earth escapes His knowledge, nor anything smaller or greater. It is all recorded in a clear Record [3]
(The Quran, Saba’: 3)

Allah mentions here the Last Hour, i.e. the Day of Judgment, as He does in the end of al-Ahzab chapter: ‘People ask you about the Hour...’ (al-Ahzab: 63). In another verse, the disbelievers are said to deny its coming, as Allah says: ‘Still, the disbelievers say, “The Last Hour will never come upon us”…’ (Saba’: 3).

Indeed, they deny it because they have sinned against themselves and insistently followed the path of misguidance and know that the Day of Judgment will not be in their best interests. Accordingly, they evade it by denying such as other refuters of that Day allege, ‘If Allah has really foreordained everything for His slaves, so He foreordained their obedience and disobedience. Thus, why does Allah punish the sinners for disobeying Him?’ It is noteworthy that none of them thought about the contrary of that claim, ‘Why does Allah reward the believers for obeying Him?’ This shows that their claim is erroneous and illogical and that they fear the punishment. Those disbelievers who uttered these statements are quite sure that they have committed a lot of wrong deeds, so they deny the Resurrection such as the person who is stated to have said: 'Or that the Last Hour will ever come—even if I were to be taken back to my Lord, I would certainly find something even better there' (al-Kahf: 36).

Their recurrent questions and rejection of the Last Hour indicates their fear, in addition to their terror of even believing in it. They knew well that even if they were able to keep their actions hidden from people, they could not do so with Allah. Moreover, if they were able to evade the punishment of this world, they would not be able to avoid the judgement on the Day of Reckoning. They recognised that no controversial debate or falsification of facts would benefit on the Day of Resurrection.

As Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'Verily, I am only a human and the claimants bring to me (their disputes); perhaps some of them are more eloquent than others. I judge according to what I hear from them). So, he whom I, by my judgment, (give the undue share) out of the right of a Muslim, I in fact give him a portion of (hell) fire.'(1)

So, the judge adjudicates according to the evidence he has, but it is possible for a clever speaker to mislead him, thereby unjustly taking the rightfully share of others, just as some lawyers do today. This manipulation takes place in this life only, but as for the Hereafter, people will stand before Allah, the Utterly-Just Judge.

Those disbelievers deny the Resurrection because it is the mystery that bewilders them. Its reality terrifies and robs them of sleep, shakes them out of fame and brings their leadership to an end. Despite feeling safe in this world due to their fame and power; yet they will come on the Day of Rising defeated and broken before Allah, as mentioned in the verse: '[Allah will say], 'Now you return to Us, alone, as We first created you: you have left behind everything We gave you…' (al-An'am: 94).

(1) It is narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (2458 & 2680), as well as by Muslim in his Sahih (1713). It is excerpted from Hadith Um Salama Allah be pleased with her. It is also narrated, in another narration, that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'I am a human being and the claimants bring to me (the dispute) and perhaps some of them are more eloquent than the others. I judge him to be on the right, and thus decide in his favour. So he whom I, by my judgment, (give the undue share) out of the right of a Muslim, I give him a portion of Fire; he may burden himself with it or abandon it'.

Similarly, in the world of economics, there are some people who recurrently ask about the bank interest in Islam, to the extent that they might even ask a thousand scholars the same question. They do not make do with the opinion of one scholar because they want to hear a favourable answer that conforms to their own personal whims; they wish to have a scholar's opinion that lawfully approves bank interests. This is a thorny issue that occupies the minds of many people, but as long as it continues to uncomfortably create doubt, it will remain one of those vicious matters about which Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'Virtue is noble behaviour, and sin is that which creates doubt and you do not like people to know about it.'(1)

Afterwards, Allah responds to their rejection of the Final Hour and says, addressing His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him: '… Say, "Yes, by my Lord, [it will]…"' (Saba': 3). This means that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would negate their negative previous statement in a loud voice. It is known that whenever the negative is negated, thus, the opposite meaning is actually affirmed.

Furthermore, the verse emphasises the matter by making an oath: '… Say, "Yes, by my Lord, [it will]…"' (Saba': 3). Allah teaches Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to make an oath by His Essence, in absolute confidence that it will come; indeed, Allah does not teach His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him a false oath. Allah always speaks the truth when He does not make an oath, so how is it like when He does make an oath?

As for Allah's words after that, 'By Him who knows the unseen…' (Saba': 3), they indicate that He only tells people about the Last Hour and swears about its coming because He possesses the knowledge of the Unseen. Not only will it inevitably come, but also people will be reckoned for their sins; the major and the minor ones as well as the known and the hidden ones, for Allah, the All-Knower of the Unseen knows everything.

(1) It is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (4/182) as well as by Muslim in his Sahih (2553) in Kitab Al-Birr wa As-Sila. It is excerpted from the Hadith of An-Nuwas ibn Sam'an who said: 'I asked Messenger of Allah peace and blessings of Allah be upon him about virtue and sin, and he said, "Virtue is noble behaviour, and sin is that which creates doubt and you do not like people to know about it'.

Then Allah says: '…By Him who knows the unseen! Not even the weight of a speck of dust (atom) in the heavens or earth escapes His knowledge, and nor anything smaller or greater. It is all recorded in a clear Record' (Saba': 3) meaning that 'nothing escapes his knowledge'. In a great number of verses, Allah resembles the tiny object to the atom or the speck of dust, which could be seen in the sunrays, but due to its incredibly small size, it does not cast any sort of shadow. Thus, anything that could not be seen does not mean that it does not exist, but rather, it is minute to the extent that people need precise visual tools to see it. The naked eye cannot see everything, but a strong beam of light helps to see incredibly minute things. Hence, it is said that light and atom are the most precise measures of existence.

Thus, the engineers use these elements to check the erectness of their buildings and ensure the precision of the works. If the newly built wall that seems to be flat and straight is left for a number of days, the dust will reveal any bumps or protuberances. This happens due to the specks of dust on the wall that fall down vertically. Similarly, the faults only appear by shedding a bright light on them, even when they are so small that they cannot be seen by the naked eye. Allah says: 'He does not wrong anyone by as much as the weight of a speck of dust…' (an-Nisa': 40) because the speck of dust was the smallest thing known to man, However, this is not the case nowadays.

When Germany was defeated in World War I, it refused to be vanquished and resolved to take revenge on its enemies. So, every German citizen occupied himself within his own field of studies. Among their accomplishments is that they came up with the way of breaking up the atom; i.e. breaking up the indivisible part. This was the first time that the world thought of splitting the atom. This process is similar to the pressing of the sugar cane between two cylinders; as the distance between the two cylinders is reduced, pressing is effectively increased. In the same way, Germany made a cylinder for breaking up the atom.

After this invention, the people, trying to refute Allah's words, say, 'The Quran mentions that the atom is the smallest part in existence, but the atom is now broken up into smaller parts.' Yet, if they carefully examined the whole Quran, they would have read this verse: 'Still, the disbelievers say, "… By Him who knows the unseen! Not even the weight of a speck of dust in the heavens or earth escapes neither His knowledge, nor anything smaller or greater. It is all recorded in a clear Record' (Saba': 3). The Quran takes into account the progress that science would make in breaking up the atom and the Words of Allah are prepared for every scientific advance.

The stylistic precision in this verse shows that Allah firstly mentions the atom as the smallest known thing to man then and afterwards He mentions the smaller fragment, no matter how many times it would be broken down, to always prove the authenticity of Allah's words.

Somebody might ask here, 'If Allah grants us knowledge of the atom and the tiniest of things, then what is so special about mentioning that He knows things that are bigger than that?' Others reply, 'This is an example of the subtle language of the Quran that things are hidden either because they are extremely delicate such that people's instruments are not fine enough to perceive them, or because they are extremely greater than their perception - their size is too great for them to encompass them. So, this means that Allah has mastery over the smallest of things and the largest of things.

Not only Allah's knowledge encompasses everything in existence, but also He the Almighty records this in the Incomparable Eternal Book. There is a great difference between informing someone of a piece of information and recording this. When knowledge is not recorded, the person may say whatever he wants, otherwise, it becomes a proof of his words.

Whenever Allah highlights any issue, He keeps it in the Quran. As long as Allah keeps something in the Quran, this means that it will inevitably come to pass; otherwise, He would not have recorded and preserved it. He the Exalted fully knows that nothing will come to pass in His Dominion without knowing about it. So, His knowledge came first then He writes it.

As they denied the Day of Reckoning, Allah reminds them of the fact that His knowledge encompasses absolutely everything big and small for a profound wisdom. The reason is to distract them from thinking about the Last Hour, to make them instead think about their own sins and to know that they will be taken to task for them and that nothing escapes Allah's Knowledge. When all these happen, they will regret that they had asked about this, as Allah says: 'You who believe, do not ask about matters which, if made known to you, might make things difficult for you...' (al-Ma'ida: 101). So, as they asked about the Last Hour, as Allah distracted, troubled, and upset them as they came to know that the knowledge of Allah encompasses everything in the Heavens and the earth. Therefore, it is not merely a matter of showing up knowledge, but rather, it is a matter of knowledge that will result in their being reckoned after getting this information. So Allah says:

لِّيَجْزِيَ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَعَمِلُواْ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِۚ
أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ لَهُم مَّغْفِرَةٞ وَرِزۡقٞ كَرِيمٞ ﴿٤﴾

So that He can reward those who believe and do good deeds: they will have forgiveness and generous provision [4] (The Quran, Saba': 4)

It is quite an amazing thing that the provision is described as being generous, for this is the Attribute of the Provider of the provision. This is a rhetorical usage to convey the abundance in the provision itself which makes its way to the believer, as the poet (1) says:

Use the means to gain your provision,

Then do not occupy your mind with it.

For you do not know its address,

While your address is known to it

Afterwards, Allah says:

(1) These lines are an excerpt of Sheikh Ash-Sha'rawi's poems.

وَٱلَّذِينَ سَعَوۡ فِيٓ ءَايَٰتِنَا مُعَٰجِزِينَ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ لَهُمۡ عَذَابٞ مِّن رِّجۡزٍ أَلِيمٞ ٥

But as for those who work against Our Revelations, seeking to undermine them, there will be a torment of painful suffering [5] (The Quran, Saba': 5)

If the Arabic word sa'aw refers to the act of swiftly walking across a distance, what is meant by the phrase sa'aw fi ayatina (swiftly walked against Our messages)? How can the disbelievers swiftly walk against Allah's signs or verses? The answer to this question can be deduced from other Arabic phrases, such as the phrase, 'That man walked (sa'a) to the manager against his colleague.' This means that the man reported disgraceful matters about his colleague, perhaps to promote and benefit himself.

Therefore, the phrase: 'And those who swiftly walked against Our messages,' (Saba': 5) means that they claimed scandalous issues regarding these divine messages in order to incite and turn people against them. They wanted to encourage those who started paying attention to these messages to forsake them, and perhaps, wanted to force those who were convinced by their concepts to leave them behind. They strove against Allah's messages in order to nullify them because they knew the effects that the Quran would have on other people's hearts. Indeed, if people gave it their ears, it would inevitably affect them and pull them towards belief in Allah Glorified is He. People's hearts would fall under its influence and their tongues would never stop reciting its verses.

These are similar to the people who said: 'Do not listen to this Quran, but rather talk frivolously about it, so that you might gain the upper hand' (Fussilat: 26). If the Quran had only been ordinary words without any effect, they would not have forbidden people from listening to it. Indeed, they would have not raised their voices over its recitation, in fear of what it would do to those who heard it.

Allah Glorified is He said regarding their efforts: '…trying to defy them (mu'ajizeen)' (Saba': 5). This means that they tried to defy Allah's messages. The Arabic word mu'ajizeen is the plural form of the word mu'ajiz, the active participle of the verb 'ajaza. Lexically, its structure resembles the structures of the words qatala and muqatil. Regarding meaning, the verb 'ajaza means to race or compete with a person (naafasa). The Arabic word naafasa (competed with) was used to refer to a competition that involved two opponents holding their breath (nafas), as in underwater competitions.

It is narrated(1) that when 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him and 'Abdullah ibn 'Abbas may Allah be pleased with him passed by a lake, 'Umar said, 'Let us dive underwater to see which of us can hold his breath for a longer period.' They used to compete in that manner because they considered the length of time a person can spend underwater an indication of the strength of their respiratory system and the healthiness of their lungs. Later on, the Arabic word munafasa was used for every form of competition.

Similarly, the word 'ajaza means that each of two parties strove to prove the weakness of the other party. Therefore, the word a'jazani means, 'They forced me to do a job that I was incapable of doing.'

From this lexical interpretation, we can understand that the purpose of the disbelievers in striving against Allah's messages was to disprove the capacity of these messages. That was their way to prevent the Prophetic call from reaching Allah's creation.

How could they try to disprove Allah's messages, when He has guaranteed that His messengers would eventually be victorious and that He would never abandon them? The battles that were fought between the messengers and those who rejected them were a reason through which Allah Glorified is He granted His messengers victory.

Allah Glorified is He said: 'Fight against them! Allah will chastise them by your hands, and will bring disgrace upon them, and will succour you against them; and He will soothe the hearts of those who believe,' (at-Tawba: 14). He also said: 'For, long ago has Our word gone forth unto Our servants, the message-bearers, that, verily, they indeed would be succoured, and that, verily, Our hosts would (indeed) be victorious,' (as-Saffat: 171-173). It might be admissible to say that the disbelievers only sought to disprove and fight

(1) The story of the diving race between 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab and 'Abdullah ibn 'Abbas may Allah be pleased with them

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the believers with him. As for Allah, the All-Powerful and the All-Conquering Being, it is indeed not possible for anyone to overpower Allah Glorified is He or render Him incapable.

So, the words: '...strive against Our messages...' (Saba': 5) meant that they used their schemes and obstacles to undermine the call of Islam. They sought to defeat the purpose of its message and wanted to render Allah's words powerless. Indeed, they wanted to put their authority in place of its divinity, by trying to disprove the messenger, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Then, Allah Glorified is He stated the punishment that awaits those disbelievers opposing His messages: 'Those will have a torment of painful and grievous (rijz) chastisement' (Saba': 5). The words rijz and rujz refer to 'sins that have a heavy burden'. At its lexical root, it refers to any sinful act that deserves a serious punishment. That is why Allah Glorified is He said: 'And all the defilements (rijz) you should shun!' (al-Muddaththir: 5) We should avoid committing these sins in order to avoid the weighty punishment that results from such sins.

Their suffering will be grievous because of their vile actions. In the Quran, the punishment of the disbelievers is sometimes described as being painful (aleem) or humiliating (muheen). At other times, it is described as being considerable and tormenting (atheem). These descriptions indicate different realms of punishment.

A painful (aleem) punishment causes pain to the one who is subjected to it. If that person is stoic and claims to be able to bear it, or is a person who considers himself as an esteemed individual, then a humiliating (muheen) punishment will be more effective in affecting his condition. However, a punishment that is described as a humiliating punishment does not have to be painful. Some people may feel humiliation when they are just chided or rebuked without any physical pain. Therefore, the most effective description of a punishment is to describe it as a tormenting (atheem) punishment.

Then Allah Glorified is He said:

وَيَرَى ٱلَّذِينَ أُوتُوا۟ ٱلْعِلْمَ ٱلَّذِىٓ أُنزِلَ إِلَيْكَ مِن رَّبِّكَ هُوَ
ٱلْحَقَّ وَيَهْدِىٓ إِلَىٰ صِرَٰطِ ٱلْعَزِيزِ ٱلْحَمِيدِ ٦

[Prophet], those who have been given knowledge can see that what has been sent to you from your Lord is the truth, and that it leads to the path of the Almighty, worthy of all praise[6] (The Quran, Saba': 6)

These are words of encouragement to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. His Lord is telling him in this verse, 'O Muhammad. Do not despair or become concerned due to those people who strive against our signs, seeking to defeat the purpose of your message. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He was the One who allowed them to strive in spreading corruption. However, He was also the One Who supported you with other people who believed in your messages. These believers supported your call when they realized that it was the truth, and that the disbelievers' words were calls of drivel and falsehood.'

Allah Glorified is He reassured His Messenger, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by telling him that those disbelievers would never be able to put out the Light of Allah. Allah Glorified is He said in another verse: 'They aim to extinguish Allah's light with their utterances: but Allah has willed to spread His light in all of its fullness, however unbearable it may be to the disbelievers,' (as-Saff: 8). He also said in another verse: 'He (Allah) it is who has sent forth His Apostle with the (task of spreading) guidance and the religion of truth, so that He may cause it to prevail over all (false) religions – however unbearable this may be to the polytheists,' (at-Tawba: 33).

Allah Glorified is He said in the verse we are studying: 'And those who are blessed with (innate) knowledge are aware that (it is) the message that has been revealed upon you, from your Lord, (that) is indeed the truth,' (Saba': 6). This means that they bear witness that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him spoke truthfully, and that His message lead to the true path. These believers are the contrasting opposite to the disbelievers, who were mentioned in the previous verse.

The disbelievers were futilely seeking to defeat the Prophetic message, and are therefore, unsupported by the aid of Divine Power. In fact, their efforts will be effectively opposed and eradicated. On the other hand, knowledgeable believers who bear witness to Prophet Muhammad's message are supported by this Divine Power. Therefore, this group of believers will be triumphant.

Allah Glorified is He said: 'Those who(1) are blessed with (innate) knowledge are aware,' (Saba': 6). These are either the knowledgeable people who believed in Prophet Muhammad and affirmed his miraculous message, or are the knowledgeable people from among the people of the Book, namely the Jews and Christians. Indeed, the sincere and impartial individuals among the people of the Book knew the truthfulness of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him just as they knew their own children. These were the ones who travelled to Yathrib before Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him became a Messenger. They stayed there, waiting for him to be sent. They even used to pray for Allah's victory over the polytheists by saying to them, 'The time has almost come for a new prophet. We will follow him, and he will support us in defeating you, just as the people of 'Ad and Iram were killed.'

However, only some of them eventually believed and testified to the truth of Prophet Muhammad's message. Many of these people of the Book denied the message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when he was eventually sent. Allah Glorified is He said describing their disbelief: 'Whenever there came unto them something which they recognized (as the truth), they would deny it,' (al-Baqara: 89).

Allah Glorified is He said in the Quran: 'And (if) the disbelievers say (unto you, O Muhammad), "You have not been sent (by Allah)," say to them, "None can bear witness between me and you as Allah does, and (none can bear witness as) those who truly understand the divine book,"' (ar-Ra'd: 43). These people who truly understood the concept of divine revelations were the people of the Book (the Torah and the Gospel), namely the Jewish and the Christian people.

(1) With regard to the interpretation of those who are endowed with knowledge, there are two positions. Some scholars say that they are the Companions of Prophet Muhammad. This is what Qatada said, according to As- Suyuti's explanation in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (6/674). It was also the view of Ibn 'Abbas, according to Al-Qurtubi's explanation in his Tafsir (8/5530). The other view was that they were the believers from the people of the Book. This is what Muqatil and Ad-Dahhak said, according to the explanation of Al-Qurtubi. Al-Qurtubi said, 'It is also said that these are all the Muslims, and that is the most correct position because of its comprehensiveness.'

Knowledge is defined as every certain matter that corresponds to reality and has evidence that proves it. Any issue that does not meet those criteria is not considered to be a part of knowledge. If an issue is not certain, it may be a matter of doubt, assumption, or delusion. On the other hand, if an issue is certainly believed by a person but does not correspond to reality, then it is a form of ignorance.

We previously said that the ignorant person is not the person who does not know a particular fact, but rather, he is a person who believes in a concept that does not correspond to reality. The person who does not know a particular fact is uneducated or unlettered. His mind is devoid of that issue and resembles an unpainted canvas. Hence, an illiterate person may accept knowledge more easily than an ignorant person. This is because, with an ignorant person, you must first show them the error of their ways before you can convince them of true knowledge.

If a matter is certain and does correspond to reality, but you find yourself unable to find any evidence to back it up, then the receiver can only accept the matter by blind imitation. This is like teaching your children verses from the Quran, such as the verses: ‘Say, “He is the One Allah: the Eternal, the Cause of All That Exists,”’ (al-Ikhlas: 1-2). The child memorises these verses exactly as they are but is unable to provide evidence for their concepts. In such circumstances, the child is merely an imitator of another trustable person, such as their father or teacher. Later on, when the child reaches a stage at which they are able to provide evidence for the truthfulness of such matters, they will have truly reached a level of knowledge.

Despite the many different types of knowledge, it is possible to divide all known knowledge into two categories. The first category is the knowledge of Divine Law. The second category is the knowledge of the material world. The source of religious knowledge and its jurisprudence is Allah Glorified is He and it is conveyed to us through a Messenger by means of a miracle. No people are to have any influence over this type of knowledge. Indeed, the only role that humans are obliged to carry out, regarding religious knowledge, is transmitting and delivering it to other people, exactly as it was conveyed by their Messenger. It is this knowledge that defines the lawful and unlawful actions according to the divine commandments. Knowledge of this Divine Law should not interfere with material knowledge, but rather, was revealed to bring people's different whims under control. That is the reason people differ with respect to this form of knowledge.

As for the worldly knowledge of this material world, it is composed of the sciences that look into all the different forms of existence: inanimate objects, plants, animals, and human beings. This knowledge arises from the activity and discernment of human minds. People do not differ with one another with respect to this knowledge, because material sciences are based upon observation, research, and direct experience. That is why people fight to acquire this knowledge and sometimes even steal it from each other.

It is by means of this material knowledge that mankind can make advancements in the course of their life. The Creator has given us all the ingredients of life and its necessities. If people want to acquire life's luxuries, they must make use of their intellects and reflect upon the existence that surrounds them in order to discover the secrets and signs that Allah Glorified is He has hidden within His creation. Then, they can use these discoveries to improve their lives.

In the past, when people wanted water, they would need to get it from a river or a well. When water became scarce or difficult to obtain, people would pray to Allah Glorified is He to send down rainwater from the sky. They could do nothing else.

However, when better material and scientific methods developed, mankind obtained access to special sources of water and learned how to bring it down from higher levels to the low plains. They invented water tanks and pipes, and even started to receive water directly in their own homes, simply by turning on a tap. When the water is cut off from these people, they do not call upon Allah Glorified is He to send water from the clouds. Instead, they try to find out the reason behind the water shortage. To them, it could be a broken pipe or an electricity cut that has caused the pump's motor to stop. Therefore, technological advances have made people more reluctant to ask for Allah's bounties directly.

This material knowledge is based on reflection and intellectual efforts, and is not related to religious contemplation. In fact, with respect to these material triumphs in scientific research, believers and disbelievers are the same. The people who strive harder to take hold of this material knowledge will be granted its means. That is why we find that the majority of inventions and discoveries, such as the discovery of electricity, the telephone, and the television, were mostly made by disbelieving scientists.

So the knowledge referred to in the words: ‘Those who are blessed with (innate) knowledge are aware,’ (Saba’: 6) is, most probably, the religious knowledge of Divine Law. The religious scholars are the ones who believed that Prophet Muhammad’s message was the truth, by means of the miracle that he brought.

However, the scientists who are blessed with material knowledge still have a great role in affirming the truth of Allah’s Messengers and supporting them, by presenting the scientific signs of Allah’s existence. Indeed, just as the Quran is the recited Book of Allah (Kitab-ul-Allah Al-Maqru’), the material world around us, in all of its forms, is the witnessed Book of Allah (Kitab-ul-Allah Al-Manthoor).

This is clear when we recite the verse in which Allah Glorified is He said: ‘Are you not aware that Allah sends down water from the skies, whereby We bring forth fruits of many hues. (And) in the mountains are streaks of various shades of white and red hues, as well as (others) that are raven-black, just (as) there are in men, and in crawling beasts, and in cattle, different hues as well’ (Fatir: 27). Therefore, in this verse, Allah Glorified is He mentioned the plants, the inanimate objects, the human beings, and the animals.

Then he completed the verse with the Words: ‘Of all His servants, only those who are blessed with knowledge will, indeed, stand in awe of Allah’s Might’ (Fatir: 28). Thus, these particular verses referred to the scientists who were blessed with material knowledge of the universe and who carried out research in its different forms and laws. Such laws may be concerned with scientific, sociological, or medical principles, or they may involve other specialities in existence.

People who have these forms of material knowledge are more likely to fear Allah’s Might than non-scientific people because they saw the secrets in His creation and can effectively show them to other humans. Moreover, if they are believers, they can be supporters of Allah’s way by calling people to believe in Him. Furthermore, in addition to showing Allah’s Divine Power to the people, their words can also provide material proofs to support the scholars of Divine Law. Therefore, material knowledge or sciences have a great role in guiding people to Allah’s way.

In conclusion, both types of knowledge can build awareness that the messages conveyed by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were the truth.

On the one hand, the scholars of Divine Law bear witness to the truth of Prophet Muhammad’s direct messages. These scholars were primarily the Muslim scholars who believed in Prophet Muhammad’s Message. However, they also included the knowledgeable scholars from the people of the Book, who testified to the truth of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

On the other hand, many scientists also supported Allah’s way and testified to His existence, by revealing the secrets of His Power. Allah Glorified is He said: ‘(He is) The Knower of the Unseen; not so much as a dust’s weight in the heavens or in the earth shifts away from Him; neither is anything smaller than that, or greater, except that it is in an Evident Book,’ (Saba’: 3). A speck of dust is a miniscule particle that cannot be seen by the naked eye, except with the help of rays of sunlight. This verse means that Allah Glorified is He knows everything in existence, and there is not a single particle in the heavens or the earth that escapes His attention. Therefore, believing scientists should research the scientific phenomena that prove the Omnipotence of Allah Glorified is He.

The polytheists of Quraysh were asked, ‘Who created the heavens and the earth and everything in them?’ They answered, ‘Allah.’ Allah Glorified is He said: ‘And thus it is (with most people): if you ask them, “Who is it that has created the heavens and the earth?” They will surely answer, “Allah.”’ (Luqman: 25) Allah Glorified is He also said: ‘Now if you ask those (polytheists who worship deities with Allah) as to who it is who has created them, they are sure to answer, “Allah.” How then, are their minds astray?’ (az-Zukhruf: 87)

These polytheists did not dare to claim that Allah Glorified is He was not the Creator of this world! Furthermore, none of the disbelievers or heedless atheists in our times can claim that they created any part of His magnificent universe.

People are amazed by certain inventions and seek to immortalise the names of their inventors in the books of history. If you were to ask a primary school student, ‘Who invented the light-bulb?’ they would immediately say, ‘Edison.’ If you were to ask them about the first man to walk on the moon, they would say, ‘Neil Armstrong.’

Although people seek to immortalize such pioneers and create statues in their honour, yet, they rarely ask themselves, ‘Who created the sun? Who created the moon? Who makes the wind blow?’ These phenomena are basic concepts of our life and are not luxurious items like the achievements we already mentioned. Therefore, when this matter of creation is presented to you, it is inevitable that you call the following verse to mind: ‘Thereupon, the disbeliever was dumbfounded,’ (al-Baqara: 258). The modest disbeliever has no option but to recognize, even if momentarily, that Allah Glorified is He had created this world.

When Allah Glorified is He makes a statement and a human being makes a different statement, the human’s statement will always be obliterated in the face of Allah’s statement. That is because human beings base their laws only on events that they have seen, and do not take the emergent events of the future into account. Therefore, laws made by human beings are impotent, inadequate and always need to be amended.

Human beings illuminate their houses to the degree of their financial ability, but when Allah’s sunlight comes in, it makes all other forms of light futile. For instance, we are now sitting in a mosque, and the mosque is illuminated by electricity. We can seemingly see everything, but are still not able to see the particles of dust in the air of the mosque. However, if you were to look at the rays of sunlight shining through the window, you would see the particles of dust floating in the air. So, this dust cannot be seen except in the light of the sun.

In the same sense, the knowledge of human beings does not reveal all the unseen concepts of this life. These concepts can only be revealed by the light of Allah Glorified is He which we represented in our example by the light of the sun. If the sun, which is a structure created by Allah Glorified is He was able to show us the miniscule dust particles that were hidden from us, how could the Creator of that sun not know what is hidden from us? Thus, the major role of material science is to provide proofs that help support the truth of the Messenger's call.

There is another concept which clearly illustrates the importance of science in calling people to believe in Allah Glorified is He. We can see this concept in a verse that described the punishment of the disbelievers on the Day of Judgment: '(And) every time their skins are burnt off, We shall replace them with new skins, so that they continue to taste the suffering,' (an-Nisa': 56). These words were reported to us as a subtle reference to the pain receptors in the skin. Indeed, we knew nothing about them, until scientists studied the physiology of the body. They discovered that these pain receptors, from which the impulses of pain originate, are present in the skin. Then, the impulses pass to the spinal cord and the brain.

Therefore, the scholars of Divine Law used this matter as a proof for the truth of Allah's Words. The skin is the organ through which they will be made to taste the pain. In this way, science has helped us to prove the truthfulness of the Noble Quranic words.

Similarly, science has benefited us by proving that the earth is round and that it orbits around the sun. Allah Glorified is He informed us that the night and the day succeed one another. This is also a subtle reference to the round shape of the earth. This is clear during our times, as we see the day and night are flowing in continuous succession. However, at the beginning of the earth's creation, had the earth been flat, one of the two phases would have existed without the other! The only way for this succession to be true, since the beginning of creation, is if the earth was created as a sphere. Therefore, Allah's statement could only be understood that the earth was created as a sphere. It had a side in daylight as it was facing the sun, and another side in darkness as it was facing away from the sun. Therefore, the day and night were both there at the first moment of the earth's creation. Then, when the earth moved around, the night and the day succeeded one another. This phenomenon could not be possible without the earth being round.

Therefore, the verse we are studying can be referring to those who have been given knowledge of the Divine Law, revealed by Allah Glorified is He or to those who have been given knowledge of material existence, based upon research and observation.

In either case, Allah Glorified is He referred to them as: '...those who are blessed with (innate) knowledge' (Saba': 6). This show us that, regardless of whether a person's knowledge is of the Divine Law or of the material existence, this knowledge has been granted to that person by Allah Glorified is He. Therefore, people's knowledge is not attained by their own power, but, indeed, is a divine blessing. Allah Glorified is He does not refer to these people with knowledge as, '…those who know,' but rather said: '...those who are blessed with (innate) knowledge...' (Saba': 6).

In fact, although knowledge is a blessing from Allah Glorified is He even forgetfulness can sometimes be a great divine blessing that serves mankind. Here is an urban tale that illustrates that concept. It is said that the idea of using yeast to make bread rise during baking was a result of forgetfulness. Yeast causes bread to rise because it forms a gas that, when heated in an oven, expands the dough. This creates the gap between the two faces of the bread. It is this yeast that gives bread its distinctive appearance.

The urban tale told the story of a woman who made some dough. Then, she became distracted with other chores and forgot to bake it. After some time had passed, she remembered the dough and baked it as it was. At that moment, she discovered that this dough that was left for some time rose higher than her previous bakes. If this story was true, every piece of proper bread that we eat today could be, possibly, a result of that woman's distraction.

A similar urban tale is narrated regarding the discovery of roasting of raw meat. The tale told the story of a man who slaughtered a sheep to eat it, and then lit a fire to keep himself warm. A wolf then came along, seeking to take the sheep away from the man's grasp. The man got involved in a struggle with the wolf and a piece of the meat fell into the fire. After he had finally rid himself of the wolf, he liked the smell of the roasting meat.

Aside from these urban tales, we do observe that Allah Glorified is He guides His creation, even if by events of forgetfulness or apparent coincidences. We should realize that all types of knowledge, even material forms of knowledge, are gifts from Allah Glorified is He to His creation. Sometimes, Allah may not give you the knowledge itself, but can give you the tools that will guide you and enable you to arrive at that knowledge.

When we were learning about elementary geometry, we studied a book written by the authors H. S. Hall and S. R. Knight. The book described the method of proving the validity for a geometrical conclusion. If we have a number of successive inferences to reach the final conclusion, each of these inferences has to be established in itself before establishing the final assumption. However, the first essential calculation does not have to be proven because it is instinctively accepted.

Similarly, the source of any knowledge comes to us instinctively, as it was created by Allah Glorified is He for us. Any form of knowledge is a gift from Allah, whether it was derived from religious divine law or from the material world. Allah Glorified is He said: ‘And be pious to Allah, and Allah teaches you (herewith),’ (al-Baqara: 282). This means that Allah Glorified is He inspires and guides us to our needs, even if by means of apparent coincidences. We previously said that every secret in creation has a method for its delivery. These secrets may be disclosed as a result of human research, or can be revealed through seemingly coincidental encounters, like the way that penicillin was discovered, for instance.

Allah Glorified is He said: ‘(It is) Allah. There is no deity except Him, the Ever-Living, the Self-Subsistent Lord of all beings. Slumber does not overtake Him, nor does sleep. To Him belongs all that is in the heavens and all that is on earth. Who is there that could intercede with Him, unless it be by His permission? He knows all that lies before men and all that is hidden from them, whereas they cannot attain to any of His knowledge, except that which He wills (them to attain)’ (al-Baqara: 255).

Thus, regarding the material knowledge, Allah Glorified is He said that His creatures will never attain any gifts from this knowledge, ‘…except that which He wills (them to attain).’ This refers to the elements of knowledge which Allah Glorified is He permits to be born in this world. If He wills, He can give you this knowledge through your own research. Even in the absence of research, He can give you this knowledge by means of an apparent accident.

There is knowledge that Allah Glorified is He alone knows, and this is the unseen ghayb, which He does not disclose to any of His creation. Allah Glorified is He said: '(He is) The Knower of the Unseen, so He does not disclose His Unseen to anyone, unless it be to an apostle whom He has been pleased to select (for that knowledge),' (al-Jinn: 26-27). Therefore, no one has any part of this knowledge, except by his divine selection. As for material knowledge, there is a time and place in which it is born.

Now, we can return to the verse we are studying. Allah Glorified is He said: 'And those who are blessed with (innate) knowledge are aware that it is the message that has been revealed upon you, from your Lord, (that) is indeed the truth,' (Saba': 6).

In the literary style employed by the verse, Allah Glorified is He did not just say that these people of knowledge, '…are aware that the message that has been revealed upon you, from your Lord, is the truth.' Instead, Allah Glorified is He emphasized the uniqueness of this message by saying: '...are aware that (it is) huwa the message that has been revealed upon you, from your Lord that is indeed the truth.' This was done by the employment of the Arabic pronoun huwa. This word indicated that anything other than this Prophetic message is not a reliable account of the truth. The only truth is this message which has been revealed to His messenger, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

This is similar to the words that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him said: '(Allah,) who has created me and, it is He (huwa), the One Who guides me,' (ash-Shu'ara': 78). He did not say, 'Allah Glorified is He who has created me, guides me.' This would allow the possibility of someone else guiding him as well. It is only through saying: '...and, it is He (huwa), the One Who guides me,' (ash-Shu'ara': 78) using the pronoun huwa, that he confined the source of his guidance to Allah Glorified is He alone.

Prophet Ibrahim also said: 'And it is He (huwa), the One Who gives me to eat and to drink, and, when I fall ill, it is He (huwa), the One Who restores me to health,' (ash-Shu'ara': 79-80). Here, Prophet Ibrahim confined the source of his food, drink and healing to Allah Glorified is He. A human being might think that their created guardian, as their parents, is the source of their food and drink, when they are simply the means through which these blessings are delivered to us from Allah Glorified is He.

Similarly, you might think that healing comes at the hands of a doctor. However, the doctor is only a person who tries to treat you, and the healing comes from Allah Glorified is He alone. Allah Glorified is He stated that Ibrahim said regarding the matters of life and death: 'And (Allah) will cause me to die and then will bring me back to life,' (ash-Shu'ara': 81). Here, he does not use the pronoun huwa because bringing about life and death are not attributed to anyone other than Allah Glorified is He in the first place. Therefore, there is no presumption of them being shared by any other power. It is obvious that the words in this verse are referring to death, and not to murder. There is a distinctive difference between both, as we previously clarified.

Therefore, Allah's words: '...that it is the message that has been revealed upon you, from your Lord, that is indeed the truth,' (Saba': 6) clarified that there is only one truth. This truth was revealed by Allah Glorified is He to His Messenger. Everything else is false.

There cannot be two truths in one matter, despite the fact that a matter maybe viewed from a separate angle. For example, you might say that you paid farewell to a friend at the airport, at a particular time, before he travelled away to another city. Somebody else could object to that incident by saying that he saw your friend in his house an hour later. At that point, you may both accuse each other of lying. If you hurry to the phone and call the friend who you thought had travelled, he may inform you, for instance, that he did not travel and had to return from the airport due to a family emergency. Therefore, in this case, both the opposing statements were true, but they were viewed from separate angles.

Truth is a fixed concept that does not change and cannot be denied. How could you deny the truth when you support your claims by using the words, 'Truth be told, this is my right.' Your rights in this life are based upon the fact that they are your true shares in worldly sustenance. Thus, this truth brings you a personal benefit in this life, in addition to it being the fixed and contrasting opposite of falsehood.

That is why Allah Glorified is He said after that: '…and that it guides to the way of the Almighty Allah, the One to Whom all praise is due,' (Saba': 6). If you cannot accept the truth for what it abstractly is, and cannot support it with intrinsic dedication, at least accept it because of the benefit that it brings you. These are two distinct reasons for holding steadfastly to the concept of truth.

The terms: '...the Almighty (Al-Aziz),' (Saba': 6), declare the Divine attribute of Absolute Might, which states that Allah Glorified is He cannot be conquered or overcome. The Arabic word used is Al-Aziz (the Omnipotent Almighty Being).

As a simple lexical example, the Arabic word azeez can be used in the phrase, 'This task is difficult (azeez) for me,' which means that you are not able to overcome the task's difficulty. In the more transcendental and absolute sense, the word refers to the divine attribute of Absolute Might, which cannot be overcome by any other power. This is an attribute that should instil awe in the hearts of Allah's servants. Therefore, when you choose to reject the divine truth in His messages, you should realize that you are disobeying the Almighty Allah Glorified is He who cannot be overcome. His Omnipotent Power can conquer your world, and indeed, can never be conquered.

Then, Allah Glorified is He mentioned another Divine attribute that inspires His servants to yearn for His blessings. Allah Glorified is He said: '...The One to Whom all praise is due (Al-Hameed),' (Saba': 6). This refers to the fact that all creatures praise Allah Glorified is He for the blessings that He bestowed upon them. This attribute increases your yearning for further blessings from Allah Glorified is He by praising His previous bounties.

Then Allah Glorified is He said:

كُلَّ مُمَزَّقٍ إِنَّكُمْ لَفِى خَلْقٍ جَدِيدٍ ٧

But the disbelievers say, 'Shall we show you a man who claims that, when you have been utterly torn to pieces, you will be raised in a new creation? [7] (The Quran, Saba': 7)

Allah says' And the disbelievers said (unto their companions)' (Saba': 7). Generally speaking, any statement that is said must be directed from a speaker to a potential listener. The disbelievers were the ones who said these words. Either they were saying this statement among themselves during their nightly gatherings for entertainment, or these words were uttered by the leading disbelievers to those who followed and imitated them.

These disbelievers said, 'Shall we point out to you a man (rajul-in) who will tell you that (after your death,) when you will have been scattered in countless fragments, you shall – lo and behold! – be (restored to life) in a new act of creation?' (Saba': 7) When we read these words, our attention is drawn to the fact that they describe Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with the word rajul-in (a man) without identifying him, thereby seeking to mock and belittle his message.

This fact in itself indicates their inanity and heedlessness, for they themselves described Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him as the Messenger of Allah Glorified is He in another instance. Their words in that instance were narrated in the Quran: 'Do not spend anything on those who are with Allah's Apostle' (al-Munafiqun: 7). Similarly, when they found that a long period of time had passed between two revelations to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they claimed, 'The Lord of Muhammad has forsaken him.'(1) This was also another astonishing statement from them, as they acknowledged that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had a Lord, in a moment of greatest trial and hardship for him! They said: '"Shall we point out to you a man who will tell you that (after your death,) when you will have been scattered in the smallest forms of fragments, you shall – lo and behold! – be (restored to life) in a new act of creation?"' (Saba': 7) As for their Words: '...who will tell you (yunabi'kom) that...,' the Arabic verb yunabi'kom is derived from the word naba' which is used to indicate the revelation of an important piece of news. So, for instance, if I were to say to you, 'I ate this food today in that restaurant,' that would not be considered a naba' since it refers to an ordinary everyday activity. It is only a naba' when the piece of news is noteworthy, important and of immense value like that which is mentioned in Allah’s words: ‘About what do they (most often) ask one another? About the overwhelming news (naba’) (of resurrection)’ (an-Naba’: 1-2).

(1) Jundub ibn 'Abdullah Al-Bajli said, 'Angel Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him did not come to Prophet Muhammad may the peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him for a period of time, so the idolaters said, "Muhammad has been abandoned by his Lord."' This was narrated by Ibn Kathir in his Tafsir (4/522).

As for the meaning of the verse: ‘...when you will have been scattered (muziqtum) in the smallest forms of fragments (kulla mumazzaq),’ (Saba’: 7) the word mumazzaq is derived from the word tamzeeq which is ripping something that is whole into parts and scattering the parts far and wide. For example, a chair is a whole (kull) that is made up of parts: wood, nails, glue, cotton, and fabric. In order to do tamzeeq of that whole chair, I must separate all the parts which it is made up of from each other, thereby breaking that whole structure down into parts.

Here, we must draw a distinction between the two words kull which means ‘whole’ and the word kulli which means ‘generic class’.

A kull is a whole structure that is made up of lots of distinct and different parts. For instance, in our example of the chair, the material of wood is different from the material of nails which are different from the glue which is different from the fabric. Every part of the whole (kull) chair has its own unique class of material.

On the other hand, the word kulli is the ‘generic class’ that is used to refer to many separate things which all share the same reality. For instance, the word human, when used to refer to a number of individuals, is generic, since the word human can be used for a whole group of people, and every individual within it can be referred to as a ‘human’. However, with the word kull (whole), I cannot say that wood is, by itself, a chair.

After clarifying the process of tamzeeq, why are the words ‘kulla mumazzaq’ added afterwards? These words indicate that the ripping process will be strong enough, that the whole body is ripped to its parts, and furthermore, these individual parts are also ripped to their basic particles. Thus, this process of degeneration has different stages and forms, and the words: ‘...you will have been scattered in the smallest forms of fragments,’ (Saba’: 7) indicated that they will be broken down into the smallest structures that things can be broken to. We do observe this process in the disintegration of dead bodies into their most basic constituents and elements until they completely disappear into the earth and nothing whatsoever remains of them.

Another example of this concept is found in Allah's words: 'For (many are) they (who) say, "What! After we have been (dead and) lost in the earth, shall we indeed be (restored to life) in a new act of creation?"' (as-Sajda: 10) They were referring to the process in which they will disappear inside the earth and get lost within its labyrinths.

The process of tamzeeq, where the body is broken into tiny fragments, can happen due to any one of numerous causes. For example, the body of someone who dies and is buried disintegrates in the soil, while the body of someone who is burnt is dissipated by the fire and then, perhaps, his ashes are blown around and scattered by the wind. The body of someone who is eaten by wild animals or birds is torn apart by them. Despite this disintegration, fragmentation, and scattering, the Power of Allah Glorified is He is able to resurrect that human body anew after they have died.

Read Allah's words in the following verses: 'Qaf (An Arabic letter). Consider this sublime Quran! But nay – they deem it strange that a warner should have come unto them from their own kind; and so these disbelievers said, "A strange thing this is! After we have died, and become mere dust, how will we be resurrected? Such a return seems far-fetched indeed!"' (Qaf: 1-3). Therefore, the Quran responded to them: 'We do know how the earth consumes their bodies' (Qaf: 4). Do not be astonished, as Allah Glorified is He knows the place of every atom that has been scattered, and is indeed, able to return these atoms to each other. Allah Glorified is He said: '...for with Us is a record unfailing' (Qaf: 4). It is not just knowledge that Allah Glorified is He possesses, but this knowledge has been recorded, and so it cannot be changed or altered.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He said, stating their statement of disbelief: 'Shall we point out to you a man who will tell you that (after your death,) when you will have been scattered in the smallest forms of fragments, you shall – lo and behold! – be (restored to life) in a new act of creation?' (Saba': 7) This is a new act of creation because the body will be brought back into its original form, just as a suite is rewoven after being brought apart.

أَفْتَرَىٰ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ كَذِبًا أَم بِهِۦ جِنَّةٌۢ ۗ بَلِ ٱلَّذِينَ لَا يُؤْمِنُونَ بِٱلْـَٔاخِرَةِ
فِى ٱلْعَذَابِ وَٱلضَّلَـٰلِ ٱلْبَعِيدِ ﴿٨﴾

Has he invented a lie about God? Is he mad?' No! It is those who do not believe in the life to come who will suffer torment, for they are in gross error [8] (The Quran, Saba': 8)

This is another spoken statement that has a speaker and a potential listener. It is possible that the one who said this sentence was the same person who previously said: 'Shall we point out to you a man who will tell you that…,' (Saba': 7), and it is possible that it was his listener who replied: 'Does he (Muhammad) (knowingly) attribute his own lying inventions to Allah – or is he afflicted by insanity?' (Saba': 8)

They said: 'Does he (knowingly) attribute (aftara) his own lying inventions to Allah' (Saba': 8). The verb aftara is derived from the word iftira' which means 'telling deliberate lies.' They also said: '...or is he afflicted by insanity (jinna)?' (Saba': 8) The word jinna means madness. Generally, an insane person's words tend to be idle and senseless chatter. No weight can be attached to them and one cannot describe them as either true or false.

Why did they accuse Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of being insane, immediately after accusing him of telling deliberate lies? This is because their accusation was itself a lie, and every liar is afraid that they will be exposed for everyone to see. Therefore, the disbelievers tried to plot another fabrication to save themselves if their first fabrication is eventually disproven.

They said: 'does he (knowingly) attribute his own lying inventions to Allah, or is he afflicted by insanity?' (Saba': 8) It could easily be established that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was an honest person who had always told the truth, and that he was neither a liar nor a fabricator of falsehood. Thus, they needed to resort to a second fabrication to continue to disprove his message. That would allow them to claim nonchalantly, 'We did not know whether he was a liar or was simply insane.'

It is astounding that the disbelievers of Mecca claimed that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would falsely attribute verses to Allah Glorified is He when they had always considered him a truthful and a trustworthy man. Indeed, they had never heard a lie pass his lips, nor had they seen him orate sermons or compose poetry. They were a people of eloquence and fine words, and had a taste for the nuances of language and a strong understanding of the stylistic devices of Arabic speech. Indeed, they should have used their intellects first before directing such accusations against Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Additionally, eloquence or outstanding talents of speech do not suddenly appear in a person after the age of forty years. Generally, such remarkable talents appear near the end of the second decade or the beginning of the third decade of a person's life. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had spent forty years amongst them before conveying a single word to them from Allah Glorified is He.

That is why the Quran used such proofs to argue against them. In the following verse, the Quran states the words of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in which he said: 'Indeed, a whole lifetime have I dwelt among you before this (revelation came unto me): will you not, then, use your reason?' (Yunus: 16) They should have reflected upon the matter of his truth using their intellects, as they were a people versed in eloquence and the fine arts of the Arabic language. They had seen orators and poets living among them, who have filled the world with words. Have they ever seen anything like these orations or poems from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him?

Thus, when some of them claimed that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was afflicted with insanity, it was a precautionary alternative fabrication. When the truthfulness of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was easily pointed out, they said, 'We said that he was either a liar or a madman.' Allah Glorified is He responded to these people by saying: 'Nay (Bal), (there is no madness in this Prophet) but they who will not believe in the Hereafter are (bound to lose themselves) in suffering and a profound aberration,' (Saba': 8).

Generally, the Arabic word bal is used to negate and deny the false concepts that were mentioned in the sentence before it. It also affirms the sentence coming after it. So, here, the word bal (nay) completely negated and refuted that Prophet Muhammad was a liar or a madman. Certainly, the disbelievers have never heard him utter a lie nor seen upon him any sign of madness peace and blessings be upon him. The disbelievers themselves, had previously praised Prophet Muhammad and called him, 'The truthful and trustworthy one'. Generally, insane people are neither praised nor blamed for their words, and cannot be judged for the truth or falsehood of what they say. Indeed, these disbelievers never saw any signs of insanity in his character.

Allah Glorified is He said: 'Nun (An Arabic letter), Consider the pen, and all that they write (therewith)! You are not, by your Lord's grace, a madman! And, verily, for you shall be a reward never-ending. For, behold, you indeed have sublime morals,' (al-Qalam: 1-4). Can a madman be described as having a noble character? Can he be described with fine manners or trustworthiness or any of the other noble qualities of nature?

They claimed that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was insane when they had previously bore witness that he had the most praiseworthy qualities a human soul can possess. It was to the extent that they used to place their valuable possessions in his trust, and that is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, left 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb in his place when he immigrated to Medina. 'Ali was charged with the obligation of returning the trusts and deposits that had been left with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to their rightful owners.(1)

After Allah Glorified is He had shown the falsehood of their lies against Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him He also declared the punishment that they will meet on account of their lies. Allah Glorified is He said: 'Nay, (there is no madness in this Prophet), but they who will not believe in the Hereafter are (bound to lose themselves) in suffering and a profound aberration.' (Saba': 8) They will suffer because they accused Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of lying and falsely attributing things to Allah Glorified is He and indeed, Prophet Muhammad never lied.

(1) Ibn 'Ishaq said, 'According to what has been narrated to me, no one knew of the departure of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when he went except for 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb, Abu Bakr As-Siddiq may Allah Glorified is He be pleased with him and the family of Abu Bakr may Allah be pleased with him. As for 'Ali, according to what has been narrated to me, Prophet Muhammad peace and th blessings be upon him told him about his departure and commanded him to take his place in Mecca so that he could return the things that had been placed in the trust of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was in Mecca, whenever any person feared for some property of theirs, they would leave him in his trust because of the trustworthiness and truthfulness with which he was known for. (The Sira of Ibn Hisham 2/485).

They were also in a profound aberration because they described Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as being insane. That claim aimed to discredit his message, even if he did not lie. So, they will meet a severe punishment for accusing him of telling lies against Allah Glorified is He and they will also be profoundly misguided for accusing him of insanity.

Allah Glorified is He said:

أَفَلَمْ يَرَوْا۟ إِلَىٰ مَا بَيْنَ أَيْدِيهِمْ وَمَا خَلْفَهُم مِّنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ
وَٱلْأَرْضِ ۚ إِن نَّشَأْ نَخْسِفْ بِهِمُ ٱلْأَرْضَ أَوْ نُسْقِطْ عَلَيْهِمْ كِسَفًا
مِّنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ ۚ إِنَّ فِى ذَٰلِكَ لَءَايَةً لِّكُلِّ عَبْدٍ مُّنِيبٍ ﴿٩﴾

Do they not think about what is in front of them and behind them in the heavens and earth? If We wished, We could make the earth swallow them, or make fragments from the heavens fall down upon them. There truly is a sign in this for every servant who turns back to God in repentance [9]
(The Quran, Saba': 9)

The Arabic hamza was used in the beginning of this verse, in the word a-falam, to indicate that it was a question. The meaning is, 'How can they see these warnings and fail to take heed of Allah's signs in His creation?' Those signs were obvious to them because they lived in a desert, where the sky was totally exposed to them. There were no tall buildings to block the signs of Allah Glorified is He from their view, as is the case with the city-dwellers, who rarely see the sun or the moon clearly. Indeed, when eclipses happen, city residents only know about them from reports they read in the newspapers. As for the Bedouins, they live in the vast desert where the full extent of the sky can be seen. The sun is their intimate companion during the day, and the moon and the stars are their intimate companions during the night. They can easily look upon these signs and reflect upon them.

That is why an Arab man[1] once said, when he was in his natural state reflecting upon the sky that surrounded him, 'The sky is full of constellations, the earth is full of broad valley ways, and the ocean is full of waves. Footsteps indicate the presence of a travelling person and droppings indicate the presence of camels. Do not all of those things indicate the existence of the All-Pervading, the All-Aware (Allah)?'

Thus, Allah's clear signs were in front of these disbelievers, while they accused Prophet Mohammad and paid no heed to the signs of Allah. Allah Glorified is He said: 'Did they, then, not see how the sky and the earth lie open before and behind them?' (Saba': 9)

The meaning of the words: '...the sky and the earth lie open before them,' (Saba': 9) was that these monumental parts of creation were in front of their eyes. The meaning of the words: '...behind them,' was that most (of these spectacles) were still hidden from their views. It is also possible for us to add, that these monuments extended, 'to the right of them and to the left of them.' Indeed, whichever direction they looked, they would have found nothing but skies. However, Allah Glorified is He did not say, '…under them,' because human beings are not capable of piercing through the earth right to the other side.

Reflect upon that immense sky that has been created without being held up by a single visible support! We are not even able to keep up a small tent without fastening it with ropes and pegs and raising it on top of a tent-pole. Then, if a strong wind were to blow upon it, it would uproot its poles and pegs and cause it to collapse upon itself. So how can you pass by Allah's signs in the sky and the earth without reflecting upon them?

Then Allah Glorified is He said: '(Or that,) if We so willed, We could cause the earth to swallow them,' (Saba': 9) like it swallowed up Qarun (Korah).

(1) He is Qiss ibn Sa'ida ibn 'Amr from the tribe of Banu Iyad. He was one of the wise men of the Arabs and one of the greatest orators among them in the time of ignorance before Islam. He was the bishop of Najran, and came as a visitor to the emperor of the Byzantines, who honoured and exalted him. He lived to an old age and met Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him before his Prophethood. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saw him at 'Ukaz, and when he was later asked about him, said, 'He will be gathered as a nation on his own.' (Al-'A'lam of Az-Zirikli 5/196)

He also said: '...or cause fragments of the sky (kisafan) to fall down upon them,' (Saba': 9) like the claps of thunder that came down upon those who denied the Messengers in previous times. The word kisafan is the plural of the word kisfa which means 'a piece'.

'In all of this, behold, there is a message (aya) indeed for every servant (of Allah) who is wont to turn unto Him (in repentance)' (Saba': 9). The word aya (lesson) here means that it is a warning lesson for every servant who tries to turn his back upon his Lord's Commandments. It is as if Allah Glorified is He has placed these signs in creation to remind every heedless person and to answer every disbeliever. Allah Glorified is He wanted to awaken their hearts by a desire to go back to their Lord, for if a disbeliever were to come back to his Lord, his Lord would accept him. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He has created this creation and wanted them to have a pleasant abode. However, they must be tested to select those of them who deserve happiness, and make a distinction between those who are obedient to the way of Allah Glorified is He and those who disobey Him.

This is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The likeness of me and you are that of a man who lights a fire, and then the flies and moths started to crowd around it. I grab unto you to stop you from falling into the fire while you slip away from me.'(1) So, Allah Glorified is He keeps the door of hope open for his servants, to allow the disbelievers among them to return to His commandments.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was related to have said, 'Allah Glorified is He is more pleased with the repentance of one of His servants than any of you are pleased at finding a camel after losing it in the desert.'(2)

(1) It is narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (2285) as part of a Hadith from Jabir ibn 'Abdullah may Allah be pleased with him. It is agreed upon by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (6483) and Muslim in his Sahih (2284) as being part of a Hadith from Abu Hurayra may Allah be pleased with him.

(2) It is narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (2747) as part of a Hadith from Anas ibn Malik may Allah be pleased with him that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Allah's pleasure at the repentance of a slave who turns back to him is greater than that of one of you who is riding his camel, and then that camel escapes from him, taking with it all of his food and drink. So that man, losing all hope of finding it, makes=

Therefore, through repentance and turning back to Allah Glorified is He Allah will open the door by which one can return to Him. This continues to be true, even if the person is forced to repent by forces such as old age or illness.

These forces may help keep people at a distance from the clutches of their appetites. This may prompt them to turn to Allah Glorified is He and fix the things that have gone wrong in their relationships with their Lord and Creator. Eventually, when they come back to Him on the Day of Resurrection, they will be purified from their sins. Indeed, this is because all of mankind is Allah's creation and is crafted by Him, and certainly, every creator wants goodness and happiness for his creation.

We previously mentioned a Qudsi Hadith which made it clear that the heavens, earth, mountains and oceans, all rebelled against the children of Adam, and asked the permission of their Lord to wipe them out. The sky said, 'My Lord, give me permission to drop fragments of the sky upon them, for they have eaten up all your resources and prevented you from being thanked.' What did Allah Glorified is He say in response to this? He said, 'Leave Me and My creation alone! If you had created them, you would have been merciful towards them. If they turn back to Me, I am their Beloved, and if they do not turn back to Me, then I am their cure.'(1)

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

= his way to a tree and lies down in its shade, and while he is there, he suddenly finds his camel standing before him, so he grabs it by the halter, and mistakenly says in his immense joy, 'O Allah Glorified is He You are my slave and I am your Lord.' He made a mistake because of his excessive joy.

(1) It is narrated by Al-Ghazali in 'Ihya' 'Ulum Ad-Din (4/52) as a statement of a man from the early generations of Muslims. The wording was as follows, 'No slave disobeys me except that his place upon the earth seeks permission to swallow him up, and the ceiling of sky above him seeks permission to drop portions of the sky upon him. So Allah Glorified is He said to the earth and the sky, 'Keep back from My slave and grant him time, for it was not the two of you who created him. If you had created him, you would have shown mercy to him. For, perhaps, he will turn back to Me and I will forgive him, and perhaps he will be transformed into a righteous man and I will transform (his bad actions) into good actions.'

وَلَقَدۡ ءَاتَيۡنَا دَاوُۥدَ مِنَّا فَضۡلٗاۖ يَٰجِبَالُ أَوِّبِي مَعَهُۥ وَٱلطَّيۡرَۖ وَأَلَنَّا لَهُ ٱلۡحَدِيدَ ١٠
أَنِ ٱعۡمَلۡ سَٰبِغَٰتٖ وَقَدِّرۡ فِي ٱلسَّرۡدِۖ وَٱعۡمَلُواْ صَٰلِحًاۖ إِنِّي بِمَا تَعۡمَلُونَ بَصِيرٞ ١١

We graced David with Our favour. We said, 'You mountains, echo God's praises together with him, and you birds, too.' We softened iron for him [10] saying, 'Make coats of chain mail and measure the links well.' 'Do good, all of you, for I see everything you do'[11] (The Quran, Saba': 10-11)

After opening the door of repentance to His servants and giving them hope, even the unbelievers among them and despite the harm they caused to the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him and the false controversy they exerted against the Word of Allah, the True Lord Glorified is He remains merciful to them and loving for their welfare; He kindly draws their attention to the enormous wideness of His mercy.

It is as if He Glorified is He was saying to them, 'However your bad actions and sins are too many, it is not so before the Mercy of Allah; do not let those sins prevent you from repenting and coming back to Allah. If you have sinned, there are messengers who incidentally made a mistake despite being prophets. It is as though the True Lord Glorified is He were, despite all of these things, still searching for excuses for them.

Therefore, He mentions after that the story of the Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him: 'And [thus], indeed, did We grace Dawud with Our favour...' (Saba': 10). In another verse of the Quran, He Glorified is He clarified the matter with David: '...And [suddenly] Dawud understood that We had tried him: and so he asked his Sustainer to forgive him his sin, and fell down in prostration, and turned unto Him in repentance.' (Sad: 24)

So, do not be embarrassed to repent and go back to your Lord, for a master of the human beings to whom I gave such-and-such of power and grace, made an error, and asked forgiveness of his Lord; he fell down in prostration and turned to Him in repentance. Thus, Allah wants to soften their hearts so that they can return to their Lord.

And similarly, a small mistake occurred at the hands of Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him because of which our Lord tried and blamed him.

Then, he repented and sought forgiveness. Read the verse: 'But [ere this], indeed, We had tried Solomon by placing upon his throne a [lifeless] body…' (Sad: 34); a lifeless body means that Sulaiman could not make any movement: '...and thereupon he turned [towards Us; and] [34] he prayed: "O my Sustainer! Forgive me my sins, and bestow upon me the gift of a kingdom which may not suit anyone after me: verily, Thou alone art a giver of gifts!" [35] (Sad: 34-35); Then, Allah accepted his repentance and rewarded him: 'And so We made subservient to him the wind, so that it gently sped at his behest whithersoever he willed, [36] as well as all the rebellious forces [that We made to work for him] – every kind of builder and diver – [37] and others linked together in fetters. [38]' (Sad: 34-38)

It is, therefore, said that one time when Sulaiman peace be upon him was riding his flying carpet, a trace of pride entered his soul, whereupon the carpet veered to one side. So, he said to it, 'Straighten up, carpet', and the carpet replied, 'We are only commanded to obey you when you obey Allah Glorified is He. (1)' That is, 'It is by Allah's will and power, not by yours, that we are subjected to you.'

'And [thus], indeed, did We grace Dawud with Our favour...' (Saba': 10). Favour is the translation of the Arabic word (fadl) which literally means surplus, overabundance, etc. Allah Glorified is He gave Dawud peace be upon him many blessings not given to many of the other Prophets: Allah made him a prophet and revealed to him the Divine System. Allah also bestowed Dawud an additional blessing that was specific to him which is He Glorified is He made iron ductile for him; He Glorified is He says: '...And We made iron malleable to him [and inspired him thus:] "Make full-length coats of mail."' (Saba': 10-11) The words of Allah Glorified is He, '...with our...' (Saba': 10) indicate that the blessing is not gained by the work of Dawud; rather, it is a grace from Allah. In the Arabic verse, the structure of the preposition and pronoun, minna precedeing the object fadl shows that the capacity to grant that blessing is confined to the Bestower of blessings Glorified is He. It is similar to the same structure of the preposition and pronoun that comes in the story of our Musa (Moses) peace be upon him: '...And [thus early] I spread My Own love over thee...' (Ta Ha: 39).

(1) I did not find this Prophetic Hadith in any of the source books I was able to check. But if we were to subject this Hadith to what we find mentioned in the Quran and Sunna, we would become certain that it is not sound, and God Glorified is He knows best. God: 'And so We made subservient to him the wind, so that it gently sped at his behest...' (Sad: 36). Ibn 'Abbas said that this means that it is obedient to him, going wherever he wants it to. (Ad-Durr Al-Manthur 7/189) By means of this, it is shown that it is not possible the wind rejected any command of his. As for the pride and haughtiness which possessed Solomon peace be upon him at that time, it is refuted by that which Salman ibn 'Amir Ash-Shaybani narrated. He said, 'It has reached me that the Messenger of God peace and blessing be upon him said, 'Have you not looked at Solomon and the kingdom which God granted him - he did not raise his gaze once to the sky until he passed away, so great was his humility.' (This is narrated by both Ibn Abu Shayba and 'Abd ibn Hamid) Ibn Abu Hatim narrated the like of this Hadith from Ibn 'Umar Allah be pleased with him who said that the Prophet peace and blessing be upon him said: 'Out of humility, Solomon did not raise his gaze to the heavens until he passed away.' (These Hadiths are all narrated by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur 7/189) God Glorified is He is more exalted and knows best.

It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He were saying to His Prophet, Musa peace be upon him, 'The family of Pharaoh took you, and picked you out of the river at a time when they were killing all the male infants. You came to them in a doubtful manner and yet they loved you and you became a source of delight to them. At that time, you were dark-skinned, big-nosed, and curly-haired; there was nothing about your appearance that would especially attract their attention. But remember that I spread My own love over you and so they came to love you.'

Allah's bounties and favours cover all people, but the Messengers are granted special blessings and a special form of bounty in the form of the miracles with which Allah provides them. Allah Glorified is He explains His favour to the Prophet Dawud peace be upon him: '..."O you mountains! Sing with him the praise of Allah! And [likewise] you bird!" And We softened all sharpness in him' (Saba': 10).

'..."O you mountains!' is a vocative statement; Allah Glorified is He is calling to the mountains because they can hear His call and are aware of it: '...Sing with him the praise of Allah…' (Saba': 10), i.e. repeat after him what he says and what he recites from the Psalms and glorification of Allah. This is the proof that he understood the language of the mountains and that they could understand and repeat his words after him. So, the mountains have a form of speech and language which Allah Glorified is He made His Prophet, Dawud peace be upon him to understand.

We dealt with the topic of the inanimate objects glorifying their Lord when we discussed the Holy verse: ‘...and there is not a single thing but extols His limitless glory and praise: but you [O men] fail to grasp the manner of their glorifying Him’ (al-Isra’: 44). We have refuted the statement of those who claim that it was unspoken glorification, not spoken one because Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...but you [O men] fail to grasp the manner of their glorifying Him!…’ (al-Isra’: 44), and as Allah Glorified is He judges that we cannot understand their glorification that indicates that their glorification is in some form of speech.

Those who say that the glorification of mountains is by connotation consider it to be astounding that a mountain might have a language and a means of communication and understanding, but are we saying that the mountains speak to you? No, it speaks with its Lord and Creator, the One Who says: 'How could it be that He who has created [all] should not know [all]? Yea, He alone is unfathomable [in His wisdom], all aware!' (al-Mulk: 14) So, what does this matter have to do with you? And why do you deny it?

Reflect upon Allah’s words: 'and the thunder extols His limitless glory and praises Him, and [so do] the angels, in awe of Him...' (ar-Ra‘d: 13). Allah Glorified is He mentions the glorification of an inanimate object, the thunder, in conjunction with that of the angels, the highest form of created being. But what is the connotation in connection with the angels' glorification? Why is that amazing when it has been shown that every single thing has a language that becomes it? For we have seen that hoopoe birds have their own language, ants have their own language and so on.

An aspect of the greatness of Dawud lays in the fact that he understood the language of the mountains and was able to hear their glorification, and that their glorification corresponded exactly to his own. Likewise: '...you bird!’…' (Saba’: 10), i.e. ‘O bird, sing with Dawud the praise of Allah, and repeat the glorification after him.’

'...And We made iron malleable for him' (Saba’: 10). This is another miracle of the miracles of Dawud peace be upon him. If Allah Glorified is He mentions several things and then one of them happens in reality exactly as He said, should I not believe Him with respect to all the others?

So, when Allah Glorified is He says: '...And We made iron malleable for him' (Saba’: 10), we must believe that it is true and believe that, in the hands of Dawud, iron did indeed become like the plasticene clay that children mould and fashion into whatever shapes they desire.[1] Some people think that: '...And We made iron malleable for him,' simply means that Allah Glorified is He taught him that fire melts iron; if that was the case, then it would not have been miraculous in any way, and it would have been something that set him apart from other people.

Iron has many special properties and comes in many different types, and the extent of its importance depends to a great extent on how hard it is. It is because of its importance that Allah Glorified is He sent it from on high just as He sent down the Books. Therefore, after speaking about Messengers such as Musa and ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon them and speaking about sending down the Books, Allah Glorified is He mentions iron in the chapter of al-Hadid: '...and We bestowed [upon you] from on high [the ability to make use of] iron, in which there is awesome power as well as [a source of] benefits for man…' (al-Hadid: 25).

‘… We bestowed [upon you] from on high' is the translation for the Arab phrase 'anzalna' (we sent down to you). It is well known that things can only be sent down from somewhere up high; so, the True Lord Glorified is He sent down the Books which the Messengers conveyed to guide those who accept guidance and listen to it, and sent down iron to deter the disobedient and drive them back. Thus, there is great force in iron in times of war, and much benefit for people in times of peace.

That is why He Glorified is He says after that: '...and [all this was given to you] so that Allah might mark out those who would stand up for Him and His apostles, even though He [Himself] is beyond the reach of human perception. Verily, Allah is powerful, almighty!' (al-Hadid: 25) How would they stand up for Allah and His apostles? It is by using iron against His enemies in times of

---

(1) ‘Abd Ar-Razzaq, ‘Abad ibn Humayd and Ibn Al-Mundhir all narrated that Qatada said about the Words: '...And We softened all sharpness in him,' (Saba’ 10) ‘After God Glorified is He softened iron for him, he used to form it into rings in his hand, manipulating it in his hands in the same way that one manipulates clay, without putting into a fire or striking it with a hammer. (It is narrated by As- Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur 6/676).

war. Dawud peace be upon him was given by Allah Glorified is He both the Book for guidance and the iron for war.

Thus, Allah says to him: '[and inspired him thus:] "Make full-length coats of mail…"' (Saba': 11), i.e. make broad armours. These are the war garments soldiers put on, especially over the chest where the heart and the two lungs are contained, in preparation for battle to protect themselves from being killed. Allah Glorified is He did not say here, 'Make a hoe' or 'Make a plough' since such things are used for cultivating land. On the contrary, Allah Glorified is He wants the believers to protect the Divine System and drive back the disobedient.

Before Dawud peace be upon him armours used to be made smooth and slippery so that swords would slide off it and be deflected to a less vital part of the body. So, people used to make armours to the size that fits only the chest area. But then Allah Glorified is He taught Dawud to make it wider and longer so that it could protect as large an area of the body as possible. Allah says: '[and inspired him thus:] "Make full-length coats of mail…"' (Saba': 11).

Allah also taught Dawud to make it in the form of intermeshed iron rings: '…measuring the links with care'…' (Saba': 11), i.e. do perfect the method of making these iron rings interlink with one another so that when the armour is struck by a sword, the sword sticks in one of them and cannot move.

The armour of 'Ali Allah be pleased with him had only one front part and hand not a back part. When some people asked him why he did not have armour for his back as well, he replied, 'May my mother be bereaved of me if I ever allow an enemy to attack me from behind!'(1)

Then, reflect on the fact that Allah Glorified is He did not first teach His prophet, Dawud peace be upon him production of instruments used for peace, but first taught him manufacturing military equipment and preparing the tools to fight those who break their word to Allah and deviate from His way: Allah taught him to arm himself with all the powers he could muster.

(1) This Hadith is narrated by Ibn Qutayba Ad-Dinwara in his book, ''Uyun Al-Akhbar' (1/131), wherein he said, 'The armour of 'Ali Allah be pleased with him had a front part and no back part. When he was asked about that, he said, 'When my enemy is able to attack me from my back, then that will not save me.'

The words '...measuring the links with care…' (Saba': 11) mean: design and shape them using precise measurements, making sure they are carefully knitted. Scholars said the word 'links' (sard, in Arabic) refers to the rings from which chainmail armour is composed. These rings have holes into which nails are driven to fasten the rings together.

So, the meaning of: '…and measuring the links with care…' is 'Do not make the holes so large that the nails come loose, nor so small that the nails close the ring and prevent them from linking to one another.' Others have said that: '...measuring the links with care…' means, 'Make as many of them as you need', and it is in this sense that the following story is told:

It is narrated(1) that prophet Dawud peace be upon him used to live off the public purse of the believers since he was the one in charge of their affairs. So, Allah Glorified is He sent down to the people at that time an angel in the form of a man. Then, people began to ask him, 'How does Dawud live?' He replied, 'He does have many good qualities, but he lives off the public purse.' When news of these words reached Dawud, he became angry, felt pain on account of them and started to weep. So, he called on his Lord, saying: 'My Lord, why have You made this issue of mine?' So, Allah Glorified is He taught him how to make suits of armour so that he could make a living from them. (2)

He used to make a suit of armour for four thousand (3), from which he would live until it ran out. Then, he would make another suit of armour and so on. So, when Allah Glorified is He commanded him to make armours, He said: '...and measuring the links with care…' (Saba': 11) meaning, 'Make them according to your needs, and do not go to excess in terms of the number you make'

(1) The story of Dawud peace be upon him with the shields

(2) Al-Hafizh ibn 'Asakir mentioned this story in his biography of Dawud peace be upon him by way of Ishaq ibn Bashar from Abu Ilyas from Wahb ibn Munabbih. Ibn Kathir said in his Tafsir (3/527) after narrating the Hadith, 'Ishaq ibn Bashar is the subject of dispute.'

(3) Ibn Shawdhab said this, according to what was narrated by Al-Hakim At-Tirmidhi in Nawadir Al-Usul, and Ibn Abu Hatim said, 'Dawud would make a suit of armour every day and sell it for six thousand dirhams, two thousand of which were for his family and four thousand of which he used to use to feed white bread to the tribe of Israel.' (It is narrated by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur 6/676).

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '...And [thus should you all, O believers,] do righteous deeds: for, verily, I see all that you do!' (Saba': 11) It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He was saying to his Prophet Dawud peace be upon him 'Remember, when you do what is demanded of you, that I see and overlook all that you do.' This reminder is given to a Prophet who is immune to doing wrong action, so how do you think it is with us?

We notice that whenever a worker is being watched by their employer, they do it well, but when the employer is absent, the worker neglects the work and acts dishonestly towards them; Allah Glorified is He warns us about this matter.

This is a brief account of the story of Dawud peace be upon him mentioned in this chapter, and there are stories of him in other chapters of the Holy Quran.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَلِسُلَيْمَٰنَ ٱلرِّيحَ غُدُوُّهَا شَهْرٌ وَرَوَاحُهَا شَهْرٌ ۖ وَأَسَلْنَا لَهُۥ عَيْنَ ٱلْقِطْرِ ۖ وَمِنَ ٱلْجِنِّ مَن
يَعْمَلُ بَيْنَ يَدَيْهِ بِإِذْنِ رَبِّهِۦ ۖ وَمَن يَزِغْ مِنْهُمْ عَنْ أَمْرِنَا نُذِقْهُ مِنْ عَذَابِ ٱلسَّعِيرِ ﴿١٢﴾

And [We subjected] the wind for Solomon. Its outward journey took a month, and its return journey likewise. We made a fountain of molten brass flow for him, and some of the jinn worked under his control with his Lord's permission. If one of them deviated from Our command, We let him taste the suffering of the blazing flame [12] (The Quran, Saba': 12)

That is, just as Allah gave Dawud a great favour from Him, part of which was that Allah caused the mountains to sing the praise of Allah Glorified is He with him and caused iron to be soft for him, Allah also favoured his son Sulaiman peace be upon him making the wind subservient to him, obeying his commands.

We previously explained that when the word 'reeh' (wind) is used in the singular, it indicates that it bears evil and punishment, and when it is used in the plural, it indicates that it bears goodness and mercy. An example is the following verses: 'And [you have the same message] in [what happened to the tribe of] 'Ad, when We let loose against them that life-destroying wind [41] which spared nothing of what it came upon, but caused [all of] it to become like bones dead and decayed. [42]' (adh-Dhariyat: 41-42) Another example is: '...[But Hud said:] "Nay, but it is the very thing which you [so contemptuously] sought to hasten – a wind bearing grievous suffering,"' (al-Ahqaf: 24).

Regarding the plural form 'Riyah' (winds), this verse is an example: 'And We let loose the winds to fertilize [plants]…' (al-Hijr: 22). To make things clearer: when there is a single wind, it is considered destructive because it comes from one direction. Things remain upright and perfectly balanced because the winds surround them from all sides. Skyscrapers, for example, are supported by air that surrounds them; if air were to be emptied from one particular direction then they would fall down in that direction. That is why a single wind is considered a type of a punishment, while multiple winds are considered a kind of mercy. Do you not see that the hurricanes that bring destruction come from a single direction?

But, did Allah Glorified is He make the winds subservient to Sulaiman peace be upon him or did He make the wind subservient to him? Scholar said that not all winds were subjected to Sulaiman, but it was one particular wind which Allah Glorified is He subjected to obey his instructions. That wind gave Solomon so great might and power that no one could oppose or resist him.

Therefore, Sulaiman was the only Prophet and king against whom no one waged war; indeed, no one dared to challenge his kingship or prophethood. How could they dare to when he possessed a power that no one else had? His sovereignty was a sovereignty of force; if he desired something, he could compel everyone to bow to his will.

As for our Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him his message has come to capture the hearts, not to compel the bodies that contain the hearts. Therefore, Allah points out to him this issue in the verse saying: 'Had We so willed, We could have sent down unto them a message from the skies so that their necks would [be forced to] bow down before it in humility.' (ash-Shu'ara': 4)

'...its morning course [covered the distance of] a month's journey, and its evening course, a month's journey...' (Saba': 12): 'Morning course' (ghuduw) is travelling at the beginning of the day and 'evening course' (rawah) is returning at the end of the day.

'...And We caused a fountain of molten copper to flow at his behest…' (Saba': 12), i.e. We melted copper for him in the same way that We made iron soft for his father. This is one of the favours for which Allah Glorified is He singled out Sulaiman. You remember the story of the dam which Dhu Al-Qarnayn built; when he finished building it, he said: '…Bring me molten copper which I may pour upon it.' (al-Kahf: 96); that is 'melted copper' so that no one would be able to drill through the dam.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He mentions another specific characteristic of Sulaiman peace be upon him: '...and [even] among the invisible beings there were some that had [been constrained] to labour for him by his Sustainer's leave...' (Saba': 12). The meaning of: '...by his Sustainer's leave...' is that Allah Glorified is He made everything that is mentioned here subservient to his Prophet, Solomon; he himself had nothing to do with it.

Therefore, Allah says: '...and whichever of them deviated from Our command…' (Saba': 12), i.e. deviates or turns aside from it, or disobeys the command: '...him would We let taste suffering through a blazing flame' (Saba': 12). So, the command of Sulaiman to the jinn was, in effect, deriving its power from the command of Allah Glorified is He; thus, if anyone were to disobey the command of Sulaiman, they would be considered disobeying Allah.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

يَعۡمَلُونَ لَهُۥ مَا يَشَآءُ مِن مَّحَٰرِيبَ وَتَمَٰثِيلَ وَجِفَانٖ كَٱلۡجَوَابِ وَقُدُورٖ
رَّاسِيَٰتٍۚ ٱعۡمَلُوٓاْ ءَالَ دَاوُۥدَ شُكۡرٗاۚ وَقَلِيلٞ مِّنۡ عِبَادِيَ ٱلشَّكُورُ ١٣

They made him whatever he wanted – palaces, statues, basins as large as water troughs, fixed cauldrons. We said,
'Work thankfully, family of David, for few of my servants are truly thankful' [13] (The Quran, Saba': 13)

Maharib which is translated into 'sanctuaries' is the plural of mihrab which designates both a huge, roomy palace and a place which people designate for worship. An example of this latter usage is found in Allah's Words: '...Whenever Zakaryya visited her in the sanctuary, he found her provided with food' (Al-'Imran: 37).

Tamathil (Statues) is the plural of timthal which is sculptures carved out of stone, for example, or fashioned into the form of a human being, an animal, a bird etc. With particular regard to this matter of statues, a question arises: Does Allah Glorified is He bestow blessings upon His Prophet Sulaiman by having the jinn construct statues for him despite the fact that statues are known to be the symbol for polytheism, and despite the fact that the Prophets have always destroyed them and forbade people from worshipping them instead of Allah?

Scholars said that those statues were only destroyed when people started to take them as deities and objects of worship. But before that, people did not worship them, but used them as instruments of service(1) and in indication to their humiliation and insignificance.

For example, in the antiquities from ancient times, there are chairs and tables the legs of which are in the form of lions and such like. And even today, there are palaces whose balconies are in the form of a man crouched over carrying a balcony on his back instead of the concrete balconies we build today. So, statues were originally used to indicate something's lowness and insignificance, and then when they started to be worshipped, they were made forbidden and people were commanded to destroy them.

In '...and basins as [large as] great watering-troughs...' (Saba': 13), the word jifan (watering troughs) is the plural of jifna which is a well-known form of dish: '...as [large as] great watering-troughs...', i.e. like the huge, wide-open basins. This is an allusion to his generosity and the amount of food he used to feed people. '...and cauldrons firmly anchored...' (Saba': 13), i.e. cauldrons that remained in place due to their great size; they could not be lifted or moved from their place due to their massiveness.

(1) As he has mentioned 'service' here, it is necessary to mention what Al-Hakim At-Tirmidhi narrated in Nawadir Al-Usul from Ibn 'Abbas Allah be please with him regarding God's words: '...and statues...' (Saba' 13). He said, 'Solomon took statues made from copper and said, 'My Lord, breathe the spirit into them so that they can be stronger for their service.' So God breathed the spirit into them and they used to serve him. Isfidiyar was a remnant of them.' (Mentioned by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur 6/679).

Likewise, we have been told in the biography of the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him that the Companion Abu Mut‘im Allah be pleased with him said: ‘The Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him used to have a dish (a platter for food) with which I would shade myself on scorching hot days in Mecca.’ This is an indication of its great breadth and size and of the number of people who used to be fed from it. (1)

When King ‘Abd Al-‘Aziz of the Saudi Royal family built Riyadh, he placed within it cauldrons for food. Each of those cauldrons was big enough for a camel to stand inside it. I recall that the first time I went to Mecca; I entered the Mubarra(2) and found huge cauldrons there, so I stood inside one of them and found that it was wide enough for me.

‘... [And We said:] “Labour, O David’s people, in gratitude [towards Me]…’ (Saba’: 13); i.e. be thankful to Allah Glorified is He for His blessings, and not simply to feed yourselves.’

So, your Lord is teaching you not to labour simply to meet your own personal needs because there are people in your society who are unable to work. Then, you should work as much as you can to fulfil your needs, and then give your surplus to the needy. It is well-known that being grateful for a blessing maintains that blessing to you and makes it last and even increases it, as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...If you are grateful [to Me], I shall most certainly give you more and more...’ (Ibrahim: 7).

Or: ‘... [And We said:] “Labour, O David’s people, in gratitude [towards Me]…’ (Saba’: 13) means ‘Be grateful that We have given you the capacity to work so that you can support those who are unable to work. ‘...and [remember that] few are the truly grateful [even] among My servants!’ (Saba’: 13): there are very few people who show gratitude in exchange for Allah’s blessings.

(1) Among the Hadiths that have been narrated in this regard is that which Abu Dawud narrated in his Sunnan (3/348) in a (Hadith) from ‘Abdullah ibn Bisr who said, ’The Prophet used to have a platter called al-gharra’ that was carried by four men.’ This was also narrated by Abu Sheikh Al-Isbahani ((Hadith) 614) in the edition printed by the Egyptian Lebanese Press.

(2) Mubarra is a charity belonging to the Egyptian Ministry of Religious Endowments that was set up to serve the poor. There were two of them: one of them in Mecca and the other in Medina. There was also a 'sebil' (public fountain) in Mina.

It is narrated(1) that ‘Umar Allah be pleased him once heard a man say, ‘O Allah, make me be of the few.’ ‘Umar was amazed at the supplication of this man and did not understand what the man meant, so he asked him about it. The man said, ‘I heard Allah Glorified is He say, ‘...and [remember that] few are the truly grateful [even] among My servants!’, and so I wanted to be one of them.’ So, ‘Umar said in amazement, ‘All people are more knowledgeable than you, O ‘Umar!’(2)

Some people have the ability to pick up meanings immediately and put them to use: an example of that is found in the story (3) that is told of a man who was walking in the Watermelon Market in Baghdad. He was fasting on a hot day and passed by a man selling a drink like liquorice juice and heard the juice seller call out, ‘May Allah forgive who drinks from me.’ So, the first leant towards the latter, and said to him, ‘Give me some of your drink’, whereupon his companion reminded him that he was fasting. He said, ‘By Allah, I had hoped for that seller’s invitation!’

Another man was hurrying between Safa and Marwa; at that time there was a street, in the area between Safa and Marwa, lined with shops, with buying and selling and hustle and bustle. That street was later developed and expanded into its present state. On that street, there was a man selling cucumbers (khiyar Arabic for cucumbers and the same word is a plural form of the word 'Khaier' which means good people) and calling out, ‘Ten for one riyal, O khiyar!’ The man who was hurrying heard him, and said in amazement, ‘If ten of khiyar (good people) cost one riyal, then how much do Ashrar (bad people) cost?!’

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

(1) The story of ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him with the man who used to implore God saying ' God make me one of the few'.

(2) It is narrated by Ibn Abu Shayba, ‘Abd ibn Humayd and Ibn Al-Mundhir from Ibrahim At-Taymi. As-Suyuti narrated in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (6/682), and Al-Qurtubi in his Tafsir (8/5546) without ascribing from where he got it.

(3) The story of the fasting man in the watermelon market of Baghdad.

فَلَمَّا قَضَيۡنَا عَلَيۡهِ ٱلۡمَوۡتَ مَا دَلَّهُمۡ عَلَىٰ مَوۡتِهِۦٓ إِلَّا دَآبَّةُ ٱلۡأَرۡضِ تَأۡكُلُ مِنسَأَتَهُۥۖ فَلَمَّا
خَرَّ تَبَيَّنَتِ ٱلۡجِنُّ أَن لَّوۡ كَانُواْ يَعۡلَمُونَ ٱلۡغَيۡبَ مَا لَبِثُواْ فِي ٱلۡعَذَابِ ٱلۡمُهِينِ ١٤

Then, when We decreed Solomon's death, nothing showed the jinn he was dead, but a creature of the earth eating at his stick: when he fell down they realized – if they had known what was hidden they would not have continued their demeaning labour [14] (The Quran, Saba': 14)

We said that among the things Allah Glorified is He made subservient to Sulaiman peace be upon him so as to realise a kingdom for him the like of which would never be granted to anyone after him, was that Allah made the wind subservient to him, and made the jinn subservient to him to make for him whatever he wished of magnificent palaces and statues, etc.

Subjecting the jinn to Sulaiman means that Allah Glorified is He had subjected to him the lightest and most hidden of all His creatures; the jinn have a peculiar nature. That is why Allah Glorified is He says of Satan: '...Verily, he and his tribe are lying in wait for you where you cannot perceive them!' (al-A'raf: 27)

They are also characterized by swiftness in performing actions meaning that they can do things in a very short period of time and carry huge amounts. The proof is that when Sulaiman peace be upon him asked for the throne of Bilqis which was in Sheba, he said to those sitting around him: '...Which of you can bring me her throne ere she and her followers come unto me in willing surrender to Allah?' (an-Naml: 38) None of the people who were present spoke up because Solomon peace be upon him had limited the time for fetching the throne to a degree beyond the capacity of human beings. He only requested the throne after learning that the delegation of Sheba were on route towards him, and wanted someone to bring the throne of Bilqis into his presence before they arrived. Even among the Jinn, no ordinary jinni proposed to undertake this task. Yet an ('ifrit) from among the Jinn said to Sulaiman: "I shall bring it to thee ere thou rise from thy council-seat...' (an-Naml: 39).

The word 'ifrit means a jinni who is highly-proficient, skilful and able to do things that other members of his race are not able to do. This proves that there are different types of Jinn, some who are highly skilled ('ifrit) and some who are awkward (labkha); the same is true for the human beings. Still today, in our native Egyptian dialect, we say, ‘So-and-so is an 'ifrit meaning that he is highly-skilled and is able to do something better than most other people.

But there was someone in the inner council of Sulaiman who was even more skilled than the (‘ifrit), possessing an even greater level of expertise and swiftness when it came to performing actions; this was the one who was given an amount of particular knowledge: ‘Answered he who was illumined by revelation: “[Nay,] as for me – I shall bring it to thee ere the twinkling of thy eye ceases!”…’ (an-Naml: 40)

If the ‘ifrit was going to fetch the throne of Bilqis before Sulaiman rose from his council-seat, and Sulaiman could well have remained in his session for an hour or even a number of hours, then the one who possessed particular knowledge of the Book promised to bring it: ‘...ere the twinkling of thy eye ceases!”…’ (an-Naml: 40); the eye twinkling does not require a lot of time. Indeed, eyes can even twinkle many times within a minute.

Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He illustrates the speed of response of this act: ‘...And when he saw it truly before him, he exclaimed: “This is [an outcome] of my Sustainer’s bounty, to test me as to whether I am grateful or ungrateful! However, he who is grateful [to Allah] is but grateful for his own good; and he who is ungrateful [should know that], verily, my Sustainer is self-sufficient, most generous in giving!’ (an-Naml: 40)

The context of the verses does not go into any details about how the throne was brought, nor does it even mention that Solomon commanded that person to bring it. Rather, it says: ‘...I shall bring it to thee ere the twinkling of thy eye ceases!" And when he saw it truly before him...’ (an-Naml: 40); the throne was fetched before Sulaiman straight away. It is as though fetching the throne took no time at all, and so the statement also came quickly and directly.

The True Lord Glorified is He knows that the Jinn were listening stealthily to the heaven before the Mission of Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him. But after the Mission of Muhammad had begun, Allah Glorified is He prevented them from listening stealthily, saying: ‘...and anyone who now [or ever] tries to listen will [likewise] find a flame lying in wait for him!’ (al-Jinn: 9)

This is one of the special characteristics of his Message, for before the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him was sent, most of the secrets of Heaven had been protected whereas after him all of the secrets of Heaven were protected. Before the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him was sent, the Jinn used to ascend to Heaven and listen stealthily, trying to steal a few of the words of the angels. Then they would go and inspire their satanic human friends(1), as Allah, says: '...And, verily, the evil impulses [within men's hearts] whisper unto those who have made them their own that they should involve you in argument...' (al-An'am: 121).

Then, they would inform humans of what they had heard, and the humans claim that they know the Unseen. Things would happen exactly as they said. So, they were able to trick and mislead people and keep them captivated. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He wanted to expose the Jinn for this particular thing they were doing, so He said: 'Yet [even Sulaiman had to die; but] when We decreed that he should die...' (Saba': 14), i.e. when Sulaiman passed away. The word 'decreed' was used to show that death is an inevitable destiny and there is no escape from it; it is not resultant of illness, old age or anything else. It is just as they say, 'Dying for no reason is itself a reason.' In other words, he died because he must die.

Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He addresses the human beings, among whom is our master, the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him with the Words: ‘Yet, verily, thou art bound to die, [O Muhammad,] and, verily, they, too, are bound to die’ (az-Zumar: 30) mentioning this reality first to Muhammad and then to his community. The word mayyit ‘bound to die’ means you are destined to death. So, we and all other living creatures are [(mayyitun (the plural of mayyit)] since we are all going to die. As for those who have actually died, they are called mayt like in the words of the poet: A mayt (dead person) is none other than the one who is carried to the grave. Thus, giving us a physical illustration of what death is, scholars say ‘In the very moment that your life begins, the arrow bearing your death is fired in your direction. So, your life span is the length of time that arrow takes to reach you. Therefore, despite the fact that we are living, we are all mayyitun.'

(1) From Abu Hurayra Allah be please with him who said, 'The Prophet Muhammad said, 'When God decreed the entire affair in Heaven, the angels beat their wings in submission to His Words with a noise like a chain striking stones. Then, when the fear entered their hearts, they said to each other, 'What did your Lord say?' And [others] replied, 'He said the truth - He is the Great and Exalted.' Those from the jinn who were listening stealthily heard these words, these jinni stand upon the shoulders of each other, hear a single word and then pass that on to one beneath them. Then that one would, in his turn, pass it on to another beneath him until it was eventually passed on, on the tongue of a magician or soothsayer. That [stealthy listener] jinni would either be struck down by the fiery meteor before passing it on to a magician, or he would pass it on before it reached him; the magician adds a hundred lies to this word of truth. Then, the people who attended the magician say, 'did he not say such-and-such to us on that other day?'' Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (8/380 & 537 with the commentary of Ibn Hajar), by Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (1/69) and At-Tirmidhi in an abridged wording (5/362). And At-Tirmidhi said that it was (hasan sahih).

The statement‘...nothing showed them that he was dead...’ (Saba’: 14) is: ‘nothing showed the Jinn...’ The third person pronoun in ‘showed them’ goes back to those who were referred to in the initial context of Allah’s words: ‘...and [even] among the invisible beings there were some that had [been constrained] to labour for him by his Sustainer’s leaved...’ (Saba’: 12).

Relating the story of our Sulaiman peace be upon him it is said that he used to worship Allah and show Him gratitude as much as he can for blessings and kingship. Despite the enormous grace Allah granted to Sulaiman, he still used to go through the entire week and even month eating nothing but khushkar. Khushkar is the bran which is known to be the lowest component of grain. It is the food of servants and the poor. As for the masters and the rich, they only eat high-quality flour, the ‘class A’.

Strangely enough, modern science has shown the benefits of eating bran that the poor eat. It is even made into a pill and prescribed as a remedy and treatment for certain illnesses. Even those people who live in luxury and spend their whole lives eating the finest grade of flour and lunching on croissants, doughnuts etc., when they approach the end of their lives, their doctors come to them and forbid them to eat all their delicacies and find no other remedy for them but the bran that had never once in their lifetimes passed their lips. It is as if this were a necessary way of balancing things up between the rich and poor. The researches that have shown us the importance of bran also draws our attention to Allah’s words: 'and grain growing tall on its stalks, and sweet-smelling plants.' (ar-Rahman: 12) and allows us to understand them better.

Similarly, Sulaiman peace be upon him used to worship Allah standing upright; he would not ever take up a restful position. He used to be very hard on himself to show his gratitude to Allah Glorified is He and would stand up in worship until he grew tired. Then, he would stand on one foot and left the other up to relieve it and do vice versa, and then when he grew very tired, he would lean on a staff to help continue to remain upright.

When Allah Glorified is He decreed death for him he was standing in that position and none of the Jinn were aware that he was dead. So, they continued to do their work in front of him and expend effort on his account because of their great fear of him (1).

The True Lord Glorified is He wanted to use the death of Sulaiman peace be upon him as a means of settling a matter that concerned both jinn and men, namely the claim of the jinn to know the Unseen. Allah wanted to expose them and show their total lack of ability to know the Unseen, since it is only Allah Glorified is He who has knowledge of the Unseen.

Sulaiman died standing up and leaning on his staff, and remained in that condition until Allah Glorified is He subjected his staff to the gnawing of an earthworm, as Allah Glorified is He says: '...nothing showed them that he was dead except an earthworm that gnawed away his staff...' (Saba': 14).

Some have understood the earth that is referred to in the Words: dabbat al-ard (earthworm) refer to the earth that is the opposite of the heavens, but really the meaning here is the worm (dabbat) that gnaws (taqrid), like when we say, 'The rat gnawed such-and-such.' The declension of this verb is: qarada, yaqridu, qardan, like daraba, yadribu, darban. This creature that is referred to here is the worm that attacks and eats wood.

(1) Abad ibn Humayd narrated from Qatada: 'The Jinn used to tell certain people that they knew things of the Unseen, and that they knew what was going to happen tomorrow. So they were tested by means of the death of Solomon peace be upon him; he died and remained standing, leaning on his staff, for a full year, and for that entire year, they were totally unaware that he died and in their ignorance continued to serve him and work for him unceasingly. (Narrated by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur 6/684)

This woodworm continued to eat away at the staff until it upset the balance of Sulaiman and he fell to the ground: '...And when he fell to the ground, those invisible beings [subservient to him] saw clearly that; had they but understood the reality which was beyond the reach of their perception, they would not have continued [to toil] in the shameful suffering [of servitude]' (Saba': 14), i.e. they would not remain in their state of servility. As for the word kharra 'fell to the ground', it means to fall down in a disordered fashion, like in Allah's words: '...so that the roof fell in upon them from above...' (an-Nahl: 26).

'Khurur' (noun of the verb kharra) is the falling down in a disorderly fashion. It was only when that happened that the Jinn knew that Sulaiman peace be upon him, was dead, just like men, and knew that they did not know the Unseen.

For, if they had known the Unseen, they would have discovered the fact that he was dead before that, and would not have remained for that entire time in toil, hardship and suffering(1). That was the moment in which the truth about them was laid bare, their lies were exposed and their claims to know the Unseen were shown to be false.

They '... would not have continued [to toil] in the shameful suffering [of servitude].' (Saba': 14) That is Jinn can be worn out by work, and are subject to the same feelings of tiredness as all other living creatures.

The Arabic word for 'staff' is minsat which derives from the verb nasa'a meaning 'to delay.' minsat is so-called because people used to drive away insects and other harmful creatures with them.

Musa peace be upon him said about his staff when his Lord asked him: '"Now, what is this in thy right hand, O Musa?" [17] He answered: "It is my staff; I lean on it; and with it I beat down leaves for my sheep; and [many] other uses have I for it.' [18]' (Ta Ha: 17-18) Musa spoke at such great length to Allah Glorified is He because Allah Glorified is He had intimated to him that he should speak at length by saying: 'Now, what is this in thy right hand, O

---

(1) It is narrated by Sa'id ibn Manṣur, 'Abad Ibn Humayd, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abu Hatim that Ibn 'Abbas Allah be pleased with him said, 'Solomon remained leaning on his staff for a year after he died, and then fell down immediately after the year ended. So people took a staff like his staff and got a worm like his worm, and set the worm on the staff, and the worm ate the staff in a year.' (Ad-Durr Al-Manthur 6/683)

Musa?' (Ta Ha: 17), and not saying instead, for instance, 'What is in your hand?' Then, who can help themselves speaking at length with their Lord when He addresses them? However, Musa peace be upon him still corrected himself, and said in summary: '...and [many] other uses have I for it.' (Ta Ha: 18)

From Allah's words: '...they would not have continued [to toil] in the shameful suffering [of servitude]' (Saba': 14), it is understood that the work they were doing was difficult and a source of humiliation for them. That is because Jinn think that they are better than mankind and that they are the higher form of species, as is proven by the words of their forefather at a previous time: '…"I am better than he: Thou hast created me out of fire, whereas him Thou hast created out of clay.' (al-A'raf: 12)

A source of humiliation and suffering for them was the fact that they were subjected to a human being, and knew that they were but still had to obey him. So, even if the work they did for Sulaiman was not exhausting in a physical sense, still it was exhausting in a psychological sense. Why not, since they were subjugated by someone beneath them, in their viewpoint.

One may ask, 'How could someone who is serving and living in close proximity to a prophet ever be in suffering?' we would reply, 'This particular complaint was uttered by the Jinn, and from it we understand that all of the Jinn without exception were placed under the authority of Sulaiman peace be upon him. But the truth is that the Jinn were so-called because they are hidden and we cannot see their movement and actions. Those of the Jinn who were subjugated were the devils, as Allah Glorified is He says: 'as well as all the jinn [that We made to work for him] – every kind of builder and diver –'(Sad: 37). He also says: 'And among the jinn [which We made subservient to him] there were some that dived for him [into the sea] and performed other works, besides' (al-Anbiya': 82). These groups have undergone the humiliating punishment, while the believer among the jinn was not subjected to the commands of Sulaiman peace be upon him.

The word kharra, meaning fell, indicates that a person's dignity lies in his soul and spirit which is the divine Allah Glorified is He placed within his body. Here he is Sulaiman, a great Prophet of Allah, a man who enjoyed a high station with his Lord, and yet it is said of him: '...And when he fell to the ground...' (Saba': 14), as if he were but some inanimate object falling to the ground, That is because when the soul leaves the body, the body becomes something almost inanimate, like a staff or stone.

We said previously that the moment the soul is snatched from the body, the first thing it forgets is its name no matter how great it was. They call it 'a body', and then when it is placed in the bier, it takes the name of 'bier'.

Glory be to Allah! This lump of matter no longer has any attribute worth mentioning. Rather, its family and loved one's rush to get rid of it and bury it as fast as they can. If it were to have remained in their possession, none of them would have been able to bear it because of the changes it undergoes and the smell that emanates from it and hurts those who were once closest to it.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He tells us about the land of Sheba and its people, saying:

لَقَدۡ كَانَ لِسَبَإٖ فِي مَسۡكَنِهِمۡ ءَايَةٞۖ جَنَّتَانِ عَن يَمِينٖ وَشِمَالٖۖ كُلُواْ
مِن رِّزۡقِ رَبِّكُمۡ وَٱشۡكُرُواْ لَهُۥۚ بَلۡدَةٞ طَيِّبَةٞ وَرَبٌّ غَفُورٞ ﴿١٥﴾

There was a sign for the people of Sheba, too, in their dwelling place: two gardens, one on the right, one on the left: 'Eat from what your Lord has provided for you and give Him thanks, for your land is good, and your Lord most forgiving' [15] (The Quran, Saba': 15)

The True Lord Glorified is He takes us from the story of Sulaiman peace be upon him to the story of the people of Sheba. What is the connection between the two of them? Reflecting on the chapters and verses of the Quran, we will find that they are linked and in perfect harmony. The correlation here is that Sulaiman had one of the most striking stories in terms of the elements and doctrines of belief, namely his story with Bilqis, the queen of Sheba. Then, there is a relationship between the two of them, and so this leap from one story to the next is fitting.

The story(1) of Sulaiman with the hoopoe bird and Bilqis is a famous one, and within it, there are many great indications and proofs relating to belief and relating to the fact that animals have knowledge of belief and knowledge of Allah's secrets in His creation.

(1) The story of the seeress with Sheba

Sheba was the name of a man called ‘Amr ibn ‘Amir, who was given the nickname of Maziqiba’. His father was called Ma' as-Sama' (Water of Heaven), Karra ibn Nusayk [1] Allah be pleased with him asked the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him about Sheba, and he replied, {‘Such-and-such...}. He had ten sons: Azad, Kinda, Madhhaj, Ash‘ariyyun, Anmar, Ghassan, ‘Amila, Lakhm, Judham and Khath‘am.’[2]

Each one of these men formed a large tribe, six of which moved to Yemen and four of which went to the Levant. Those who went to Yemen lived in bountiful welfare. It is narrated that when Bilqis saw the rainwater flowing into the valleys and being absorbed into the ground so that they could not derive any benefit from it, she thought of building a dam between two mountains to hold in the rainwater. Then, she placed a number of fountainheads very much like the Barrages at the entrance of the Nile delta. These could be opened up when water was needed. Therefore, there was growth in Yemen and the amount of resources increased so that eventually it is called the ‘Fertile Yemen’ or ‘Fortunate Yemen’.

But one day, a fortuneteller or a wise woman said to Sheba, ‘The dam will fall apart, and its waters will drown Yemen so leave the country.’ So, Sheba did indeed leave and they moved to the Hijaz and the Levant: the Ghassanites went to the Levant, the Mundhirites went to Iraq, the Anmarites went to Medina and the Azadites went to Amman in Jordan.

(1) The correct version of the name is Farwa ibn Musayk Al-Muradi Allah be pleased with him and he was ranked among the Companions. He is considered to be one of the people of Kufa, although he was originally from Yemen. His patronym was Abu Sabra. He came in a delegation to the Prophet Muhammad (Peace and blessing be upon him) who made him governor over Murad, Madhhaj and Zubayd. His arrival [in Medina] occurred in the ninth or tenth year AH. ‘Umar Allah be please with him put him in command of collecting the zakat of Madhhaj. Then he moved to Kufa where he became one of its most eminent people. (A summary taken from Al-Isaba fi Tamyiz As-Sahaba of Ibn Hajar Al-‘Asqalani, biography number 6975. And in his account is mentioned the question he asked the Messenger of Muhammad about Sheba.)

(2) It is narrated by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (3222), and Abu Dawud in his Sunnan in an abridged form (9388) in Kitab Al-Huruf wa Al-Qira'at as part of a (Hadith) from Farwa ibn Musayk Allah be please with him.

The name Sheba, after originally being used as the name of a man, moved beyond that to be used as the name for a tribe and then finally as the name for the place in which they lived. 'Indeed, in [the luxuriant beauty of] their homeland, the people of Sheba...' (Saba': 15); that is the place where they lived. A place where a person lives is called sakan or bayt or manzil. Each of these words has its own particular meaning. Sakan is a place where a person lives and relaxes from work effort and the activities of life. Humans only live in places in which they find safety and all of the necessary facilities of life.

Therefore, when Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him left his wife and son near the Sacred House, he called on his Lord, saying: 'O our Sustainer! Behold, I have settled some of my offspring in a valley in which there is no arable land, close to Thy sanctified Temple' (Ibrahim: 37).That place was totally barren; there was no vegetation, water or any of the other vital components of life to be found there except for air. The meaning of: '...I have settled...' (Ibrahim: 37), is 'I have made this a homeland for them.'

As for manzil, it is a place where you camp down from time to time and then move on; it is not a place where you take up permanent residency. It is like those public rest houses that are there in case of emergency and which people spend no more than a few days in the entire year.

An example of this is the Prophetic Hadith regarding part of the battle of Badr when the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him reached Badr, the great Companion, Al-Hubab ibn Al-Mundhir (1) Allah be pleased with him said to him, 'O, Messenger of Allah, is this a place in which Allah has commanded you to camp down, or is it one that is based on opinion and battle tactics?' He replied, 'It is one that has been chosen based on opinion and battle tactics.' So Al-Hubab said, 'Then, I do not think that this is a good place to set up camp. Rather, get the people up and keep moving until we get to the nearest watering hole of the people; it is there that we should alight. Then we can sabotage all the wells behind it and build a basin above it which we can fill with water. Then, when we fight the enemy, we will be able to drink and they will not be able to drink.' So, the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said, 'I will command as you have suggested.'(1)

(1) He is Al-Hubab ibn Al-Mundhir ibn Al-Jumuh Al-Ansari Al-Khazraji Allah be pleased with him. He was present at the battle of Badr, and had the patronym of Abu 'Umar. Ibn Sa'd said, 'He died during the Caliphate of 'Umar Allah be pleased with him when he had passed the age of fifty.' (Al-'Isaba of Ibn Hajar, biography number 1547)

So, sakan is a place of permanent residence where people settle, while manzil is a resting-place at which you may stop and set up camp or leave behind.

As for bayt, the etymology of the word suggests spending the night. People only sleep restfully in a place in which they feel safe with respect to themselves and to their belongings. Therefore, those who are frightened or very hungry find themselves unable to sleep.

Another place in which the word 'sakan' is used is in Allah's words to the sons of Isra'il: 'And after that We said unto the children of Israel: "Dwell now securely on earth – but [remember that] when the promise of the Last Day shall come to pass, We will bring you forth as [parts of] a motley crowd!"' (al-Isra': 104).

One of the Orientalists took hold of this verse and said that it was a proof that the entire earth had been made permissible to the Jews, but how could that be when they are on the earth? When you want to say something of that sort, you always specify a place, for example, 'Make Cairo your dwelling' or 'Make Tanta your dwelling'. But as for: '..."Dwell now securely on earth…' (al-Isra': 104), it has quite a different meaning. It means they are dispersed throughout the earth into different places, as in Allah's words: 'And We dispersed them as [separate] communities all over the earth…' (al-A'raf: 168).

In other words, they do not have any particular homeland but rather will be spread out throughout the land so that no one will be able to strike at them or annihilate them. They will remain in that state of dispersal until the Command of Allah Glorified is He comes and gathers them all into one place, at which point it will be come easy to bring an end to them.

As for the word, '...evidence...' (Saba': 15), it is the translation of the Arabic word Ayah which means a sign, a miracle, a lesson, proof or example; for instance, we may say, 'So-and-so is an example of generosity' or 'So-and-so is a sign of good manners'... etc. That is to say that someone or something is unique and remarkable. The True Lord Glorified is He tells us of three different types of (evidences):

(1) Ibn Hisham narrated it in As-Sira An-Nabawiyya (2/259 & 260), and ascribed it to Ibn Ishaq from some men from the Banu Salama.

The first type is the universal or cosmic evidence such as in His Words: 'Now among His signs are the night and the day, as well as the sun and the moon...' (Fussilat: 37) and His Words: 'For among His signs is this: thou see the earth lying desolate – and lo! When We send down water upon it, it stirs and swells [with life]…' (Fussilat: 39).

The second type of evidences or signs is miracles and things which go against the norms of this world such as those Allah gives to His Messengers to support them and prove they are speaking truthfully with respect to what they convey from Allah Glorified is He; for example: '[And now] put thy hand into thy bosom: it will come forth [shining] white, without blemish...' (al-Qasas: 32).

And thirdly, the word 'evidence or sign' is used to refer to the verses of the Book that carry within them the divine rulings of Allah in the Noble Quran. All of these, whether they are cosmic signs or miracles or verses of the Quran, are all wonders. Just as these wonders are clear and apparent in the universal signs and miracles, they are also apparent in the verses of the Wise Book. The Quran is a wonder in terms of the way it organises the life of the human beings; this is proven by the fact that the unbelievers will be forced to adopt its rulings and obey its laws, not because they are a religion, but because they are the necessary rules of life.

The example we gave to show this previously was that of the laws of divorce: despite their continuous criticism and attack against these rules, and, ignorantly and unfairly, accusing the religion of Allah of being harsh, still we find them taking refuge in it. They find no solution to their problems except for divorce and so they come back to the rulings of Allah Glorified is He despite the fact that they do not believe in them. This is the ultimate victory for the religion of Allah; the fact that unbelievers come back to it. That is the victory of truth and the victory of proof.

We also previously mentioned that one of the orientalists once asked us the following question when we were in San Francisco: 'the Quran says: 'He it is who has sent forth His Apostle with [the task of] spreading guidance and the religion of truth, to the end that He make it prevail over all [false] religion, however hateful this may be to those who ascribe divinity to aught but Allah.’ (as-Saff: 9), and yet after fourteen centuries, Judaism, Christianity, Buddhism, etc. still exist in the world. [How is that]?’This man's words indicate a lack of understanding of the meaning of the verses; the meaning of: ‘...that He makes it prevail over all [false] religion...’ (as-Saff: 9) is not that all people are going to become believers, as the very verse ends with the words: ‘...however hateful this may be to those who ascribe divinity to aught but Allah.’ (as-Saff: 9)

So, Islam’s victory over them will be by its evidence and its superiority to their laws; since problems will crop up in their lives for which they find no solution except in the Law of Allah Glorified is He. That is the victory to which the verse refers.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He makes it clear to us exactly what the evidence was that Sheba had in their dwellings, saying: ‘...two [vast expanses of] gardens, to the right and to the left …’ (Saba’: 15). Since Allah Glorified is He describes these two gardens as being evidence, there must be something wonderful about them and they must be different in some way from gardens as we know them.

Scholars have spoken about the wonders of these two gardens; they said that these two gardens contained no scorpion, snake, fly, flea...etc. If someone visited one of these gardens with a louse on their body, that louse would die as soon as they stepped into them.(1) These were wonders of these gardens.

One notes here that the word 'evidence' is in the singular even though it refers to many wonders. This is because the Arabic word Ayah (evidence, sign, verse, symbol, and example) can also refer to the plural, such as in Allah’s Words about ‘Isa peace be upon him: ‘And [as We exalted Musa, so, too,] We made the son of Maryam and his mother a symbol...' (al-Mu'minun: 50). Allah Glorified is He does not say here 'two symbols'. That is because, as scholars say, the two of them shared one marvellous event: 'Isa peace be upon him was born without any male parent, and Maryam peace be upon her bore him without having a male partner. So, the two miracles are but a single one.

(1) Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from Ibn Zayd that he said about God’s words: 'Indeed, in [the luxuriant s ever seen in their city. Riders would come with lice and vermin infesting their clothes. But as soon as they look upon the houses of the people of Sheba, those vermin fell down dead. And if any man were to enter the two gardens carrying a basket on his head, when he got out that basket would be full of all sorts of fruit without him having taken any of them with his hand.’ (Narrated by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur 6/687)

As for the Words: '...two [vast expanses of] gardens, to the right and to the left…' (Saba': 15), it is possible that every one of them had two gardens, one to the right and one to the left, with his house in the middle; and it is possible that the two gardens were for the entire people of Sheba, meaning that there were gardens all connected to each other to the right and gardens all connected to each other to the left, indistinguishable from one another and not separated by walls or fences.(1) And that indicates that security was the norm amongst them. We have witnessed the like of this in America where fields and crops stretch out, closely connected to one other, separated by no more than a piece of wire.

As for Allah's words: '"eat of what your Lord has provided for you, and render thanks unto Him"' (Saba': 15), how can we understand the Words: '..."Eat of what your Lord has provided for you"' (Saba': 15) when all people eat from what Allah the Exalted provides them? People, they say, generally eat from what Allah the Exalted provides them through secondary causes, but in this case, Allah provides for them directly without any secondary causes. And that is why Allah the Exalted says elsewhere: '"Partake of the good things which We have provided for you as sustenance...' (Ta Ha: 81).

Not all provision is good to eat, except for here: '"eat of what your Lord has provided for you"' (Saba': 15): i.e. all of it is good and all of it is sweet. The fruits in these two gardens are never ruined - they are never afflicted by rot as other fruits are. And that is why Allah the Exalted says in another verse: '...a land most goodly and a Lord much-forgiving!"' (Saba': 15)

(1) A number of opinions have been narrated with regard to these two gardens, among which are the following: 1) That the gardens were between two mountains in Yemen. This was what Qatada said. 2) One of the gardens was to the right of the valley and the other was to its left. This was what Sufyan said. 3) He does not mean two gardens, but rather, they are a metaphor for wealth and good fortune. This was what Al-Qushayri said. Al-Qurtubi narrated it in his Tafsir (8/5553) and said, 'i.e. their land was full of gardens, trees and fruits whose shadows covered the people.'

It is well-known that the amount of work necessary to maintain a garden is minimal, which is why we often see farmers who struggle to plough their crops and pay their workers' wages, turn instead to fruitful orchards and gardens. And that is mainly because they cost less and do not require a great deal of supervision at those times in which they bear their fruit.

The True Lord Glorified is He says elsewhere: 'Have you ever considered the seed which you cast upon the soil? [63] Is it you who cause it to grow – or are We the cause of its growth? [64]' (al-Waqi'a: 63-64), establishing the fact that they do work and sow the fields. But, as for the matter at hand - the two gardens about which we speak - they were a gift from Allah the Exalted with no secondary causes, requiring no work from them. Allah the Exalted is the cultivator, and He was the One Who chose for them a gentle climate, no subject to heat or cold. There was no weariness nor fear, nor any need to abstain from any of Allah's blessings since they were all plentiful.

So, there was no work that they had to do in their gardens to produce what they enjoyed from them – rather, their only work was to thank the Bestower of blessings so that He the Exalted could then increase the good things He had bestowed on them. Showing thanks for a blessing is part of the wisdom of a slave towards his master, which is what Allah the Exalted says about Luqman peace be upon him: 'And, indeed, We granted this wisdom unto Luqman...' (Luqman: 12). What is this wisdom to which He the Exalted refers? Be '…'grateful unto Allah...' (Luqman: 12) because being grateful for blessings increases them.

As for Allah's words: 'a land most goodly' (Saba': 15), they mean that the land gives forth good things without anything loathsome therein. And that is because there are things that initially give you good in which you take pleasure, but later exhaust and spoil things for you.

But, as for this land, all that is in it is good which you will eat with pleasure and good cheer. And that is because it is provision that has come from Allah the Exalted directly without any input from His slaves. For whenever His slaves have a hand in Allah's gift, troubles, and disturbances always appear in the blessings that come. And that is exactly what we are suffering from today because of the interventions we have made in the lifecycles of our crops by spraying them with chemical fertilisers and insecticides - those chemicals have ruined our lives and brought us more harm than good. Indeed, today, we have traced the cause of all the diseases we know back to our meddling with the gifts that Allah the Exalted gave us. If we had left the earth alone and allowed it to be irrigated naturally by the sky just as it was in the beginning, we would have had a taste of unspoilt goodness. So it is absolutely imperative that we act well towards Allah the Exalted with respect to His gifts.

And that is why you find that so many people of wealth, culture, knowledge, and philosophy love to escape from the tumult and din of the big cities and from their polluted atmosphere and water, and get out into the countryside. They are fleeing from the harmful effects of modern civilisation into the open country where shepherds live and where nature is as Allah the Exalted created it, where creation is healthy and unspoilt by the meddling of human beings.

You will remember that in the past we used to combat the worms that ate our cotton naturally, removing them with our own hands. Then, the advancements made by science led to the chemical insecticide DDT being developed to combat these worms. But this poisonous substance killed off everything in the fields, killed the fish in the canals and water ditches, killed the white egret, a close friend to agriculture, polluted the water and crops...etc. The only thing that developed a resistance to it was the cotton worm! It became, as we say, immune to DDT.

As for Sheba, it was: ‘a land most goodly’ (Saba’: 15): everything in it was good - its water, air and soil, never having being once touched by any sort of pollution. And if the land itself was good, then how good do you think the things on it are?

In the verse, there are two requests: ‘...“eat of what your Lord has provided for you, and render thanks unto Him…’ (Saba’: 15) as well as the warning: ‘Beware of being fooled by the blessings, thinking that they belong to you and forgetting the One Who bestowed them upon you. Beware of being like the one about whom Allah the Exalted says: ‘Nay, verily, man becomes grossly overweening [6] whenever he believes himself to be self-sufficient [7]’ (al-‘Alaq: 6-7).

Beware of thinking that you are deep-rooted in this matter and always remember that the Bestower is Allah the Exalted and that where you are and what you have is part of Allah’s gift to you. And then you must thank Him because it is by means of gratitude that blessings are bound to you.

In another place, the True Lord Glorified is He talks about being grateful for blessings, saying: ‘...and [remember that] few are the truly grateful [even] among My servants!”’ (Saba’: 13) May Allah the Exalted be praised that He did not say instead: ‘and few are the thankful among My servants’, using the word shakir instead of the instead of shakur which, as you know, is either the intensive form of the adjective from the verb shakara, ‘to thank or be grateful’, or is the one who gives thanks for the blessing and then thanks Allah the Exalted for inspiring him to give thanks for the blessing. So it is as if he offers thanks twice.

Then there is the fact that the blessing to Sheba was not confined to this world alone, but rather extended to the Hereafter as well. In this world, they have: ‘...a land most goodly...’ (Saba’: 15), and in the Hereafter they have: ‘...and a Lord much-forgiving!’ (Saba’: 15). In other words, Allah the Exalted will disregard any mistakes or slip-ups that you make.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He makes clear what the result will be and how they will react, saying:

وَشَيۡءٖ مِّن سِدۡرٖ قَلِيلٖ ﴿١٦﴾ ذَٰلِكَ جَزَيۡنَٰهُم بِمَا كَفَرُواْۖ وَهَلۡ نُجَٰزِيٓ إِلَّا ٱلۡكَفُورَ ﴿١٧﴾

But they paid no heed, so We let loose on them a flood from the dam and replaced their two gardens with others that yielded bitter fruit, tamarisk bushes, and a few lute-trees [16] In this way We punished them for their ingratitude – would We punish anyone but the ungrateful? [17]
(The Quran, Saba’: 16 - 17)

When Allah the Exalted says: ‘But they turned away...’ (Saba’: 16), He means that they turned away from what they were commanded, that being: ‘...“Eat of what your Lord has provided for you, and render thanks unto Him…’ (Saba’: 15). They stopped eating from what Allah the Exalted had provided them and instead ate only from what their own efforts and skills brought them, or so they claimed. This was their first failure. Then they failed to thank Allah the Exalted for those blessings because the blessings had brought them luxury and opulence and so they forgot to give thanks for them.

There is a difference between the two verbs tarafa and atrafa: we use tarafa when we want to say that a person lives a life of luxury and comfort. But, as for atrafa, we only use it when a person has been deceived and deluded by the blessings that have come his way. And that is why Allah the Exalted says: 'But when [this has been done, and] it is Our will to destroy a community, We convey Our last warning to those of its people who have lost themselves entirely in the pursuit of pleasures; and [if] they [continue to] act sinfully..." (*al-Isra': *16).

There is no harm in you living in luxury - your troubles only start when those blessings come to dominate your life and deceive you. The first way you go to excess with respect to blessings is attributing them to yourself, saying, 'I earned them by my own efforts and cleverness', like the one who said: '...This [wealth] has been given to me only by virtue of the knowledge that is in me!…' (al-Qasas: 78) And then you forget the Bestower of the blessing and neglect to thank Him for it.

And in another place in the Quran, the True Lord Glorified is He summarises this matter for us, saying: 'And Allah propounds [to you] a parable: [Imagine] a town which was [once] secure and at ease, with its sustenance coming to it abundantly from all quarters, and which thereupon blasphemously refused to show gratitude for Allah's blessings: and therefore Allah caused it to taste the all-embracing misery of hunger and fear in result of all [the evil] that its people had so persistently wrought.' (an-Nahl: 112)

And He the Exalted says about the people of Prophet Noah peace be upon him: '[Know] then, that if they [who have heard Our call] keep firmly to the [right] path, We shall certainly shower them with blessings abundant' (al-Jinn: 16).

So, the fact that blessings are preserved by recognising them and giving thanks for them can all be attributed to the Bestower of blessings. Indeed, even when it comes to human beings, we say, 'So-and-so remembers good turns with gratitude' and so we give him increase and are not stingy towards him with other good turns. So how do you think it is with the True Lord Glorified is He?

The word i'rad implies something greater than mere negligence and forgetfulness, for i'rad is to turn away from the one to whom you are speaking and show him your side. It is just like when you say to someone whose speech does not please you, 'Show me the side of your shoulders.'

So, i'rad is deliberately leaving something with complete indifference. As for heedlessness, forgetfulness, mistakenness or when asleep, all of those are things for which we will be pardoned, for Allah the Exalted in His mercy does not take us to task for them since He only judges us according to what we do when we are aware and awake and what we do deliberately.

Read if you will Allah's words: 'But as for him who shall turn away from remembering Me – his shall be a life of narrow scope; and on the day of Resurrection We shall raise him up blind.' (Ta Ha: 124) Why? Because turning away suggests that one is paying little attention to the one giving the commands, and so the punishment is greater, as opposed to when you do pay attention to the one giving the commands, but later turn your concern to yourself for some other reason.

Allah the Exalted also says about i'rad: 'And, too, when We bestow Our blessings upon man, he tends to turn aside and keep aloof [from remembering Us]…' (Fussilat: 51). And then the recompense will come according to the degree to which one turns away, as the True Lord Glorified is He makes clear in His Words: '...But as for all who lay up treasures of gold and silver and do not spend them for the sake of Allah – give them the tiding of grievous suffering [in the life to come]: [34] on the day when that [hoarded wealth] shall be heated in the fire of hell and their foreheads and their sides and their backs branded therewith, [those sinners shall be told:] "These are the treasures which you have laid up for yourselves! Taste, then, [the evil of] your hoarded treasures [35]"' (at-Tawba: 34-35).

Just as we say, 'You have raised the one who will later kill you', so too will those who hoard wealth enjoy it for a short time in this transient world, and then they will reap the consequences of that on the day of Rising - their foreheads, sides and backs will be branded by flames and the pain will be so bad that they will wish that those treasures had been less so that they would have been branded in less places.

If you reflect on the order of these words: foreheads then sides then backs, you will find that, that is the same order in which the parts of the body of a person of wealth are turned aside from a needy person who asks him for money in this world. For the first thing he does when he sees him is to turn his face aside, then he shows him his side and finally he turns his back on him. So the recompense is just like the act which merited it, and has all the same details.

What was the result of this turning aside of theirs? Allah the Exalted says: '... and so We let loose upon them a flood that overwhelmed the dams...' (Saba': 16), i.e. after the dam of 'Arim collapsed, its waters flooded and drowned them. It is an amazing thing that Allah the Exalted made every living thing out of water, but when He the Exalted wants, He the Exalted can use it as a means to destroy your people. It was by means of water that Allah the Exalted destroyed the people of Nuh (Noah), and by means of it that He the Exalted destroyed Pharaoh and his army. And that is a proof of the absoluteness of Allah's Power, since He the Exalted directs a thing towards life and it brings life and directs it towards death and it brings death.

When they wanted to find somewhere to settle after the terror of the flood of the dam of 'Arim, they chose to settle in places in which there was no water. And then, when they wanted water, they would fetch it from nearby wells. It was as if water caused them to develop a complex.

This ancient case has echoes in a modern story(1) of which we were a part: when we were in the Azhar, we used to wear kaftans and kakula robes. One of our colleagues had very limited means and only possessed a single kakula robe, which he wore continuously until it became worn and torn, and it became a habit of his to stretch out his hand from time to time to the place where it was torn in an attempt to conceal it. Then Allah the Exalted provided for him by means of a brother of his finding work and buying a new kakula robe for him, which he started to wear. But his hand would still stretch out to the same spot, and he would still try to cover the tear that no longer existed in the new robe, so one of his colleagues asked him what was up with him, and he replied, 'The old one still haunts me.'

(1) The story of the Azhar student with the old beverage

S*ayl* is water that flows on the surface of the ground: after the ground has absorbed as much of the water as it can, the overflow flows from there to another place. The True Lord Glorified is He is teaching us that before we search for sources of water, we should search for drainage areas so that it does not drown us. Read Allah's words: 'And the word was spoken: "O earth, swallow up your waters! And, O sky, cease [your rain]!"…' (Hud: 44)

The first command was to the earth to swallow up and absorb the water, and then the second was to the sky to hold back its waters. And that is why we say, when the ground has had its fill of water, that it has 'unninat, meaning that it has become filled to the brim with underground water. If that ground is agricultural, then no crops emerge from it, and if that ground is urban, then the water damages the buildings, overflows into the streets, destroys the pipes...etc. Those who work the earth know well the importance of good drainage.

The 'Arim to which the 'flood of 'Arim' is ascribed has many different meanings, for an 'arim is either the stone upon which the dams were built or the rat which breached the dam (1) and created a gap through which the water passed. The water then caused that gap to widen until it became like a spring.

We have seen the role that water had to play in destroying the Bar Lev Line, when Allah the Exalted inspired one of our engineers with the thought of using a water pump that was strong enough to eliminate the earthen barrier that was the main obstacle in the way of our gaining control over that defensive line and destroying it. And, in truth, that particular idea astonished the entire world.

The word 'arim is in the plural: its singular is 'arima. It is just like labin and labina, although labin are clay-oven bricks while 'arim are stone bricks.

Then He says: '...and changed their two [expanses of luxuriant] gardens into a couple of gardens...' (Saba': 16), one of the characteristics of which was that they yielded: '...bitter fruit...' (Saba': 16). In other words, Allah the Exalted changed the two gardens that were described earlier into two other gardens.

(1) This is what Az-Zajjaj and Ibn Al-A'rabi said. Mujahid and Ibn-Najih said, ''Arim is the red water that Allah the Exalted sent against the dam and which split it and destroyed it.' It is also narrated from Ibn-'Abbas may Allah be pleased with him that, ''Arim is fierce rain.' (Tafsir of Al-Qurtubi 8/5554)

But these latter two gardens produced: '...bitter fruit...' (Saba': 16), i.e. bitter-tasting fruit from which one naturally recoils; and the trees of these latter two gardens were: '...tamarisks, and some few [wild] lote-trees.' (Saba': 16).

The ithl is the tamarisk tree, a tree of little benefit that produces no fruit whatsoever; and the sidr is the well-known thorny lute tree, another tree of little benefit. So could such a place be called a garden? They say the True Lord Glorified is He only called it a garden out of irony? And how could that not be so, for there would be no trees such as these in the Garden? And even when it came to their punishment, we note that the True Lord Glorified is He was merciful towards them, for He the Exalted did not make the garden empty.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He confirms that that which befell them was not something unjust, but rather was a just recompense for what they had done, saying: '...thus...' (Saba': 17), i.e. by means of those things that we have just mentioned: the bitter fruit, tamarisks and lute-trees: '...We requited them...' (Saba': 17), i.e. as recompense: '...for their having denied the truth...' (Saba': 17): here kufr refers to ingratitude for blessings. The ingratitude of these people for the blessings that Allah the Exalted had bestowed on them lay in the fact that they thought that it was their own hard work and effort that had brought them those blessings. They showed their ingratitude by not turning towards the Bestower, not thanking Him and not obeying Him when He commanded them: '..."Eat of what your Lord has provided for you...' (Saba': 15), and when He the Exalted commanded them: '...and render thanks unto Him…' (Saba': 15).

Then the True Lord Glorified is He declares Himself above that by means of the rhetorical question: '...But do We ever requite [thus] any but the utterly ingrate?' (Saba': 17), making use of the emphatic adjectival form kafur and not the active participle form kafir. And that is a sign of Allah's mercy to His slaves since He the Exalted only recompenses the kafur those who persist in their ingratitude and are constantly ungrateful.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَجَعَلۡنَا بَيۡنَهُمۡ وَبَيۡنَ ٱلۡقُرَى ٱلَّتِي بَٰرَكۡنَا فِيهَا قُرٗى ظَٰهِرَةٗ
وَقَدَّرۡنَا فِيهَا ٱلسَّيۡرَۖ سِيرُواْ فِيهَا لَيَالِيَ وَأَيَّامًا ءَامِنِينَ ١٨

Also, We had placed, between them and the towns We had blessed, other towns within sight of one another to which they could travel easily –' Travel safely in this land by night and by day'[18] (The Quran, Saba': 18)

This is another blessing that Allah the Exalted bestowed on the people of Sheba, for: 'Now [before their downfall,] We had placed between them...' (Saba': 18) means between the people of Sheba: '...and the cities which We had blessed...' (Saba': 18), meaning the cities of the Levant which Allah the Exalted refers to in the story of the Night Journey when He the Exalted says: 'Limitless in His glory is He who transported His servant by night from the Inviolable House of Worship [at Makka/Mecca] to the Remote House of Worship [at Jerusalem] – the environs of which We had blessed – so that We might show him some of Our symbols: for, verily, He alone is All-Hearing, All-Seeing.' (al-Isra': 1)

Q*ura* is the plural of the word qarya which is the name of a place in which the dwellings are humble and in which one can only find those things that are absolutely necessary for survival. If you were to stop off at such places, you would be offered qira which are food and drink.

We know that the people of Yemen were a people who used to use to engage in trade between Yemen and the Levant, so Allah the Exalted placed on their trading routes: '...[many] towns within sight of one another…' (Saba': 18), i.e. closely connected to one another, resting-places along the way like (The Rest House). And the reason for that was because of the great distance between Yemen and the Levant when they made their winter journey and summer journey. And so the True Lord Glorified is He wanted to make those journeys easier for them and allow them to cross that distance without hardship.

And '...thus We had made travelling easy...' (Saba': 18), i.e. We made their journey divided into parts of short distances, with the towns conspicuous and close by to them on their journeys so that when they passed them by they could see them without difficulty from the route upon which they were travelling. These towns and villages were distributed at regular intervals along the route so that every time they travelled a distance along the way, they found another town waiting there for them.

And that meant that they would be safe, there would be nothing to make them fearful, and that they would have no need to carry provisions with them. And that is because the towns they passed by on the way spared them the need of carrying any supplies, for they found within them everything that they needed, and that also meant that they would need to take a large number of pack animals with them.

As-Sayr means travelling in the morning, but the word is commonly used for travelling in the morning and in the evening. Then the True Lord Glorified is He sets them at ease with respect to this matter, saying: '..."Travel safely in this [land], by night or by day!"' (Saba': 18) So they would travel in the early morning to a place where they would rest in the early afternoon, and then they would travel to the early evening to a place where they would spend the night. In other words, they had daytime resting stations and nighttime resting stations. Their journeys took place in an atmosphere of total safety and security, guaranteed to them by the True Lord Glorified is He - there was nothing to cause them fear or alarm, neither wild animals nor people.

When we compare what Allah the Exalted says here: '...safely...' (Saba': 18) with what He says about Quraysh: 'who has given them food against hunger, and made them safe from danger' (Quraysh: 4), we find that their security is ensured by them being given food and that they are given safety from fear and danger, whereas here Allah the Exalted simply says: '...safely...' (Saba': 18) and makes no mention of fear or danger. The reason for that is because the phrase: '...safely...' (Saba': 18) means 'in total safety' and includes both security from hunger and safety from danger. And that is known by the fact that: '...safely...' (Saba': 18) has nothing attached to it.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

فَقَالُواْ رَبَّنَا بَعِّدۡ بَيۡنَ أَسۡفَارِنَا وَظَلَمُوٓاْ أَنفُسَهُمۡ فَجَعَلۡنَٰهُمۡ أَحَادِيثَ
وَمَزَّقۡنَٰهُمۡ كُلَّ مُمَزَّقٍۚ إِنَّ فِي ذَٰلِكَ لَأٓيَٰتٖ لِّكُلِّ صَبَّارٖ شَكُورٖ ١٩

But [still] they complained, 'Our Lord has made the distance between our staging posts so long!' They wronged themselves and, in the end, We made their fate a byword, and scattered them in countless fragments. There truly are signs in this for every patient, thankful person [19] (The Quran, Saba': 19)

Reflect on this quarrelsomeness and wanton disregard of the blessings of Allah the Exalted! They were not pleased at the fact that Allah the Exalted had placed the towns so close together and so they asked: '..."Long has our Lord made the distance between our journey-stages!"…' (Saba': 19), i.e. 'Put these towns further apart from one another by placing great deserts between them so that no one can reach them but the rich and capable, those who possess strong pack animals capable of bearing heavy loads.'(1)

So, their point of view of the matter was an economic point of view based entirely upon greed and covetousness - they wanted to deny the poor and incapable from making the trade journeys with them. At the time the towns were so close together and the resting-places so frequent along the way that as soon as a traveller left the outskirts of one town, he could see the next one in the distance, and that made it easy for the poor to make the journey on the back of weak animals. For the riding animals that people had depended upon their financial means: some had horses, some had camels, and some had donkeys.

The closeness of the towns to one another encouraged the poor to make the trip to the Levant, and that is why these people asked Allah the Exalted to make the distance between those towns longer. It was a request motivated solely by selfishness and greed, and that is why Allah the Exalted says straight after that: '...for they had sinned against themselves...' (Saba': 19). Yes, they had sinned against themselves because they had denied themselves the rest with which Allah the Exalted had provided them; they had sinned against themselves because they had sought to monopolise that trade and prevent others, especially the poor, from going out with them. Or may be they had sinned against themselves because they had shown themselves up as having imperfect belief, for a person's belief is not complete until he wants for his brother what he wants for himself and these people wanted to keep all the blessings to themselves and prevent others from accessing them.

(1) This is like the statement of the tribe of Israel when they showed wanton disregard for the blessing Allah the Exalted bestowed on them by sending down to them manna and quails without them having to expend any effort to get them. They said: '...we cannot endure but one kind of food; pray, then, to your Lord that He bring forth for us aught of what grows from the earth – of its herbs, its cucumbers, its garlic, its lentils, its onions." Said [Moses]: "Would you take a lesser thing in exchange for what is [so much] better?..."' (al-Baqara: 61). Their punishment for that was that: '...ignominy and humiliation overshadowed them, and they earned the burden of Allah's condemnation: all this because they persisted in denying the truth of Allah's messages and in slaying the Prophets against all right: all this because they rebelled [against Allah], and persisted in transgressing the bounds of what is right.' (al-Baqara: 61)

But how could that greater distance that they requested on their trading routes come about? We know from the science of engineering that the shortest distance between two points is a straight line and that the straighter the road, the easier it is to travel along and the less time and effort one takes in making one's journeys. The only way to make the distance longer is either by destroying some of those towns so that the distance between the remaining ones is longer, or by making the path windy and crooked or causing to go around in circles.

The result of this hubris and greed was: '...And in the end We caused them to become [one of those] tales [of things long past], and scattered them in countless fragments...' (Saba': 19), i.e. a subject of people's conversation or a tale told by them. Just as when a criminal is captured by the police and they make an example of him so that what happened to him becomes a cautionary tale for others, in the same way Allah the Exalted made an example of the people of Sheba until what happened to them became the proverbial tale. Indeed, they say in an Arabic proverb used to indicate separation and splitting up, 'They split up like the hands of Sheba' meaning that they split up after having been together just as the people of Sheba split up.

As for: '...and scattered them in countless fragments...' (Saba': 19), it means that they were scattered and split in every way possible - no matter how small the parts, they were split from each other. '...Herein, behold, there are messages indeed...' (Saba': 19) meaning that there are lessons in it that any rational person can make use of in his own life.

For'...all who are wholly patient in adversity and deeply grateful [to Allah]' (Saba': 19): both sabbar and shakur are intensive adjectival forms. Sabbar is the intensive adjectival form deriving from sabr (patience), and that is because these people suppressed the poor, treated them unjustly and wanted to prevent them being able to access any blessing, and kept all the good things to themselves. And they did that time and again. And that is why Allah the Exalted does not use the active participle form sabir and say, 'for all those who are patient in adversity.' Rather, he uses the intensive form because the amount of abuse they were forced to bear required them to possess a great deal of patience.

We said previously that if an unjust oppressor were to know what Allah the Exalted holds in store for the oppressed, he would only act unjustly towards him begrudgingly. It is enough for someone who is oppressed that Allah the Exalted is going to be on his side on the Day of Rising.

It is a sign of the stupidity of unjust oppressors that when they wake up to their oppression and their enthusiasm and nervousness die down, they want to make expiation for them oppressing other people, so they direct their energies to good and build mosques or schools...etc. thinking that they will get the reward for them. But the reality is that all of the reward for them will go to those whom they oppressed and whose property and money they appropriated. And that is because Allah the Exalted says: '...and none can take count as We do!' (al-Anbiya': 47)

Allah the Exalted also says shakur which means greatly thankful to Allah the Exalted that he has given him the capacity to be patient and endure. And that is why they say, 'You were not patient - rather, it is We who made you patient.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَلَقَدْ صَدَّقَ عَلَيْهِمْ إِبْلِيسُ ظَنَّهُۥ فَٱتَّبَعُوهُ إِلَّا فَرِيقًا مِّنَ ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿٢٠﴾

Satan was proved right in his opinion of them, for they all followed him – except for a group of believers [20] (The Quran, Saba': 20)

The particle laqad contains a double emphasis: the first emphasis is achieved by means of la and the second by means of qad. '...Satan (Iblis) did prove...'

(Saba': 20), i.e. he was sure and certain: '...that his opinion of them...' (Saba': 20), i.e. of the people of Sheba and other similar types of people who followed their ways: '... had been right...' (Saba': 20). But what was Satan's opinion? His opinion was that the appetites of men would enable him to lead them astray. We all know his story, when Allah the Exalted commanded him to prostrate to Adam peace be upon him. But he refused, saying by way of threat: '...Now that You have thwarted me, I shall most certainly lie in ambush for them all along Your straight way,' (al-A'raf: 16), and saying: '...Then [I swear] by Your very might: I shall most certainly beguile them all into grievous error.' (Sad: 82) But he had not completely lost all shame and so he added: '[all] save such of them as are truly Your servants!' (al-Hijr: 40)

So the opinion of Satan (Iblis) is that he said, 'I led your forefather astray and gained power over him when I did so, for he ate from the tree despite the fact that he was the first and strongest member of the human race, and despite the fact that Allah the Exalted Himself entrusted him and only entrusted him with one single thing. For Allah the Exalted gave him the permission to eat all the fruit of the Garden except that of one single tree. But despite that, I still gained power over him. So, I will also be able to gain power over his offspring, for they are not as strong as he was, they were not entrusted with their affair directly by Allah the Exalted and they have been entrusted with many things. So the same power which enabled me to gain control over their forefather will also enable me to gain power over them.'

This opinion of Satan is not knowledge of the Unseen, but rather is an analogy that he has drawn on the offspring of Adam peace be upon him based upon his experiences with their forefather. If Adam peace be upon him were the first man created, directly by the hand of Allah the Exalted the one to whom He the Exalted made the angels prostrate, the one that He the Exalted entrusted directly and the one who was only entrusted with doing one thing, but despite that I still gained power over him, then I will have even more power over his offspring. Satan (Iblis) did not arrive at this analogy by means of some miracle or a close friendship with Allah the Exalted and that is why it is called an 'opinion'.

And then, when Satan actually did gain power over [some of] the offspring of Adam peace be upon him and lead them astray, he said, 'My words came to pass exactly as I said they would', for they really did follow him: 'Now, indeed, Satan (Iblis) did prove that his opinion of them had been right: for [when he called them,] they followed him...' (Saba': 20). Then comes the exception to that: '...all but some of the believers [among them].' (Saba': 20) This exception corresponds exactly to the first exception: '[all] save such of them as are truly Your servants!' (al-Hijr: 40)

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَمَا كَانَ لَهُۥ عَلَيۡهِم مِّن سُلۡطَٰنٍ إِلَّا لِنَعۡلَمَ مَن يُؤۡمِنُ بِٱلۡأٓخِرَةِ
مِمَّنۡ هُوَ مِنۡهَا فِي شَكّٖۗ وَرَبُّكَ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٍ حَفِيظٞ ﴿٢١﴾

Even though he had no authority over them. But [We aim] to distinguish those who believe in the life to come from those who doubt it: [Prophet], your Lord observes everything [21] (The Quran, Saba': 21)

If Satan leads mankind astray, do they then have an excuse for them being astray? And is Satan the only who is in the wrong? The True Lord Glorified is He tells us here about him and about them in the context of the story of Sheba: 'And yet, he had no power at all over them: …' (Saba': 21). Satan takes this expression and uses it to proves his case on the day of Rising: when people say to him on that day, 'You are the reason for us being astray and in a state of misguidance', he will reply: '...Yet I had no power at all over you: I but called you – and you responded unto me. Hence, blame not me, but blame yourselves...' (Ibrahim: 22) meaning, 'do not blame me and do not wrong me. I only gave you a signal. I did not have any power over you - I did not use my strength to force you to do it, nor did I compel you to obey me, and nor did I have any strong evidence with which I convinced you.' The difference between being forced to do something and being convinced to do it by strong evidence is that when you are forced you do it unwillingly, but when you are convinced you do what is requested of you gladly and willingly.

Our Lord warns us of Satan and his whispers and insinuations, and we know that we will not be forced to anything except by Allah the Exalted especially with regard to this prescription, about which Allah the Exalted says:

'Hence, if it should happen that a prompting from Satan (Iblis) stirs you up [to blind anger], seek refuge with Allah…' (Fussilat: 36).

Simply by reminding him of Allah the Exalted he draws back, retreats and runs away. He has power over you when you are alone, but as soon as you take refuge in your Lord, he becomes frightened and runs away. And that is because he has no power and no ploys when Allah the Exalted is mentioned and remembered. And that is why one of the Gnostics said, 'Say this word with strength and it will be as if you can see him and throw him to the ground.'

So what should you do if he comes to you when you are reciting Quran? They say that you should stop reciting and say in a loud voice, in a tone different to that with which you have been reciting, 'I seek refuge with Allah the Exalted from the accursed Shaytan.' We have tried to get this matter across to youthful minds by putting it in the following way, 'If a wealthy man were to spend the night on the balcony and witness a burglar trying to break into his house, and get up from where he was and say, 'Ahem!' what would the burglar do? He would run away! Then, if the burglar were to tell himself that it might have only been a coincidence and come back the next night, and the owner of the house were to have noticed him again and again said, 'Ahem!', then this time the burglar would flee and never come back, since he would know that the owner of the house was vigilant and could not be taken unaware.'

And the same is true with the expression, 'I seek refuge with Allah the Exalted from the accursed Shaytan' - it frightens Shaytan and drives him away. And then, if he comes back another time and another time, every time you become aware of his whispering and insinuations, say, 'I seek refuge with Allah the Exalted from the accursed Shaytan.' And then he will know that you are on to him and that there is no way that he can get to you.

When Shaytan was arguing with his Lord, he knew exactly how to get at mankind, and said: '... I shall most certainly lie in ambush for them all along Your straight way' (al-A'raf: 16). And it is exactly as we have mentioned, for he does not, for example, lie in wait for you in a bar, but rather in the mosque. He knows that there you will be engaged in worship, and his fondest wish is to spoil your worship and make it come to naught. Do you not see how he reminds you in the prayer of all the tasks you have forgotten to do in the course of your day? So it is incumbent for the believer to attach great value to the time he spends standing before Allah the Exalted and not let anything distract him while he is in the presence of his Lord.

It is the prayer that is the straight path upon which Shaytan lies in ambush for you, and that is why our fiqh scholars may Allah have mercy on them and be pleased with them, have taught us that we must infuriate Shaytan.

So, if he whispers to us in the prayer so that we lose track of whether we have prayed two or three rak'as, we consider it as if we have only prayed two rak'as, building upon the lesser of the two. And we must do the same when it comes to wudu' (ablution) and the like, in order to infuriate him and cause him to despair of us.

The phenomenon of forgetfulness in the prayer is in reality a healthy sign of belief. So, do not make yourself ill on account of it, but rather be strong in your belief, take heart in your battle against this enemy and say to him, 'I will not give you the opportunity to wreck my meeting with my Lord.' If you say this and shout out the shout of belief, you will burn him up. And if he returns then you return also, safe in the knowledge that the ploys of Shaytan are weak indeed, for Allah the Exalted says: '...verily, Satan's guile is weak indeed!' (an-Nisa': 76) He has no power over you so long as you are with Allah the Exalted and so long as you remember and mention Him, for you have the vigilance of faith and the vigilance of belief.

We previously related the story(1) of Imam Abu-Hanifa may Allah be pleased with him when a man came to him to ask a legal opinion and said, 'Imam, I hid some money in a place in the desert and marked the spot with a stone. But a flood came and washed it away so that I can no longer find the place.' The Imam laughed and said to the man, drawing on all of his expertise, experience, and ability to formulate legal opinions, 'My boy, there is no science that deals with such matters, but I will suggest a stratagem you could employ. After you have prayed 'Isha', go and do wudu' again with the intention of Allah the Exalted guiding you to that which you lost. And then pray two rak'as and tell me what happens.' So the man did what the Imam had advised him to do. And when he was in the course of the prayer, Shaytan came to him to ruin his prayer and said to him, 'Your money is in such-and-such a place.' So, the man went out and found his money. Then he went back to the Imam and told him what had happened, so the Imam said, 'By Allah the Exalted I knew that Shaytan would not leave you to complete your night in the company of your Lord!'

(1) The story of the man who asked Abu-Hanifa may Allah be pleased with him about money he has buried in the desert and lost it

So, have trust in the phrase, 'I seek refuge with Allah the Exalted from the accursed Shaytan' and say it with strength and conviction.

Would Allah the Exalted make a statement that was then shown to be false the reality of somebody's life who believed in him?! Try it out for yourself and you will see.

As for Allah's words,'... [for if We allow him to tempt man,] it is only to the end that We might make a clear distinction between those who [truly] believe in the life to come and those who are in doubt thereof…' (Saba': 21). If Satan (Iblis) has no power over mankind and they are but following his suggestions, then that means that their belief is not firmly rooted and that they have forgotten one of the rulings of Allah the Exalted. And that is because Allah the Exalted warned them about him and described to them how they could overcome him, and yet they did not do it.

Satan was only allowed to mislead them: '...that We might make a clear distinction between those who [truly] believe in the life to come and those who are in doubt thereof…' (Saba': 21), i.e. knowledge by it happening. It could not mean anything else since the True Lord Glorified is He knew what they were going to do in pre-time. But they must actually physically do the act before it can become a proof against them. It is like a teacher who sees all the signs of failure in a student and warns him about that. Then, when he goes into the exam and fails, he goes and blames the teacher who predicted that he would fail, so the teacher says back to him, 'did I hold back your hand or prevent you from answering the questions? No, I simply judged you according to what I saw in you before you went in.'

It is still possible, however, for that student to cheat in the exam and succeed despite what his teacher said, and that is because the knowledge of the teacher is imperfect, unlike the knowledge of Allah the Exalted which is perfect. So, knowledge of its happening is necessary for there to be proof.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says: '...for your Lord watches over all things.' (Saba': 21): hafizh is the intensive adjectival form from hifzh - Allah the Exalted guards over and preserves treasure, provision, knowledge and everything else. It is as Allah the Exalted says: 'For no single thing exists that does not have its source with Us; and nought do We bestow from on high unless it be in accordance with a measure well-defined.' (al-Hijr: 21) And for as long as Allah the Exalted is the Preserver, no one is able to transgress against this matter.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

قُلِ ٱدْعُوا۟ ٱلَّذِينَ زَعَمْتُم مِّن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ ۖ لَا يَمْلِكُونَ مِثْقَالَ ذَرَّةٍ فِى
ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَلَا فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ وَمَا لَهُمْ فِيهِمَا مِن شِرْكٍ وَمَا لَهُۥ مِنْهُم مِّن ظَهِيرٍ ﴿٢٢﴾

Say, 'Pray to your so-called gods besides God: they do not control even the weight of a speck of dust in heaven or earth, nor do they have any share in them, nor are any of them any help to God [22] (The Quran, Saba': 22)

The True Lord Glorified is He moves on to a general matter, and that is the matter of those people who worship other than Allah the Exalted argues with them in order to show them the unsoundness of their path and the futility of worshipping other than Allah the Exalted. These people responded by saying: '...We worship them for no other reason than that they bring us nearer to Allah...' (az-Zumar: 3).

The first thing we say is, 'What is worship?' Worship is what happens when the worshipper obeys the commands and prohibitions of the one who is being worshipped. So, when unbelievers worship the sun or the moon or idols or the like, what is it that those 'gods' have commanded them to do? And from what have they prohibited them? And what rewards have these 'gods' set in store for those who worship them? And what punishments have they set in store for those who reject them?

No, the truth is that you are lying when you say, 'We worship them'. And if you were really worshipping them because they bring you closer to Allah the Exalted then why do you not worship Allah the Exalted directly instead? How can you worship gods that have no path and do nothing for those who worship them or anything against those who reject them?

These created beings (idols made of stone) that they worship instead of Allah the Exalted are created by Allah the Exalted are subject to His Will and all glorify Him. They are innocent of this shirk and idolatry and do not approve of it. Indeed, they are more worshipful of Allah the Exalted than they are, and that is why the rocks spoke on the tongue of this poet (1), saying,

They worship us, but we are more worshipful of Allah than those who stand in prayer in the time before dawn.
They took our silence as a proof against us,
but we have become for them fuel for the Fire.
In their ignorance, they have committed a crime
Just like they did against 'Isa and his disciples
The one who exceeds the bounds will have his recompense,
While the one against whom bounds have been exceeded will be saved by the mercy of the All-Forgiving.

The True Lord Glorified is He argues this matter with them, saying, 'Say: "Call upon those [beings] whom you imagine [to be endowed with divine powers] beside Allah…' (Saba': 22): Call upon these alleged Allahs of yours! But they did not call upon them because they knew that their supposed Allahs would never respond. And that is why Allah the Exalted completes it for them and tells them what the result would be, if you were to call upon those Allahs, '...they have not an atom's weight of power either in the heavens or on earth…' (Saba': 22).

So, on what basis do you worship them when they do not possess anything, have never done anything good for you and have never offered you any service? '...nor have they...in [governing] either' (Saba': 22), i.e. the heavens and earth, '...any share...' (Saba': 22), i.e. any share alongside Allah the Exalted they do not have any part to play in the process of creation. '...nor does He

(1) Sheikh Ash-Sha'rawi himself, from a poem he wrote on the Hijra of the Prophet peace be upon him

[choose to] have any helper from among them.' (Saba': 22), i.e. they did not help Allah the Exalted when it came to create the heavens and the earth. A (zhahir) is a strong helper. Another example of its usage is found in Allah's Words: '...and all the [other] angels will come to his aid.' (at-Tahrim: 4)

Zhahir comes from the word zhahr meaning 'back'. The back is the strongest part of the body when it comes to lifting and pushing, so a zhahir is one who uses all the strength at his disposal to help you.

There are many things one can use to argue against those who call on 'gods' other than Allah the Exalted. And the first of those is that the True Lord Glorified is He created man and made him His vicegerent upon the earth. And before creating man, He the Exalted created all of the necessary ingredients by means of which he could sustain his life. Then He left him to enjoy those blessings and did not charge him with doing anything until he reached the age of puberty and maturity. And man reaches maturity when he becomes capable of begetting another like himself.

We previously exemplified that by means of fruit: fruit does not become ripe nor taste sweet to human beings until its seeds reach full maturity so that, were they to be planted in the ground, they would grow into a plant bearing fruits exactly like it. And that is one aspect of Allah's kindness to us, for if fruits were to taste sweet before their seeds had matured, then we would have eaten all the fruit in one go and that species would have come to an end and would no longer be available to anyone after that.

But the Creator wants there to be, for the great number of the descendants of man, an even greater number and variety of descendants of good things, for they represent a resource that safeguards the needs of the human race. For example, one melon seed produces a tree bearing any numbers of fruits, in each of which are one hundred seeds. And that is because we plant some of them and take delight in the nuts of many of them.

The True Lord Glorified is He made a covenant with us at an atomic level when mankind were all still in the loins of Adam peace be upon him making them bear witness against themselves before any of them developed appetites going against the way of Allah the Exalted and saying: '"...Am I not your Lord?" – to which they answer: "Yea, indeed, we do bear witness thereto!"'

[Of this We remind you,] lest you say on the day of Resurrection, “Verily, we were unaware of this” [172] or lest you say, “Verily, it was but our forefathers who, in times gone by, began to ascribe divinity to other beings beside Allah; and we were but their late offspring… [173]”’ (al-A‘raf: 172-173).

This pledge is a natural part of every human psyche. Indeed, the only reason religions come about is in an attempt to shake the dust of heedlessness and the dust of appetite from this natural human state. And that is why no Messenger came to establish a religion but rather to simply remind people of this ancient covenant: ‘And so, [O Prophet,] exhort them; your task is only to exhort’ (al-Ghashiya: 21).

And that is why whenever we, human beings, are beset by problems or find our means constricted or find ourselves in situations from which we can see no escape, this natural part of us brings us back to that hidden strength that will save us. So, you might see someone calling out for help, saying, (Ya huwah), meaning, ‘O He!’ ‘He’ is a pronoun that indicates absence, and is a stronger way of notifying than using the proper noun. Why is that? Because when you say it, you are not directing your attention except to one whom you cannot see, that being Allah the Exalted.

And that is why He the Exalted says: ‘Say: “He is the One Allah”’ (al-Ikhlas: 1), and does not say, ‘Say: “Allah is One.”’ When you say ‘O He’, the only one who comes to your mind is Allah the Exalted especially in times of hardship. When your means are tightly constrained, nobody comes to your aid except for your Lord, as He Himself says: ‘...all those [powers] that you are wont to invoke forsake you, [and nothing remains for you] save Him...’ (al-Isra’: 67). In times of hardship and constraint, human beings do not lie or deceive themselves. For instance, you even see unbelievers exclaiming when things are hard, ‘O Lord!’ - Their nature brings them back to Allah the Exalted the True Lord Glorified is He.

But if natural belief has such power, then what thing in a human being has the ability to blot it out? They reply that what blots it out is a person’s desire when they move in a direction contrary to the way of Allah the Exalted. For the Way of Allah the Exalted aims to refine a person’s desires and impulses and sharp edges. And that is not considered to be suppression of those instincts, since if it was, then why did He create them?

However, there must be a reason for these appetites. Take the sexual impulse, for instance - it was given to us to ensure the preservation of the species, not to violate other people's honour. Anger is another impulse that has a role to play, for the True Lord permits you to become angry when you are provoked. And that is why they say, 'anyone who when he is provoked does not become angry is a donkey.'

But, despite that, our Lord still commands us to be forbearing, for He the Exalted says: '...and never let hatred of anyone lead you into the sin of deviating from justice...' (al-Ma'ida: 8), i.e. do not let your anger cause you to go beyond the limits of what is reasonable and just. Do not let it make you do something unjust. So the True Lord Glorified is He does not suppress those feelings within you, but rather limits them so that we do not do something excessive because of them.

There is a story (1) of 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him that highlights this principle for us perfectly. It is narrated that when 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him saw the man who had killed his brother Zayd ibn Al-Khattab on the battlefield, he turned aside from him. And when he was reminded that that was the man who had killed his brother, he said, 'And what should I do to him when Allah the Exalted has guided him to Islam?' It was as if Islam had cooled down the fire for vengeance that burned within him. And Islam, as we all know, erases all that comes before. (2)

And, similarly, Islam wipes away anger. So, when 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him saw his brother's killer, he said to him, 'Turn your face away from me - I do not have any love for you.' He said that because of the anger that remained within him, so the man said, 'Does your lack of love for me get in the way of any of my rights?' 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him replied,

(1) The story of 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab may Allah be pleased with him with the killer of his brother Zayd ibn Al-Khattab

(2) From 'Amr Ibn Al-'As may Allah be pleased with him that when he came to enter into Islam, he said, 'Messenger of Allah, I pledge allegiance to you on the basis that you forgive all my sins, those in the past, including ones I no longer remember, and those in the future.' the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him replied, ''Amr, Pledge allegiance, for Islam wipes out everything that comes before, and the hijra wipes out all that comes before.' So 'Amr may Allah be pleased with him said, 'I have pledged allegiance.' Then he went away. It is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (4/199, 204 & 205).

'No,' so the man said, 'The only ones who cry on account of love are women(1)!' meaning that it 'does not concern me whether you love me or hate me. The only thing that is important is that my rights are guaranteed.'

Similarly, curiosity is an impulse that Allah the Exalted gave to human beings in order to help them discover the secrets of His creation - He the Exalted did not give it so that people should spy on others or expose their innermost secrets.

So, Islam has not come to suppress man's impulses or bring an end to them, but rather to refine them, keep them within the bounds of what is reasonable and just and cause them to be used for the task for which they were created.

And that is why we say that, in some situations and circumstances, Islam gathers two opposite things within the heart of a believer, like when Allah the Exalted says: 'Muhammad is Allah's Apostle; and those who are [truly] with him are firm and unyielding towards all deniers of the truth, [yet] full of mercy towards one another...' (al-Fath: 29). And may Allah the Exalted have mercy on 'Ali, when he said(2):

If I am in need of forbearance, then certainly there are occasions when I am more in need of impetuosity.
I have a horse of forbearance that is bridled by forbearance,
And I have a horse of impetuosity that is saddled by impetuosity.
Whoever desires me to set them straight, I will set them straight,
And whoever desires me to make them crooked, I will make them crooked.

Severity is required and has its place, and abasement is required and has its place - it is position granted you by faith that makes you. The only reason

(1) A number of narrations have come down of a similar meaning, in one of which 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him said to Tulayha Al-Asadi, 'You killed Ukasha ibn-Muhsin. There is no love for you in my heart.' So Tulayha said, 'Close companionship is a thing of beauty, Commander of the Faithful. And people even keep close company with one another when they hate each other.' ('Uyun Al-Akhbar of Ibn-Qutayba 3/9). Ibn-Qutayba also narrated that one of the caliphs said to a man, 'I hate you.' So the man replied, 'Commander of the Faithful, it is only women who feel anxiety because of an absence of love. Rather, [what is important], is fairness and justice.'

(2) Ibn-Qutayba Ad-Dinuri narrated these verses in his book, 'Uyun Al-Akhbar (1/289), but he ascribed them to Muhammad ibn-Wuhayb and not to 'Ali.

Allah the Exalted gave us the Way was to straighten out our life’s affairs. So when Allah the Exalted charges you to do something that clashes with one of your appetites, do not say, ‘The law clashes with my impulses!’, but rather view it in a more generous matter and add, ‘and it also clashes with the impulses of others for my sake.’ So, for example, when the Law tells you not to steal and you are but a single person, it also tells the millions not to steal from you.

When a person’s unimpaired nature and natural religiosity clash with his lower appetites, he searches for a religious solution that satisfies his appetites and gratifies his impulses. He wants to be religious, but in that very moment, he desires that his appetites remain unfettered. So what does he do? He resorts to worshipping gods that have no Way and do not make him responsible for anything. And that is what led to people worshipping other than Allah the Exalted. Set aside those who worship trees and rocks, and reflect instead on those who, for example, worship angels. Have they ever commanded them to do anything or forbidden them from doing anything?

That is why the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘Say: “Call upon those [beings] whom you imagine [to be endowed with divine powers] beside Allah…’ (Saba’: 22).

If we were to use our intellects to examine the matter of partner gods, their falseness would swiftly become apparent, for if Allah 'God' were to have had partners - or if there were other gods alongside him - then, where are they? Do they know that Allah has taken sole possession of Godhood? Did they know He bears witness to that Himself and openly declares that it is His alone? If they do know that, then why do they leave Him to His monopoly of Godhood? And if they do not know that, then they are heedless gods. In both cases, they are not worthy of Godhood.

And that is why the touches upon this matter in a beautiful way, saying: ‘Say: “If there were – as some people assert – [other] deities side by side with Him, surely [even] they would have to strive to find a way unto Him who is enthroned on His almightiness”’ (al-Isra’: 42) meaning, ‘If it were really the case that there are gods other than Allah, then they would go to him and argue with Him, asking Him why He took sole possession of Godhood without them, or they would go to Him to seek His protection and get closer to Him.

The highest thing that idolaters worship is the angels, as if worshipping them became similar to worshipping Allah. But Allah says about the angels: ‘...Nay, [those whom they regard as Allah’s “offspring” are but His] honoured servants: [26] they speak not until He has spoken unto them, and [whenever they act,] they act at His behest. [27]’ (al-Anbiya’: 26-27)

He refutes the reasoning of those who worship them, saying: ‘Those [saintly beings] whom they invoke are themselves striving to obtain their Lord’s favour – [even] those among them who are closest [to Him] – hoping for His grace and dreading His chastisement’ (al-Isra’: 57).

These angels whom you worship instead of Allah are also striving to get close to Him and gain access to Him. Indeed, the closest ones among them seek to gain access to Him and get closer to Him still. And if the closest ones desire access and closeness to Him, then how is it for those who are merely close? Or those who are far away or the furthest?

So, you are stupid to worship the angels. And do you think that there is any creation like the angels that would approve of you worshipping them instead of Allah, or would be prepared to approach Him to intercede on your behalf? Thinking that is the very heart of foolishness.

For the True Lord has put in place certain conditions for intercession. He says: ‘On that Day, intercession shall be of no avail [to any] save him in whose case the Most Gracious will have granted leave therefore, and whose word [of faith] He will have accepted’ (Ta Ha: 109).

Then, the True Lord says:

وَلَا تَنفَعُ ٱلشَّفَٰعَةُ عِندَهُۥٓ إِلَّا لِمَنۡ أَذِنَ لَهُۥۚ حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَا فُزِّعَ عَن
قُلُوبِهِمۡ قَالُواْ مَاذَا قَالَ رَبُّكُمۡۖ قَالُواْ ٱلۡحَقَّۖ وَهُوَ ٱلۡعَلِيُّ ٱلۡكَبِيرُ ﴿٢٣﴾

Intercession will not work with Him, except by those to whom He gives permission.’ They will be asked, after the terror is lifted from their hearts [on the Day of Judgement], ‘What did your Lord speak?’ and they will answer, ‘The Truth. He is the Most High, the Most Great’ [23] (The Quran, Saba’: 23)

The people of knowledge say, ‘A condition of intercession with respect to the one on whose behalf intercession is made is to be one of those who acknowledge the Oneness of Allah; and a condition of intercession with respect to the intercessor is to be given the permission to intercede, as is stipulated by Allah when He says: '...Who is there that could intercede with Him, unless it be by His leave?' (al-Baqara: 255) So the intercessor cannot simply stand up and make intercession - he must first wait for him to be granted permission to do so. And it is then that the one on whose behalf intercession is to be given starts to feel perturbed, afraid, and anxious. "Will the intercessor be granted permission", he asks himself, "or will his intercession be rejected?"'

And that is why He says here: '...so much so that when the terror [of the Last Hour] is lifted from their hearts...' (Saba': 23) meaning, 'when terror is removed from their hearts.' The doubling up [of the middle letter] in the verb (fuzzi'a) gives us the meaning of removing the action (i.e. terror) implicit within the verb. It is very much as when we say marradahu meaning, 'he removed his illness', or qashshara al-burtuqal, meaning, 'He removed the skin from the orange'... etc.

They '…[who have been resurrected] will ask [one another], "What has your Lord decreed [for you]?" – [to which] the others will answer, "Whatever is true and deserved..."' (Saba': 23), i.e. 'He speaks the truth and gives permission of intercession to those with whom He is content.' Allah Glorified is He says: 'And, before Him, intercession can be of no avail...' (Saba': 23), and does not say, 'intercession will not be accepted' because the goal of an intercessor is to benefit the one on whose behalf he has interceded. If the intercessor had gone to intercede, and the one whose intercession he sought to say to him, 'I am not pleased that you intercede on behalf of that one', that would mean the intercession was of no benefit, not that it was not accepted, for there is a difference between there being an intercession and that intercession being of benefit.

In the chapter of al-Baqara, there are two verses that have the same opening but different endings. The first of those two verses is: 'and remain conscious of [the coming of] a Day when no human being shall in the least avail another, nor shall intercession be accepted from any of them, nor ransom taken from them, and none shall be succoured.' (al-Baqara: 48) And the second verse is: 'and remain conscious of [the coming of] a Day when no human being shall in the least avail another, nor shall ransom be accepted from any of them, nor shall intercession be of any use to them, and none shall be succoured' (al-Baqara: 123)

These two verses are one of those places which the orientalists came to and thought that they have found a flaw in the Words of Allah- the meaning is the same and even the same words are used, but in the first averse, the Words: '...nor shall intercession be accepted from any of them…' come first, while in the second, the Words: '...nor shall ransom be accepted from any of them...'. And in the first, He says instead: '...nor ransom taken from them....'

This objection of theirs arises from their lack of understanding for the words of Allah, for the two verses are speaking about two different categories when it comes to intercession. The first verse is speaking about the one doing the intercession, while the second is speaking about the one on whose behalf intercession is being done. The intercessor has his place before God, and the one for whom intercession is being made has a place before Him as well. And the reason for that is because the intercessor was only brought forth because the one for whom he intercedes was unable to bring an end to the matter himself. So, in the first verse, the pronoun refers back to the intercessor, while in the second verse, it refers back to the one for whom intercession is being made. How is that?

The meaning here is, 'no interceding person will avail any person for whom intercession is made.' The interceding person is the one whose intercession is accepted, while the person for whom intercession is made is the one for whom intercession is of use. So, the first verse singles out the intercessor, since he goes to intercede and his intercession is not accepted. So he offers to pay the ransom and act as guarantor for the one on whose behalf intercession is being made, but that too is not accepted from him.

As for the second verse, it refers to the one on whose behalf intercession is made, since he offers to pay what he has first, and because that ransom is not accepted, he searches for someone to intercede for him.

Intercession is called shafa'a because even shaf' is the opposite of watr (odd). And the person who asks for intercession is one. Then, when the intercessor is joined with him, they become two. In other words, they are shaf'.

Then the True Lord says at the conclusion of the verse: '...for He alone is exalted, great!"' (Saba': 23): Exalted above being asked about any of His deeds. And Great in the sense that He is greater than the intercessor and greater than the one on whose behalf intercession is made. So the True Lord says the truth and speaks it, and that means that He is always on the side of what is right. So He does not care how exalted the status of the intercessor is, or how lowly the status of the one on whose behalf intercession is made, for He is the Exalted, the Great.

After that the True Lord goes back to discussing the matter in a rational way, saying:

قُلْ مَن يَرْزُقُكُم مِّنَ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ ۖ قُلِ ٱللَّهُ ۖ وَإِنَّآ
أَوْ إِيَّاكُمْ لَعَلَىٰ هُدًى أَوْ فِى ضَلَٰلٍ مُّبِينٍ ﴿٢٤﴾

Say [Prophet], 'Who gives you sustenance from the heavens and earth?' Say, 'God does,' and '[One party of us] must be rightly guided and the other clearly astray' [24] (The Quran, Saba': 24)

That is to say, 'Say to them, O Muhammad, "Who provides you with sustenance from the heavens and the earth?"' But if Muhammad was the one to ask the question, then who is it who provides the response? Naturally, the people to whom it was addressed would not answer. And that is why Allah provides the answer, saying, '...Say: "It is Allah...' That is the reality with which they cannot argue. And even if they were to acknowledge that, God would then ask them, 'Why then do you not believe in Allah although He is the One Who provides for you?'

Is it fitting for you to reject Him when he is the Provider, and believe in other gods who can neither benefit nor harm you? Their acknowledgement of this reality forces the proof upon them and establishes the evidence against them of how stupid their thinking really is. It is as if the True Lord wanted to get them out of this predicament and so He answered instead of them.

The True Lord Glorified is He asks them this question because the answer will only ever be in accordance with what He wants. It is just like if you were to buy a suit for someone and then in some situation or other he were to deny the favour you had bestowed upon him, so you would say to him, 'Who is it who bought this for you?' And you would not ask that question unless you were confident that the answer would be in your favour and that he would be incapable of denial. And if he were to deny it, then you would say to him, 'Come with me to the merchant from whom I bought it so we can see who bought it!' Thus, you have the ability to establish evidence against him if he denies it.

As for Allah's words: '...And, behold, either we [who believe in Him] or you [who deny His oneness] are on the right path, or have clearly gone astray!' (Saba': 24), Guidance huda means indicating what is good and showing people the way to it, while misguidance dalal means straying from what is good and not showing people the way to it. These words are found in Allah's words: 'And has He not found you lost on your way, and guided you?' (ad-Duha: 7)

Huda and dalal are examples of things that are opposites in Islam, and opposites never meet. So, there must be one who is on the right path and another who is astray.

A lot of people do not understand the difference between a naqid and a didd: a didd opposes something without negating it, so you might say, for example, 'Is such-and-such a thing red or green?' and be told that it is neither green nor red, but rather white. So, although two didds never meet, they can both be removed at the same time so that neither of them is there but rather, something else. But as for two *naqid*s, if one of them is taken away, the other one must be there, just as is the case here with huda and dalal.

The meaning of: '...And, behold, either we [who believe in Him] or you [who deny His oneness] are on the right path, or have clearly gone astray!"' (Saba': 24) is that if one of us is on the right path, then the other must be astray - there is no third category. So, what is being spoken about here is the path of good represented by the side of belief, and the path of evil represented by the side of disbelief. So the Messenger of Allah says to them, 'You and we are on opposite sides - we say there is no god but Allah 'God' and call to good, while you reject Allah and call to evil. But despite that, I do not pass judgement on myself that I am guided or against you that you are astray. Rather, I say that you and I are opposite sides of the same coin - if one of us is guided, the other one must be astray.’

By Allah, have you ever seen an argument more finely presented than this one? The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him did not pass judgement on himself or the believers with him that they were guided despite guidance clearly being on their side, nor did he pass judgement on the unbelievers that they were misguided despite misguidance clearly being on their side. The likeness of that is if two men were both to swear that a particular item belonged to them in the presence of a blind man, would that blind man say to one of them, ‘You are a liar’, and to the other, ‘You are truthful’? No, rather, he would say, ‘One of you is truthful and the other is a liar.’ This is a preliminary judgement that does not obligate anyone.

But, when you look into the matter deeper, it becomes clear to you which ones are guided and which ones are astray: ‘... And, behold, either we [who believe in Him] or you [who deny His oneness] are on the right path, or have clearly gone astray!”’ (Saba’: 24). In the phrase: ‘...are on the right path...’ the preposition 'on' (‘ala) gives the meaning of being above or over, so it is as if guidance is not over you but you are over guidance and on top of it. It is as if it were a riding animal which takes you to the good that you seek and to the straight path. As soon as you read the word ‘ala, you know that there is a high place and another place that is beneath it.

Reflect, for example, on Allah's words: ‘...Now, behold, your Lord is The Owner of forgiveness to men despite all their evildoing…’ (ar-Ra‘d: 6). Here, forgiveness is above evildoing, for evildoing necessitates that you be punished, but then forgiveness comes along, rises over it and wipes away its traces. Some of the scholars of Tafsir (interpretation of the Quran) think that ‘ala is being used here to express the meaning of, i.e. 'with the evildoing (1) they commit'.

(1) Jamal Ad-Din ibn Hisham Al-Ansari mentioned in his book Mughni Al-Labib (1/126) that the particle (‘ala) can be used to express the meaning of accompanying, just like (ma‘a), like in: '...and spends his substance – however much he himself may cherish it...' (al-Baqara: 177) and '...Now, behold, thy Lord is full of forgiveness unto men despite all their evildoing…' (ar-Ra’d: 6).

But the meaning of with does not work here because it places forgiveness at the same level as evildoing and makes them equal. If that were the case, then how could forgiveness ever overcome evildoing? So, forgiveness must be above evildoing, not with it.

And the same is true in Allah's words: 'All praise is due to Allah, who has bestowed upon me, in my old age, Ismail (Ishmael) and Ishaq (Isaac)' (Ibrahim: 39): Here He Glorified is He uses the word 'ala in the phrase: '...in my old age...' because old age was the thing that was preventing him from begetting a child. So, the True Lord broke this fundamental law for him and gave him Ismail and Ishaq peace be upon them overcoming his old age(1). We say, 'Old age is the single most powerful occurrence to which a human being is exposed, and that is why Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah), said: '...and I have become utterly infirm through old age?' (Maryam: 8)

The word 'utuw means might and strength, while old age is weakness, emaciation and the lack of ability to do even the simplest of things no matter how much one tries to combat it with vitamins and good nutrition. There is nothing that is stronger than it or can prevent it, and that is why in this age when a body becomes riddled with diseases, the only reason for that is old age. Indeed, when a person reaches the age of seventy or eighty, he complains of aches and pains in every part of his body. And that is why they call those aches 'the diseases of old age', mainly because there is no cause for them other than old age.

So, when we use 'ala in the phrase: '...are on the right path...' (Saba': 24), we mean that guidance is going to be the riding animal which will carry you to paradise and Bliss. But when He talks of misguidance, He says: '...or in clear error' (Saba': 24) using the preposition fi (in). So it is as if darkness surrounds the misguided person and he stumbles around in it, not knowing where he is going.

As for the word mubin, it means clear and apparent

(1) Ibn'Abbas said, 'Abraham was ninety-nine years old when his son Ishmael was born, and one hundred and twelve when Isaac was born (Tafsir of Al-Qurtubi 5/3713). So there were thirteen years between Ishmael and Isaac.

قُل لَّا تُسْـَٔلُونَ عَمَّآ أَجْرَمْنَا وَلَا نُسْـَٔلُ عَمَّا تَعْمَلُونَ ﴿٢٥﴾

Say, 'You will not be questioned about our sins, nor will we be questioned about what you do' [25]
(The Quran, Saba': 25)

This is another fine point and a further progression in the argument against the unbelievers, for it indicates the extent of the Prophet's desire to remove the rancour from the hearts of the unbelievers. Reflect on: '...Neither shall you be called to account for whatever we may have become guilty…' (Saba': 25): The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him places guiltiness on his side, and does not this time make the two sides equal to each other as he did there when he said: '...And, behold, either we [who believe in Him] or you [who deny His oneness]…' (Saba': 24). Rather, he describes his own actions as wrongdoing while at the same time says about the unbelievers: '...nor shall we be called to account for whatever you are doing.' without describing their actions as wrongdoing.

And there is another fine point to be found in the verse, which is that the verb ajramna, (we did wrong), appears in the past tense, indicating that the wrongdoing had actually happened, while the verb ta'malun (you are doing), appears in the present tense, indicating that they had not yet done it. That is another fine point and a further progression in the argument. It is also a means to gaining the friendship of one's opponent so that perhaps they might return to the right, and Allah will then rejoice with their repentance and the fact they have come back to Him.

There is no way that the style of debating found in these two verses could have come from anyone except for a debater with a strong proof, as if saying, 'Suppose that you are right, and we are wrong', why? Because you are sure that you are right and that after investigation, the truth will be at your side.

But despite that, how could the True Lord Glorified is He command His Prophet to ascribe wrongdoing to himself? Because, they say, what is meant by 'wrong' depend on who is being addressed. It is as they say, 'The good actions of the right-acting are the wrong actions of those brought nearer to Allah.'

Then the verses end with a summary of this entire matter when Allah says:

قُلْ يَجْمَعُ بَيْنَنَا رَبُّنَا ثُمَّ يَفْتَحُ بَيْنَنَا بِٱلْحَقِّ وَهُوَ ٱلْفَتَّاحُ ٱلْعَلِيمُ ﴿٢٦﴾

Say, 'Our Lord will gather us together, then He will judge justly between us; He alone is the All Knowing Judge' [26]
(The Quran, Saba': 26)

The meaning of this is, 'We will not spend long in presenting to you our arguments and proofs because our words are backed by the truth while you are simply playing around with falsehood. So, the heart of the matter is that Allah will judge between you and us in His divine court: 'Say: "Our Lord will bring us all together...', i.e. on the Day of Rising: '...and then He will lay open the truth between us, in justice...', i.e. then He Glorified is He will judge between us. Even today, in some countries, they refer to the judge as al-fattah, 'The opener': "...for He alone is the One Who opens all truth, the All Knowing!"' i.e. He is the One Who, when He passes judgement, has full knowledge of everything and overlooks nothing.

A judgment is known as an opening because it makes an opening between two things and sets up a gap between them. It is as if the two of them were tightly bound together, with truth mixed up with falsehood. And then as if there was a battle between them, so the ruling came in order to break apart that network. The breaking apart of this network is the opening we referred to, and no one can open a way between truth and falsehood except for Allah Glorified Is He.

قُلْ أَرُونِىَ ٱلَّذِينَ أَلْحَقْتُم بِهِۦ شُرَكَآءَ ۖ كَلَّا ۚ بَلْ هُوَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلْعَزِيزُ ٱلْحَكِيمُ ﴿٢٧﴾

Say, 'Show me those you joined to Him as partners. No indeed! He alone is God, the Almighty, the All Wise' [27]
(The Quran, Saba': 27)

The True Lord commands His Prophet to say to them, 'Show me those whom you have associated with Allah.' But he peace be upon him had actually seen them, for he had seen the idols that they worshipped instead of Allah so what was the point of him saying, '..."Point out to me...'? Because when he made this request of them, he knew that they would be too embarrassed to point them out to him, and would not dare to do that since they knew that they were dumb stones, unable to harm or benefit anyone.

As for the meaning of: '...those [beings] that you have joined with Him [in your minds] as partners [in His divinity]', ilhaq is bringing something new and attaching it to something already established. So it is as if the Godhood of Allah Glorified is He is the true established Godhood, while their new gods are something unexpected and inauthentic. Belief is something that is primal, natural, and firmly established in the human psyche, but as for those gods, they are innovated, inauthentic, and false. And that is why He negates them with the Words: '...Nay - nay...'

Then he turns aside from what He had previously been saying in order to affirm that godhood is God's alone, saying: '...but He [alone] is God the Almighty the Wise!' The word bal (but gives the sense of turning aside from what came before, and affirms the ruling that comes after - that the True Lord is Allah.

In another part of the Quran, the True Lord argues with them, saying: 'Had there been in heaven or on earth any deities other than God, both [those realms] would surely have fallen into ruin!' (al-Anbiya': 22) We know from studying grammar that the Arabic word illa is a particle of exception that excludes what comes after it from the ruling governing what comes before, and that the thing that is excluded after it is in the mansub case, (it has Fatha, a grammatical mark in Arabic, at the end). So, for example, we would say, 'The students were present except for Muhammad', with Muhammad in the mansub case.

If we were to apply this principle to this verse, the meaning would be, 'If there were gods apart from Allah, then they would be ruined, but if Allah is one of those gods, then they would not be ruined.' This is the sense of the verse if illa were to be taken as a particle of exception that excludes what comes after it. But the reality is that this illa is not a particle of exception, but rather, it is a noun that has the same meaning of ghayr (1), (other than). And the proof of that is the fact that the word that comes after it, the Majestic Name 'Allah', is in the marfu' case (has Dammah, also a grammatical mark, at the end), and not in the mansub case which is what it would be in if illa really were a particle of exception. So the meaning is, 'If there were gods other than Allah, they would be ruined.

(1) Given that (illa) is being used with the meaning of (ghayr), the noun after it (Allah), has the same syntax it would have if it were after (ghayr), and so it is in the (marfu') case.

As for the Words: '...but He is Allah...' (Saba': 27), Allah Glorified is He again uses here the absent pronoun, huwa (He). And it is well known that an absent pronoun is never used unless there is a previously mentioned word to which it goes back. So, for example, 'Ali came to see me, so I honoured him.' This principle is true except in the case of Allah, for here with Him the pronoun precedes the word to which it refers back: '...but He is Allah...''. Why is that? We say it is because huwa is a pronoun that refers in this case only to Him, namely the Existent the Most High.

Then the True Lord says:

وَمَآ أَرۡسَلۡنَٰكَ إِلَّا كَآفَّةٗ لِّلنَّاسِ بَشِيرٗا وَنَذِيرٗا
وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكۡثَرَ ٱلنَّاسِ لَا يَعۡلَمُونَ ٢٨

We have sent you [Prophet] only to bring good news and warning to all people, but most of them do not understand [28] (The Quran, Saba': 28)

The meaning of: '...We have not sent you...' is, 'We have not made you a Messenger': '...except to mankind at large…'. The Arabic word kaaffah (at large) makes the station of the Seal of the Messengers clear, for before our Prophet Muhammad, the Messenger of Allah, was sent, a Messenger was always sent to a particular people, like when God says: 'and [will make him] an apostle unto the Children of Israel. "I have come unto you with a message from your Lord...' (Al-'Imran: 49).

That is because mankind became numerous as Allah says: '…and out of the two spread abroad a multitude of men and women…' (an-Nisa': 1), they scattered all over the earth, some remaining here and some going there. And at that time the world was still primitive and in its infancy, and there were no developments for these diverse communities to meet with one another. So, communities lived in isolation from one another without any communication between them. Each area had its own maladies: some people were cheating in measuring, while others were worshipping idols...etc. So a Messenger came to a particular people to treat their malady, a malady that had no connection whatsoever with that of other peoples.

As for Prophet Muhammad, the Messenger of Allah, he was the seal of Messengers and was sent to all mankind because Allah had eternal knowledge of the fact that after his era, all the people of the planet would be close and those groups that were previously dispersed and isolated from one another would come into contact. And here we are today, living in a world that is like one village. We hear of events that take place in the farthest lands of this planet, and even see them as they are taking place. And as long as all the communities and continents of the world are connected like this, they will share the same maladies. And that is why one single Messenger came to treat all these maladies in all these societies. That is the meaning of: ‘Now [as for you, O Muhammad,] We have not sent you but for mankind at large...’ (Saba’: 28).

When we say he is the Seal of the Messengers; that means he is the one for whom others bear witness and not the one who bears witness for others. For Allah has taken the covenant from the Messengers that when Muhammad came they would bear witness for him. And indeed, they all did bear witness for him. But as for Him peace be upon him he did not bear witness for anyone, since no Messengers came after him.

The people of knowledge say that the word kaaffah means, ‘for all people’. And, indeed, Allah says elsewhere: ‘Say [O Muhammad]: “O mankind! Verily, I am an apostle of God to all of you…’ (al-A‘raf: 158). This means that there is no more confining, neither in terms of time nor place. And when we reflect on the word kaaffah, we find that it has a correlation to the language we speak today, for it has become an established part of the everyday speech of the common people. For example, when a tailor stitches a garment, first he uses his scissors on the cloth, cutting it along the warp and the woof. But when they cut the cloth, the threads at the edges of the cloth are left frayed and unravelled. So they gather these thread ends together and fold them over so the edges of the cloth are facing the inward. This process is called kafkafah (hemming). Similarly, the word kaaffah means gathering the people who are scattered throughout time and space together so that no race, community, or individual is excluded.

In the countryside, there is a plant that grows on the banks of the canals the name of which is najil; it is different from the well-known grass. This najil does not rise up above the surface of the earth, and its roots and branches interlock with one another in such a way that they prevent the banks from collapsing, and stop debris from falling into the canals and blocking them. So, this najil performs a task, namely holding the banks and preventing them from collapsing. In other words, it holds kaffa a particular type of thing back from straying from its task, just as our prophet holds the people back from straying away from their task.

The word kaaffah derives from the verb kaffa, 'to hold back', and then the ta' of femininity is added for emphasis, just like with 'allam and 'allamah. And that is why our Lord says about Himself: '...knows fully all the things that are beyond the reach of human perception ('Allam)' (at-Tawba: 78). If you were to ask, 'Why did he not say 'allamah?' then we would say, 'the knowledge of God is not susceptible to increase or decrease.'

So: 'Now [as for you, O Muhammad,] We have not sent you otherwise than to mankind at large...' (Saba': 28) means, 'We have not sent you except to hold them back and stop them from doing all those evils that corrupt the earth. That is the task of the path that the Messenger of Allah peace be upon him brought, which is why Allah says: 'hence, do not spread corruption on earth after it has been so well ordered...' (al-A'raf: 56).So, the word kaffa is either a description for the people meaning 'everyone', or a description for the Messenger of Allah, meaning 'one who holds people back from evil', with the ta' of femininity being added for emphasis.

As for: '...to be a herald of glad tidings (bashir) and a warner (nadheer)...' (Saba': 28), the word bashir is derived from bisharah which means giving someone the news of something good the time of which has not come yet. And its opposite is nidharah which means giving someone the news of something bad the time of which has not come yet. The distinction of bisharah is that it informs you of good that is coming your way, so you can put the means for it to come about into place, move towards it and work hard for it to happen. And all the time you are in a state of longing for it. And it is similar with nidharah, it warns you of a coming danger so that you can avoid its causes and drive it away.

A good example of that is a teacher: he gives his hard-working student the good news that he will have success and superior performance, and warns his negligent student of failure and inferior performance. Why does he do that? Because he wants the hard-working student to further increase his efforts, and the lazy negligent one to leave behind his laziness and negligence so that he can be superior as well.

As for Allah's words: '...but most people do not know [this],' (Saba': 28), they mean that they do not know that you are the final Messenger, or that you are the Messenger who came to hold back evil from the entire human race and put them right. And if the majority of people do not know, that means that there are only a few who do know. And that few who know are the source for all the good in existence, which is why no matter how great people's intransigence and disbelief, and no matter how far from the path they stray, there must always be a small group from among them who cling to the truth, strive for it and call others to it. This group is there in every time and every place, even if they are only a few. And that is why our master, the Messenger of Allah, says, 'Good is with me and will be within my community until the Day of Rising'.(1)

So, this group must remain among us as an example and cells for the propagation of good, so that good remains within the human race no matter how dark the world around them becomes.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَيَقُولُونَ مَتَىٰ هَٰذَا ٱلْوَعْدُ إِن كُنتُمْ صَٰدِقِينَ ﴿٢٩﴾
قُل لَّكُم مِّيعَادُ يَوْمٍ لَّا تَسْتَـْٔخِرُونَ عَنْهُ سَاعَةً وَلَا تَسْتَقْدِمُونَ ﴿٣٠﴾

And they say, 'If what you say is true, when will this promise be fulfilled?' [29] Say, 'You have an appointment for a Day which you cannot put off nor bring forward, even by a single moment' [30] (The Quran, Saba': 29 - 30)

Anyone who reflects on the Book of God will find that the True Lord did not divide the Quran up into separate chapters, one for prayer, one for zakat, one for usury...etc., but rather, He mixed up these rulings in amazing arrangements and stirring combinations, moving from one style to another so that the reader never gets bored and never abandons it.

(1) Ibn Hajar Al-'Asqalani said, 'I do not know it, but its meaning is sound.' Al-Qari mentioned it in Al-Asrar Al-Marfu'a (457), as did As-Suyuti in Ad-Durar Al-Muntathira (20), and Al-'Ajluni in Kashf Al-khafa' (1/476).

The Quran is not a Book of Law in which one finds a separate section for each crime, but rather deals with crime in a unique way, first mentioning the crime, then showing how repugnant it is and clarifying its effects so that when it assigns a punishment to it, you find the punishment to be perfectly natural and easy to accept because you can see that the perpetrator deserves it.

Allah Glorified is He says, relating what the unbelievers say: "and so they ask, 'When is this promise [of resurrection and judgment] to be fulfilled?" (Saba': 29) A promise only ever refers to something good, whereas a threat only ever refers to something bad, so it is strange that the unbelievers call Judgement Day a promise. They should have said, 'When is this threat?' Perhaps Allah has twisted their tongues so that they instead spoke the truth, for it is indeed a true promise from Allah, even though with respect to them it is a threat.

There are many things contained within Allah's promise; it ends with the resurrection and reckoning, and then with Paradise or Hellfire. But is Allah's promise only fulfilled in the Hereafter? No, rather, a part of it can be seen in this world. If that were not the case and Allah were to leave them untouched till the Hereafter, then their corruption would intensify, and unbelievers would cause a huge decay without anyone being there to prevent them.

And this is why, out of His Wisdom, Allah has chosen to realise some of His promise to them in advance so that it can be seen in this world, like when He says: '[Yet] the hosts [of those who deny the truth] shall be routed, and they shall turn their backs [in flight]!' (al-Qamar: 45) And, indeed, the day of Badr came and Allah has defeated them. Some of them were killed and others were taken prisoners. And just as the initial promises were shown to be true, in the same way the promises that follow them will also be shown to be true in the Hereafter.

And that is why the True Lord addresses His Prophet, saying: '...And whether We show you [in this world] something of what We hold in store for those [deniers of the truth], or whether We cause you to die [ere that retribution takes place – know that, in the end], it is unto Us that they will be brought back.' (Ghafir: 77)

Those for whom Allah's promise is not realised in this world and who do not see it here with their own eyes will see it in the Hereafter, as there are unbelievers who died before Badr, and did not witness any of the victories or conquests of the Muslims and were not subjected to any of the punishments of this world.

As for the Words: '…"When is this promise [of resurrection and judgment] to be fulfilled?…' (Saba': 29) They mean that they thought the punishment to be a long time in coming. Then Allah commands His Prophet to reply to them: 'Say: "There has been appointed for neither you a Day which you can delay nor advance by a single moment."' (Saba': 30). It is the day of your victory over them, like at the battle of Badr when God gave them a taste of humiliation, abasement, and death, and brought their tyranny to an end, or it is the Day of Rising.

The One Who has made this promise to you is also the One Who is able to fulfil it, and there is no power that can prevent Him from fulfilling His promise or even delay it for a single instant. He is the One Who knows that none of the Signs of existence can deviate from what He wills.

We previously made it clear that when human beings promise something, they do not possess the means to fulfil their promises, and that is why our Lord teaches us to be wary of that, saying: 'And never say about anything, "Behold, I shall do this tomorrow," [23] without [adding], "if God so wills."… [24]' (al-Kahf: 23-24)

That is because Allah loves His slaves to be truthful, and so when he attaches his action to the Will of Allah, he relieves himself from lying or breaking a promise when he finds himself unable to fulfil that promise, for none of the elements for making it come about is in his hands. So, instead, leave the matter to the One Who does possess all those elements. That is why we call a promise made by people, 'a promise', and a promise made by God is 'the true promise', i.e. that which will never be broken.

As for the Words: '...which you can neither delay nor advance by a single moment"' (Saba': 30), they mean that it is a precise appointment. It is as if the True Lord wants mankind to receive all of the gifts that He has given them, and for those gifts to remain in their consciousness at all times and not be forgotten.

The word ‘day’ appears in this verse in the indefinite and is obscure, but in this case, obscurity is the very essence of clarity, just as we explained previously. For example, when Allah leaves a human being’s death unspecified, that person constantly thinks of it, awaits its coming in every moment, and expects it at every breath and every instant without linking it to illness or anything else. For dying without a cause is itself a cause.

Then the True Lord says:

وَقَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ لَن نُّؤْمِنَ بِهَـٰذَا ٱلْقُرْءَانِ وَلَا بِٱلَّذِى بَيْنَ يَدَيْهِ ۗ وَلَوْ تَرَىٰٓ
إِذِ ٱلظَّـٰلِمُونَ مَوْقُوفُونَ عِندَ رَبِّهِمْ يَرْجِعُ بَعْضُهُمْ إِلَىٰ بَعْضٍ ٱلْقَوْلَ
يَقُولُ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱسْتُضْعِفُوا۟ لِلَّذِينَ ٱسْتَكْبَرُوا۟ لَوْلَآ أَنتُمْ لَكُنَّا مُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿٣١﴾

The disbelievers say, ‘We will believe neither this Quran nor the Scriptures that came before it.’ If only you could see [Prophet] how the wrongdoers will be made to stand before their Lord, hurling reproaches at one another. Those who were oppressed will say to the oppressors, ‘If it were not for you, we would have been believers’ [31] (The Quran, Saba’: 31)

Their statement: ‘…We shall never believe in this Quran...’ indicates their hesitancy, for in another part of the Quran, God relates them as saying: ‘...Why was not this Quran bestowed from on high on some great man of the two cities?’ (az-Zukhruf: 31) This means that the Quran is incontrovertible and incontestable. The only thing they could find to contest was the one to whom the Quran was revealed. Another example of their stupidity may be found in their words: ‘...If we were to follow the guidance to which you invite us. We would be torn away from our very soil!’ (al-Qasas: 57), since here they admit that he brought guidance with him. And another example is their words: ‘...Do not spend anything on those who are with Allah's Apostle...’ (al-Munafiqun: 7).

The reality is that falsehood hesitates and stutters, stumbling from one position to another, with its confused thought, not flowing in a coherent fashion. And, indeed, that blind groping reveals the falsehood upon which they are. We have said before that a skilled investigator is the one who can reach the truth by arguing with the accused person in such a way that he causes him to unknowingly implicate himself. That is because the one who is telling the truth tells you about what happened in a particular way, and no matter how many different ways you repeat the question, he will give you the same answer. But as for someone who is lying, he will not tell you what actually happened, but will instead lie and make up a story in which one will inevitably find contradictions and inconsistencies. It is like that liar who said to people, 'I returned from 'Bandar' on the festival night, it was lit up by the moon in the afternoon!'

In ancient times, the Arabs used to say, 'If you are a liar, then remember what you say.' In other words, remember what you said before. And that is necessary because you are not basing your words on what actually happened.

As for the Words: '...and neither in whatever there still remains of earlier revelations...' (Saba': 31), they refer to all the books that were revealed prior to the Quran, like the Torah and the Gospel.

After them saying these words, the True Lord wants to respond to them in a way that is terrifying, so He says: '...But if you could only see...' (Saba': 31), i.e. O Muhammad: '... [How it will be on Judgment Day,] when these evildoers shall be made to stand before their Lord...' (Saba': 31), i.e. when they are standing before Allah, waiting for the judgement and the reckoning

You know that law (if) is a conditional particle that needs an answering clause. But that answering clause is elided from the verse for a purpose, in order to make it all the more horrible and terrifying. The implication here is, 'If you could see how it will be when these evildoers are made to stand before their Lord, you would see something awesome.' This stylistic device makes a person's thoughts fly in every direction, imagining all the sorts of punishment and humiliation that the unbelievers will be subjected to while they are standing there before Allah. Eliding the answering clause here is more expressive and eloquent than mentioning it.

In the past, we used to see tyrants, oppressors and those parasites who hang around in cafés the entire day, being served by other people who took care of all their needs because they feared the wickedness they might inflict upon them. But as soon as they fall foul of the law and are taken by the police - and you well know what the police do to criminals - those self-same people rejoice and make fun of them, saying, 'If you could see what happened to so-and-so,' meaning, 'Something serious happened to him that is incompatible with the tyrannical way he used to treat people, and blunts his claws.'

So, the answering clause was elided so that we can understand as referring to something very frightening. For if it had been mentioned, it could only have come in one form.

And it is for this reason that the orientalists object to the Words Allah uses to describe the zaqqum tree when He says: 'Its fruit [as repulsive] as Satan's heads' (as-Saffat: 65), saying 'We have neither seen the zaqqum tree nor the heads of Satan, so how can the Quran compare one thing that is unknown to another unknown thing?'

Yes, a simile should compare something which is unknown to another thing which is known, or something hidden with something apparent. But these people are trying to hunt out mistakes and look for ways to criticise the Book of Allah, and that is something impossible, for all of their objections to the Book of Allah stem from their lack of understanding of the verses, their lack of familiarity with the language of the Quran and rhetorical devices of the Arabs, and them not having a basic grasp of Arabic. This particular style of simile was used by one of the ancient Arabs(1) when he said:

Will he kill me when my sword is my bedfellow?
And the points of my spears are like the fangs of hellish ghouls.(2)

---

(1) He is Imru'u Al-Qays ibn Hajr ibn Al-Harith Al-Kindi. He was a pre-Islamic poet, and indeed was the most famous of all the Arab poets and was Yemeni in origin. He was born in Najd in the year 130 BH. His father was the king of the tribes of Asad and Ghatafan. And he started composing poetry when he was just a boy. Then, when he grew up into a young man, he began to muck around and associate with the Arab vagabonds, so his father banished him to Hadramawt when he was about twenty years old. Then he made his way around the various tribes of the Arabs after Al-Mundhir, the king of Iraq, had requested his presence. Until, finally, the emperor of the Byzantines gave him a princedom in Palestine, so he travelled there. Then, when he was at Ankara, boils appeared on his skin. And he remained there until he died in the year 80 AH when he was 50 years old. (Al-Mawsu'a Ash-shi'riyya - Al-mujma' Ath-Thaqafi CD -2003).

(2) The meter of this verse is (tawil). Ibn Salam Al-Jamahi mentioned it in (Tabaqat fuhul Ash-shu'ara'), and Yaqut Al-Hamwa mentioned it in (Mu'jam Al-Udaba').

In this way, an ancient Arab saw the points of spears being like the fangs of ghouls, but has anyone ever seen a ghoul? So, the Quran is Arabic, and it addresses the Arabs with stylistic devices that they themselves use. And it is enough for you to see how loathsome this image is that you try to form in your own mind the picture of a ghoul or a Satan. If you do that, it will cause your thoughts to fly down one terrifying path or another. And the proof of that is that were we to ask all the caricature artists in the world to draw a picture of Satan, each one of them would make a drawing according to his imagination. So there would be many pictures, all of them different from one another because none of them had ever actually seen Satan, but rather only imagined what he would look like.

Imagine if the Quran were to have defined what the zaqqum tree looked like and said, ‘It looks like such-and-such or such-and-such’, would that simile have given you an image more horrific than that given by Satan’s heads? In this way, the True Lord illustrates this meaning.

Then the verse goes on to describe the situation in which those evildoers stand before Allah, not only will they stand in humiliation and abasement, but rather, they stand: ‘...hurling reproaches back and forth at one another!…’ (Saba’: 31) They argue and dispute with one another, hurling the blame backwards and forwards between them. The Arabic verb yarji‘u here indicates that one person says something and another throws his words back at him and rejects them. In the Quran, there are many places in which this exchange between those who follow and those who are followed is described, and this is one example of that.

‘...Those [of them] who had been weak [on earth]...’ i.e. the weak and those who blindly imitate: “...will say unto those who had gloried in their arrogance…” i.e. the masters and the great men whom others follow: ‘...“Had it not been for you, we would certainly have been believers!”’ (Saba’: 31) It is enough of an indication of the immensity of the resurrection that the weak can stand in front of the strong and confront and answer back to them, despite the fact that both of them are hopeless losers. And that is because that weakness was in this world, as was the arrogance and subjugation. But as for now, in the arena where the Reckoning takes place, all are equal. Here, the weak say to their masters: '..."Had it not been for you, we would certainly have been believers!"' (Saba': 31)

And as long as the affair is one of exchange, with each party answering back to the other, the ones who were arrogant must respond and give their answer to those who had been weak.

Then the True Lord says:

قَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱسۡتَكۡبَرُواْ لِلَّذِينَ ٱسۡتُضۡعِفُوٓاْ أَنَحۡنُ صَدَدۡنَٰكُمۡ
عَنِ ٱلۡهُدَىٰ بَعۡدَ إِذۡ جَآءَكُمۖ بَلۡ كُنتُم مُّجۡرِمِينَ ﴿٣٢﴾

The oppressors will say to them, 'Was it we who prevented you from following right guidance after it had reached you? No! You yourselves were sinners' [32] (The Quran, Saba': 32)

Those who were arrogant respond, saying: '..."why – did we keep you [forcibly] from following the right path after it had become obvious to you? Nay, it was but you [yourselves] who were guilty!"' i.e. 'We did not prevent you from following guidance, and we did not come between you and belief.' '...Nay, it was but you [yourselves] who were guilty!"' It was because of your own natures, you find it easy to follow our way, since our worship entailed no responsibility on your part, for you did not have to fast, pray or pay zakat. If you were but to have reflected and made use of your intellects, you would not have followed us!

And that is the exact same logic employed by Satan (Iblis) when he argues with his followers on the Day of Rising, and says to them: '...Yet I had no power at all over you: I but called you – and you responded unto me. Hence, blame not me, but blame yourselves. It is not for me to respond to your cries, nor for you to respond to mine…' (Ibrahim: 22). So the meaning of Satan's words is, 'I am unable to take away your cry for help, and you are unable to take away my cry for help.' So the matter is ended - nothing will save or be of benefit to anyone except for the good actions they have performed. Then those who had been weak respond, again answering back to those who had been arrogant, saying:

نَّكۡفُرَ بِٱللَّهِ وَنَجۡعَلَ لَهُۥٓ أَندَادٗاۚ وَأَسَرُّواْ ٱلنَّدَامَةَ لَمَّا رَأَوُاْ ٱلۡعَذَابَ وَجَعَلۡنَا ٱلۡأَغۡلَٰلَ
فِيٓ أَعۡنَاقِ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْۚ هَلۡ يُجۡزَوۡنَ إِلَّا مَا كَانُواْ يَعۡمَلُونَ ﴿٣٣﴾

The oppressed will say to them, ‘No, it was your scheming, night and day, ordering us to disbelieve in God and set up rivals to Him.’ When they see the punishment, they will fall silent with regret, and We shall put iron collars on the disbelievers’ necks. Why should they be rewarded for anything other than what they have done? [33]
(The Quran, Saba’: 33)

This is a continuation of their exchange and dialogue, with both parties throwing the responsibility for their predicament on the other. So when those who had been arrogant accused them of being guilty, and of having followed them because of their desire for an easy religion that demanded no responsibility from them and placed no limits on their appetites, those who had been weak replied: ‘...“Nay, [what kept us away was your] devising of false arguments, night and day…’ i.e. the plots that took shape in the night and the plots that took shape in the day, since you spent your days and nights harassing us and whispering into our ears until we followed you.

‘...when you persuaded us to blaspheme against God and to claim that there are powers that could rival Him!’ i.e. partner gods, ‘...And when they see the suffering [that awaits them], they will [all] be unable to express [the full depth of] their remorse…’ (Saba’: 33). So remorse takes hold of them, but despite that they do not voice it out loud nor show it is there, in order to ensure that others do not gloat over their predicament. And there is a difference between a person feeling regret and him being forced through circumstance to announce his regret.

Then the True Lord says: ‘...for We shall have put aghlal (shackles) around the necks of those who had been bent on denying the truth: [and] will this be aught but a [just] requital for what they were doing?’ (Saba’: 33) Aghlal are chains or shackles. As for the words: ‘... [And] will this be aught but a [just] requital for what they were doing?’ they are a warning to those believers who hear these words and this recompense, saying to them, 'Beware of letting compassion for the circumstances in which these people find themselves in the Hereafter take hold of you, but instead look at the crimes they did in this world. For then you will see that Allah is just and does not wrong anyone. Rather, it is people who wrong themselves.'

An example of that is found in what Allah says in the verses: 'Behold, those who have abandoned themselves to sin are wont to laugh at such as have attained to faith' (al-Mutaffifin: 29) till He says, 'Are these deniers of the truth being [thus] requited for [aught but] what they were wont to do?' (al-Mutaffifin: 36)

That is because when the time of a crime is finished and its effects have died away, people tend to forget how abominable the crime was, and only remember how abominable the punishment for it is. Or the hearts of those who never witnessed the crime soften towards the criminal. And that is why the True Lord reminds us of His being just, and reminds us that the recompense corresponds to the crime. So, do not let compassion for the criminals take hold of you, and do not feel sorry for them on account of the humiliating and lowly position in which you find them. Rather, place their punishment alongside their crime when they denied the Messengers.

Then the True Lord says:

وَمَآ أَرۡسَلۡنَا فِى قَرۡيَةٖ مِّن نَّذِيرٍ إِلَّا قَالَ مُتۡرَفُوهَآ
إِنَّا بِمَآ أُرۡسِلۡتُم بِهِۦ كَٰفِرُونَ ٣٤

Never have We sent a warner to a community without those among them who were corrupted by wealth saying, 'We do not believe in the message
you have been sent with [34] (The Quran, Saba': 34)

One thing we note in this aya is that it mentions nadheer (warning) but does not mention bashir (giving good news). Why is that? Because it is talking about a city in which corruption had become so prevalent that the only avenue left open for it was that of warning. For its people had rejected the Messengers and treated their call with enmity and contempt. Good news is part of the general call, but here the verse is speaking about a specific call to these rejecters.

As for the words (fi qaryah), literally ‘to a village', they mean ‘to the people of that village’, with ‘village’ being a place noun. Allah Glorified is He uses a place noun even though He is referring to the inhabitants of that place because the place, as an inanimate object, glorifies Allah. And so it feels joy when it is occupied by believers glorifying Allah, and feels sad and depressed when it is occupied by unbelievers. And that is why the ancient Arabs used to say, ‘So-and-so is rejected by the place’, meaning that the place dislikes him. And that is why, when they said to a wise man, ‘Do you know that so-and-so sold his land?’ he replied, ‘Rather, his land sold him.’

As for the words: ‘... those of its people who had lost themselves entirely in the pursuit of pleasures would declare…’ it means that they have been captivated and overpowered by comforts. So the True Lord does not stop his slaves from enjoying blessings, but warns them against letting those blessings take control over them.

Allah may grant a slave a life of ease and comfort in order to lead him on - He may shower him with blessings until those blessings gain mastery over him. Reflect, for example, on God’s words: ‘Then, when they had forgotten all that they had been told to take to heart, We threw open upon them...’ (al-An‘am: 44): He did not say ‘for them’, as his opening is not in their best interests despite the fact that it looks like a blessing: ‘...the gates of all [good] things, until – even as they were rejoicing in what they had been granted...’ (al-An‘am: 44) after having become accustomed to those blessings, ‘...We suddenly took them to task: and lo! They were broken in spirit’ (al-An‘am: 44). That is why it is not right for you to use the preposition ‘alyaka (on you) when asking Allah to ‘unlock or unfold’ things for your brother. Instead you should use laka (for you). So, say, fatah Allah laka and not fatah Allah ‘alayka (May Allah unfold/unlock things for you), Look at Allah telling us that No one can withhold the blessing Allah opens up for people, nor can anyone but Him release whatever He withholds. (Fatir: 2)

We were told a story about a great politician who had an opponent. One day, the people around them were surprised when this politician decided to promote his adversary to an important post. ‘How could he promote his opponent?’ they asked. So, he replied, ‘I am raising him up to a high place so that when he falls from it, his fall will be all the more painful.' We said previously, 'If you want to throw down your enemy, then do not throw him from a very low place!'

An example of how Allah leads people on by granting them ease and comfort comes in the verse where He tells us that when He decides to destroy a town, He commands those corrupted by wealth to reform, but they persist in their disobedience. So, Allah's sentence is passed, and He destroys them utterly. (al-Isra': 16)

Some people misunderstand this verse thinking that these people were disobedient because Allah commanded them to be so. But Allah never commands people to act sinfully or immorally. He only commands people to obedience and worship, as He Himself tells us that all He ordered people to do was to worship Him alone. (al-Bayyina: 5), and He ordered them to enjoin justice and do good. (an-Nahl: 90) The above verse means, 'We commanded those who have lost themselves in the pursuit of pleasures to do what Allah commands, but there was not a single one of them who did anything but act sinfully and deviate from it.' So, acting sinfully was not because of Allah's Command, but because it was their choice!

When the True Lord Glorified is He presents the matter of living a life of comfort and being lost in the pursuit of pleasures, He says: 'I bestowed upon my slaves those blessings that they enjoyed, and the only thing I wanted from them in return was that they receive those blessings with gratitude and thanks, and pass on those blessings to those who had not been granted them, in order to create a society with the proper levels of social solidarity and cohesion, to end the spite and resentment the poor might harbour for the rich.

When the poor see the rich benefiting from those blessings and enjoying them, while denying the poor, they become envious towards the rich and wish that their blessings be taken away. But if the rich gave them some part of those blessings, they will love them and ask Allah to grant them more. This is with regard to the poor.

As for the rich, the True Lord Glorified is He knows that in general, it is in the nature of human beings to desire benefit and good for oneself. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He deals with them according to the logic of benefit;

He recompenses them when they spend on others and rewards them for doing good. So, He says to them that one good act will be rewarded tenfold. So, if you lower your gaze from things which are forbidden to you in this world, He will reward you with the wide-eyed maidens of paradise...etc.

That is why they say, 'Being religious is the thing which is of the highest benefit to you. Every time you put the needs of the poor ahead of yours, giving him whatever you find in your pocket, you can expect many times that in return from Allah.' So, even in your transactions with Allah, you desire benefit for yourself.

The True Lord Glorified is He gives to the rich and those with high determination, those who toil, who work hard and bring wealth into being. He gives them their due, respecting their sweat and effort and even their self-interest. So, when He asks them, He only asks them for a portion of their wealth, not all of it. He tells us that the life of this world is only a game, a pastime, but if we believe and are mindful of Him, He will recompense us. Allah does not ask us to give up all our possessions; otherwise we would be grudging if He were to ask us and press us for them, and this would bring out the bad side of us. (Muhammad: 36-37)

He employs the same logic to instil in us a love of spending upon others, telling us that though now we are called upon to give a little] for the sake of Allah, and some of us are grudging, but whoever is grudging is doing so only towards himself because Allah is the source of wealth and we are the needy ones. Then Allah warns us that He will substitute other people for us if we turn away, and these people will not be (or do) like us. (Muhammad: 38)

So, it is this spending freely on others that removes resentment from the hearts of the rich, just as it removes it from the hearts of the poor. It creates a more even distribution of belief and wealth throughout the society, since those who possess wealth praise Allah for His blessings and are not miserly with it towards the poor. While those who are poor will praise Allah for putting His blessings in the hands of those who are generous with it towards them. This is how balance is instilled in the society.

Let us now go back to the words of Allah that we were in the process of discussing: 'Never have We sent a warner to a community without those among them who were corrupted by wealth saying, "We do not believe in the message you have been sent with."' (Saba': 34). Why is it that they rejected what the Messengers brought?

The True Lord Glorified is He wants for His slaves not to place the strong ahead of the weak, the rich ahead of the poor, and the learned ahead of the ignorant. He wants the good to encompass everyone so that anyone who possesses a good quality passes it on to others.

The people mentioned here in this verse, chose disbelief, and were content with it because the blessings they were granted gained mastery over them and they lost themselves in the pursuit of pleasures. So, they tended towards haughtiness and iniquity until they became totally obsessed with it. Then, when Islam came to set right their conduct, they opposed it and tried to wipe it out and destroy its call because they got accustomed to leadership and oppressing others and did not want any of that to be taken away from them. If it were not like that - if the world were balanced and upright - then there would have been no need for Messengers. So, Messengers were sent when corruption became rife and completely permeated a society.

We said before that Allah created a faith-immunity in human beings, stemming from their innate nature, but the desires and customs of wrongdoers overruled that nature. So, they needed reminders to revert back to the original nature with which Allah created them. That is why Allah says to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that his task is only to warn them. (al-Ghashiya: 21) That is, he will not come up with something new.

The True Lord Glorified is He makes it clear that when it comes to good and evil, people are of three types: Allah tells us that He gave the Scripture as a heritage to His chosen servants: some of them wronged their own souls, some stayed between the right and wrong, and some, by Allah's leave, were foremost in good deeds.… (Fatir: 32)

Those who wrong themselves are those who commit wrong actions and do not reproach themselves, those who feel no regret and never repent. They wrong themselves because they deny themselves reward and everlasting bliss. Those who stay between right and wrong are those who alternate between the right and wrong actions: when they do something wrong, they remember, reproach themselves and repent, and then do something good to wipe away the wrong. These latter people are the ones who have confessed their wrongdoing, who have done some righteous deeds and some bad ones. Allah says that He may well accept their repentance, for He is most forgiving and merciful. (at-Tawba: 102)

When Allah says that He gave the Scripture as a heritage to His chosen servants (Fatir: 32), this stands for the community of Muhammad, since the word ‘heritage’ implies that the inheritance is passed on from an earlier generation to a later generation. So, the community of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him are the heirs of all the previous Messengers with respect to all the good things they commanded. They took on the responsibility of deterring evil in all its forms, and by doing so became heirs to all the messages. That is because they command the good and forbid the wrong. Allah says that they are the best community singled out for people: they enjoin what is right, forbid what is wrong, and believe in Allah. (Al-‘Imran: 110) Allah also tells us that He made the believers into a just community so that they may bear witness to the truth before others and so that the Messenger may bear witness to it before them. (al-Baqara: 143)

So, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him bears witness that he conveyed it to you, and you bear witness that you conveyed it to others after him. Allah entrusted Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with the task of making laws for you, and entrusted you with the task of holding on to his program after him. That is why the messages came to an end with Prophet Muhammad because his community took on the task of passing the message. This is all the more proof that they are indeed a community in which good will remain until the coming of the Final Hour.

As for the Words: '...We do not believe in the message you have been sent with.' (Saba’: 34), we ask with what were the Messengers sent? They were sent with the doctrine of monotheism - that there is no Deity but Allah. They were sent with a transmission from Allah; with miracles, and with rulings and programs that govern the movements of life. The disbelievers denied all of this because they wanted to keep living in comfort, to persist along the path of oppression and to monopolise whatever they wanted.

But their words: '…the message you have been sent with…' (Saba': 34) indicate their stupidity, for they could have said instead, 'what you brought' or 'what you claim', but they did not. Rather, they said, 'the message you have been sent with', thereby admitting that they are talking to a messenger. This is the word of truth that Allah put on their tongues, just as He also put it on their tongues when they enticed the people not to spend anything on those who are with 'Allah's Apostle'. (al-Munafiqun: 7) They also said something similar when the revelation stopped coming to prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for a while, they said {'The Lord of Muhammad abandoned him.'}(1)

So, they admitted that prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was receiving a message, and since a messenger is always lower in rank than the one he is getting the message from, then the message was not from Muhammad. Allah told Muhammad to tell them that if Allah had so willed, Muhammad would not have recited the Quran to them, nor would Allah have made it known to him. For Muhammad lived a whole lifetime among his people before the Quran came to him; if only they used their reason! (Yunus: 16)

But what is the reason for their rejection and disbelief?

وَقَالُواْ نَحۡنُ أَكۡثَرُ أَمۡوَٰلٗا وَأَوۡلَٰدٗا وَمَا نَحۡنُ بِمُعَذَّبِينَ ٣٥

They would say, 'We have greater wealth and more children than you, and we shall not be punished' [35] (The Quran, Saba': 35)

We have said that Islam came to create balance in the society, and bring about a level of social, economic, and religious justice. So, the logic of those who rejected it was that they thought they had no need for any such balance, since they already had wealth, children, and all the pleasures of life. 'They would say…' (Saba': 35), i.e. this is their justification: '...We have greater wealth and more children than you…' (Saba': 35). Indeed, their self-indulgence led them to go even further and say, '...and we shall not be punished.'" (Saba': 35).

(1) It is narrated that Jundub ibn 'Abdullah Al-Bajli said, 'Jibril peace be upon him was slow in bringing the revelation to prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, so the idolaters said, 'Muhammad has been abandoned by his Lord.' It is narrated by Ibn Kathir in his Tafsir (4/522).

Why? Because, they say, ‘Allah would not give them such bliss in this life, and then withhold it from them in the Hereafter.’

But we say to them, ‘You are deluded, for there is a difference between the gifts of Divine Power and the gifts of Lordship. Allah gives you the gifts of Lordship which is given to everyone; believers and disbelievers, to the obedient and the disobedient. But the gift of Divine Power is ‘responsibility’. Allah grants you in this life His gifts of Lordship, and punishes you in the Hereafter using His Divine Power.

This justification of theirs: '...We have greater wealth and more children than you…' (Saba’: 35) is a proof against them, not a proof for them, since where do those good things they have come from? Also, having a large amount of money should inspire you to do all sorts of good, and having numerous children should encourage you to make of them a good flock to follow you on the path of truth. So, the fact that you still reject faith after being granted these blessings proves that you have used them in falsehood, wrongdoing, and oppression.

There is a close similarity between their words: '...and we shall not be punished."' (Saba’: 35) and the words of the owner of the garden when he said that he did not think his garden will ever perish, or that the Last Hour will ever come, and that even if he were to be taken back to his Lord, he would certainly find something even better there. (al-Kahf: 36) This is insolent arrogance and ungratefulness for the blessings of Allah. There is no family tie or kinship between Allah and any of His creation so they would be given the pleasures of this life and the hereafter without any effort to make themselves worthy of it. Such people have been misled by their wealth and mislead by their offspring. That is why Allah tells the believers to be careful, for even from among their spouses and children they will have some enemies... (at-Taghabun: 14). Praise be to Allah that He used the word min meaning ‘from among’. This means that other spouses and children will still be good.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

قُلْ إِنَّ رَبِّي يَبْسُطُ ٱلرِّزْقَ لِمَن يَشَآءُ وَيَقْدِرُ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكْثَرَ ٱلنَّاسِ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ٣٦

Say [Prophet], ‘My Lord gives in abundance to whoever He will and sparingly to whoever He will, though most people do not understand [36]
(The Quran, Saba’: 36)

In other words, ‘Say in response to their deluded comments about their wealth and children’: “...My Lord gives in abundance to whomever He will and sparingly to whomever He will…” (Saba’: 36): yabsutu means abundance, and (yaqdiru) means in moderation for whomsoever He wills through His wisdom. Provision is one of the necessary manifestations of the Lordship attribute that brought mankind into existence, and so it was necessary to also guarantee man the ingredients for maintaining life. But the Provider does not give everyone exactly the same amount or type of provision, since He wants societies to be co-operative and share benefit. If every person were to have enough to suffice him, then no one would have any need of anyone else, and there would be no social cohesion in the society as a whole.

We previously made it clear that the society network hinges on the basis of need rather than the basis of bestowing favours. If we were to suppose that each and every one of us were to have graduated from university or obtained a doctorate, then who would sweep the streets? Who would polish people’s shoes? If we were to do these things out of favour, then none of us would take it upon himself to do them.

We also said that if a self-important man go home once and found a bad odour, he would ask about it. If he is told that it is because the pipes are acting up, there is no doubt that he would not rest until that problem had been resolved. Indeed, he might get into his car and go himself to get a plumber to rid him of the problem. In such cases, we say that the plumber is of more benefit than the self-important man because Allah has given the plumber skills and capabilities not within the capacity of the self-important man. This plumber would not endure such a job unless there was a need for it, otherwise, he would not accept to do it.

That is why the poet (1) spoke well when he said:

People belong to people, whether from the desert or the city,
Some, even if they do not realise it, are but servants to others. (2)

So, mankind exchange services since the True Lord Glorified is He has not created one people to serve and one people to be served. Rather, you serve people on some things and are served by them in others. Hence, every one of us is both a servant and is served. Every human being must know that, whatever his circumstances, nothing is guaranteed to last in this life and that his leadership is not something which is his by right. If he enjoys a high rank, then he must value that rank and work hard to maintain his post. If he sees someone lower than him, he must not look down upon him, but instead should value the role he has to play in serving him, and realise that one day he might need that man to do something for him that he himself cannot do.

That is why Allah tells us that He bestowed more abundantly on some than on others. (an-Nahl: 71) Many people think that rizq means wealth, but rizq is a general word that refers to everything that is beneficial to human beings. The True Lord Glorified is He has favoured some over others in some things. So, each person is favoured in some things and less favoured in others; you are favoured in those things for which you have been granted a talent, and less favoured in those things for which you have not been granted a talent. That is what creates solidarity in a society and enables its citizens to integrate and stand together on the basis of need rather than on the basis of granting favours.

Reflect on Allah’s words telling us that when He tries man through honour and blessings, man would say that his Lord honoured him. (al-Fajr: 15), and he would thank Him. Allah has multiplied the good that you have because you have attributed the act of generosity to your Lord. But when Allah tries man through the restriction of his provision, he says that his Lord humiliated him. (al-Fajr: 16) But Allah negates both assumptions assertively. (al-Fajr: 17) It means, 'You are lying when you say this because plenty of provision is not a proof of you being honoured, just as lack of it is not a sign of you being humiliated.' Otherwise, how could plenty of provision be a proof of being honoured, if those who have been given that provision do not use it to give generously to orphans or the poor and instead consume their inheritances greedily; loving wealth with all their passion? (al-Fajr: 18-20)

(1) The poet is Abu Al-‘Ala’ Al-Ma‘arri, who was Ahmad ibn ‘Abdullah ibn Sulaiman At-Tanukhi, a poet and philosopher. He was born in the year 363 AH and died in the year 449 AH in Ma‘arra An-Nu‘man at the age of 86. He became blind in his fourth year and started composing poetry when he was 11 years old. He used to forbid people from harming animals and did not eat any meat for 25 years. His most famous book was ‘Risalat Al-Ghufran’. (Al-Mawsu‘a Ash-shi‘riyya - Al-majma‘ Ath-Thaqafi Cd - 2003).

(2) The wording of this verse that is found in Al-Mawsu‘a Ash-shi‘riyya reads as follows: People belong to people, whether from civilisation or the countryside, Some belong to others even if they do realise they are servants. The meter of this poem is (Al-Basit).

So, human beings must be courteous with Allah with respect to what He does, for Allah knows how to give provision, and He wants to make people into good examples for others. That is why Allah will cause the rich man who lies about his wealth to be exposed to the poor man for the liar he is. He wills see the punishment of Allah overcoming him so that he may know that Allah possesses the Divine Power and is Self-sustaining and that wrongdoers cannot get away from punishment in this life before the Hereafter. It is with this message that Allah addresses Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when He tells him to be patient, for Allah's promise is sure: whether He will show him part of what He has promised them in this life or whether He will take the prophet's soul back to Him first, it is to Allah that they will be brought back. (Ghafir: 77)

We also need to know that provision is not dependent on skill, expertise, or knowledge. Surely, there are people who work hard to get their provision and sow their crops, but when the time comes to harvest them, those crops could get destroyed. It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He were saying to us, 'Beware of attributing Divine Power to the means and forgetting the Divine Power of the Causer of means.'

A person's provision is assigned to them even when it is being carried by others. For example, when an embryo is in its mother's womb, its nourishment comes from its mother's blood. Even though that blood is carried by the mother, it is not part of her provision because that blood goes down into her womb to nourish the baby. But when she is not pregnant it is expelled from her body through the process of menstruation and she gets no benefit from it. Why? Because it is not part of her provision! That helps us to understand when Allah says that it is Him who shall provide sustenance for the children as well as the parents. (al-Isra': 31)

That is why they said, ‘Your provision is not all of what you have, but it is all of the things from which you derive benefit.’ Something may be owned by you and in your possession so you think it is yours, but then you may lose it or it may be stolen or destroyed. Or, it might be even more extreme than that, for you may have food which you eat and which is transformed by your body into the blood that runs in your veins, only for that blood to be spilt from a cut, wound, or surgical operation. So, that blood is not part of your provision.

A believer should always be at ease when it comes to the process of getting provision: he should know that it is through Allah’s attribute of being the Sustainer that believers and disbelievers alike are provided for. He should know that a person’s provision is assigned to him as if his name is written on it so that no one else will ever be able to take it, no matter what. So, when you are granted more provision, then thank Allah.

If you are tested with decreased provision, then know that it is on account of Allah’s Wisdom, and remember Allah’s words when He says that there is not a thing whose storehouses are not with Him, and He sends it down only according to a well-defined measure. (al-Hijr: 21)

Our verse ends with: '...but most men do not understand (Allah’s ways).' (Saba': 36), i.e. Most people do not understand Allah’s Wisdom when it comes to giving some more provision than to others. In other words, it is only the few who do understand, so we ask Allah to make us from among those few!

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَمَآ أَمۡوَٰلُكُمۡ وَلَآ أَوۡلَٰدُكُم بِٱلَّتِي تُقَرِّبُكُمۡ عِندَنَا زُلۡفَىٰٓ إِلَّا مَنۡ ءَامَنَ وَعَمِلَ
صَٰلِحٗا فَأُوْلَٰٓئِكَ لَهُمۡ جَزَآءُ ٱلضِّعۡفِ بِمَا عَمِلُواْ وَهُمۡ فِي ٱلۡغُرُفَٰتِ ءَامِنُونَ ٣٧

Neither wealth nor children will bring you nearer to Us, but those who believe and do good deeds will have multiple rewards for what they have done, and will live safely in the lofty dwellings of Paradise [37] (The Quran, Saba': 37)

These words are directed towards the disbelievers, those who use their wealth and children to err. But neither that sort of wealth nor those children will ever, in themselves, be the means for them coming close to Allah. But if one uses them in the Way of Allah and sincerely for Him, they become one of the greatest means for coming closer to Him. This is because, wealth may be spent for good, and children may be brought up properly so that they become good role models for their communities. That is why Allah excludes this exception saying: '…but those who believe and do good deeds…' (Saba': 37). Next, Allah opens the door for His blessing when wealth and children are used to do good acts saying: '...will have multiple rewards for what they have done…' (Saba': 37).

So, wealth and children are not necessarily a blessing, since there are some forms of wealth that will drag a person towards destruction and cause him to be hurled in the hellfire, and some types of children whom you think will be an honour for their families' names, but instead they turn out to be a disgrace to them.

We have seen many of those who are so keen on the power they get from family ties, but in truth Allah wants to humiliate them by means of that with which they have become enamoured. A man may betroth his son to the daughter of an important or wealthy person, or a man of office, and he feels pride on account of the family connection he has made. But can he guarantee that he will be happy with that girl? Or that he will never disagree with her? That is why so many times the tide turns around, and that family connection become a source of shame instead of pride: Allah humbles him by means of something he thought would be a source of honour and pride.

As for Allah's words: '...will have multiple rewards for what they have done' (Saba': 37), it is only good actions which receive a recompense that is multiplied. On the other hand, bad actions are not multiplied, but rather requited with their like. That is an example of Allah's mercy towards us.

You will note here that Allah says '...multiple...' (Saba': 37) and does not say 'multiples'. It is because 'multiple' is a generic noun that can refer to both a little and a lot. An example of this type of linguistic construct is found in Allah's words where He swears by the declining day, that man is deep in loss, except for those who believe, do good deeds, urge one another to the truth, and urge one another to steadfastness. (al-'Asr: 1-3) Here Allah excludes Al-ladhina which denotes the plural of insan (man) since insan is a generic noun.

‘Multiple’ here, could mean either the multiplication of the act of charity or the multiplication of the reward. One of the meanings of di‘f, ’multiple’, is that when you weigh what you originally gave, you would find it weak and light in comparison to the recompense that you received in exchange.

Multiplication is not the limit of Allah’s bounty. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said in one of his Hadith, {A good action will be multiplied from ten to seven hundred times.}(1)

So, Allah gives whomsoever He wills multiple rewards according to the intention that person had when he did the act of charity: one person gives, thinking that it is from his own wealth and efforts; while another gives believing that he is simply passing over what belongs to Allah - he knows that his wealth is Allah’s wealth and that the one who gives is Allah.

A great illustration of giving is found in the story of Fatima Allah be pleased with her. {It is narrated that when prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him went in to see her, he found her polishing a dirham of hers, so he asked her about that. She replied, ‘I am doing that because I have made the intention to give it away as charity, and I know that it will pass through Allah’s hands before it reaches the hands of the poor.’}

Some people would give out charity, and as soon as it passes through their hands, they cease to think of it, their hearts are no longer attached to it and they no longer look out for what will come to them because of it. Others would lend money, their hearts remain attached to it and they do not forget it, so every time they remember it they would long to get it back, but they wait patiently; these get the reward for both the loan and for their patience and steadfastness.

That is why orientalists objected noisily about the recompense one gets for giving charity and that which he gets for giving a loan, claiming that the verse and the Hadith contradict each other with respect to this matter. In a

(1) It is narrated by Imam Muslim in his Sahih (Kitab As-Siyam - chapter on the excellence of fasting, (Hadith) number 164), as well as by Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (1638) and Ahmad in his Musnad (2/443 & 516) in a (Hadith) from Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Every action of the human being is multiplied: one good action will be multiplied ten times to seven hundred times to how ever many times Allah wishes to multiply it.’

Hadith, prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says, {'It is written on the gate to Paradise that a good action is rewarded tenfold, while a loan is rewarded with eighteen-fold.'}(1) As for the verse, it says: 'Who will give Allah a good loan, which He will increase for him many times over?…' (al-Baqara: 245) (They say), if you combine these two, then a loan should be multiplied twenty times, not eighteen times.

Praise be to Allah that He has unlocked for us what was previously locked: we say to them that if a man were, for example, to give a dinar away as charity, that Allah would recompense him ten times that amount. But would that original dinar that he spent return to him? No it would not, because that dinar went in exchange for the ten he got back. So, in reality, he got nine-fold, and when those nine are doubled they become eighteen.

Now let us return to the verse in hand: '...but those who believe and do good deeds…' (Saba': 37): There are many places throughout the Book of Allah where He combines faith and doing right deeds - why is that? Because they are two wings without which no action can ever be properly accomplished: good deeds without faith are empty and worthless like the acts of charity of the disbelievers - they get a reward for them in this life in the form of fame, honour, and the immortalisation of their names, but no portion of the reward of the Hereafter. Similarly, there is no value in faith if it does not translate into good deeds.

The verse says: '...but those who...' (Saba': 37), i.e. those who have faith and do good deeds: '...will have multiple rewards for what they have done, and will live safely in the lofty dwellings of paradise.' (Saba': 37) Ghurufat is the plural of ghurfa, which is the penthouse that is specifically set as a private den. That is why, even today, we find that in villas, the ground floor is used for dining and receiving guests. But when it comes to rest and quality time, this would be in the upper floor which is set as a private den.

(1) From Abu Umama Sada ibn 'Ajalan Allah be pleased with him that prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'A man will enter Paradise and see written upon its gate: An act of charity will be multiplied ten times, while a loan will be multiplied eighteen times.' Narrated by At-Tabarani and Al-Bayhaqi, both of whom narrated it by way of 'Utbah ibn Hamid (At-Targhib wa At-Tarhib of Al-Mundhari 2/34)

Every human being has private quarters, even when he is inside his own home and surrounded by his own children. Because when a man is in his bedroom, he has the freedom to wear whatever he wants or even to be nude, but if he wants to go out to the living room, he must get himself ready and put on the appropriate attire. If he wants to go out into the street, he must again get himself ready and put on the suitable attire. The same is true if he was going to the club or other places where people get together - each place has its dress code and way of behaving.

When it comes to privacy, we all see how parents today put their sons and daughters into separate rooms, and if they do not have the space for that, they would keep one bed for the son and another for the daughter. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He preserves His slave's status and privacy to be totally safe and undisturbed: 'and will live safely in the lofty dwellings of Paradise' (Saba': 37).

وَٱلَّذِينَ يَسۡعَوۡنَ فِيٓ ءَايَٰتِنَا مُعَٰجِزِينَ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ فِي ٱلۡعَذَابِ مُحۡضَرُونَ ٣٨

Whereas those who work against Our messages, seeking to undermine them, will be summoned to punishment [38] (The Quran, Saba': 38)

We say that when someone strives sa'a against another in the presence of the Sultan, it means that he strives to slander or defame him. The people referred to in this verse strive against the verses of Allah and speak badly about them in order to turn people away and distract them from listening to them.

As for the Word: 'mu'ajizin' (Saba': 38), its singular is mu'ajiz. Mu'ajaza is in the morphological form mufa'ala which is used when one person does an action to another. So, mu'ajaza is a form of battle, but beware of thinking that it is a battle between the believers and disbelievers, or between the Messengers and those who deny them. No, it is a higher battle since those who engage in this mu'ajaza) are those who seek to neutralize the signs of Allah. But no matter how much they plot, they will never render Allah incapable and will never escape from Him. Allah says to Prophet Muhammad, if he could only see their terror on Judgment Day! There will be no escape for them when they are seized from a nearby place. (Saba': 51)

Allah says: they ‘…will be summoned to punishment…’ (Saba’: 38). The meaning of muhdarun is that they will be brought forth against their will. It is the passive participle from the verb ahdara, so they are tied up and dragged there like someone who has been arrested. Another word derived from this verb is muhdir who is the one who fetches the accused regardless of his will.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

قُلۡ إِنَّ رَبِّي يَبۡسُطُ ٱلرِّزۡقَ لِمَن يَشَآءُ مِنۡ عِبَادِهِۦ وَيَقۡدِرُ لَهُۥۚ وَمَآ
أَنفَقۡتُم مِّن شَيۡءٖ فَهُوَ يُخۡلِفُهُۥۖ وَهُوَ خَيۡرُ ٱلرَّٰزِقِينَ ٣٩

Say, ‘My Lord gives in abundance to whichever of His servants He will, and sparingly to whichever He will; He will replace whatever you give in alms; He is the best of providers’ [39] (The Quran, Saba’: 39)

We say that yabsutu means expanding provision and yaqdiru means making things tight - these meanings were explained just a few verses ago. But here, Allah adds a new twist, for He says immediately afterwards: ‘...He will replace whatever you give in alms; He is the best of providers.”’ (Saba’: 39) It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He is directing our attention to the fact that mankind in its entirety is created by Him, and they are all His slaves. He is capable of giving to everyone and providing for everyone abundantly, but instead of doing that, He wants people to love one another and be responsible for one another, so he gives abundant provision to some and scant provision to others. Then he gives those who have been granted abundant provision an indication of the reward they will get by spending generously on others so that they might spend on those to whom He has granted scant provision.

This verse gives us a summarised account of the economy of the entire world. An economy is essentially the balance of expenses and income; where expenses are concerned with things we expend of and income is concerned with things we receive. So, in any given place, there must be a group that gives and another that takes: there must be rich and there must be poor. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He did not make that abundance of wealth freely available to all, nor did He make everyone experience the pangs of poverty. Instead, He made it an exchange of giving and taking.

Afterwards He tells us: ‘Say, ‘My Lord gives in abundance to whichever of His servants He will, and sparingly to whichever He will…’ (Saba’: 39), He qualifies it with His Words: ‘...He will replace whatever you give in alms; He is the best of providers.”’ (Saba’: 39) So, the True Lord Glorified is He takes into account the principle of self-interest, and the love that the rich have for money. That is why He puts their hearts at rest with respect to their wealth and He guarantees to replace it.

The True Lord Glorified is He gives abundant provision to the rich, those who love money, but says to them, ‘If you have a debt that is owed by a poor person, and this person transfers his debt to a richer person who is capable of paying off that debt (in this case Allah), then accept the deal because you cannot guarantee that the poor person will pay what he owes. So, if your money is with Allah then He will surely pay.’ Thus, Allah reassures the rich that their wealth will never decrease on account of them spending it on others because their debt has been transferred over to Allah and He has undertaken to pay it back. That is what prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was teaching us when he said, {‘The Son of Adam says, “My wealth, my wealth.” But do you get anything (of benefit) from your wealth except for that which you ate and finished, or that which you clothed yourself with and wore it out, or that which you gave as charity and have spent?}’(1) {When prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was given a sheep as a gift, ‘A’isha Allah be pleased with her, gave it away as charity, leaving only its shoulder for prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him since she knew that he loved the shoulder. When prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came back, he asked her, ‘What did you do with the sheep?’ She replied, ‘All of it is gone except for its shoulder.’ So, he said, ‘actually, all of it remains except for its shoulder.’}(2)

(1) It is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (4/ 24 & 26); Muslim in his Sahih (2958) in Kitab Az-Zuhd; and At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (2342). The wording of the (Hadith) in Muslim is, ‘The son of Adam says, ‘My wealth! My wealth’, so Allah says, ‘Is there any of your wealth you truly possess, son of Adam, except for that which you have eaten so it is consumed, dressed up in so it becomes worn out, and given away as charity so it remains for you in perpetuity.’

(2) It is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (6/50); and At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (2470) in a (Hadith) from ‘A’isha Allah be pleased with her. At-Tirmidhi said that it was a (Sahih Hadith). The wording of Ahmad is that ‘A’isha said to prophet Muhammad, ‘Messenger of Allah, nothing remains except for its shoulder.’ He replied, ‘Actually, all of it remains except for its shoulder.’

Why? Because it is a wealth that has been transferred into the custody of Allah and He has promised to replace it. How do you think it will be when that repayment is coming from the Allah who says to the believers (even if they were in a battle) when you are offered a greeting, then respond with a better one, or at least return it. (an-Nisa': 86) You have greeted Allah by greeting the poor, so there is no doubt that He will give you in return a greeting that is better. Not just that, but He multiplies it for you innumerable times. The example we gave of that was of the single seed that the farmer plants in the ground. That seed gives him seven ears of corn, in each ear there are one hundred seeds. If that is what the earth (which was created by Allah) gives you, then what do you think of the Creator Himself?

As for Allah's Words: 'He will replace whatever you give' (Saba': 39), they are a reassurance to the rich that their wealth will never diminish, and a reassurance to the poor that Allah will never abandon them or leave them alone in their poverty, That is proven by the fact that He takes out a loan on their account, for He says: 'Who will give Allah a good loan?…' (al-Baqara: 245) So, Allah borrows from mankind to give to mankind even though it is within His power to give abundant provision to all. But it is His aim that people live together with the love and affection that charity brings - that way the rich will love the poor and the poor will feel no resentment towards the rich. That is why the verse ends with the words: '...He is the best of providers.'" (Saba': 39) He says 'the best of providers' because a provider is everyone who extends his hand to you in a way that brings you benefit. According to that definition, your father can be considered as your provider, as anyone else who supports and takes care of you. Likewise, your Lord is a provider, but there is a difference between the two: although your father is a provider in the sense that he brings you your provision, yet if you ask him where that provision came from, he would say, 'From Allah'. So, he is delivering it to you. But as for the True Lord, He is the One Who creates provision to start with, and that is why, '...He is the best of providers.'" (Saba': 39)

We previously illustrated that when you see an attribute that is common to both the Creator and His creation, you must know that the definition befitting each is completely separate and different. What gives superiority to Allah's attribute here is that He is the provider as well as the One Who creates provision and the One Who clears the way for it to reach you.

They say that Allah's superiority, when it comes to providing, stems from three things: Firstly, He does not keep your provision back until the time you need it, but rather creates it for you before you are even created, and He puts in place all the necessary ingredients for your life before summoning you into this world. Secondly, He does not charge you anything for what He provides you. Thirdly, He does not demand any reward in exchange for what He granted you. For all of these reasons the True Lord Glorified is He was and still is the best of providers. Reflect, for example, on the Pharaoh - after he had raised Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and demanded his gratitude, reminding him of how he raised him as his child and how he spent with them years of his life! (ash-Shu'ara': 18) What he meant was, 'You should speak courteously towards us, Musa, remember my favours upon you, and do not come set a collision course with me.'

On the other hand, Allah says of Himself that He will judge among us, for He is the best of Judges. (Yunus: 109) Allah also says of Himself, that He is the best of creators. (al-Mu'minun: 14)

In all of these verses, the True Lord Glorified is He takes into account the talents that He has given to people, and appreciates their positive effect upon life - that is the reason He attests to them possessing features of His own attributes, namely that of creation. 'Creation' means bringing into being something that had not been in existence before. Human beings can be considered creators when they make things like crystal out of sand. The True Lord Glorified is He does not begrudge them that and so calls them creators. But if humans are creators, then the True Lord Glorified is He is the best of creators. Why? A number of different aspects demonstrate His superiority when it comes to the act of creation: Firstly, humans can only create things out of existing elements, whereas the Creator can create things out of nothing. Secondly, mankind's creations remain in one state - with no ability to grow or proliferate, whereas Allah's creation possesses the quality of life - they eat, grow, and proliferate...etc.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَيَوْمَ يَحْشُرُهُمْ جَمِيعًا ثُمَّ يَقُولُ لِلْمَلَٰٓئِكَةِ أَهَٰٓؤُلَآءِ إِيَّاكُمْ كَانُوا۟ يَعْبُدُونَ ﴿٤٠﴾
قَالُوا۟ سُبْحَٰنَكَ أَنتَ وَلِيُّنَا مِن دُونِهِم ۖ بَلْ كَانُوا۟ يَعْبُدُونَ ٱلْجِنَّ ۖ أَكْثَرُهُم بِهِم مُّؤْمِنُونَ ﴿٤١﴾

On the Day He gathers them all together, He will say to the angels, 'Was it you these people worshipped?' [40] They will reply, 'May You be exalted! You are our supporter against them! Really, they worshipped the jinn – most of them believed in them' [41] (The Quran, Saba': 40 - 41)

The meaning is, 'Remember that Day upon which He will gather them all together'. The day that includes the gathering and bringing together all mankind is the Day of Rising. But why would Allah mention to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that day? Because this is a sign to Prophet Muhammad, that Allah has neither forgotten him nor left him alone. That is proven by the fact that He will take revenge upon his enemies and those who reject him on that day. It is as if Allah were saying to him, 'You will see what We shall do to them', just as He asks at the end of al-Mutaffifin chapter, if the disbelievers have not been repaid for their sins? (al-Mutaffifin: 36), and when He asks the angels if it was them that these people worshiped. (Saba': 40) It is well known that disbelievers worship many gods, so why does Allah mention the angels in particular here in this question? Because angels are the highest species that are worshipped other than Allah, and the closest of them to Him. That is why they dubbed them 'the daughters of Allah'. They thought that the angels could plead for them with Allah, or intercede on their behalf and defend them if they worshipped them. So, Allah mentions the angels here, rather than the stones or trees they also used to worship.

But why is the question directed towards the angels who are being worshipped, and not towards those worshippers who associated others with Allah? Why does Allah not rebuke them for worshipping other than Allah? Because the True Lord Glorified is He wants the idolaters to hear the response directly from the angels themselves so that the proof against them is established more eloquently.

Allah asks the angels: '..."Was it you these people worshipped?"' (Saba': 40) i.e. the idolaters, Their first response was: 'May You be exalted!…' (Saba': 41) meaning you are exalted, Lord, above anyone being worshipped apart from You. '...You are our supporter against them!' (Saba': 41), means, 'It is a greater honour and source of pride for us to be your lowly servants than for them to worship us. '...Really, they worshipped the jinn, most of them believed in them.' (Saba': 41), i.e. they were not worshipping us at all, but instead were worshipping the jinn. '...most of them believed in them."' (Saba': 41) But why did they worship the jinn(1)? Why did most of them believe in them?

The jinn are the counterparts of human beings. They are called jinn because they are hidden from us - they see us, but we do not see them. Allah says to us that Satan and his tribe are lurking for us where we cannot see them. (al-A'raf: 27) Those who worship the jinn do not worship all of them, but rather worship the shayatin (Satans) of the jinn. They worship them because they obey them, and most of them to believe in them. Why? Because the jinn used to snatch snippets of what Allah said to His angels and pick up information about certain events or realities. Then they would reveal them to their friends from among the men, and those people would take those snippets and tell them to other people claiming that they were telling them about the future. But in reality they were mixing those realities with a great deal of falsehood. Then, when some events happened in the way that they had predicted people would be fascinated by them and think that they did indeed know the hidden future.

(1) Al-Qurtubi mentioned in his Tafsir (8/5579) 'that a tribe called Banu Mulayh ibn Khuza'a used to worship the jinn, claiming that the jinn appeared to them and that they were really angels and the daughters of Allah.' But Abu Yahya Zakariyya Al-Ansari narrated a question in his Book, 'Fath Ar-Rahman Bi-kashf ma yaltabisu fi Al-Quran' (p 345), 'If you were to ask, 'How could the angels say what they said with respect to the idolaters when it has never been narrated that any of them worshipped the jinn?', we would say that what they meant was that they used to obey the shayatin (Satans) when they commanded them to worship other than Allah. So the meaning of jinn here is the shayatin. On the other hand, Al-Karmani was certain that they used to worship the jinn as well.'

فَٱلْيَوْمَ لَا يَمْلِكُ بَعْضُكُمْ لِبَعْضٍ نَّفْعًا وَلَا ضَرًّا وَنَقُولُ لِلَّذِينَ
ظَلَمُوا۟ ذُوقُوا۟ عَذَابَ ٱلنَّارِ ٱلَّتِى كُنتُم بِهَا تُكَذِّبُونَ ﴿٤٢﴾

‘So today neither of you has any power to benefit or harm the other,’ We shall tell the evildoers, ‘Taste the torment of the fire which you called a lie’ [42]
(The Quran, Saba’: 42)

‘...Neither of you...’ (Saba’: 42), i.e. neither the angels nor those idolaters who worship them, ‘...today...’ (Saba’: 42), i.e. on the Day of Rising, ‘...has any power to benefit or harm the other…’ (Saba’: 42) even though they think that the angels are but honoured slaves who enjoy a high rank with Allah, and that this will make them intercede on their behalf; yet the angels would make it clear to them that they can only intercede on behalf of those with whom Allah is pleased. Indeed, no one can intercede without first being given the permission to do so. Then there is the fact that the angels would be too ashamed to intercede on behalf of someone who worshipped other than Allah, for the absolute sincerity of their devotion will prevent them from supporting people such as these or interceding on their behalf.

We saw a similar situation with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when he gave those who believed in Allah but denied his message precedence over those who denied Allah, thus demonstrating that he sides more with his Lord than with himself.

As for Allah’s words: ‘…We shall tell the evildoers, “Taste the torment of the fire which you called a lie’ (Saba’: 42), this is one of the verses with which the orientalists had problems, saying that the words of Allah contradict. They said that this verse says that the evildoers call ‘the Fire’ a lie, whereas in another verse it is “the torment” of the fire which the evildoers call a lie. (as-Sajda: 20), so which one is it, they asked?

So, did the evildoers call the fire, or its torment, a lie? Our answer is that there were some disbelievers who rejected the existence of the fire, and to those Allah says: ‘...Taste the torment of the fire which you called a lie.”’ (Saba’: 42) Their denial was directed at the fire, and so the relative pronoun al-lati denotes the ‘Fire’.

As for those who believed in the existence of the fire, but rejected the fact that they would be punished by it, Allah says to them to taste the 'torment' of the fire which they called a lie. (as-Sajda: 20) In this case, their denial was directed at the torment, not the fire, and so the relative pronoun al-ladhi denotes the 'punishment'.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَإِذَا تُتْلَىٰ عَلَيْهِمْ ءَايَٰتُنَا بَيِّنَٰتٍ قَالُوا۟ مَا هَٰذَآ إِلَّا رَجُلٌ يُرِيدُ أَن يَصُدَّكُمْ
عَمَّا كَانَ يَعْبُدُ ءَابَآؤُكُمْ وَقَالُوا۟ مَا هَٰذَآ إِلَّآ إِفْكٌ مُّفْتَرًى ۚ وَقَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ
كَفَرُوا۟ لِلْحَقِّ لَمَّا جَآءَهُمْ إِنْ هَٰذَآ إِلَّا سِحْرٌ مُّبِينٌ ﴿٤٣﴾

When Our messages are recited to them, clear as they are, they say, 'This is only a man who wants to turn you away from what your forefathers worshipped,' and, 'This [Quran] is nothing but lies he has made up.' When the Truth comes to the disbelievers, they say, 'This is just plain sorcery' [43]
(The Quran, Saba': 43)

The meaning of: 'to turn you away' (Saba': 43) is take you away: 'from what your forefathers worshipped!' (Saba': 43) This proves that their worship of other deities than Allah was no more than their blind following in the footsteps of their forefathers. By saying this, they were not coming up with anything new, for Allah had already told us that they would say that when they were still in the world of unformed atoms when He extracted from them their solemn oath that they would take Him as their Lord. Allah says to prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that He took out the offspring from the loins of the children of Adam and made them bear witness about themselves, and asked them, 'Am I not your Lord?' and they replied, 'Yes, we bear witness.' Hence, they cannot say on the Day of Resurrection, 'We were not aware of this,' or, 'It was our forefathers who, before us, ascribed partners to Allah, and we are only the descendants who came after them: will you destroy us because of falsehoods they invented?' (al-A'raf: 172-173)

After saying what they said about Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him this is what they said about the Quran: '...This (Quran) is nothing but lies he has made up…' (Saba': 43): ifk is turning realities or events upside down, and it was on account of this that lies came to be called ifk because lying is saying something that contradicts reality, whereas telling the truth is saying something that supports reality. When you turn a reality upside down, you change it altogether.

It is like when Allah says in one of the verses that it was He who 'turned down' the ruined cities. (an-Najm: 53): mu'tafika are villages that Allah has turned upside down. Another example is when Allah asks how they can 'turn away' from the truth; (al-An'am: 95) i.e. how have you turned away from the truth and inverted it until it became falsehood? Did they stop at that description of the Quran? No, they added the word: '...made up...' (Saba': 43), i.e. deliberately invented. Then Allah says: 'When the Truth comes to the disbelievers, they say, "This is just plain sorcery,"' (Saba': 43). Of the words '...This is just...' (Saba': 43), they mean, 'this thing that you brought, Muhammad, is just: "...plain sorcery!" (Saba': 43) It is amazing that they described that which Muhammad brought as magic, since magic is what is used to cast a spell over people's eyes. Nothing that a magician does is real - it is all illusion. That is why we say that there is a difference between the magic that the magicians of Pharaoh cast and the staff of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. Their magic was as Allah Glorified is He describes it when He Glorified is He says: 'they bewitched the eyes of the people,' (al-A'raf: 116) and when He Glorified is He says: 'seemed to him from their magic that they were moving [like snakes].' (Ta Ha: 66) It was nothing more than pretence - there was nothing real about it. But when Musa (Moses) peace be upon him threw his staff, it turned into a real snake. Had it not turned into a real snake, then Musa peace be upon him would have been afraid of it, for Allah Glorified is He says of him: 'And he sensed within himself apprehension, did Musa' (Ta Ha: 67)?

If it had not been a real snake, then the most skilled of the magicians would not have believed in him, for the Quran relates that once they saw what the staff did, they said, 'We have come to believe in the Lord of Musa and Harun (Aaron)!" (Ta Ha: 70) In other words, they recognised that it is not something that came from Musa peace be upon him but rather from Allah Glorified is He.

So, where then is this magic that Muhammad brought? If Muhammad truly were a magician who had bewitched the believers as they said, then why did he also not bewitch you, thereby bringing an end to this matter? It is also well known that those who are bewitched never get anything good from the one who bewitches them. So, this statement of theirs is a clear lie against the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and an indication of their stubborn refusal to accept the truth brought by him.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَمَآ ءَاتَيۡنَٰهُم مِّن كُتُبٖ يَدۡرُسُونَهَاۖ وَمَآ أَرۡسَلۡنَآ إِلَيۡهِمۡ قَبۡلَكَ مِن نَّذِيرٖ (٤٤)

Though We have not given them any books to study nor sent any warner before you [44]
(The Quran, Saba': 44)

It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He were asking, 'Where does this statement of theirs originate? And where do those accusations come from? Have we given them books which they are studying [and from which they quote]? Did they learn that from them?' Then He Glorified is He Himself gives the answer to that unvoiced question: 'And We had not given them any scriptures which they could study.' In addition to, 'and We had not sent to them before you, [O Muhammad], any warner;' meaning a Messenger who told them those things. So, from where then did they get them?

The True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَكَذَّبَ ٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبۡلِهِمۡ وَمَا بَلَغُواْ مِعۡشَارَ مَآ
ءَاتَيۡنَٰهُمۡ فَكَذَّبُواْ رُسُلِيۖ فَكَيۡفَ كَانَ نَكِيرِ (٤٥)

Those who lived before them also denied the truth – these people have not attained even a tenth of what We gave their predecessors – they, too, rejected My messengers, and how terrible My condemnation was! [45] (The Quran, Saba': 45)

The meaning of this is that whatever they said about the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him or about those who brought them guidance before him, is simply a denial of the truth, just like the earlier people who denied the truth. Their denial is a closely-followed custom, and indeed a natural tendency in those to whom Messengers are sent; whenever a new religion is brought to them that brings an end to their oppression, tyranny, lordship and their enslavement of others. So, in order to protect their instruments of oppression and corruption, they felt that they had to oppose religion and deny the Messengers. In this context, the meaning of: 'And those before them denied,' is that there were nations who came before you and denied your brothers, the previous Messengers, so you are not the first to receive this reaction, O Muhammad.

'And they have not attained a tenth of what We had given them.' This means not even a tenth of the message, guidance, proof, and evidence that we have given you, O Prophet, reached those previous peoples who denied their Messengers. The reason is that the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him brought the complete religion and the perfect way, not open to any amendment.

Or it means the disbelievers of Mecca who denied Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'And they have not attained,' even a tenth of the power that we granted to those earlier peoples. In other words, those peoples who denied previous Messengers were more powerful, more influential and more civilised than the disbelievers of Mecca, when compared to 'Ad, Thamud or Pharaoh. Read Allah's words: 'Have you not considered how your Lord dealt with "Ad, Who were very tall like lofty pillars; the likes of whom had never been created in the land? And [with] Thamud, who carved out the rocks in the valley? And [with] Pharaoh, owner of the stakes [All of] whom oppressed within the lands' (al-Fajr: 6-11).

Where is the strength of Quraysh when compared to the strength of these people whose strength, power, oppression, and tyranny is infamous!? And despite that, still what befell them of Allah's might befell.

As for Allah's words: 'so how [terrible] was My reproach,' they mean, 'Look at how I took hold of the deniers and did not leave them be without punishment. No, on the contrary, I seized them with the seizing of One Who is Almighty, All-Powerful. As for 'My reproach,' it means 'My rejection of them by destroying them and punishing them, and My rejection of them at the same level that they rejected Me.'

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

قُلْ إِنَّمَآ أَعِظُكُم بِوَٰحِدَةٍ ۖ أَن تَقُومُوا۟ لِلَّهِ مَثْنَىٰ وَفُرَٰدَىٰ ثُمَّ تَتَفَكَّرُوا۟ ۚ مَا
بِصَاحِبِكُم مِّن جِنَّةٍ ۚ إِنْ هُوَ إِلَّا نَذِيرٌ لَّكُم بَيْنَ يَدَىْ عَذَابٍ شَدِيدٍ ﴿٤٦﴾

Say [Prophet], 'I advise you to do one thing only: stand before God, in pairs or singly, and think: there is no sign of madness in your companion [the Prophet] – he is only warning you before severe suffering arrives' [46]
(The Quran, Saba': 46)

After having given them a warning and a lesson by mentioning what happened to those deniers of the truth who came before them, the True Lord Glorified is He addresses His Words towards them once again and says to His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him 'Say' to them, 'I only advise you of one [thing].' When you counsel someone, you are not issuing a new ruling, but rather are reminding someone of a previous ruling that people have forgotten. So an exhorter is one who clarifies matters in religion that people already know and believe in. But the desires and heedlessness of people caused them to forget those matters, so he comes and reminds them of the previous rulings. And counsel is only given by those who love you and desire the best for you.

For that reason, the True Lord Glorified is He gives us a good example of what counsel is in the story of Luqman when he was counselling his son: 'And [mention, O Muhammad], when Luqman said to his son while he was instructing him, "O my son, do not associate [anything] with Allah."' (Luqman: 13)

As for the Words: 'of one [thing],' they mean 'a single admonishment containing all the ones'. In other words, 'I do only counsel you with this one thing.' What is that thing? 'That you stand for Allah, [seeking truth] in pairs and individually,' beware of standing up for your own personal desire or for leadership that you look out for; beware of standing out of a desire to stand above this Prophet peace and blessings be upon him but rather make your standing be only for Allah Glorified is He stripped of all desires, stripped of all appetites and stripped of any partisanship.

And as long as you make them want to stand for Allah Glorified is He it is inevitable that Allah Glorified is He will come to occupy a place in their hearts.

He Glorified is He is indeed in their hearts, as is proven by the Words: ‘And if you asked them, “Who created the heavens and earth?” they would surely say, “Allah.” Say, “[All] praise is [due] to Allah.”’ (Luqman: 25)

And by the Words: ‘And if you asked them who created them, they would surely say, “Allah.”’ (az-Zukhruf: 87) So, they used to believe that Allah Glorified is He was the One Who created them and the One Who created the heavens and the earth because that was a matter that was abundantly clear and something that nobody could possibly deny, no matter how far they have fallen into disbelief. Why? It is because creation is something that no man has ever claimed for himself. Such claims can only be made when a matter is ambiguous to such an extent that falsehood can easily be confused with the truth. But this matter is a clear one that indulges no ambiguity, for no matter how much they search, they will never find anyone who can create them or the universe around them except for Allah Glorified is He. This is why He Glorified is He uses this logic to argue with them, saying, ‘Based on your position, there are two possibilities before you: either you yourselves created this creation, or you were created without a creator.’ The first is rejected because there is no one who claims to have created creation; the second is rejected because things that are smaller and more trivial than the heavens and earth or human beings need a maker to make them - for example, do not the shoes you wear on your feet require someone to make them?

So, the heavens, earth, and human beings must also have a maker that befits their grandeur and greatness. And how could anyone deny this fact when they are able to recognise each other based on the smallest of things: They know the one who possesses those things and take pride in him. For example, so-and-so used to bury his daughters alive, so-and-so used to have a platter of food from which such-and-such a number of guests used to eat, so-and-so was the bravest of the Arabs, etc. And, indeed, the words, ‘I am the son of so-and-so, and I am the son of so-and -so’ feature heavily in their poetry.

So, when it came to this matter of creation, not one of them dared to deny it. And as long as they recognise that Allah Glorified is He is the one who creates, they must then also stand for that Allah Glorified is He whose role in creation they affirmed. They must ensure that their standing is sincerely for Him and that no one other than Him is in their hearts and minds. If you do that, then have absolute confidence in the fact that that standing will bring you to the truth, for nothing shuts out truth from the intellects of those who search for it so much as personal whim, as the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'But if the Truth had followed their inclinations, the heavens and the earth and whoever is in them would have been ruined.' (al-Mu'minun: 71)

The standing that is meant here is not conditional upon there being a congregation or a crowd since it is a standing for the purpose of reflection. That is why it should be done, 'in pairs and individually,' whereby each person is left alone to reflect upon the matter of Muhammad in stark and real terms: How was he when he was amongst you? How was his conduct and character? Did you ever experience from him lies or magic or soothsaying? Did he ever claim anything as his that was not his own? Did you ever see a single sign of madness in him before his mission began? '"And then give thought." There is not in your companion any madness.'

This reflecting on the state of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him requires a person to be objective; it is why Allah Glorified is He chooses that they are separate and do it singly or in pairs. When a human being is on his own, there is no opponent for him to lose to and no opponent to drive him to other than the truth. In such circumstances, his own point of view will be much closer to the truth.

When someone is alone and reflects, he will arrive at the truth because he is not going to trick or deceive himself and he is not going to be too arrogant to return to the truth. But when people are in a group, every one of them must establish his own proof, even if that means that he is forced to lie and cheat. As we have seen many times in such circumstances, everyone swears that he is in the right and everyone else is in the wrong.

It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He were protecting us by means of this way of reflecting from the clamour and din of crowds, that clamour that we witness, for example, in protest marches where everyone shouts out for what he wants, and their voices run together and become so mixed up with each other that it becomes impossible to make out what is being said.

The True Lord Glorified is He teaches us how to reflect singly or in pairs, for that is what protects from the deafening clamour. This matter takes us back to the objection the orientalists have with Allah's words: 'Verily, He knows all that is said openly, just as He [alone] knows all that you conceal.' (al-Anbiya': 110)

The nub of their objection is this: if Allah Glorified is He honours us by knowing what it is we conceal, then where is the benefit in Him knowing what we say openly? Does every one of us not know what is said openly? We say that here He is addressing us in the plural. So what the verse is saying is that He knows what all of you are concealing or saying openly at any given moment - if your voice becomes mixed up with those of others, still He knows it. He is able to trace each voice back to the one it belongs.

Indeed, having knowledge of what is voiced out loud but is mixed up is greater than having knowledge of what is concealed since something that is concealed may well be indicated and given away by certain outward signs. But as for what is voiced out loud and mixed up with other sounds, it is very difficult to distinguish it from those other sounds.

It is similar when people are in pairs, for two is, as they say, one opinion and its opposite. Even if one opinion were to be defeated by the other, that defeat would be a secret one. We hear people all the time say to their opponents, 'I want to sit alone with you, just the two of us.' It is because you represent the two sides of an issue, and there is no third side to embarrass you or cause you to feel humiliated if you change your position over to his when you are with him.

'There is not in your companion any madness.' Allah Glorified is He says this because they used to say that the Prophet Muhammad was mad. But it is strange that they used to describe him as being mad when they were the ones who knew him the best, and had never once seen on him any of the telltale signs of madness. Indeed, he never once did anything against the society in which he lived. They used to refer to him before his mission began as the 'honest truthful one'. They themselves were shown up as being liars by saying that he was a magician and saying that he was mad.

But were one of these people to go somewhere alone and reflect sincerely on the person of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him, he would arrive at the truth by himself. And if he were to allow those accusations to pass through his mind, he would find the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him to be innocent of all of them. And as long as he remains alone with those reflections, he will never feel too ashamed to come back to the truth because he will never be defeated by anyone else.

The Noble Quran has tackled every one of the lies they directed at the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and exposed their untruth. For example, Allah Glorified is He says: '[That] indeed, the Quran is the word of a noble Messenger. And it is not the word of a poet; little do you believe. Nor the word of a soothsayer; little do you remember.' (al-Haqqa: 40-42) And He says: 'For this companion of yours is not a madman' (at-Takwir: 22).

The True Lord Glorified is He does not mention here what the result will be of our reflecting and searching for the truth singly and in pairs because it is something which is obvious and which we all know. The only thing He says is: 'He is only a warner to you before a severe punishment.'

Moreover, did all people automatically start believing in the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him after hearing this miraculous Quran from him so that we could then say, 'This Quran is the miracle that proves the truthfulness of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him?' The answer is no because from among those people, there were some who did not believe after hearing the Quran as well as others who believed before the Quran was even revealed. For them, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying, 'I am the Messenger of Allah' was enough a proof. The first of those people were Khadija may Allah be pleased with her and Abu Bakr A-Siddiq may Allah be pleased with him. But what made them believe in the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him? What was the miracle by means of which they recognised him to be telling the truth? The proof and the miracle for these people were first and foremost the way He peace and blessings be upon him conducted himself among them - that alone was enough to make them believe him when he said, 'I am the one whom Allah Glorified is He has sent to you.' As for the Quran, it is a miracle and a challenge to those who deny him.

We see the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him reminding his people of the way he had conducted himself among them and using that as a proof to back his position up. For when he was sent to Safa and called his people, they gathered around him and he peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Tell me, if I were to tell you that a group of cavalry were behind that mountain, coming here to attack you, would you not believe me?' They replied, 'We have never heard you tell a lie.' So he said, 'I am the Messenger whom Allah Glorified is He has sent to you.' They replied immediately, 'You are a liar. May you meet your doom! Is that the only reason you brought us together?!"(1)

It is narrated in the account of 'Abdullah ibn Salam may Allah be pleased with him one of the great rabbis of the Jews, becoming Muslim "that when his heart had been put to rest after seeing that the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him possessed all the qualities and characteristics with which he had been described in their books, and after he had become convinced that he really was the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him he went to him and said, 'O Messenger of Allah, Allah Glorified is He has guided me to faith! Know, O Messenger of Allah, that the Jews are a people given to telling lies, and if I become Muslim, they will say things about me that are not true. So call them now, Messenger of Allah, and ask them about me. Then I will announce my Islam in front of them after you have heard what they think of me.' And so the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him called them and asked them, 'What do you say about Ibn Salam?' They replied, 'He is our master and the son of our master, and our rabbi and the son of our rabbi.' They ascribed to him all manner of praiseworthy attributes. At that moment Ibn Salam may Allah be pleased with him said, 'As for me about whom they have said what they said, I bear witness that you are the Messenger of Allah.' So, they said, 'Rather, you are the worst of us and the son of the worst of us!'(2)

(1) From Ibn 'Abbas may Allah be pleased with him who said, 'When the verse: "And warn, [O Muhammad], your closest kindred," (ash-Shu'ara': 214) was revealed, the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him went out and stood on the peak of Safa (the mountain of Mecca), whereupon the people gathered around him. So he said to them, Tell me, if I were to tell you that a group of cavalry were coming from the foot of that mountain, would you not believe me?' They replied, 'We have never heard you tell a lie.' So he said, 'I am here to warn you of a severe punishment that is coming.' So Abu Lahab said, 'May you meet your doom! Is that the only reason you brought us together?!' And that was when this chapter: "May the hands of Abu Lahab be ruined, and ruined is he." (al-Masad: 1) was revealed.' It is related by Ahmad in his Musnad (1/307); Muslim in his Sahih (355) in Kitab Al-'Iman; and Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (8/738 - Fath Al-Bari).

(2) It is related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (8/165 - Fath Al-Bari); and Al-Bayhaqi in Dala'il An-Nubuwwa (2/ 527-529) in a Hadith from Anas ibn Malik may Allah be pleased with him. =

So, Ibn Salam may Allah be pleased with him said, ‘Did I not tell you, Messenger of Allah, that they were a people given to telling lies?’

You will notice that those who opposed the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him at the beginning of his mission, and those who accused him of lying were from his own family and those who were closest to him. Indeed, it was his own paternal uncle who said to him, ‘May you meet your doom! Is that the only reason you brought us together?!’ And in this fact, we find a nugget of wisdom and a proof that the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was sent. Allah Glorified is He used that to let people know that it was not the status and pre-eminence of Quraysh in the Arab peninsula that led to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him receiving his message. He did not receive the message so that Quraysh might rule the world, for his fiercest enemies were from Quraysh. And his victory did not come in Mecca, but rather came in Yathrib (the city of Medina was known as Yathrib before the Prophet emigrated).

We said previously that it was belief in Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that created the partisanship around Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him not the partisanship around Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that created the belief in him.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

قُلۡ مَا سَأَلۡتُكُم مِّنۡ أَجۡرٖ فَهُوَ لَكُمۡۖ إِنۡ أَجۡرِيَ إِلَّا عَلَى ٱللَّهِۖ وَهُوَ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖ شَهِيدٞ ﴿٤٧﴾

Say, ‘If I have asked you for any reward, you can keep it. It is God alone who will reward me: He is witness to everything’ [47] (The Quran, Saba’: 47)

Payment is what one receives in exchange for work. It was this same expression that every one of the Messengers used. Indeed Allah Glorified is He taught each of them to say to his people: ‘And I do not ask you for it any

= And in some versions of this Hadith, it is said that they said first, ‘That is our master and the son of our master, and the most knowledgeable of us and the son of the most knowledgeable of us.’ And in another version: ‘The best of us and the son of the best of us, and our master and the son of our master.’

payment. My payment is only from the Lord of the worlds.' (ash-Shu'ara': 109) If one reads between the lines of this statement, it is as if he were saying, 'If what I have done for you were to have been valued justly, I would deserve a wage for bringing you the message and calling you to religion, for by guiding you I have brought you immense benefit - not some worthless bargain in this transient world but an everlasting benefit in that realm that goes on forever and never fades. But the reality is that I do not demand any payment from you. No, instead, I take it from Allah Glorified is He since the work I have done for you is so great that you are incapable of evaluating it. The True Lord Glorified is He is the One Who evaluates my work, and I am confident that He will give me the wage it merits: 'My payment is only from Allah.' As for the Words: 'it is yours,' they mean, 'If I were to have taken payment from you, then I would have used that payment to work on your behalf, or the reward for it would have come straight back to you.'

We previously said that this expression was used by all the Messengers except for two, for this expression never appeared in the course of anything they said. Those two Messengers were Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. This indicates that this matter is based upon a deep and profound wisdom.

But why, out of all the Messengers, were Ibrahim and Musa the ones not to say this? Because, they say, when Ibrahim peace be upon him confronted those who opposed him, the first person he confronted was his own paternal uncle (1). When his paternal uncle opposed him and refused to accept his call, he separated himself from him and made do with calling him to Allah Glorified is He. As it would have been unreasonable for him to have expected a wage from his paternal uncle, this matter of payment never came up in the words with which he spoke to them.

(1) The Sheikh here has adopted the position that Azar was the paternal uncle of Abraham and not his father. There is a difference of opinion regarding the name of Abraham's father, for some of the genealogists and exegetists say that his name was Tarih, while others said that it was Tarikh. Still, others said that they were both names of his, just like many other people who have two names. For example, Jacob was also known as Israel. Others say that Tarih was his proper name and Azar was his nickname. It is also said that Azar was the name of the idol that they used to worship. Look at the Tafsir of Al-Qurtubi (2/2544); the Tafsir of Ibn Kathir (2/149); Qisas Al-Anbiya' of Ibn Kathir (p. 104); Lisan Al-'Arab (Subject matter: (azara)); and Qisas Al-Anbiya' of 'Abd Al-Wahhab An-Najjar (pp. 93-96).

The same was true with Musa, for the first person he called to Allah Glorified is He was Pharaoh, who had said to him: ‘Did we not raise you among us as a child, and you remained among us for years of your life?’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 18) This meant that even if he were to have deserved a wage for calling Pharaoh to Allah Glorified is He still he would have been too embarrassed to have asked for it, given that he had been raised in his house under his care.

There are two possible meanings for the expression: ‘Say “Whatever payment I might have asked of you,’ it either means, I took a wage for it and gave it to you.’ Or ‘From the very beginning, I never asked you for a wage.’ Then the verse concludes with the Words: ‘and He is, over all things, Witness.’ It means He sees all of us, knows the hardships that I faced in calling you to the truth and knows the stubborn and obstinate way that you acted towards me. He will raise my wage based on the level of suffering I have endured in the course of guiding you along the way, and take you all by the hand into His court.

If human beings generally only do actions when there is some benefit or advantage in it for them, then know that the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him is not asking you to give him any payment for the work he is doing. So what is there left for you of which to accuse him?

After that, the True Lord Glorified is He wants to clarify for us a matter that is strongly connected to the truth brought by the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him for the objections of the disbelievers had mainly been based around who the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was, as is proven by their statement: ‘Has the message been revealed to him out of [all of] us?’ (Sad: 8) And: ‘they said, “Why was this Quran not sent down upon a great man from [one of] the two cities?’ (az-Zukhruf: 31)

They acknowledged the Quran and knew that it was a reminder and absolutely incontrovertible, but had a problem with the fact that it had been sent down to this man in particular, and not sent down to one of the great men of the people? It is why Allah Glorified is He wanted to make it clear that Allah’s Guidance is only sent down to the earth through the medium of those whom Allah Glorified is He has chosen, not those whom creation has chosen.

There is no sense to their words: ‘Why was this Quran not sent down upon a great man from [one of] the two cities?’ It is why Allah Glorified is He responds to them with a decisive proof: ‘Do they distribute the mercy of your Lord? It is We Who have apportioned among them their livelihood in the life of this world and have raised some of them above others in degrees.’ (az-Zukhruf: 32) He also says: ‘Allah is most knowing of where He places His message.’ (al-An‘am: 124)

Allah’s Mercy is that which brings benefit to people in this world — and that mercy encompasses believers and disbelievers, or in the hereafter, and that mercy is only for believers, not disbelievers. That hereafter mercy is eternal, for they will be in a bliss that never runs out or fades away. If I allotted to you your provision and livelihood in this world, how could I leave in your hands the choice of who is going to show you mercy in the Hereafter? Should I allot temporary mercy for you, and then leave you without eternal mercy?

Then the Quran takes them off in a different direction after having counselled and befriended them. The True Lord Glorified is He says:

قُلۡ إِنَّ رَبِّي يَقۡذِفُ بِٱلۡحَقِّ عَلَّٰمُ ٱلۡغُيُوبِ ﴿٤٨﴾
قُلۡ جَآءَ ٱلۡحَقُّ وَمَا يُبۡدِئُ ٱلۡبَٰطِلُ وَمَا يُعِيدُ ﴿٤٩﴾

Say, ‘My Lord hurls the Truth down [before you].
He has full knowledge of all that is unseen.’ [48]
Say, ‘The Truth has come; falsehood is powerless’ [49]
(The Quran, Saba’: 48 - 49)

You will take note of the sharpness and vehemence of the style employed here, as opposed to the previous verses which exalted them and curried their friendship. It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He were saying to them, ‘Do not think that we will continuously try to win your friendship, or that you are the ones whose ships will be kept afloat. No, for Allah Glorified is He will give victory to His religion despite your stubbornness, and the truth will be raised high despite your disbelief.’

He says in response to them: ‘Indeed, my Lord projects the truth.’ So, after having given you the opportunity and after your rebellion has gone on for a long time, my Lord is now going to hurl the truth against falsehood, as

He says in another part of the Quran: ‘Rather, We hurl the truth upon falsehood, and it destroys it, and thereupon it departs. And for you is destruction from that which you describe.’ (al-Anbiya’: 18)

To hurl is to throw something with force. It is a word that is suggestive of violence and strength when it is used in conjunction with a human being, so how do you think it is when the one doing the throwing is Allah Glorified is He? The thing that is hurled by Allah Glorified is He here is the truth, and as we have said before, the truth is that which is firmly established and does not change.

Hurling must be done with an aim and a purpose, for anyone who wants to throw something must first define the distance to his target and see whether it is near or far. If he is throwing at something that is nearby, then it is seldom that the thrower misses the target, but if he is throwing at something that is far away, then the chances of his missing the target increase. The further away the target is, the more and more likely it becomes for him to miss. It is because the action of hurling requires that you set a target that you hope your thrown object will hit.

When that target is nearby, the changes that can befall it are few since it takes the thrown object such a short period of time to reach it, but when the target is far away, it becomes increasingly susceptible to significant change. For example, the angle at which it faces may be altered as a result of its being blown around by the wind, a hurricane, or something else entirely.

It is why, in circumstances such as those, we need precise equipment and instruments to measure the exact distance to the target, the strength with which the object is being thrown and the strength of the wind with which it comes into conflict, as well as many other instruments to measure speed and the passing of time. Take someone who hunts birds, for example: before firing, he must change the point at which he is aiming to take into account the movement, direction and speed at which the bird is flying.

And there is no one more capable of carrying this procedure than the One Who has full knowledge of the Unseen, the One Whom not one atom’s weight of whatever there is in the heavens or on earth escapes His knowledge. It is why the True Lord Glorified is He uses correspondingly fine language to describe this procedure, saying: ‘Say, “Indeed, my Lord projects the truth. Knower of the unseen"' First, He hurls the truth, and then makes clear that what He hurls does not miss the target because He has full knowledge of the Unseen.

The truth that Allah Glorified is He hurls is the Divine guidance that He sent down to us from heavens, and the reason for Him doing the hurling is to get the message to where He wants it to be, for as He Himself says: 'Allah is most knowing of where He places His message.' (al-An'am: 124)

So, the hurler is Allah, and the hurled object is the truth, that thing that is firmly established and does not change. And the reason for the hurling is so that the message can reach those whom Allah Glorified is He has chosen for it. And this is a process that never goes awry since the One doing the hurling knows every unseen thing that might affect the path of the hurled object. So, the truth will always inevitably reach the one who has been chosen to bear it and no one else.

This verse is a rebuttal and a refutation of those who say, 'The message and the revelation were a mistake - they were revealed to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him instead of being revealed to the one to whom they should have been revealed.'(1) Such a view is no more than baseless fumbling around in the dark.

The Words: 'Knower of the unseen,' here refers to the many different things that might obstruct the object that has been hurled from reaching its target. These influencing factors are known by none but Allah Glorified is He.

If you were to say, 'The fact that the verb 'hurl' appears in the imperfect, a tense that refers to either the present or the future, shows that it is Allah's job to hurl truth to His Messengers. But did He hurl that truth to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him?' The reply to this question comes in what Allah Glorified is He says in the very next verse: 'Say, "The truth has come,' meaning He actually did hurl it down in the shape of the Quran which was sent down to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the one whom Allah Glorified is He had chosen to carry His message and pass on His Divine guidance to creation so that their lives might be put back in order. And if the clear and incontrovertible truth has come, and the one who hurled it is He who has full knowledge of the Unseen, then what must be the position of the opposing falsehood? There is no doubt that it must retreat, for there is no way that it can stand firm when faced with the strength of the truth.

(1) Among those who say this are one of factions of the Shi'a, namely the followers of Al-'Alba' ibn Dhira' Ad-Dusi, who preferred 'Ali may Allah be pleased with him to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him claiming that Muhammad was sent to guide people to 'Ali, but instead called people to himself (Al-Milal wa An-Nihal of Ash-Shahrastani 2/175).

‘And falsehood can neither begin [anything] nor repeat [it].’ it cannot bring anything into being in the first world nor bring anything back in the next world. In other words, it is neither here nor there - it can neither bring in nor drive away. That is if falsehood actually has some form of existence. But in truth, falsehood is no more than a distant imagining in the heads of those who dream it up, and has no existence.

The True Lord Glorified is He gives us a physical representation of truth and falsehood when He says: ‘He sends down from the sky, rain, and valleys flow according to their capacity’ (ar-Ra‘d: 17), i.e. every riverbed fills with water according to its breadth and capacity: ‘and the torrent carries a rising foam.’ (ar-Ra‘d: 17) Foam is the straws and crumbs that are carried by the water, things that are commonplace and totally without benefit. Then the wind comes along and blows them here and there, leaving the surface of the water clean so that people can benefit from it. This indicates that falsehood is totally without benefit and does not last, no matter how high up it goes, and that it exists only in the same way that scum exists, a life without use or value.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

قُلْ إِن ضَلَلْتُ فَإِنَّمَآ أَضِلُّ عَلَىٰ نَفْسِي ۖ وَإِنِ ٱهْتَدَيْتُ
فَبِمَا يُوحِيٓ إِلَيَّ رَبِّيٓ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ سَمِيعٌ قَرِيبٌ ﴿٥٠﴾

Say, ‘If I go astray, that is my loss, and if I am rightly guided, it is through what my Lord has revealed to me. He is all hearing, and ever near [50] (The Quran, Saba’: 50)

We notice here that He peace and blessings be upon him ascribes misguidance, when it occurs, to himself, but ascribes guidance to Allah Glorified is He and to the Revelation that was sent down to him. It is because when Allah Glorified is He sends down guidance to a human being who has free choice — and the arena for free choice is when there are alternatives between which his intellect can choose, — since the intellect has no role to play when confronted by a single matter for which no alternative exists. For example, let us say you wanted to travel to a specific destination, but you could only find a single way to get there. In such circumstances, the intellect has no job to do and there is no scope for free choice. But then let us say that you wanted to travel to Alexandria and found two possible ways of getting there: a dirt track, the characteristics and distinguishing features of which are such-and-such, or a desert road, the characteristics and distinguishing features of which are such-and-such.

Allah Glorified is He created the whole of existence with free will, except when it comes to matters decided by fate and destiny. Those matters are ones for which human beings are given no choice because if they were to interfere in them they would spoil them.

Do not think that you are the only one in existence with free choice, for the reality is that everything around you in the heavens and the earth also had the freedom of choice. The only difference is that the heaven, the earth, and the mountains made their choice on one occasion and then extended that all-inclusive choice to cover all the individual details that came later. For proof of that, read Allah’s words: ‘Indeed, we offered the Trust to the heavens and the earth and the mountains, and they declined to bear it and feared it; but man [undertook to] bear it. Indeed, he was unjust and ignorant.’ (al-Ahzab: 72)

So, the inanimate objects of this world chose in the beginning of the affair to be compelled by the Will of Allah Glorified is He and refused to bear that trust. But as for man, he bore it and said, ‘By means of my mind, I am able to choose between the alternative paths.’ But it escaped his notice that he was only taking into account the time of taking on the trust and not the time of paying it back. Neither was he taking into account all the accidents that would befall him as well as all the appetites, whisperings of Satan (Iblis) and so on. It is why the True Lord Glorified is He describes man as being most wrongdoing and most ignorant - i.e. doing the most wrong towards himself and being the most ignorant of the consequences.

The guidance which the True Lord Glorified is He laid out for man was general, one which was laid out for believers and disbelievers alike. Allah Glorified is He guided everyone to the path of good and left everyone with the freedom to choose. Some of them chose their base appetites in this world, seeking maximum thrill and excitement now and damn the consequences later, while others reflected carefully upon this guidance and found it to be backed by a miracle. That miracle broke the basic laws of existence. So it was a guidance that had come from an All Knowing, All-Powerful being - it was Allah Glorified is He Most-High who chose this guidance for the good of creation.

Man, generally speaking, likes what is best for himself. But people differ when it comes to their understanding of what is best. It is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And man supplicates for evil as he supplicates for good, and man is ever hasty.’ (al-Isra’: 11) And why He says: ‘I will show you My signs, so do not impatiently urge Me.’ (al-Anbiya’: 37)

It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He were saying to man, ‘Do not be impatient for your supplication to come true, but rather be content with what I have chosen for you. For your judgement and understanding of what is best for you is limited by your knowledge of what is best, and I have more knowledge than you - I know how you will receive that good and what effect it will have on you.’

It is why we say, ‘We hear many people say, ‘I pray and live my life according to Allah’s Guidance, but despite that He does not answer my supplications’. To those people we say, ‘That is because you asked for good according to what you understand is good, but your Lord knows better than you what is best for you. It is why He did not answer you.’

We also often hear mothers supplicate against their only children in moments of anger, saying, ‘My Allah, let him taste your Fire. My Allah will bring me news of your fate.’ By Allah, were Allah Glorified is He to answer her supplication, what would she then say about her Lord? So, Allah Glorified is He not giving you that which you ask for is sometimes the very thing that is best for you since He knows how foolish your supplication actually is. Allah Glorified is He is not a Lord Who is content for you to suffer the effects of that foolishness, and so He puts right the mistake that you made.

Another related matter is that a supplication may be for something which is actually good, but the one who asks may not have been compelled when he made his supplication, but rather still had other means at his disposal. For the True Lord Glorified is He promises to answer the compelled when he calls on Him, saying: 'Rather, who is it that responds to the distressed when he calls out to Him' (an-Naml: 62)? So if you were truly distressed, He Glorified is He would give you what you ask because the distressed is one who exhausts all the means granted to him by Allah Glorified is He and whose strength proves insufficient to the task, so he takes refuge in Allah Glorified is He the Primary Cause. Most of us, however, call on Allah without being forced into a position where we are compelled to do so.

Now, let us return to our discussion of the guidance which Allah Glorified is He put in place to guide all of mankind. We say, 'Allah Glorified is He helps those who believe in this guidance and are rightly guided by it, and increases them, as He Glorified is He himself says in the Quran, "And those who are guided - He increases them in guidance and gives them their righteousness." (Muhammad: 17) But as for those who deviate from it and go astray, Allah Glorified is He increases them in misguidance and puts a seal on their hearts so that no belief can get in and no disbelief can get out. He Glorified is He is a Lord Who helps His servants to do what they want and increases them in the direction they choose.'

So, as long as there is freedom of choice when it comes to accepting or rejecting the guidance, there must be both right guidance and misguidance. The guidance attracts what is good and brings reward, while the misguidance attracts what is bad and brings punishment. Here, the True Lord Glorified is He makes it clear to us that misguidance is ascribed to oneself while guidance is ascribed to one's Lord and His guidance. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He has said elsewhere in the Quran: 'What comes to you of good is from Allah, but what comes to you of evil, [O man], is from yourself.' (an-Nisa': 79)

Before that, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say, "All is from Allah."' (an-Nisa': 78) Why? Because He Glorified is He created two paths and then guided everyone. When you look at any action of yours, know that it is Allah Glorified is He who gives you the ability to do it, as He Glorified is He Himself says: 'To each [category] We extend - to these and to those - from the gift of your Lord. And never has the gift of your Lord been restricted.' (al-Isra': 20)

So, for example, Allah Glorified is He is the One Who gives you the either tongue with which you utter the doctrine of monotheism or utter words that reject Allah Glorified is He - and we seek refuge in Allah Glorified is He from ever doing that. So, the tongue did not disobey you when it said this or said that. Who is the one who gives you that freedom of choice? Allah Glorified is He of course. It is why we say, ‘Disbelievers do not disbelieve because they have been compelled to do so by Allah Glorified is He.’ As for Him not being pleased of disbelief, that is another matter entirely.

As for Allah’s words: ‘Say If I should err, I would only err against myself,’ they mean, ’You and I are the same in every respect, for misguidance comes about as a result of the wrong actions that the self commits - that is the source of all misguidance. As for right guidance that comes from Allah Glorified is He, it comes about as a result of following His Divine Guidance

The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him is just like his community when it comes to ascribing misguidance to the self, but differs from them when it comes to guidance: ‘But if I am guided, it is by what my Lord reveals to me.’ For the guidance came to him from Allah Glorified is He directly before Allah Glorified is He sent him a messenger bearing the message and before Allah Glorified is He revealed revelation from heaven to him. But as for the guidance of his community, it came about through the medium of the Messenger who conveyed Allah’s Guidance to them and brought the miracle.

The guidance of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him happened first when Allah Glorified is He chose him to be a messenger, and then Allah Glorified is He revealed His guidance to him so that he could guide the community.

‘For Indeed, He is Hearing and near.’ Hearing means that what is wanted of me and what hears my every breath. In addition to the fact that He Glorified is He hears me, He is also close by and does not take long to answer my supplications. It is obvious that Allah’s actions do not need to go through a process and nor does He Glorified is He need to apply Himself. Rather, Allah Glorified is He simply says ‘Be’ and it is!

Then the True Lord Glorified is He returns to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him in order to console him, saying:

وَلَوۡ تَرَىٰٓ إِذۡ فَزِعُواْ فَلَا فَوۡتَ وَأُخِذُواْ مِن مَّكَانٖ قَرِيبٖ ﴿٥١﴾

[Prophet], if you could only see their terror!
There will be no escape when they are seized from a nearby place [51] (The Quran, Saba’: 51)

As for Allah’s words: ‘And if you could see,’ the conditional clause is used many times in the Noble Quran, but many times you will notice that the answering-clause is left unsaid because of the context. The implied meaning here is, ‘If you, O Muhammad, could but see the disbelievers when they shrink in terror on the Day of Resurrection, you would see something immense, something incredible that would set your heart at rest. It would be a fitting revenge for the way they denied you and stubbornly refused your message. This same message is also expressed in Allah’s words: ‘Have the disbelievers [not] been rewarded [this Day] for what they used to do?’ (al-Mutaffifin: 36)

Those who oppressed and tyrannised others in this world and fought against the word of Truth, those haughty tyrants and their ilk, you will see them in the Hereafter, when they are overcome by their fear, as cats, kittens and rabbits.

As for Allah’s words: ‘but there is no escape,’ they have no way of saving themselves, because it is possible for people to fear something and yet still be able to escape from it, or maybe for someone else to rescue them. But as for these people, they will shrink in terror without any possibility of rescue and without any escape or way out. So, let that heal your heart and the hearts of the believers who suffered harm along with you in the course of propagating the call of truth.

Just as they stood in the way of the call to Allah Glorified is He, so too, will they stand on the Day of Resurrection humiliated and degraded. Reflect on Allah’s words: ‘shall be made to stand before their Lord,’ (Saba’: 31) ‘when they will be made to stand before the fire,’ (al-An‘am: 27) and ‘when they shall be made to stand before their Lord.’ (al-An‘am: 30) They will have to wait for permission to be granted them so that they can see what their intercessors whom they worshipped apart from Allah Glorified is He will say. But instead, they will be surprised by seeing their intercessors and leaders preceding them to the hellfire and the punishment, just as they preceded them to misguidance.

It is why the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘Then We will surely extract from every sect those of them who were worst against the Most Merciful in insolence.’ (Maryam: 69) And it is why He Glorified is He says about Pharaoh: ‘He will precede his people on the Day of Resurrection and lead them into the Fire; and wretched is the place to which they are led.’ (Hud: 98)

In this way, Allah Glorified is He causes them to despair of being rescued because they were waiting for those intercessors and leaders to defend them, and yet there they are, preceding them to the punishment!

Each one of those places we have mentioned the disbelievers as standing in on the Day of Resurrection brings them humiliation and each one of them brings them terror. Indeed, every one of those places is itself a form of punishment. It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He were saying to His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him ‘If you were to see the places in which they stand and the terror they feel, your thirst for revenge would be quenched and you would know that We are fully capable of recompensing them in the way that they deserve.

The meaning of: ‘and they will be seized’ is ‘made to perish: ‘from a place nearby,’ i.e. from the place they will stand in on the Day of Resurrection for the Reckoning. In other words, the True Lord Glorified is He did not leave them in ease and comfort, but rather took them from the Reckoning to the fire.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَقَالُوٓاْ ءَامَنَّا بِهِۦ وَأَنَّىٰ لَهُمُ ٱلتَّنَاوُشُ مِن مَّكَانِۭ بَعِيدٖ ﴿٥٢﴾

They will say, ‘Now we believe in it,’ but how can they reach it from such a distant place [52] (The Quran, Saba’: 52)

Glory be to Allah! After what they did to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and his followers, and after feeling great terror and being encompassed by the punishment, they then announce their belief, saying: ‘“We do [now] believe in him!’ This is almost exactly like the belief of Pharaoh, when he was on the point of drowning: ‘I believe that there is no deity except that in whom the Children of Israel believe, and I am of the Muslims.’ (Yunus: 90) And Allah Glorified is He responds by saying: ‘Now?

And you had disobeyed [Him] before and were of the corrupters?' (Yunus: 91) This is a time when belief will not be of benefit to you.'

Here, the True Lord Glorified is He rejects their belief, saying: 'but how for them will be the taking [of faith] from a place far away?' How could they have belief now, when they are in the place of death or the place of resurrection?' Belief was close to them in this world, but as for now it is as far away from them as it possibly could be.

The phrase 'but how' has two meanings; one which indicates amazement as in it is astonishing and very strange that they should say this; and another that indicates the meaning of 'where', as in Zechariah's question to Mary: 'Every time Zechariah entered upon her in the prayer chamber, he found with her provision. He said, "O Mary, from where is this [coming] to you?"' (Al-'Imran: 37) 'Where did this provision of yours come from?'

The master of a house should learn from this verse that when he sees one of the people of his house with something with which he did not provide them, he should ask them where it came from and how it made its way into his home. And that is a necessary precaution because that thing may be a sign of slipping towards disobedience.

So, Mary responded to this question: 'It is from Allah.' (Al-'Imran: 37) In reply to that question, Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her said: '… Allah provides limitlessly for whomever He wills' (Al-'Imran: 37). She drew the attention of Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) that when it comes to Allah's sustenance, things should not be measured by our limited powers. It is astonishing that some would have summer fruits in winter or winter fruits in summer. However, considering Allah's Might, nothing is impossible.

It was as if her answer reminded Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) of something he almost forgot. The moment he heard her answer, he thought to himself, 'Why, then, should I not ask Allah to give me a son even though I have grown old and my wife has always been barren. 'There and then Zakaryya prayed to his Lord, saying, "Lord, from Your grace grant me virtuous offspring: You hear every prayer"' (Al-'Imran: 38). The answer he received from Maryam served as a reminder to him. Allah answered his call and gave him a son. He sent down angels to give him the good news and confirmed it by telling him the name of the son he was to be given: ‘Then the angels called to him as he stood praying in the sanctuary: That Allah gives you the good news of Yahya verifying a Word from Allah, and honorable and chaste and a prophet from among the good ones’ (Al-‘Imran: 39).

Thus did Allah foretell him the future event he was to expect? The same happened with Companion Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him. Before he died, he told the Mother of the Believers, 'Aisha concerning the particulars of those who would inherit him, ‘There are your two sisters and your two brothers’. At that time, she only had two brothers, Abd Al-Rahman and Mohammad, and one sister, Asma’ Allah be pleased with her. After Abu Bakr died, his wife, Bint Kharija,(1) gave birth to a daughter, making true the news told by As-Siddiq. He was not someone who knew the Unseen. Rather he was taught that news and made to speak those words by Allah Almighty; since the One Who knows what is inside wombs is Allah.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is narrated to have said to Al-Ansar, Medinan Muslims, ‘My life is with you, and my death is with you’(2). This clearly tells where he would die, but Allah says: ‘... and no one knows in what land he will die...’ (Luqman: 34). The Messenger of Allah did not know the Unseen, but he was informed of it by the Knower of the Unseen Who reveals it to whoever He wills.

Allah gives this privilege to His devout servants. He would teach them news of the Unseen, whether of the past or the future. They would be given good news yet to come. Allah teaches those whom He chooses for that very special knowledge.

(1) That was Habiba bint Kharija ibn Zayd Al-Khazrajiyya, the wife of Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him. She was the mother of Umm Kulthum Allah be pleased with her the daughter with whom she was pregnant when Abu Bakr died. He said, ‘I do not think the womb of Bint Kharija is carrying anything but a female’ and indeed it was so. She married Isaf ibn ‘Utba ibn ‘Amr after the death of Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him. [See: Al-‘Isaba fi Tamyiz As-Sahaba (8/48).]

(2) It is cited by Muslim in his Sahih (1780), Hadith no. 86, chapter: Fighting in the Cause of Allah and Biographies, that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to Al-Ansar in a long Hadith, ‘I am Muhammad, the servant and Messenger of Allah. I have emigrated to you for His Cause. My life is with you and my death is with you.’

When people name their children, they choose names that bear good omens. Arabs would name a boy Sa'id (happy) or Dhakyy (intelligent), for example, in the hope that the child would indeed be happy or intelligent. However, no one has the power to make the name a reflection of the character of the person given that name. No parent is able to make his child exactly the way he wants him to be. When the one who gives the name is Allah, He alone does have the power to make the name a true reflection of the one who is named.

When Allah gave Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) a son and called him Yahya (Living), it was meant to foretell the fact that he would not taste death, for he would be martyred and thus his worldly life and Afterlife would be joined. Not many people paid attention to this meaning. If his murderers understood this fact, they would not have killed him. This meaning is reflected in the following poetic verses about Hamza ibn ‘Abd Al-Muttalib Allah be pleased with him:

O Hamza, uncle of the Chosen One!

Master of all martyrs, excepting none!

Let martyrdom to you amply suffice!

It has spared you death and made you live twice!

So it is a fundamental fact about faith that Allah provides limitlessly for whomever He wills, a fact from which Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) benefited when he asked Allah for a son. So did Maryam (Mary); she too benefited from it when she later became pregnant without having been touched by a man. She remembered that fact and her heart found rest.

In the verse we are considering, the particle anna is used, which does not only mean ‘how’ but it also denotes surprise, for the thing wondered about is so far from possible. ‘They will say, “Now we believe in it,” but anna (how) can they reach it from such a distant place?’ (Saba’: 52) When she was given the news of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him Maryam (Mary) said: ‘... anna (how) can I have a son when no man has ever touched me?…’ (Maryam: 20) Another example is found in the verse: ‘... anna (how) could Allah bring all this back to life after its death?’ (al-Baqara: 259) Bringing a dead land into life can barely be visualized, but requires to be seen by the eyes for the mind to grasp. Have we not read the words of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him:

‘...“My Lord, show me how You give life to the dead,” He said: “Have you not believed, then?” “Yes,” said Ibrahim [Abraham], “but just to put my heart at rest.”…’ (al-Baqara: 260)?

Orientalists have attacked the aforementioned verse quoting Prophet Ibrahim's words to Allah. They wonder how Allah addresses the Father of Prophets with such a question: ‘… Have you not believed, then?…’ and how Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) replied: ‘... yes,… but just to put my heart at rest…’. Is faith anything but the heart being put at rest based on beliefs already established in it? In response to this, I say Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) certainly had faith that Allah can bring the dead back to life. He did not ask, for example, 'Does Allah have the power to bring things back to life?’ He only wanted to be granted knowledge of the manner of doing that. This is why Allah showed him a practical sign and made him witness an actual physical experience of the process through the slain birds.

So Allah rebukes the disbelievers for professing faith at the last moment after they wasted numerous opportunities to accept faith at leisure and prove their sincerity. They wanted faith without responsibility, and how could they have that? This statement of theirs is just like that of their fellow disbelievers who said: ‘They will cry out loud in Hell, “Lord, let us out, and we will do righteous deeds, not what we did before!”…’ (Fatir: 37)

Then, Allah says:

وَقَدْ كَفَرُوا۟ بِهِۦ مِن قَبْلُ ۖ وَيَقْذِفُونَ بِٱلْغَيْبِ مِن مَّكَانٍۭ بَعِيدٍ ﴿٥٣﴾

They denied it all in the past, and threw conjecture from a far-off place – when a barrier has been placed between them and what they desire, just as was done with their kind before? They were deep in doubt and suspicion [53]
(The Quran, Saba’: 53)

When faith was presented to them during their lives in this world, they rejected it. This world is the place for embracing faith and undertaking its responsibilities by committing oneself to divine commands and avoiding prohibitions. When death comes- let alone the Day of Resurrection- faith will avail nothing those who have disavowed it in their worldly lives. The disbelievers made conjectures about matters of faith they had no knowledge of, hoping to arrive at their goal of being spared punishment. However, they were fruitless attempts made at the wrong time.

Whereas the disbelievers made false conjectures about faith, Allah has always made clear the truth: 'Say, "My Lord hurls the Truth down [before you]. He has full knowledge of all that is unseen."' (Saba': 48) People's conjectures lead to misjudgements, which takes them away from the ultimate goal. Furthermore, we have no knowledge of the Unseen. We cannot predict the outcomes. As for Allah the Exalted, He has Omnipotent Knowledge and nothing whatsoever escapes Him.

Allah concludes the chapter by saying:

وَحِيلَ بَيْنَهُمْ وَبَيْنَ مَا يَشْتَهُونَ كَمَا فُعِلَ بِأَشْيَاعِهِم
مِّن قَبْلُ ۚ إِنَّهُمْ كَانُوا فِي شَكٍّ مُّرِيبٍ ﴿٥٤﴾

And a barrier shall be placed between them and that which they desire, as was done with the likes of them before: surely they are in a disquieting doubt [54] (The Quran, Saba': 54)

What is it that the disbelievers desire? They desire to block the way of the truth before people, to abolish the call to faith, but Allah never gives them the power to do that as He says: 'They try to extinguish Allah's light with their mouths, but Allah insists on bringing His light to its fullness, even if the disbelievers hate it' (at-Tawba: 32). He also says: 'It is He who sent His Messenger with guidance and the religion of truth to show that it is above all [other] religions, even though the idolaters hate it' (as-Saff: 9). They wished to continue to enslave the weak, usurp their rights and claim superiority over them. They feared Allah's Law would be an obstacle in their way, so they fought against the spread of His Message.

We have pointed out before that the first enemy of a person is his own self, even before Satan. A proof of this can be found in the following Hadith where Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'When Ramadan comes, the Gates of Paradise are opened; the Gates of the fire are closed; and the devils are chained up.'(1) Still, people commit crimes and misdeeds in Ramadan. If not Satan, what then incites one to do evil? Nothing but himself, It is as though Allah wants to expose wrongdoers who accuse Satan of insinuating every mischief. They claim he only leads them astray and is accountable for every wrong they do.

We have previously explained how one may differentiate between a wrong action insinuated by Satan and another insinuated by the self. If a desire to do a particular sin persists, it means the self is behind it. Craving a particular pleasure and not being able to dissuade yourself from it is a reflection that the self longs to attain it. When the self desires something, it is not contented with anything else. As for Satan, if he finds it difficult to push you to any particular act of disobedience, then he will try another. It does not matter to him what the sin you do is. His aim is to make you disobey Allah, regardless of the manner in which you do that.

In the verse under discussion Allah says: 'And a barrier shall be placed between them and that which they desire' (Saba': 54). The word 'desire' indicates that whatever they wished of abolishing the call of Islam was a matter of personal desire, an appetite of the self, and Satan had nothing to do with it. Satan was already done with them after they shunned faith and declared disbelief. His mission was thus accomplished and he wanted nothing else from them. Whatever they did apart from that was insinuated by their own self. Their fighting to abolish the call and humiliate the believers stemmed from a desire to prevent the progress of their mission. They wanted to make the believers an example to deter anyone who probably thought of embracing faith. However, Allah set a barrier between them and what they desired, and whatever they did never impeded the progress of the call. All of those believers who were humiliated and tortured became even firmer in faith. Oppression never prevented anyone from embracing Islam. What the earliest believers suffered never frightened anyone who wanted to become a Muslim.

Some might wonder why Allah let the earliest Muslims suffer torture and humiliation by the disbelievers. Why did Allah allow His enemies to oppress

(1) Cited by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad (2/257), and Muslim in his Sahih (1079), on the authority of Abu Hurayrah

His devout servants and force them out of their homes? The answer is simple: Allah wanted to purify the earliest community of Muslims from hypocrisy. He did that for the higher aim is to differentiate those who truly believed from those who did not by testing their patience and perseverance. That early group of Muslims would have to bear the burden of delivering Allah's Message, so they had to be prepared for the hard mission. Allah chose for carrying the burden of the call those of His servants who would willingly sacrifice everything for His cause. That is why the earliest believers were sorely tested and deeply shaken. That was the purpose behind many of the early events, including the Night Journey and the trip to Tai'f. All were tests to purify the believers.

Seeing his Companions suffer, Prophet Muhammad thought of a way by which their lives and religion would both be safe. The only place he could find was Abyssinia, so he said to his Companions, 'Go to Abyssinia, for there is a king there who never wrongs anyone staying in his land.'(1)

King Negus was exactly as Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had described him. He honoured the emigrant believers and refused to hand them over to the delegation who came from Quraysh to take them back. Prophet Muhammad rewarded him by entrusting him mediation to marry Him off to Umm Habiba Allah be pleased with her.(2) Umm Habiba had emigrated to Abyssinia with her husband, but he converted to Christianity there. She, however, remained firm in her faith, which proved her sincerity and that she had not emigrated on account of her husband, but rather for the cause of Allah alone. Prophet Muhammad recompensed her by marrying her.

(1) Umm Salama Allah be pleased with her narrated, 'Mecca became too constricted for us, and the Companions were severely tortured; their religion was in danger due to the trials and tribulations they faced. The Messenger of Allah was under the protection of his people and his uncle, yet he was unable to protect his Companions, so he told them, 'In the land of Abyssinia is a king who wrongs no one in his land, so go to his land and stay there until Allah gives you relief and a way out of the situation you find yourselves in.' This is part of a long Hadith cited by Al-Bayhaqi in Dala'il An-Nubuwwa (2/301), and Ibn Hisham in his As-Sira An-Nabawiyya (1/321).

(2) She is Ramla bint Abu Sufyan, one of the wives of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. She was the daughter of Mu'awiya Allah be pleased with him and one of the most eloquent women of Quraysh. She was remarkable for her good sense and sound judgment. The Messenger of Allah married her after her husband became Christian in 7 AH after they emigrated to Abyssinia. She died in Medina in 44 AH at the age of 69, 24 years after the death of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. [Cited by Az-Zirikli in his Al-'A'lam 3/33]

So the disbelievers wanted to inflict harm on the Messenger of Allah and the believers, but the outcomes of their plots were always unwelcome to them. They conspired against Prophet Muhammad to kill him, but: '...They schemed and so did Allah: He is the best of schemers' (al-Anfal: 30). Allah made all their efforts come to nothing, and His Messenger walked out right through the men who were waiting outside his home to kill him, scattering dust in their faces and saying, 'May the faces be disfigured.'(1) Allah also says: '…then We have covered them over so that they do not see' (Ya Sin: 9).

In this way, Allah set a barrier between the disbelievers and their desires. He rendered all their plotting against His Messenger futile. They even tried to use magic against him. They secretly asked Labid ibn Al-A'sam(2) to cast a spell of black magic on him, by the aid of jinn he used. Allah also made their attempts with magic come to nothing, and they proved unable to cause any real harm to the Messenger of Allah or stop the progress of the divine Message. It was like a message telling them, 'Spare yourselves the effort. The Messenger of Allah is protected by Allah', which is clear through these words Allah addresses to His Messenger: '... Allah will protect you from people…' (al-Ma'ida: 67).

In the verse we are considering, Allah says: 'And a barrier shall be placed between them and that which they desire, as was done with the likes of them before…' (Saba': 54). So that punishment was not specifically for the disbelievers of Mecca. The disbelievers of the previous nations also faced the same destiny.

(1) This statement of the Messenger of Allah is narrated in the Hadith about his emigration narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas and cited by Ahmad in his Musnad (1/368). Muslim also cited it in his Sahih in the Hadith about the Battle of Hunayn, narrated by Iyas ibn Salamah on the authority of his father =(1777). It is also cited by Ahmad in his Musnad on the authority of Abu 'Abd Ar- Rahman Al-Fihri (1/286), and is cited by Ad-Darimi in his Sunnan (2/219).

(2) Labid ibn Al-A'sam was a Jew from Banu Zurayq. He was a hypocrite who professed faith. He was a magician. Some Jews went to him and said, 'O Ibn Al-A'sam, you are the most skilful of us in magic. We have tried to bewitch Muhammad, but we have failed. We will pay you to cast a spell on him that will wound him', and they gave him three dinars. [See Fath Al-Bari by Ibn Hajar Al-'Asqalani (10/226).]

The disbelievers at the time of Prophet Muhammad were taken by the same punishment that was administered to those of the previous nations, yet only in a different manner. As for the disbelieving peoples of the previous Messengers, Allah punished them directly sometimes by earthquakes, being swallowed up by the earth, destroyed by a blast, transformed into animals, etc.

Thus did Allah grant victory to His previous Messengers and those who believed with them? They were not entrusted to defend Allah's religion with their swords. As for Muslims, however, they were trusted by Allah to carry out this task, so they were the ones who fought for His cause. That is why Allah honoured this community. They were commanded to fight and defend their religion by themselves, so their enemies have not been punished in the same way as those who disbelieved before them. None of them was made to be swallowed by the earth or transformed into an animal, but they had to face the believers in direct confrontations.

When Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him despaired of winning the hearts of his people, he made a supplication against them: 'And Noah said, "Lord, do not leave any of the disbelievers on the earth– if you leave them, they will lead Your servants astray and beget only sinners and disbelievers' (Nuh: 26-27).

Contrarily, when an angel went down to Prophet Muhammad, offering to take revenge on those who denied his message, he said, 'No, I hope Allah will cause to spring from their loins people who say, 'There is no God but Allah'. Indeed, many of them did become believers, like Khalid ibn Al-Walid, 'Amr ibn Al-'As and 'Ikrimah ibn Abu Jahl Allah be pleased with them all. They had been among the fiercest enemies of Islam, but later became its victorious leaders.

It hurt Muslims that some of the disbelievers were let without punishment, for they did not know then that Allah had another plan for them: He was actually preparing them for carrying the burden of the Message. Khalid ibn Al-Walid became 'the unsheathed sword of Allah' and 'Amr ibn Al-'As one of the greatest leaders who conquered huge lands and presented Islam to their peoples. Let it suffice as a testimony in favour of 'Ikrimah(1) that he was the son of Abu Jahl, who was one of the sworn enemies of Islam. When he was struck by a fierce blow during the Battle of Yarmuk, Khalid held him to his chest as he was dying, and 'Ikrimah said, ‘O Khalid, is this a death that Allah and His Messenger will be pleased with?’

(1) He is 'Ikrima ibn Abu Jahl ibn Hisham Al-Makhzumi Al-Qurashi, one of the leaders of Quraysh both before and after he embraced Islam. Both he and his father were among the harshest enemies of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. 'Ikrima=

Even those who remained disbelievers actually served a good purpose in proving the truthfulness of the message of Islam. Take Abu Lahab, for example. He was the uncle of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. When the Prophet gathered Quraysh to announce the Message among them in public, Abu Lahab said to him, ‘May you meet your ruin! Is that why you have gathered us?!’ When the son of Prophet Muhammad died, Abu Lahab gloated over his misfortune, saying, 'Muhammad's line was cut off!'(1) He still had daughters, but the sons of his daughters would be attributed to their fathers, not to him, as a poet (2) once said:

Mothers give birth to their children,

= became Muslim after the Conquest of Mecca. He took part in several battles and was one of the governors appointed by Caliph Abu Bakr. He was martyred at the Battle of Yarmuk in the year 13 AH when he was 62 years old [Al-’A‘lam by Az-Zirikli 4/244]. According to Ibn Sa‘d in his At-Tabaqat (9/408), ‘He was martyred on the day of Ajnadin.’

(1) ‘Ata’ said about Allah's words: 'It is the one who hates you who has been cut off' (al-Kawthar: 3), ‘It speaks about Abu Lahab and was revealed when a son of Prophet Muhammad died and Abu Lahab said, "Muhammad has been cut off tonight!" [Ibn Kathir 4/559] That son was not Ibrahim, for Mariya begot him the latter in Medina, not in Mecca. Most probably that son who died on that occasion was Al-Qasim.

(2) He is Mohammad ibn Harun Ar-Rashid Al-Abbasi. He was given the title Al-Amin Al-‘Abbasi and was one of the Abbasid caliphs. He was born in Baghdad in the year 170 AH. He was pledged as caliph after the death of his father (193 AH) at the bequest of his father. His brother Al-Ma’mun came to power two years after him. He was a courageous and well-educated man who wrote fine poetry. However, he was extravagant and a poor planner. He was criticized for wasting so much money on leisure and sitting around with drunk companions. He died in the year 198 AH [Al-Mawsu‘a Ash-Shi‘riyya].

(3) These lines are part of a poem written by Al-Amin Al-‘Abbasi, in which he says:
Do not belittle men who belong by birth to Roman mothers or non-Arab black maids.
Mothers give birth to their children,
But only fathers give them names.
An Arab woman may be barren
And fertility may belong to a black woman.

It is amazing how Abu Lahab himself contributed to the prevalence of Islam almost as did Khalid or ‘Amr! How was that? When he said to Prophet Muhammad, ‘May you meet your ruin’, Allah responded by the verses: ‘May the hands of Abu Lahab be ruined! May he be ruined too! Neither his wealth nor his gains will help him: he will burn in the Flaming Fire— and so will his wife, the firewood-carrier, with a palm-fibre rope around her neck’ (al-Masad: 1-5) Allah thus made it clear, while Abu Lahab was still living, that he would never embrace faith and is doomed to the Fire. Abu Lahab could have professed faith to prove that verse wrong. He had the freewill to do that, but he just did not do it. By that, he proved the truthfulness of the Quran and that it is indeed the Word of Allah.

Allah concludes the verse by saying: ‘… surely they are in a disquieting doubt’ (Saba’: 54). They doubted that Prophet Muhammad would finally gain victory and that his Lord would never abandon him. They entertained that doubt even though they were in constant contact with the people of the Scripture who recited their Books to those disbelievers and. They even held their Scripture as evidence against the disbelievers and prayed for victory against them to be attained when the final Messenger- told of in their Scripture- came. The disbelievers declared enmity against Prophet Muhammad even though they had learnt that all the battles that were waged throughout history between Allah's Messengers and those who denied the truth always ended in favour of the Messengers. Allah would never have sent a Messenger only to abandon him and let his opponents defeat him.

This fundamental matter of faith has been mentioned in all the previous Books, just as it is mentioned in the Quran. Even though the previous Books have been distorted, the Quran is the remaining Book of Allah that He has guaranteed to preserve. It will be recited in the same way in which it was revealed until the Day of Resurrection. Allah says: ‘We support Our messengers and the believers, in the present life and on the Day when witnesses arise’ (Ghafir: 51). He also says: ‘Our word has already been given to Our servants the messengers: it is they who will be helped, and the ones who support Our cause will be the winners’ (as-Saffat: 171-173).

That is why we have said previously if Muslims are defeated, it means they have not met the prerequisite of victory; namely, total submission to Allah and commitment to His Law. Allah would not grant victory to the believers so long as they disobey His Commands, or else Islam would not be truly established in the hearts and lands. What would be the use of obedience if Muslims were granted victory anyway? This is the lesson that we learnt at the Battle of Uhud. The archers did not heed the command of Prophet Muhammad and went down the mountain seeking the spoils. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had commanded them, 'Do not leave your positions whatever happens.'(1) Then, when they left their positions, the disbelievers rallied against them and almost defeated them.

Even though the disbelievers did not really gain victory at the Battle of Uhud, but neither did Muslims. If Muslims had been victorious despite going against the direct commands of the Messenger of Allah, they would have thought ever after that the commands of the Messenger of Allah were of little importance. They would have thought, 'We went against his commands at Uhud and still won'. Thus we cannot say that Islam was defeated then, but Muslims were when they abandoned its laws. As for Islam, it was victorious.

The archers were sure true believers, but they were in doubts about what would the outcomes be when they disobeyed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Undoubtedly, they believed in Allah, that He is the Creator of all things and that Muhammad was His Messenger: 'If you [Prophet] ask them who created them they are sure to say, "Allah"…' (az-Zukhruf: 87).

Speech can be divided into six categories with respect to which of the different levels of certainly it represents. One of those levels is 'doubt'. Speech among humans started when Allah taught all the names to Adam peace be upon him. For communication to be made through speech, addressees have to be familiar with the language used by a speaker so they can get the meaning he intends to convey.

(1) Ibn Hisham mentioned in As-Sira An-Nabawiyya (3/10) that Prophet Muhammad put 'Abdullah ibn Jubayr in command of the archers, a group that comprised of fifty men, and said to them, 'Use your arrows to keep their cavalry at bay so that they cannot attack our lines from behind. Whether we come closer to victory or defeat, hold your positions to ensure that we are not attacked from your direction.' Still, they went against the command of the Messenger of Allah when they saw that the disbelievers of Quraysh were being routed. They went down from their positions to collect the spoils of war. Khalid ibn Al-Walid, who was then a leader in the army of the disbelievers, noticed that, so he attacked Muslims and pierced their lines, safe from the arrows of the archers.

Speech must have a message, a complete thought. It must convey a meaning. If one says, ‘Mohammad’, for example, this is meaningless, whereas ‘Mohammad is generous’ is meaningful. This statement, ascribing generosity to Mohammad, is based on a conviction of the speaker. If reality corroborates this statement, then we have a piece of information as well as evidence for it. This is 'certainty'. If this information is not certain, it therefore falls under the category of 'doubt'. Doubt implies neither affirmation nor negation, but it gives equal weight to both possibilities. If the possibility of its being true is greater, this is 'assumption'. In case the possibility of its being false is greater, this is 'illusion'.

So there are 'doubt', 'assumption' and 'illusion', and all three categories are subsumed under 'uncertainty'. As for the levels of certainty, they are three too. If it is a thing that corresponds to reality and can be proved, this is 'knowledge'. If it is held to be true or acceptable, yet cannot be proved, this is 'imitation'. To hold something to be true whereas neither reality corroborates nor a proof of it can be obtained, this is ignorance. So here are the other three categories: knowledge, imitation, and ignorance.

So the disbelievers were certain that Allah is the Lord and Creator of all things, but they had doubts with regard to Prophet Muhammad and whether what he delivered for them was truly the Message of Allah. That doubt was where their anxiety originated: ‘… surely they are in a disquieting doubt’ (Saba’: 54).

the chapter of

Fatir

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of Fatir(1):

ٱلۡحَمۡدُ لِلَّهِ فَاطِرِ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضِ جَاعِلِ ٱلۡمَلَٰٓئِكَةِ رُسُلًا أُوْلِيٓ أَجۡنِحَةٖ
مَّثۡنَىٰ وَثُلَٰثَ وَرُبَٰعَۚ يَزِيدُ فِي ٱلۡخَلۡقِ مَا يَشَآءُۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيۡءٖ قَدِيرٞ ١

Praise be to God, Creator of the heavens and earth, who made angels messengers with two, three, four [pairs of] wings. He adds to creation as He will: God has power over everything [1] (The Quran, Fatir: 1)

We have previously commented on the Quranic chapters that begin with 'All praise is due to Allah', namely, al-An'am, al-Kahf, Saba' and this one, Fatir. In each of them, the sentence has a significant meaning. Man has been created from nothing. The world has been made for him with all the means necessary to sustain his life. Then, there will be resurrection, and the Afterlife with all that is promised in there. All that is the work of Allah Who has made it all from nothing

The chapter of al-Kahf starts with praising Allah for sending down guidance to humankind: 'All praise is due to Allah, Who revealed the Book to His servant…' (al-Kahf: 1). Prosperity of humankind on earth is dependent on divine guidance without which we would not know right from wrong and creation would annihilate itself. As for the chapter of Saba', it starts with praising Allah for His blessings in this world and the Hereafter. In the chapter of Fatir we are considering, the opening verse says: ‘All praise is due to Allah, the Originator of the heavens and the earth; the Maker of the angels, apostles flying on wings...’ (Fatir: 1). Praise is due to Him for all that He has created in the heavens and earth- that which we know and that which we do not- for the purpose of preserving and sustaining our lives.

(1) Fatir is a Meccan chapter according to the majority of scholars. Al-Qurtubi said so in his Quran Exegesis (8/5590) and it is the 35th chapter in the order of the Noble Quran. It contains 45 verses and it was revealed after the chapter of al-Furqan and before the chapter of Maryam, and is therefore the 42nd Quranic chapter to be revealed. It is also called the chapter of al-Mala'ika due to the angels being mentioned in it.

All praise belongs to Allah. Even when you thank a human being, you thank them for a service he has done you. It would never be in his power to offer you that were it not for the abilities Allah has granted him, so even when you praise him, praise actually goes ultimately to Allah. None of us is actually in possession of whatever he gives to others or enjoys himself. Everything belongs to Him, and all praise is due to Him.

In the opening verse of the chapter of Fatir, praise is ascribed to Allah for His creation of the heavens and earth, that miraculous creation that started from nothing. They were not created based on any formerly produced examples of creation. Allah originated them and perfected them by His Might. Allah has honoured humankind by making them vicegerents on earth. He has made them superior to all other creatures and has distinguished them by the power of the mind by which they can choose between alternatives.

The creation of man is a miracle. However, the creation of the heavens and earth is greater and more tremendous. For this reason, Allah mentions them particularly. The word 'heavens' refers to everything that is above you. It includes, for example, the clouds from which rain comes down, as He says: ‘And so We caused the gates of heaven to open with water pouring down in torrents’ (al-Qamar: 11). This does not refer to the sky that directly faces the earth.

Allah says regarding the creation of the seven heavens: ‘…who has created seven heavens in full harmony with one another…’ (al-Mulk: 3). They are perfectly made, not a hole or a crack may ever be found in them, but how then do the angels descend through them? How do they come down to the earth? Allah says: ‘… the angels and the Spirit [the Angel Gabriel] descend again and again with their Lord's permission on every task’ (al-Qadr: 4).

Allah makes it plain that the missions and duties assigned to angels require ascending and descending from the heavens. Now, how do they pass through the sky when it does not contain any holes or cracks? The answer is this: they pass through, for their diaphanous nature as angels allows them to do so.

Man, for example, is created from clay, and clay has a mass and a volume, which does not allow it to pass through anything. As for jinn, Allah has created them from fire, and fire also has a mass and a volume, but it is more delicate and more translucent than clay, and for that reason the jinn can pass through material things. An apple behind your wall would hardly send its aroma, let alone its dimensions, through to you. You would not be able to smell it, let alone see it. However, when a fire is ignited behind the wall, it would not be long before you feel its heat from the other side. Jinn have this light nature.

As for the angels, they are superior creatures and the highest of all of them, for Allah has created them from light and it is more delicate and more diaphanous even than fire. For this reason light does not need passageways. Have you seen, for example, the rays that penetrate the body and give us a complete accurate image of the organs inside? In such a manner the angels pass through the heavens and nothing prevents them.

Allah says about the angels: ‘And they say, “The Lord of Mercy has taken offspring for Himself [the angels].” May He be exalted! No! They are only His honoured servants’ (al-Anbiya’: 26-27). Some of the angels have been created solely for glorifying Allah. They are completely absorbed in devotion and do nothing but worship. These do not know anything about the universe and have no connection to it in any way. Other angels, the ones who were commanded to prostrate to Adam, have been created to do tasks in connection with humankind. Allah says about some of them: ‘Each person has guardian angels before him and behind, watching over him by Allah’s command…’ (ar-Ra‘d: 11). Allah sends angels and gives them commands to protect His servants. They do their duty by the Will of Allah, so they cannot protect anyone from a thing Allah has decreed for him. A popular Egyptian proverb says, ‘The eye has a guard over it’ which alludes to the guardian angels. Some people experience accidents, but they survive as if by a miracle. Simply, Allah has willed that they would be rescued, so they survive those accidents with no injury.

Among the angels are also: ‘… those who regulate the affair’ (an-Nazi‘at: 5). They are the ones who manage the affairs of the creation by the command of Allah. Some angels are responsible for recording deeds: ‘watchers, noble recorders…’ (al-Infitar: 11).

Some angels are message-bearers. Some of them were sent down either to Allah's Messengers to reveal to them divine messages they were chosen to deliver to people. Others have missions related to the service of humankind in general.

Allah then describes the angels by saying: ‘…flying on wings, two, and three, and four…’ (Fatir: 1). This description corresponds to the missions angels are assigned that require ascending and descending between the heavens and earth. Not only two, three, or four, but: ‘… He increases in creation what He pleases…’ (Fatir: 1). We have only seen birds with just two wings, but we should not be amazed, for this is the creation of Allah Who increases in creation what He pleases. He is the One Who has absolute power. No limits or moulds govern the works of the Almighty Lord. Rather, His absolute power to create anything has been manifest ever since he made the father of humankind, Adam peace be upon him. The norm is that reproduction requires a male and a female, and from this natural process have the great mass of humankind emerged. However, Allah Who is the Creator of norms have showed us signs that display His Absolute Power that knows no limits and is not bound by the abilities that the human mind can comprehend. Allah has created Adam without a father or a mother, created Eve from a father without a mother, and He created 'Isa (Jesus) from a mother without a father.

So long as Allah is the One Who creates, then do not be amazed or suspicious when you hear this Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘I saw Gabriel and he had six hundred wings.’(1) So long as this is what the Messenger of Allah has said, there is no room for doubt. When Companion Abu Bakr As-Siddiq was told about the miraculous Night Journey of Prophet Muhammad, ‘Your companion has said such and such…!’ He only replied, ‘If he truly said that, then it is true.'(1) So long as the source is verified, so long as we know those are the revelations of Allah sent down to His Messenger, then it is true. So long as a command is from Allah, it is for our good and we have to obey it, regardless of whether or not we understand the wisdom behind it.

(1) This Hadith is cited by Ahmad in his Musnad (1/412, 460) on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud when he interpreted the words of Allah: 'And, indeed, he saw it descend a second time by the lote-tree of the farthest limit' (an-Najm: 13-14). He said, 'The Messenger of Allah said, "I saw Gabriel and he had six hundred wings from which embellishments, pearls, and rubies spread.' In his exegesis, Ibn Kathir deems its chain of narrations authentic (4/251).

Some give themselves a hard time trying to discover the wisdom behind every act of worship and every command of Allah. For example, they would say that if Allah enjoins sawm (Fasting) so the wealthy can understand the pain of the hungry and have sympathy for the poor. Based on this logic, then the poor should not fast! However, this is a narrow-minded view, and when Allah ordains fasting for the poor and rich alike, we must comply, trusting the Wisdom of Allah Glorified is He. A patient would not ask a doctor why he prescribes for him a particular medicine. He would only follow the prescription, trusting that the doctor knows what he has to do. Only another doctor would discuss with him why he has prescribed certain medication. To Allah belongs the Highest Similitude; is there an equal to Him that can probably be fit for asking: why have You made such-and-such obligatory for us?!

Allah says: '… He increases in creation what He pleases…' (Fatir: 1), which means nothing is beyond His Power. His absolute Power is evident in the endless varieties of creatures this vast universe is rich in. The creation of man is so full of wonders. He has created us quite different in physical features, character, and abilities. There is the tall, short, smart, awkward, blond, dark, etc. Every human being is a miracle walking on earth.

Allah shows us signs of His Power through His creation. A baby may be born with two heads or a hand with six fingers. An animal may have five legs. He has made some people handsome, with distinct fine features and delicate figures. Others are not really handsome, with irregularities in their features or defects in their physical forms. He has created the brave and the cowardly, the eloquent and the clumsy. Every bit of creation spells His Might and Majesty. Allah says: 'And among his wonders is the creation of the heavens and the earth, and the diversity of your tongues and colours...' (ar-Rum: 22).

(1) It is cited by Al-Qurtubi in his exegesis (5/4012), and the full version tells, 'Do you believe what he said before you hear it from him?' He said: 'Where are your minds? I believe that he receives news from heaven, so is it hard to believe that he went to Jerusalem? Heaven is much farther!'

From His Absolute Power also ‘He bestows the gift of female offspring on whomever He wills, and the gift of male offspring on whomever He wills; or He gives both male and female [to whomever He wills], and causes to be barren whomever He wills...’ (ash-Shura: 49-50).

Another amazing manifestation of His Power is the harmony He has made in nature. Ponder the relationship between crocodiles and birds. Despite viciousness of the former and vulnerability of the latter, common benefits bring them together. A crocodile would go to the riverbank and open its mouth. Then birds would clean its teeth by picking up the remnants of the crocodile’s food, meanwhile feeding themselves. If the birds sense a hunter approaching, they make a noise to warn the crocodile, which rushes back into the water. Glory is to Allah Who has created everything in the best form and guided everyone to the best path! Look at the neck of a giraffe or camel in contrast with that of a bear, for example. Each of them has that which is most suitable to them.

We have frequently mentioned the five senses and pointed out that scientists call them 'the five known senses'. This is to allow for more discoveries that unveil new senses the human body is endowed with. We know that there are other senses besides those well-known five, such as the sense by which we discern the thickness of a material, and that by which we determine the weight of things.

Allah has created in us all the same organs and systems in our bodies, each assigned a specific function. All of us see with the eyes, hear with the ears, smell with a nose and so forth. Still, the sharpness of each of the senses differs from one person to another. Have you not ever heard of a person who can hear the creeping of ants? History tells us of people who could see over unusually long distances.(1) Indeed, Allah increases in creation whatever He pleases and chooses for His bestowals whoever He wills. A poet says:

Glory is to Him Who divides gifts among His servants!

(1) Zarqa’ was a woman from the tribe of Jadis in Al-Yamama. She was an example of unique eyesight. They say she could see an object from a distance that needed three days to be covered! It is narrated that Hasan ibn Tabaʿ Al-Hamiri moved to invade Jadis. Zarqa’ saw them as they set out from their land and warned Jadis, but they did not believe her. Hasan annihilated them, as a result. [Al-Aʿalam by Az-Zirikli 3/44].

He is the Lord and none can question His governance!
He has made some dim-sighted and some sightless
And gave Zarqa Al-Yamama eyes with such sharpness!

Zarqa᾽ of Yamama had exemplary sharp eyesight. Another example of sharpness can be found in the following verses (1):

What sound judgement a girl of a tribe showed when she looked at a flock of doves and hoped,(2)
'If only I had what equals their number and its half, this would be a hundred doves with the one I have!'
They counted the doves to verify her accurateness and found them exactly sixty six, not more or less!

She counted the doves as they flew on high and was right about their number which bears testimony to her strong vision and precision.

As much can be said about the sense of smell, we have a good example in dogs which can be trained to detect smells with absolute accuracy. All of us can tell whether a perfume smells pleasant or otherwise, but only few can detect whether it is made of rose or jasmine, or a mixture of both.

Prophet Ya'qub (Jacob) peace be upon him was able to distinguished the smell of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) from an exceptionally far distance. We know he was tested by the loss of his son Yusuf peace be upon him when his brothers threw him into the bottom of a well. He was overwhelmed with grief that he cried so much until he lost his eyesight. As the story is told in the Quran, we know that Yusuf was saved and attained to power, as he came to be in charge of all the treasure houses of Egypt. When shortages struck their land, the brothers of Yusuf went to him and asked for provisions. After some events, Yusuf recognized his brothers and gave them his shirt to put it on his father's face so he would be able to see again. What is amazing here is that when the caravan departed Egypt, just as it was leaving the populated areas where smells could hardly be told from one another, to the emptiness of the desert, Ya'qub said, while he was so far away in Palestine: ‘I can smell Yusuf (Joseph)’ (Yusuf: 94). He detected the smell of Yusuf that his shirt contained.

(1) This poet is An-Nabigha Adh-Dhibyani, poet of the highest calibre, from the people of Hijaz. A dome of red leather was established for him in the Market of 'Ukazh, where poets used to appear and present their poems to him. He was a source of inspiration to An-Nuʿman ibn Al-Mundhir. He lived a long life and died eighteen years before Hijra. [Al-Mawsuʿah Ash-Shiʿriyyah].

(2) This verse is from a poem of An-Nabigha Adh-Dhibyani.

We know that smell is the strongest indication of a person, as distinct his voice of fingerprint. Smell is the last trace of someone that is able to remain in a place.

Likewise, some people have really amazing sense of taste, like professional tasters of food. The gifts Allah has endowed people with are endless. A cashier at a bank, by only touching the money with his fingers, is able to know whether it is genuine counterfeit, and so on. All these are manifestations of Allah's words: ‘... He increases in creation what He wills...’ (Fatir: 1).

Allah concludes the verse with a statement that explains what has been said before. He says: ‘... surely Allah has power over all things’ (Fatir: 1). Do not be too surprised, therefore, for the Power of Allah is limitless. It encompasses all things, from the atom to the galaxy. He is the One Who says to a thing ‘Be!’ and it is. Only a word from Him brings a thing from nothingness to existence.

Some have interpreted the Arabic structure of the verse quite differently. The Arabic for ‘creation’ is khalq which in another recitation is pronounced as halq which literally means ‘throat’. Those who hold this view have interpreted ‘… He increases in halq what He wills…’ as a reference to beauty and sweetness of the voice (1), for the voice is the means of transferring the thoughts of the speaker to the listener. A fine voice is also a gift from Allah that He bestows to whomever He wills.

So long as we are talking about gifts and talents, let me tell you one of the strangest stories the history of Arabs(2) has ever recorded. It is about Nazar ibn Maʿad ibn ʻAdnan. He had four sons: Mudar, from whose line Prophet Muhammad descended, Rabi'a, 'Iyad, and Anmar. When Nazar felt that his time was coming, he gathered his four sons and said to them: ‘I want to tell you what I am bequeathing to you before I die: the red dome is for Mudar. The black horse and the black tent are for Rabi'a, the grey-haired woman is for 'Iyad and the people’s council are for Anmar. If you fail to interpret my will, seek out Al-Af'a Al-Jurhami in Najran and he will explain to you what I am saying.'

(1) Az-Zuhri and Ibn Jarih said, ‘It is the beauty of the voice.’ Qatada said, ‘This refers to elegance in the eyes, beauty in the nose and sweetness in the mouth.’ [Tafsir Al-Qurtubi (8/5591)]. Ibn Abbas also said this in what has been narrated from him by Ibn Mundhir. [Ad-Durr Al-Manthur Li-As-Suyuti (7/4)] The most sound view is that He increases in the creation of the angels what He wills, respecting the wings and other aspects.

(2) Imam ibn Al-Jawzi has mentioned this story in full in his book Al-Adhkiya` [p.174] and Ibn Hujja Al-`Humawi in Thamarat Al-Awraq fi Al-Muhadarat [1/249].

Failing indeed to understand the will of their late father, the four sons travelled to Al-Af’a Al-Jurhami. On their way to Najran, in old Yemen, Muaar saw a pasture where a camel were grazing, and on the other side there was a more beautiful pasture that had not been touched. He said, ‘Indeed the camel that has been grazing here must be one-eyed.’ Rabi'a said, ‘It must be also cripple.' Anmar said, ‘that camel's tail must have been cut off.' Iyad said: ‘It must be a muddled camel.’

While they were thus talking, they met a man who was looking for his lost camel. He said, ‘Have you seen a straying camel?’ Muadar said, ‘Is it one-eyed?’ He said, ‘Yes’. ‘And cripple?’ ‘Yes.’ ‘Is its tail cut off?’ ‘Yes.’ ‘Is it muddled?’ The man said, ‘Yes, and you must have stolen him!’ They sought Al-Af'a Al-Jurhami, for they were close to Najran, to resolve the case, and they denied having stolen the camel.

Al-Af'a said, ‘Then how did you describe it to its owner with such precision?’ Mudar said, ‘It had been grazing on one side of the pasture and leaving the other better side of it, so I knew it was one-eyed.’ Rabi'a said, ‘I noticed the prints of its right hoof were clear whereas those of the left hoof were unclear, so I knew it was crippling.’ Iyad said, ‘I saw its dung gathered in one spot, so I knew its tail was cut off. If it had had a tail, its dung would have been dispersed here and there.’ Anmar said, ‘I saw it had been eating from different places, so I knew it was muddled.' Al-Afʿa Al-Jarhami said, 'Let them go, for this sharpness is a gift Allah grants to whomever He wills.'

Al-Af'a then asked them, ‘Who are you?’ They said, ‘We are the sons of Nazar ibn Maʿd ibn ʿAdnan. Our late father advised us to seek judgement from you respecting the interpretation of His will.’ They related to him what their father had said. He said, ‘The red dome for Mudar means red dinars and red she-camels.’ For this reason, the tribe of Mudar was called Al-Hamraʾ (The Red [Tribe]).

He said, ‘The black horse and the black tent mean every property that is black. As for the grey-haired woman, this means the least precious of wealth and sheep. As for Anmar, he shall have the white silver and the council.'

Having thus explained to them the will of their father, Al-Af'a wanted to honour them as guests, so he ordered his servant to slaughter an animal and prepare a banquet for them. They sat at the dining table and began speaking, as he was reflecting on their minute observation. Rabi'a said, ‘I have not seen anything better than this meat, only if it had not been fed a bitch’s milk.’ Mudar said, ‘This is a good drink, except that its grape vine grew over a grave.’ Then Anmar said, ‘This man is a superior leader and a master, except that he is not his father’s son.’ 'Iyad said, ‘Indeed we have not seen any speech more beautiful than the speech we have among ourselves!'

Al-Afʿa Al-Jurhami summoned the shepherd that had slaughtered the sheep for them and asked him about it, so the shepherd said, ‘Its mother died after it was born, and we did not have any other sheep to feed it, so we resorted to the milk of a bitch to feed it.’ He then asked his servant about the drink and received this reply, ‘It is from the grapes that you planted on the grave of your father.’ There was nothing left for him to do but ask about his family lineage, so he went to his mother and asked her, ‘O my mother, tell me who I am and who my father is’; the mother suspected that he had heard the news, so she thought it useless to deny the truth. She said to him, ‘Your father was a king who possessed sovereignty and wealth, except that he did not sire a child. I feared that his dominion and wealth would go to someone else, so I had to do what I did!'

When he returned to his guests, he said to them: ‘You are not in need of me anymore, but indeed it is only that all people are becoming in need of you.’ If you were to ask now: ‘How did these people know all this?’ We say: ‘they knew it through deep insight and detailed observation that is referred to in the verse: ‘He adds to creation what He wills’ (Fatir: 1).

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

مَّا يَفْتَحِ ٱللَّهُ لِلنَّاسِ مِن رَّحْمَةٍ فَلَا مُمْسِكَ لَهَا ۖ وَمَا يُمْسِكْ
فَلَا مُرْسِلَ لَهُۥ مِنۢ بَعْدِهِۦ ۚ وَهُوَ ٱلْعَزِيزُ ٱلْحَكِيمُ ٢

No one can withhold the blessing God opens up for people, nor can anyone but Him release whatever He withholds: He is the Almighty, the All-Wise [2] (The Quran, Fatir: 2)

As long as Allah Glorified is He is the Creator, then this necessitates that He provide for people all that they are in need of. First of all, people are in dire need that Allah provides for them that which helps them survive in this world, so Allah sends down rain through which the earth is revitalised with vegetation so that man can cultivate and eat and drink. This is the basic requirements of man's material life. Then Allah provides man with the requirements of his spiritual life; He reveals for him that which preserves his values and governs his good relationships with others. This is Allah's Grace about which He says: ‘Are they the ones who share out your Lord’s Grace?’ (az-Zukhruf: 32)

If Allah wants to be Merciful to any of His slaves, then ‘No one can withhold the blessing Allah opens up for people, nor can anyone but Him release whatever He withholds…’ (Fatir: 2).

When we reflect on the Quranic style in this verse, we find that Allah says, ‘...the blessing Allah opens up for people...’ The opposite of 'to open' is 'to close', but Allah Glorified is He does not say: ‘and whatever He closes’. Allah instead says: ‘... nor can anyone but Him release whatever He withholds...’ (Fatir: 2). Then why does Allah use ‘withhold’ instead of ‘close’? Scholars say that this is because something, which is closed, may be opened with a device or strength. On the contrary, no one is capable of obtaining anything that Allah has withheld.

The mercy that Allah opens to people includes the Message that Allah bestowed upon our Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. This is why the disbelievers said, as the Quran relates to us: ‘...Why was this Quran not sent down to a distinguished man, from either of the two cities?”’ (az-Zukhruf: 31)

In another chapter, the Quran mentions that they also said: ‘What! Upon him alone from among all of us should a [divine] reminder have been bestowed from on high?' (Sad: 8) Allah Glorified is He responded to them: '... Are they the ones who share out your Lord's grace? We are the ones who give them their share of livelihood in this world...' (az-Zukhruf: 32). This verse means that people should be well mannered when addressing Allah, for He Glorified is He is the One Who shares out all the affairs of this life among people. Should He leave it to you, according to your own whims, to assign who is worthy to receive the divine revelation?

Fath (opening) signifies the removal of a barrier between two things. It is of two categories: First, palpable such as opening a door or a suitcase, for example, Allah says: 'Thereupon, when they opened their packs, they discovered that their merchandise had been returned to them...' (Yusuf: 65). Second, impalpable, the opening can also be something immaterial, such as an opening the doors to goodness or mercy such as the revelation that Allah sent down to Prophet Muhammad. An example of this is the reference to the revelation that exists in the Torah regarding the description of the Prophet as about which Allah says: '...Do you inform them of what Allah has disclosed to you...' (al-Baqara: 76) .

Fath may also signify settlement of disputes which may arise among people as Allah says: '... Our Lord, decide between us and our people in truth, and You are the best of those who give decision.' (al-A'raf: 89)

The rationale behind Allah's saying: 'No one can withhold the blessing Allah opens up for people...' (Fatir: 2) is that Allah is One and He has no partner. There is no other god besides Him. If there had been another god beside him, the other god would have had another opinion and, thus, there would have been disagreement. Yet, as Allah Glorified is He is the One and Only God, He disposes His dominion as He wills. Had there been another god beside Allah, how can He then ensure that He commands something to 'Be!' and it responds to His Command?

Allah Glorified is He issues commands and He is fully certain that all creatures shall obey, as there is no one other one who can orders them otherwise. For this reason, Allah is the first to testify to His Divinity and Sole Unity. He testifies to this Himself when He says: 'Allah testifies that there is no deity save Him...' (Al-'Imran: 18). This is testimony of the Only worthy God, Allah, for Himself. Accordingly, when he orders anything to ‘Be’, there is no other alternative for it but to obey and fulfil the command.

In this regard, Allah says: 'When the sky is split asunder, obeying its Sustainer, as in truth it must' (al-Inshiqaq: 1-2). The meaning here is that the sky heard the Command from Allah and obeyed it because there is not another god, beside Allah, which may oppose it when it obeys Allah's Command.

After Allah Glorified is He has testified to Himself that He is the Only God worthy to be worshipped, the angels also testified to this pure truth as they witnessed it themselves. Then those who have been given knowledge testified also to this fact as they proved it through their knowledge. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Allah testifies – and [so do] the angels and all who are endowed with knowledge – that there is no deity save Him...’ (Al-‘Imran: 18).

Then the verse under discussion concludes ‘...He is the Almighty, the All Wise.’ (Fatir: 2). Indeed, as long as He is the Only One God without any partner, He sends His mercy to whomever He wills and He withholds it from whomever He wills, then He is the Almighty. The Almighty is the One Who cannot be overwhelmed or resisted. However, this does not mean that He acquired such Might and Triumph through tyranny, oppression or coercion. Yet, Might only originate from His Wisdom as He is Wise in His giving as well as in his withholding. Wisdom, as we have said, is to put things in their proper place. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلنَّاسُ ٱذْكُرُوا۟ نِعْمَتَ ٱللَّهِ عَلَيْكُمْ ۚ هَلْ مِنْ خَٰلِقٍ غَيْرُ ٱللَّهِ يَرْزُقُكُم
مِّنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ ۚ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ ۖ فَأَنَّىٰ تُؤْفَكُونَ ﴿٣﴾

People, remember God’s grace towards you. Is there any creator other than God to give you sustenance from the heavens and earth? There is no god but Him. How can you be so deluded? [3] (The Quran, Fatir: 3)

Allah Glorified is He bestows blessing upon His slaves and reminds them of His favours to them. He mentions the first of these favours; the favour of bringing the creation into existence from nothing. Allah wanted to present this fact to them in a way that let they themselves admit it. Therefore, He did not state it as an informative sentence such as: 'I created you.' Rather, it is stated in the form of a rhetorical question: '... Is there any creator other than Allah to give you sustenance from the heavens and earth?' (Fatir: 3) It is known that when you put information in the form of a declarative sentence, it can be denied, but when you state the same in the form of a rhetorical question, it cannot be denied. One will not make a rhetorical question unless one is confident that the answer will come in accordance with what you want. When someone, for example, disavows a favour you have done to him, then do not say to him: 'I did such and such for you.' because he may deny you. Rather, you should instead say: 'Did I not do such and such on such and such a day?' At that point, he has no choice but to admit your favour and answer your question in the affirmative.

Likewise, Allah Glorified is He makes them acknowledge His favours so that their acknowledgement shall be a proof against them. Although He Glorified is He Knows everything very well, He asks them: '...Is there any creator other than Allah to give you sustenance from the heavens and earth?...' (Fatir: 3) As they had nothing to do but to remain silent as they had not dared to deny it, Allah Himself answered the question: '...There is no god but Him....' (Fatir: 3). It was logical for them to believe as He Glorified is He is the Sole Creator and the Provider. Yet, they did not. Allah Glorified is He stated this fact in the form of a third person: '...There is no god but Him...' (Fatir: 3) instead of saying, 'There is no god but Me'. It is as if He Glorified is He is bearing witness to a matter of the unseen.

His saying: 'How can you be so deluded?' means that after all this: how can you turn away from His Oneness and from believing in Him? The Arabic word ifk means to take something out of its place and put it where it does not belong. Of this word another word is derived which is Al-Muʾtafika (mentioned in an-Najm: 53) which refers to the villages that Allah destroyed by turning them upside down.

'Ifk means also to lie because the one who lies distorts the truth. It is as if Allah Glorified is He is saying to them: 'How can you invert that which is true and how can you attribute the creation of Allah and the provision he bestows on all creatures to other than Him Glorified is He? Tell us the logic behind your argument, if there is any.

After Allah Glorified is He talks about His sole Unity and His Divinity; He wants to talk about the prophet whom the Only One God sent to the creation.

He Glorified is He says:

وَإِن يُكَذِّبُوكَ فَقَدْ كُذِّبَتْ رُسُلٌ مِّن قَبْلِكَ ۚ وَإِلَى ٱللَّهِ تُرْجَعُ ٱلْأُمُورُ ﴿٤﴾

If they call you a liar [Prophet], many messengers before you were also called liars: it is to God that all things will be returned [4] (The Quran, Fatir: 4)

This is a consolation for our Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Such an address is repeated in other verses in the Quran such as Allah's saying: ‘ Say, “I am nothing new among Allah’s messengers”’ (al-Ahqaf: 9). Allah tells His Prophet Muhammad that he was not the first messenger to be denied by his people, as those who came before him were denied, too. This is something natural because Allah does not send a messenger except when corruption prevails and the people become corrupt without any deterrent that prevents them from evil, either at the individual or collective levels.

I have said before that indeed the Creator has placed in the human soul an inherent deterrent which holds one back when he deviates from the way of his Lord. This is the An-Nafs Al-Lawama (the reproachful soul). When one's soul becomes no longer reproachful and turns to be nafs ammara bi-as-su’ (the soul that is a persistent enjoiner of evil), here comes the role of the society, i.e. people at large should enjoin good and forbid evil. However, if the society becomes corrupt, then a new messenger must come with a new miracle to renew for people what they had become heedless of from the religion of Allah.

As Allah destined that the message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the last message and that no messenger shall come after him, then this is a testimony to the followers of Prophet Muhammad that there shall be always good people among them and that they shall preserve the religion of Allah.

His saying: ‘...it is to Allah that all things will be returned’ (Fatir: 4) means that all matters shall be settled in the Hereafter, so whoever has denied you from amongst your people Allah will either punish him in this worldly life as He Glorified is He punished those who denied from the previous nations, or He will postpone his punishment until the Hereafter.

After that Allah Glorified is He talks about the third element of legislation. After talking about His Divinity and His Sole Unity and the Messenger Muhammad, He talks about the third element about which disbelievers differed with Prophet Muhammad that is the resurrection, the gathering and the reckoning.

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلنَّاسُ إِنَّ وَعۡدَ ٱللَّهِ حَقّٞۖ فَلَا تَغُرَّنَّكُمُ ٱلۡحَيَوٰةُ ٱلدُّنۡيَاۖ وَلَا يَغُرَّنَّكُم بِٱللَّهِ ٱلۡغَرُورُ ﴿٥﴾

People! God's promise is true, so do not let the present life deceive you. Do not let the Deceiver deceive you about Allah [5] (The Quran, Fatir: 5)

This verse asserts to people that Allah's Promise that they shall return to Allah in the Hereafter and He will take them to account and reward you; those who do good for their goodness and those who do evil for their evildoing. This is a well-established and applied principle in all societies, even the most primitive of them. Even atheists apply this principle; the diligent are rewarded and the neglectful are punished. Indeed, some people put in place criminal laws that are harsher and more severe than the punishments set by Allah, such as the laws of capital punishment, hanging, the confiscation of wealth, etc.

Society cannot function properly without the sound application of this principle. If it is violated, corruption prevails in society, individuals become frustrated, and chaos becomes widespread. This is a natural conclusion in this case as those who do goodness are not rewarded for their goodness and criminals are not punished for their crimes. Therefore, we must instil in people a desire for goodness and a fear of evil, so those who do goodness can increase their goodness and those who do evil may be deterred from doing evil.

How is it that this principle is not accepted in a world full of injustices, transgressions, oppression, and tyranny? In addition, how is it disbelieved that a time shall come where everyone is given what they deserve?

For that reason, I always mention a conversation I had with some communists, who reject resurrection and reckoning. I was saying to them: 'You have taken your enemies and killed them, confiscated their wealth and did other horrible things to them because -according to your view- they had changed the scales of giving. Then, what about those who committed such acts of oppression and transgression and, yet, got away from you and you could not punish them?! Further, what about the oppressors who had gone before you and those who will come after you? Is it not more correct to say that there shall come a time where all these people shall be gathered all together for reckoning, when every one of them will be given their reward? Will this reward not please you and gladden your hearts when you see the oppressor being punished for his oppression? Therefore, you must believe in this Day. You must not reject it and disbelieve in it, and it is based on the same principle to which you call.

We thus notice that the call here is directed to all of mankind: ‘O People! Allah’s promise is true...’ (Fatir: 5). Here, Allah tells all people that He promises that there shall be a day for judgment, resurrection and reckoning. The promise of Allah is true because the veracity of a promise is based on who makes it and his power to fulfil it. Is there anyone more powerful than Allah? We therefore should believe in the fulfilment of any promise if it comes from Allah Glorified is He exactly as we disbelieve in any promise made by someone who does not have inherent power to fulfil it.

I have clarified before that when one makes a promise, he has the intention, at the time of making the promise, to fulfil it. However, one may not be able to fulfil it due to an extraordinary. For that reason our Lord teaches us to have high etiquette in this regard in the chapter of al-Kahf: ‘And never say about anything, “Behold, I shall do this tomorrow” without [adding], “if Allah so wills”’ (al-Kahf: 23-24). Connecting your action to the Will of Allah protects you from being accusing lying in case you are incapable of fulfilling the promise. You can then say: ‘I intended to fulfil it, but Allah did not will it.’ Therefore the true promise is only Allah’s promise because He Glorified is He alone possesses all the means for fulfilling His promise and nothing can hinder Him from fulfilling the promise, neither does anyone can resist him.

As long as the promise of Allah is true, then ‘... so do not let the present life deceive you....’ (Fatir: 5). Therefore, do not let life deceive you because people are of different dispositions; some people become deluded when others praise them and some other people become deluded because of their own whims and desires, and a third group of people may be deceived by the temptations of the life of this world as this enable them to live without obligations and duties exactly as what the disbelievers did when they worshipped stones because they were gods without any commandments.

This is why our Lord warns us not to be deceived by the life of this world to ignore what is very much better than it, the Hereafter. It suffices as a disparagement for this worldly life that Allah has called it Ad-dunya (the lowest) whose opposite is a higher life which is the Hereafter. The meaning here is thus that you, people, do not let the life of this world distract you from fulfilling the obligations Allah demands from you, which –if you preserve them, will qualify you to enjoy a higher life.

I have already clarified that the life of this world, in relation to man, is the period of his remaining in it, not the entire duration of the life of this world from the beginning of creation to its end. Your life span in the life of this world, despite how short it is, is a presumed life span. Your blessings in it are according to your activity in it. As for your life span in the Hereafter, it is certain and your blessings in it are according to the Power of Allah. You, whenever you achieve a blessing of the life of this world you feel annoyed that you shall surely leave it; either you will leave it when you die or you will always fear worried of losing it and hence you continue your life sleepless, preoccupied and scared of losing your blessing. As for the Hereafter, the blessings remain forever; they are not cut off or withheld. So, if you are deluded by the life of this world, then consider this comparison.

Thus, when Allah Glorified is He talks about this life, he describes it as dunya (the lower), and when He talks about the Hereafter He says: '...the life in the hereafter is indeed the only [true] life: if they but knew this!' (al-'Ankabut: 64) Al-hayawan (true life) signifies the true everlasting life that is not limited by death or destruction. You must therefore be vigilante and choose the option that is superior and more beneficial for you. For this reason we say to those who depend on Allah and live under His protection and according to His guidance that they know how to make use of their lives; they follow the shortest path, i.e. the path of Allah. Those people are good planners.

In another verse of the Quran, Allah Glorified is He explains to us the snares and temptations of this worldly life as He Glorified is He says: ‘Alluring to man is the enjoyment of worldly desires through women, and children, and heaped-up treasures of gold and silver, and horses of high mark, and cattle, and lands. All this may be enjoyed in the life of this world – but the most beauteous of all goals is with Allah.’ (Al-‘Imran: 14)

Allah's saying: ‘Do not let the Deceiver deceive you about Allah’ (Fatir: 5) refers to the Satan. The act of deceiving and delusion can be from one's own soul, without any external influence, or it could be promoted by the Satan who deceives and tempts people. Therefore, you face two enemies: the life of this world and its enjoyments and the Satan and his prodding and insinuations. Our Lord Glorified is He already warned us about the Satan as He said: ‘And if it should happen that a prompting from Satan stirs you up [to blind anger], seek refuge with Allah: behold, He is all-hearing, all knowing.’ (al-A‘raf: 200) The Meaning here is that man shall be aware of this enemy and be on his guard with him. Satan's animosity towards you is deep-rooted since the time of our father 'Adam and his hatred towards us is crystal clear. You should therefore take up a position against him, and that is why Allah Glorified is He says afterwards:

إِنَّ ٱلشَّيْطَٰنَ لَكُمْ عَدُوٌّ فَٱتَّخِذُوهُ عَدُوًّا ۚ إِنَّمَا يَدْعُوا۟ حِزْبَهُۥ لِيَكُونُوا۟ مِنْ أَصْحَٰبِ ٱلسَّعِيرِ ٦

Satan is your enemy – so treat him as an enemy – and invites his followers only to enter the blazing fire [6]
(The Quran, Fatir: 6)

As long as he is an open enemy to you, then it is not permissible for you to make a truce with him, have peace with him, or obey him because when you obey him, he enjoys his enmity towards you. Therefore, you must take him as an enemy and duly resist him. The weakest of faith is that you do not obey him. If you want to be stronger than Satan is, then seek revenge from him and infuriate him by doing the opposite of what he asks you to do. As he enjoins evil, then you should do that which is good and as he commands you to do that which is bad, be diligent in doing good as if you are mocking at him and teaching him a lesson after which he has nothing to do but to get away from you. This is because, as such, you make use of his enmity to your advantage and benefit from it. This is what infuriates him.

You can use the same principle with any other enemy, whether it is a devil from among humankind or jinn. You are able to make, out of his enmity towards you, something that will spur you for goodness and to love everything that is beautiful. The intelligent person is the one who benefits more from his enemy than from his friend.

How truthful is the description of a poet(1) who once said:

My enemies always do me favours and graces
May the Most Merciful not prevent me from all adversaries?
They look for my mistake and therefore I avoid it
And they compete with me and, as a result, I attain nobility

The true believer is able to benefit from the enmity of his enemy in many ways. He may, for example, work and strive to overcome his enemy instead of being lazy until his enemy attains a superior position or rank. In addition, He avoids vices and evil actions so that he does not give his enemy any opportunity to rejoice at his misfortune etc.

Furthermore, I see that indeed some of the blameworthy qualities of people have aspects of goodness, if only we reflected on them. The miser, for example, is despised by all people, but when you consider this situation from another angle, you find that he is the one who helps the generous man to continue in his generosity. We may see the following example happen in many places: a generous man whose income does not help him to fulfil the requirements of this generosity and its responsibilities, such as magnanimity, spending, giving, and courtesy etc. Every now and then, he becomes forced to sell a piece of his land to spend out from it. Now consider that such a stingy miser is not available to buy the land, and then to whom can the generous man sell his land? It is as if the miser is helping the generous man to continue in his generosity.

(1) These verses of poetry are attributed to Abu Hayyan Al-Andalusi. His full name is Muhammad ibn Yusuf ibn ʿAli. He was born in 654 AH. He heard Hadith in Andalusia, Africa, Alexandria, Cairo, and the Hijaz from about 450 scholars. He was strictly truthful, well-established scholar and of pure faith, free from innovation. He died in Cairo in 745 AH at the age of 90. These two verses of poetry are from a poem which is included in his Diwan (collection of poetry). He lived during the Mamluki era.

If the generous man captivates you with his generosity and you become indebted to him for his favour, then the miser has no favour over you and you are not indebted to him in any way. This is why a poet expressed this meaning saying:

May a miser is rewarded on my behalf a good action
As he did not overburden me

It means that he does not have a favour over me that would make me a slave to his beneficence.

The meaning of '...so treat him as an enemy...' (Fatir: 6) is that you employ all your abilities and talents to instil in yourself the necessary immunity against his evil temptations and whisperings. If you want to increase your power to resist him, then do more good actions that he hates. If he comes to you during the prayer in order to spoil it, then infuriate him by having devotion and humility therein and work on improving it.

Then the verse concludes: '...and invites his followers only to enter the blazing fire.' (Fatir: 6) This verse signifies that the Satan has a group which he is trying to expand and make bigger. This is why Allah says in another Quranic verse: 'Satan (Iblis) has gained mastery over them, and has caused them to remain oblivious of the remembrance of Allah. Such as these are hizb (partisans) of Satan: oh, verily, it is they, the partisans of Satan, who will truly be the losers!' (al-Mujadala: 19) The meaning of hizb is a group that fanatically support an idea and work hard for its realization, in opposition to another group that counter them and strive for the realization of another idea which serves its interests.

The reason why he invites people to his deviant path is to make a large group and, thus, those who go astray from the way of Allah become much more than those who believe in and obey Allah.

As for His saying: '... only to enter the blazing fire' (Fatir: 6), the letter lam stated in the Arabic text is called lam Al-'Aqibah (it is used for showing the consequence). Accordingly, the meaning is that one wants something for a certain reason, but he ends up at a conclusion other than that for which he aspired.

The Arabic word ashab (owners or companions) mentioned in this verse signifies that there is an intimacy between them and the fire; it urgently waits for them exactly as friends are very attached to one another.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ لَهُمْ عَذَابٌ شَدِيدٌ ۖ وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَعَمِلُوا۟
ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ لَهُم مَّغْفِرَةٌ وَأَجْرٌ كَبِيرٌ ﴿٧﴾

Those who disbelieve will be punished severely; those who believe and do good deeds will be forgiven, and richly rewarded [7] (The Quran, Fatir: 7)

After Allah Glorified is He mentioned the party of Satan, he mentions the judgement against him. He decrees that those who disbelieve will be punished severely, and on the contrary, those who believe and do good deeds will be forgiven, and richly rewarded.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

أَفَمَن زُيِّنَ لَهُۥ سُوٓءُ عَمَلِهِۦ فَرَءَاهُ حَسَنًا ۖ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يُضِلُّ مَن يَشَآءُ وَيَهْدِى
مَن يَشَآءُ ۖ فَلَا تَذْهَبْ نَفْسُكَ عَلَيْهِمْ حَسَرَٰتٍ ۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ عَلِيمٌۢ بِمَا يَصْنَعُونَ ﴿٨﴾

What about those whose evil deeds are made alluring to them so that they think they are good? Allah leaves whoever He will to stray and guides whoever He will. [Prophet], do not waste your soul away with regret for them: Allah knows exactly what they do [8] (The Quran, Fatir: 8)

This verse begins with an interrogative style ‘What about those whose evil deeds are made alluring to them so that they think they are good?’ However, the opposite is not mentioned here and the implied meaning is: is this person equal to the person whose evil deeds are not alluring to him? Allah Glorified is He does not mention the answer because it is obvious and well known. The only thing anyone can say is that they are not equal. Amongst people are those who do evil and admit that it is an act of evildoing. On the other hand, there is another category of people who do evil deeds and claim that they are good. This is much greater sin because they commit a crime when they do an evil deed and they commit another crime when they claim that it is good. This is the meaning of: '... are made alluring to them …' (Fatir: 8). This is a distorted way of seeing things and deviation from truth. This is why He Glorified is He says after that: '... Allah leaves whoever He will to stray and guides whoever He will....' (Fatir: 8) Concerning this verse, many people argue: 'If Allah is the One Who guides or misguides people, then why is man taken to account?' If we are to clarify this issue, then we must explain the meaning of 'He guides' and 'He misguides'. The meaning of 'He guides' is: He indicates to someone the path of goodness and guides him to it. The guidance is from Allah to all of mankind. Whoever seeks and follows this guidance arrives at the path of goodness and, hence, Allah aides him and increases him in guidance, as He Glorified is He says: 'just as for those who are [willing to be] guided, He increases their [ability to follow His] guidance and causes them to grow in Allah-consciousness.' (Muhammad: 17)

As for the one who closes his ears, then he does not hear and he is not guided and thus strays from the straight path. Allah helps him as well to achieve his goal and increases him in misguidance. He seals his heart so that it can be for what he wants; faith does not enter his heart and disbelief does not exit from it. These are the people about whom Allah Glorified is He says: 'In their hearts is disease and so Allah lets their disease increase; and grievous suffering awaits them because of their persistent lying.' (al-Baqara: 10) This is why He Glorified is He says also about the people of Thamud: 'And as for [the tribe of] Thamud, We offered them guidance, but they chose blindness in preference to guidance...' (Fussilat: 17). The meaning of '...offered them guidance...' here is that we showed them and guided them to the path of goodness, but they rejected this guidance, opposed Allah, and therefore became misguided. Further, He Glorified is He let them increase in misguidance.

To elucidate this issue, I said before: Imagine that you want to go to some place and you arrive at a fork in the road, but you do not know which way will lead you to your destination. You go to the traffic conductor, ask him which way you should follow, he shows you and therefore you thank him and gratefully acknowledge his favour. When He sees you obeying Him and thanking Him for his favour, he says to you, ‘But in front of you on this path is an obstacle and I will accompany you until you pass it.' This is how Allah Glorified is He treats those who are willing to be guided: ‘just as for those who are [willing to be] guided, He increases their [ability to follow His] guidance and causes them to grow in Allah-consciousness.’ (Muhammad: 17)

Allah Glorified is He addressed His Prophet Muhammad saying: ‘Indeed, [O Muhammad], you do not guide whom you like’ (al-Qasas: 56) and: ‘And indeed, [O Muhammad], you guide to a straight path’ (ash-Shura: 52). In these two verses, Allah affirms that Prophet Muhammad indicates and shows people the way to guidance, but he negated for him the ability to force people to become guided, for the one who really guides is Allah.

Then Allah Glorified is He does not leave the matter there, but goes on to explain who is guided and who is misguided as He says: ‘Indeed, Allah does not guide the disbelieving people.’ (al-Ma‘ida: 67) and He says: ‘... And Allah does not guide the defiantly disobedient people.’ (as-Saff: 5) Does the one who disbelieves in Allah, deviates from His way, spreads corruption in the land and oppresses people, deserve to be guided? In His saying: ‘So do not let yourself perish over them in regret’ (Fatir: 8), Allah tells His Prophet Muhammad, ‘Do not destroy yourself with sorrow because of their lack of faith.’ This meaning is elucidated by Allah Glorified is He saying: ‘Then perhaps you would kill yourself through grief over them, [O Muhammad], if they do not believe in this message, [and] out of sorrow.’ (al-Kahf: 6)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was keen for his people to be guided and he felt immense pain when one of them turned away from the path of faith. This is why He Glorified is He said about His prophet Muhammad: ‘Indeed, there has come to you [O mankind] a messenger from among yourselves: heavily weighs upon him [the thought] that you might suffer [in the life to come]; full of concern for you [is he, and] full of compassion and mercy towards the believers’ (at-Tawba: 128).

Then He Glorified is He says, to console His Messenger Muhammad: ‘...Allah knows exactly what they do.’ (Fatir: 8) This means that no secret action of theirs is hidden from Him and He will inflict on them the punishment they deserve according to the disdain and disbelief that they showed.

After that Allah Glorified is He directs our attention to some of the universal signs that refer to His blessing towards the creation, He says:

وَٱللَّهُ ٱلَّذِىٓ أَرْسَلَ ٱلرِّيَٰحَ فَتُثِيرُ سَحَابًا فَسُقْنَٰهُ إِلَىٰ بَلَدٍ
مَّيِّتٍ فَأَحْيَيْنَا بِهِ ٱلْأَرْضَ بَعْدَ مَوْتِهَا ۚ كَذَٰلِكَ ٱلنُّشُورُ ٩

It is Allah who sends forth the winds; they raise up the clouds; We drive them to a dead land and with them revive the earth after its death: such will be the Resurrection [9]
(The Quran, Fatir: 9)

The meaning of ‘sent forth the winds’ is that He moves them and all goodness in creation is due to the movement of the winds. Have you not seen that when the air is still, man becomes frustrated and his respiration becomes slow? Therefore, one tries to move air around oneself, either by his hand or using a fan. This is because one's respiration is not possible without the moving of air; carbon dioxide being replaced by oxygen. That is why it is said: ‘If air does not pass over you then you pass over it’, i.e. you move it.

A result of the moving of the winds is the raising up of the clouds: ‘...they raise up the clouds...’ (Fatir: 9). The meaning of rising up the clouds is to propel them from their places until they gather together and fall down in the places where Allah destined them to fall down. Accordingly, we know that the movement of the clouds is not automatic, but rather, they follow the movement of the wind. This matter helps us understand Allah's saying: ‘And you see the mountains, thinking them rigid, while they will pass as the passing of clouds’ (an-Naml: 88).

Although we think that they are solid and rigid, the mountains are in reality passing away and moving exactly like the clouds. As the clouds do not pass away by themselves, but rather by the movement of the wind, the mountains too do not pass away by themselves but rather as a result of the movement of the earth; the mountains are fixed upon the earth like pegs and so they move with its movement. This is the ‘... work of Allah, who has ordered all things to perfection...’ (an-Naml: 88)!

Some people mistakenly understand the movement of the earth that is followed by the movement of the mountains, referred to in Allah's saying: ‘...[and they] pass away as clouds pass away...’ (an-Naml: 88) that this will take place in the Hereafter. However, will there be mountains in the Hereafter?! Allah Glorified is He says about them: ‘and the mountains will be like tufts of wool’ (al-Ma’arij: 9). Moreover, how does Allah show us his blessings upon us and His favour towards us with His perfect creation of the movement of the mountains in the Hereafter, where there is no obligation or a room for attracting people's hearts to believe in Allah?!

This all has to do with the movement of the wind. As for its stillness, Allah says: ‘if He so wills, He stills the wind, and then they lie motionless on the sea’s surface...’ (ash-Shura: 33). The word 'they' in this verse refers to the ships that are propelled by the wind. However, one may say: ‘Is there any significance of this verse after the developments that have occurred with regards to ships, as sails have been done away with and replaced by engines that propel the ships without any need for the movement of the air?!’ In response to this we say: ‘Yes indeed, this verse shall have significance till the end of time because modern inventions do not come as a surprise to their Creator. Moreover, who argues that the word Ar-Rih, mentioned in the verse, refers only to air? Rather, it signifies power, regardless of its form. This meaning is referred to in Allah's saying: ‘...and do not [allow yourselves to] be at variance with one another, lest you lose heart and your strength desert you...’ (al-Anfal: 46). The word 'your strength' here signifies all forms of power; power of air, electric power, steam power, or engines, etc.

In this verse, we notice that the verb ‘...He sent...' (Fatir: 9) is in the past tense, but ‘they raise’ is in the present tense. This signifies that the command to the winds is already settled, whereas the propulsion and movement of clouds is being renewed and continued at every moment, and therefore, it is stated in the present form which refers to both the present and the future times.

Stating the verb in the past form may also be because the discourse here is about a matter of the unseen as the speech is in the third person. The discourse then moves from the third person in ‘...sent the wind...’ (Fatir: 9) to the position of first person and says ‘...We drive it...’ (Fatir: 9). It is as if Allah is turning our attention from the reference to the third person, Allah, to His Presence. When you realise that it is Allah doing all this, you become worthy of Allah speaking to you. Another example of turning from third person to first person style is the chapter of al-Fatiha: 'In the Name of Allah, the Most Merciful, the Mercy-Giving [1] All praise is due to Allah alone, the Lord of all the worlds, [2] The Most Merciful, the Mercy-Giving, [3] Lord of the Day of Judgment [4]' (al-Fatiha: 1-4). All of this is in the third person until the speech turns to the second person: 'You alone do we worship; and to You alone do we turn for aid.' (al-Fatiha: 5)

He did not say: 'He alone we worship' so that He could turn you from the third person to the second person; to directly address Your Lord because you have become worthy of addressing Him and of Him addressing you after you have believed in Him as 'the Lord of all the worlds, [2] The Most Merciful, the Mercy-Giving, [3] Lord of the Day of Judgment! [4]' (al-Fatiha: 1-4)

The meaning of '...We drive them to a dead land...' (Fatir: 9) is that Allah drove the cloud or the water, after it descended into the streams and rivers, towards the land that had no vegetation on it and from which could be benefitted. This indicates the power of Allah. Consider, for example, the water of the Nile that irrigates the Sudan and Egypt. From where does it originate? This is evidence that your sustenance comes to you regardless of how far you are from its source.

Allah states that when water does fall down to the earth, the result is that: '… [We, Allah] thereby give life to the earth after it had been lifeless...' (Fatir: 9). This means that He revives it with vegetation. Allah Glorified is He makes the blessings of reviving the dead earth an evidence for another blessing that is relevant to the Hereafter. Allah says: '...even thus shall resurrection be!' (Fatir: 9) This refers to the resurrection in the Day of Judgement and the bringing of the dead back to life from their graves.

So, you, human being, shall take the revival of the dead land, which is something you clearly see with your own eyes, as evidence on the veracity of what is hidden from you, for as water descends upon the dead earth and it comes to life, this is how it will be when the spirit descends upon the human matter buried in the earth to bring it back to life, resurrect it and seep life into it.

I have said previously that when scientists analysed the human body, they found that it is comprised of sixteen elements. The first of these is oxygen and the last is manganese. These themselves are the same elements constituting dust, which is the environment of vegetation.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

مَن كَانَ يُرِيدُ ٱلۡعِزَّةَ فَلِلَّهِ ٱلۡعِزَّةُ جَمِيعًاۚ إِلَيۡهِ يَصۡعَدُ ٱلۡكَلِمُ ٱلطَّيِّبُ وَٱلۡعَمَلُ ٱلصَّٰلِحُ
يَرۡفَعُهُۥۚ وَٱلَّذِينَ يَمۡكُرُونَ ٱلسَّيِّـَٔاتِ لَهُمۡ عَذَابٞ شَدِيدٞۖ وَمَكۡرُ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ هُوَ يَبُورُ ١٠

If anyone desires power, all power belongs to Allah; good words rise up to Him and He lifts up the righteous deed, but a severe torment awaits those who plot evil and their plotting will come to nothing [10] (The Quran, Fatir: 10)

The one who rejects the divine messages is rejecting the idea that a believer should be bound to follow and submit to the commands and injunctions given by another. Although the Messenger sent by Allah did only come to say to us: ‘Do this!’ and ‘Do not do that!’ some people consider their obedience to such commands a threat to their honour and dignity. Such people want to be the highest person who is not commanded or forbidden to do anything by anyone. These are the people about which this verse is talking. They want might and glory for themselves.

Here, Allah Glorified is He presents to those people the correct meaning of might and glory and shows them how foolish are they. He says: ‘If anyone desires might and glory, all Might and Glory belongs to Allah…’ (Fatir: 10). True might and glory means that you should not be overcome or defeated by anyone. This does not exist except when one returns to Allah, for whatever power and might one may acquire in this life, one, by necessity, shall be defeated, and overcome by death. Therefore, if you really desire might and glory that does not cease, then you will find it only with Allah. For this reason, Allah teaches us to be wise, as He says: ‘And rely upon the Ever-Living who does not die…’ (al-Furqan: 58). Allah addresses us in this verse saying: ‘I know you, I know your weakness and I know that you are in need of someone to rely on with regard to matters that are beyond your capacity, so beware of taking refuge in other than Me, for I am the Ever-Lasting One Who does not die. When you rely on a weak person like yourself, perhaps he may die before he fulfils your need. Therefore, whoever wants might and glory then let him turns to Allah; to rely on His Power and Glory. Whoever relies on Allah, He bestows upon him his grandeur and showers him with blessings.

This is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be on him gave us this lesson when he, along with Abu Bakr As-Siddiq, were in the cave. As-Siddiq said: ‘O Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be on him! If one of them looks under his feet, he will see us. Relying on Allah, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be on him replied: ‘O Abu Bakr, what do you think about two people and Allah is the third of them?’(1) The Quran relates what he said: ‘...“do not grieve; verily, Allah is with us.’ (at-Tawba: 40)

The tranquillity that filled the heart of the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be on him was the result of Allah accompanying him and his companion, and this company means that Allah grants them assurance. As Allah Glorified is He is not seen, then whoever is in His Company will also not be seen.

The words izzah (Might and Glory) mentioned in Allah's saying: ‘…all Might and Glory belongs to Allah [alone]...’ (Fatir: 10) includes all kinds of might and glory. Some orientalists raise a misconception concerning this issue, arguing that there is a contradiction in the Quran as here Allah says: ‘…all Might and Glory belongs to Allah [alone]...’ (Fatir: 10) and in another verse, he says: ‘...However, all might and glory belongs to Allah, and [thus] to His Messenger and those who believe [in Allah]...’ (al-Munafiqun: 8).

The fact of the matter is that there is no contradiction between the two verses because all might and glory originally belong to Allah and the might and glory of the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is from his attachment to the Almighty, and the might and glory of the believers is from their attachment to the beloved of the Almighty, i.e. Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Accordingly, who is entitled to might and glory is the one who attaches himself to Allah and the first one who attached himself to Allah was His Messenger Muhammad and then those who believed in him.

(1) Agreed upon Hadith which is related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [4662] and Muslim in his Sahih [3381] on the authority of Abu Bakr As-Siddiq, with another wording communicating the same meaning

Then Allah Glorified is He says: '… Good words rise up to Him...' (Fatir: 10). When we refer to Allah, we always refer to the sky, although He Glorified is He is everywhere and he does not have a fixed place. This is why some people argue: 'If Allah does not have a fixed place, then why did Allah lift our Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to the seventh heaven, when He wanted to speak to Him?' We say that the ascension was to the place where the one who was going to see, i.e. Prophet Muhammad, can see, not the place of the one being seen. He, Prophet Muhammad, cannot see except from this place. For example, if we hear a noise right now coming from outside the mosque(1) and this window that looks down at the noise is high up, what will you do if you want to know what is going on outside? You will have no choice but to climb to that height to see what is happening. In this case, events are as they are, but the place from which one sees is different.

'…Good words…' (Fatir: 10) is a general description that encompasses all speech that guides people to the path of goodness. In another verse, the Quran gives us an example of 'good words'. Allah says: 'Have you not considered how Allah presents an example, [making] a good word like a good tree, whose root is firmly fixed and its branches [high] in the sky? It produces its fruit all the time, by permission of its Lord.' (Ibrahim: 24-25)

Scholars have tried to define what is meant by this (good word). They said: 'The (good word) is 'there is no god but Allah, Glory be to Allah, All Praise is for Allah, and there is no strength except with Allah.' Nevertheless, restricting the meaning of the (good word) to signify these meanings, only narrows down the wide scope of the meaning intended by Allah Glorified is He. It is more correct for us to say that the good word is any speech that leads to goodness.

After Allah has talked about the ascension of good words to Him, he talks about raising good work up as Allah says: '…and He lifts up the righteous deed...' (Fatir: 10). This is because man may speak good words without performing that which they call for or without putting them into action. In the same vein, One may say it out of hypocrisy, like those who say 'there is no god but

(1) This exegesis of the Quran was originally delivered orally in mosques.

Allah' out of hypocrisy and fear of being killed. Although it is said out of hypocrisy, it ascends to Allah and Allah says that he is to be protected by this pronunciation of this word in the life of this world. Nevertheless, one will not be rewarded for it in the Hereafter because one gets reward only when one acts in accordance with that of which he speaks. Then what is more important is to do righteousness, not only to speak well. It is the righteous work that which is raised up and which protects one in this life and the life to come.

Then Allah Glorified is He mentions the opposite: '…but a severe torment awaits those who plot evil and their plotting will come to nothing.' (Fatir: 10) The verb makara (to cunningly devise) is sometimes used as a transitive verb, but followed by a preposition. At some other times, it is used as a transitive verb without a preposition as Allah says: '...cunningly devise evil deeds...' (Fatir: 10). Its usage in this context is like of the usage of the verb amilu (do) in the following verse: 'yet those who attain to faith and do righteous deeds...' (an-Nisa': 122). Accordingly, the meaning of the verse under discussion is 'those who do evil deeds'.

Then, He Glorified is He explains the reward of evil scheming as He says: '... but a severe torment awaits those who plot evil...' (Fatir: 10). This is because when you cunningly devise, as if you want to steal something from Allah and you think that He does not know about you. You ignore that although you do your utmost to secretly devise something, He Glorified is He knows what you conceal. Moreover, when you cunningly devise or plot, you plot to the best of your ability, but your Lord, likewise, devises and plots according to His Ultimate Power and Strength as Allah says: '…thus have they [always] schemed: but Allah brought their scheming to nought – for Allah is above all schemers.' (al-Anfal: 30)

That is why such scheming fails and comes to nothing as He has said: '…and their plotting will come to nothing"' (Fatir: 10). It is an uncultivated plan, like wasteland that does not grow or produce anything. This applies to His saying: 'Have you not considered those who exchanged the favour of Allah for disbelief and settled their people [in] the home of ruin?' (Ibrahim: 28)

The scheming that one thinks that it can benefit him, give him a privilege over his enemy and give him a higher status over him, will come to nought. It will not come to any avail. Moreover, it will turn back on him and drag him to a severe punishment.

In '… but a severe torment awaits those who plot evil …' (Fatir: 10) the letter lam used in the Arabic statement here indicates possession. Accordingly, this means that they deserved punishment, i.e. they deserve it, and it is as if the punishment is covetous over them in the same way that man is covetous over that which he owns. It is a punishment that will stick to them and never be separated from them.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَٱللَّهُ خَلَقَكُم مِّن تُرَابٖ ثُمَّ مِن نُّطۡفَةٖ ثُمَّ جَعَلَكُمۡ أَزۡوَٰجٗاۚ وَمَا تَحۡمِلُ مِنۡ أُنثَىٰ وَلَا تَضَعُ إِلَّا
بِعِلۡمِهِۦۚ وَمَا يُعَمَّرُ مِن مُّعَمَّرٖ وَلَا يُنقَصُ مِنۡ عُمُرِهِۦٓ إِلَّا فِي كِتَٰبٍۚ إِنَّ ذَٰلِكَ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ يَسِيرٞ ﴿١١﴾

It is Allah who created you from dust and later from a drop a Record: all this is easy for Allah [11] (The Quran, Fatir: 11)

This verse discusses the issue of the first creation of man, as vicegerent (khalifah). Creation had phases. The first man, Adam, was created at first from the earth; the dust that is mixed with water and thus it becomes clay. This clay went through numerous stages. If you leave clay until it decays and comes to have a smell, then this is stinking mud and if you leave it until and it becomes dry and sticks together then this is argillaceous earth. Therefore, these are the phases of one substance from which Allah fashioned Adam and then blew into him from His spirit. This is the first creation from which Allah created Eve and from both of them we have procreation and offspring.

In this Quranic chapter, before Allah Glorified is He talks about the creation of man, He has talked about what Allah created for people before they came into existence; He Glorified is He has talked about the creation of the heavens and the earth: 'Praise be to Allah, Creator of the heavens and earth' (Fatir: 1). He then has talked about the angels who descend with the revelation and deliver it to Allah's Messengers who are chosen from amongst human beings and about the water that falls from the sky and causes vegetation to grow.

These things are essentials for the life of man. Allah brought them into existence before he brought man into existence and guaranteed for him the essentials of his material, mental and spiritual life. The material needs include the nourishment of food, drink, and air. The spiritual need is the way of the Quran. Therefore He Glorified is He says: ‘The Most Gracious has imparted this Quran [to man]. He has created man’ (ar-Rahman: 1-3).

Man was created for a purpose, exactly in the same way a manufacturer defines the purpose of the thing he is going to manufacture. For example, the person who made the television or the refrigerator did not make it and then say: ‘Take these items and see how they should be used.’ Instead, they had already determined its purpose and defined its objective before making them. Likewise, before the creation of man, Allah Glorified is He defined the purpose of his creation and, therefore, He sets for him in the Quran the way he should follow. As such, the creation of man came after the development of the way he should follow for attaining happiness.

Speaking of the creation of man, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…It is Allah who created you from dust…’ (Fatir: 11). The speech here comes in the third person style as if He is talking about another one. Allah did not say ‘I created you from dust’. It is as if it is we who say: ‘Allah created man from dust.’ This is because speech comes in three styles: the first-person style ‘I’, the second person style ‘you’ and the third person style ‘he’.

When one talks in the first style and says: ‘I did such and such’, it is conceivable that he could be lying. If he it is stated in the second style, second person, such as: ‘You did this’, it may be said out of hypocrisy towards the one addressed. But when speech comes in the third person style such as: ‘He did such and such', then we cannot be accused of lying as is the first case, nor can we be accused of hypocrisy as in the second case.

When we say: ‘He created such and such’, it means that none other than Him created. As I have said previously that the pronoun of the third person ‘he’ does not apply to other than Allah Glorified is He in this context.

If you review all the verses that discuss the creation in the Glorious Quran, you find that they are stated in the third person style. These verses which discuss this issue are one hundred and seven verses, starting with Allah saying in the chapter of al-Baqara: ‘He it is who has created for you all that is on earth...’ (al-Baqara: 29) and ending with His saying: ‘Say: I seek refuge with the Sustainer of the rising dawn, from the evil of aught that He has created’ (al-Falaq: 1-2).

The issue of creation is stated in the first-person style in seventy-six verses, such as: ‘...We [Allah] have created you all out of a male and a female...’ (al-Hujurat: 13). The same issue is stated in the second person style in four occurrences. They are: ‘... Our Lord, You did not create this aimlessly”’ (Al-‘Imran: 191); His saying: ‘...“you created me from fire and created him from clay”’ (al-A‘raf: 12) and His saying: ‘...“Shall I prostrate myself before one whom You have created out of clay?”’ (al-Isra’: 61)

Upon investigation, we find that the third person style is the most predominant of these the three styles because speech stated in this style is free of claims, free of showing any hypocrisy towards the one addressed, or any fabrication of the part of the speaker himself.

Yet, what is the meaning of creation? Scholars say that creation is the bringing of something into existence from nothing for an underlying reason or for a prior objective, not just bringing something into existence without any purpose. This may be illustrated as follows: if you take a large piece of dry clay and throw it on the ground, it will break up into various pieces of different shapes; a crescent, a star, a human or animal face, etc.

In this case, this is considered bringing something into existence, but it is not considered creation because creation is an intentional process of bringing something into existence for an intended purpose and for certain wisdom. This process is done by the Creator Glorified is He alone.

One may argue: ‘how do you claim this, although Allah Himself affirms that we may create as He Glorified is He says: ‘…So blessed be Allah, the Best of creators’ (al-Mu’minun: 14)? In reply, I say: ‘Indeed the Creator acknowledges the efforts of human beings and He does not deprive them of their rights.

Therefore, Allah affirms that they may also create things, although there is a clear and big difference between the creation of Allah and the creation of others. When man is described as being a creator, then Allah is the best of creators because He Glorified is He creates out of nothing and man creates using materials which already exist. Your creation, human beings, takes one shape and fixed state. As for the creation of Allah, it develops, and life comes into it, i.e. it eats, grows, and reproduces and so forth.

I have told you previously an example of this. When one wants to manufacture glass, one takes the sand that Allah has created and then he processes it in a specific way in order to transform it into glass. This process is in fact a creation as this drinking glass did not exist before and he brought it into existence. However, you have manufactured using materials, the intellect and fire, which all are created by Allah.

Moreover, you are not able to grant this drinking glass the attribute of life so that it can grow up or reproduce, for example. Therefore, although Allah affirms that man may create thing, He Glorified is He is the best of all creators.

In the verse under discussion, Allah Glorified is He says to us: '… It is Allah who created you from dust [turab]...' (Fatir: 11); in another occurrence in the Quran, He says: '...from clay [tin]...' (al-An'am: 2); in a third occurrence, He says: '...of black mud altered [hama' masnun]' (al-Hijr: 26) and, in another occurrence, He says: '...of clay like the potter's [salsal].' (ar-Rahman: 14) Although all these variations, there is no contradiction between these statements because they describe different phases of the same substance, exactly as the example I have given before about the clothes we wear. One may say, 'This garment is made of cotton, from spinning thread or from knitting' as these all are phases that one material goes through until it becomes a piece of cloth.

There is no inconsistency in these phases. The inconsistency can only be if something has one process, and then you make it several processes. This issue is only the phases of one process, like a baby becoming a boy, then a youth, then a man, then an old man and so forth. These are all stages of one man.

The True Lord Glorified is He has decreed in His universe certain things, and He has forbidden the intellect from venturing to think about them. He says: 'I created for you the universe and I have secured for you the essentials of your life. Therefore, if you wish to elevate yourself, then engage your intellect in the matter that Allah has created, and derive what you can from it to the best of your ability. But do not concern yourself with two matters, as there is no benefit in thinking about them; these two matters are the creation of the heavens and the earth and the creation of mankind. This is because Allah Glorified is He says: 'I did not make them witness to the creation of the heavens and the earth or to the creation of themselves, and I would not have taken those who misguide as assistants.' (al-Kahf: 51)

The creation of the heavens and the earth and the creation of man are a matter that not a single one of you witnessed, and there was no assistant with Allah Glorified is He who can inform you as to what happened. But be warned that in the future there will be misguiders who will mislead you regarding this matter, and they will say to you – as the misguiders are saying now – that the heavens and the earth were one burning piece, and then such and such happened to it, or that the origin of man is a monkey that developed into a man. Be wary of these people, and don not take your information except from the one who witnessed it and the one who knows it, and He is the True Lord Glorified is He.

But the True Lord Glorified is He created the intellect as an instrument for thinking, and He made outlets for it through which the truth can be arrived at, and conclusions can be made from what it sees regarding things that it does not see, and it is upon the intellect to reflect on what it sees and use it to judge regarding what it does not see.

We did not witness the process of creation, but we have witnessed the process of death and death is the reverse of creation, in the same way that demolition is the reverse of building. This is a philosophical issue for the intellect and it contains phases. When you want to build a tower, for example, and it consists of ten floors, you begin with the first floor. But if you want to demolish it you begin with the tenth floor. Demolition is the opposite of building, as death is the opposite of life.

Allah has informed us that which we have not witnessed from the process of creation in His Book, and He said: 'I created you from dust that became clay, and then the clay became stinking mud, and then the stinking mud became dry potter's clay that was shaped in the form of a man. Then Allah breathed into it from His spirit and life entered into it.

We have witnessed death and we have seen that its process is the opposite of creation. The first part of death is the spirit leaving from the body. Then the body stiffens until it becomes like dry potter's clay. Then it decays, and its smell changes as if it is stinking mud and then the earth soaks up whatever sap is left so that it can return to dust and morsels that are mixed in with the dust of the earth, and it returns to its mother from which it originally came.

Therefore, take what you have witnessed as an evidence of the veracity of what Allah has told you regarding what you have not witnessed.

The True Lord Glorified is He talks about two phases when He talks about creation. The first is the creation of the first man, Adam peace be upon him from clay, and in order for the multiplying and populating of the earth to take place there is the second phase, in which his spouse was created for him. He said: 'Who did create you from a single soul, and therefrom did make his mate' (al-A'raf: 189).

There is a lot of conjecture regarding this issue, but it is true that He Glorified is He took a piece from Adam peace be upon him and made Eve from it, so it is true that this piece was also made of clay. And from Adam and Eve the descendants were brought forth, and vicegerents were appointed to be on earth.

In order to avoid getting lost in the issue we say, His saying: 'and out of it created its mate,' (an-Nisa': 1) meaning from the same species, the species that He created; as He Glorified is He said: 'Indeed, there has come unto you [O mankind] a messenger from among yourselves' (at-Tawba: 128) meaning: from your species.

But did Allah Glorified is He create this creation, and appoint His vicegerent to be on Earth, but then leave him without providing him with a method by which he could judge the proceedings of his life? No. There has to be a method because the meaning of there being a vicegerent requires that there be a method.

When the True Lord Glorified is He puts His vicegerent in possession of things that are of use to him, he may become deluded by this very possession, so He says to him: 'Remember that you are not the first. You are a vicegerent.' So whenever you bear in mind that you are a vicegerent, you will not transgress, and you are made to transgress if you think that you are the first in the universe. The first in the universe is the one who preserves what is in his possession. He is the one who does not become sick and does not die, and there is no one who is stronger than he is. Therefore, remember that you have been chosen to succeed, and as long as you are chosen to succeed then you must implement the commands of the one who has chosen you to succeed.

After the True Lord Glorified is He talks about the first of creation from dust, and the creation of his wife, he tells us about the general creation from which all human beings have come after Adam and Eve, and by marrying one another creation in completed by means of a drop of sperm. He Glorified is He says: ‘then from a sperm-drop; then He made you mates.’ (Fatir: 11) And in another place, He sets forth the phases of the drop of sperm, and He says: ‘O People, if you should be in doubt about the Resurrection, then [consider that] indeed, We created you from dust, then from a sperm-drop, then from a clinging clot, and then from a lump of flesh, formed and unformed.’ (al-Hajj: 5)

The first marriage was made between the children of Adam peace be upon him and then by inter-distance. The son of this womb marries his sister from another womb, and this is how the inter-distance was dependant on the progeny being increased as far as possible. This issue of inter-distance is what led to the first crime of murder amongst humanity, and it is the issue of Qabeel (Cain) and Habeel (Abel). When the life of this world was expanded and mankind multiplied, it became forbidden to marry one’s sister, or maternal or paternal aunt.

Modern science has affirmed the importance of inter-distance in marriage, and that marriage between close relatives produces children that are weaker than children from parents who are not closely related. This is even the case in agriculture, as they have affirmed that cultivating seeds that are extracted from the same land produces a smaller harvest, and that’ is why in agriculture they have resorted to the process of hybridization.

The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him encouraged this inter-distance, for he said: ‘Go further, and do not weaken.’(1) This means: Do not marry those who are closely related to you because relatives have the same characteristics in their make-up and they have the same blood. As for those who are not related, they have different characteristics and different blood, so the progeny is stronger. This is what an Arab poet understood of this matter when he said(1):

---

(1) What is related in this regard is what has been mentioned by Abu Hamid Al-Ghazali in his (Ihya’) [2/41]: ‘Do not marry close relatives, for indeed the child is born scrawny.’ Al-Hafizh Al-‘Iraqi says in his extraction of the Hadiths in the (Ihya’): ‘Ibn As-Salah says: ‘I did not find a reliable source for it.’ I said: ‘It is only known from a saying of=

Be wary of the one who has many worries
Sons marrying the daughters of the paternal uncle
There is no escape from weakness and illness
By the father, even if you feed it, it will not grow

They had indeed noticed the weakness of progeny in families that married their children to close relatives, and they commended inter-distance. The poet said:

A boy was not born of a close daughter of an uncle
So that he is scrawny and may make the descendants of the relatives scrawny(2)

The other distances himself from his uncle's daughter with regards to marriage, despite his love for her, and he says:

I have gone beyond the uncle's daughter although she is beloved
Fearing that because of me her descendants would be scrawny

Then Allah Glorified is He says: 'And no female conceives nor does she give birth except with His knowledge.' (Fussilat: 47) The process of the female becoming pregnant is done by means of the male and female coming together under the shade of the law and the way of Allah. The scholars have spoken at length on the issue of women being pregnant. Is it her responsibility or the man's? We have recently heard from studies that have taken place that the man is the one who is responsible for the male or female chromosome. As for the woman, she only carries the egg that will become either one or the other.

= ʿUmar may Allah be pleased with him that he said to the people of Saʾib: "You have weakened, so marry distinguished people.'' Related by Ibrahim Al-Harbi in (Gharib Al-Hadith). Ash-Shawkani says in ((Al-Fawaʾid Al-Majmuʿah) p.131): 'It is not traceable in ascending order of narrators back to the Prophet [(marfuʿ)].

(1) These were mentioned by Abu Hayyan At-Tawhidi in his book (Al-Imtaʿ Al-Muʿanisah), and he did not attribute them to anyone. Also see (Muhadarat Al-Adbaʾi), by Ar-Raghib Al-Asfahani.

(2) This verse belongs to An-Nabigha Adh-Dhubyani.

It is amazing that ancient Arab women were aware of what modern science is discovering today, and that they had insight and understanding with regards to this issue. Husbands would get angry with Arab women that only gave birth to daughters, and they would leave and marry someone else so that she could produce a son. The first wife would be abandoned, and she would say the following lines of poetry (1):

Why does the father of Hamza not come to us
Angry because we only give birth to daughters
By Allah, this matter is not in our hands
We are like the earth for the one who plants the seeds
We give them the like of which we are given.

It is amazing that the Bedouins spoke about what modern science is arriving at in the twentieth century, and the True Lord Glorified is He desired to affirm for us a sound disposition that is far removed from passion and may therefore attain the realities of the universe. The correct opinion does not join together with the desire of the ego. This is why they say that the plague of opinion is desire. With regards to this, we have what has been narrated from 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him that the Quran would be revealed in accordance with his opinion, and that is only because of the soundness of his disposition.

Allah says a woman does not: 'give birth except with His knowledge.' (Fussilat: 47) These are the stages that the woman goes through. First of all, she gets married and becomes pregnant. Then she gives birth. These are all stages in a healthy woman. He Glorified is He did not mention what happens when something goes wrong during pregnancy. A mother may get pregnant but then have a miscarriage.

One of the miraculous things that accompanies the process of birth is that the blood that usually comes out during menstruation changes, when the woman becomes pregnant, to nourishment for the embryo, as if this blood is not from her provision but rather from the provision of her child if she is able to get pregnant. If she is not able to get pregnant, it continues to come out without anyone benefitting from it.

(1) These verses are mentioned with a different wording by Ibn ʿAbd Rabihi Al-Andalusi in (Al-ʿAqd Al-Farid), in the chapter on what they say regarding rarities and anecdotes:
Why does the father of Hamza not come to us
Under the shelter of the house in which he keeps us
He is angry that we only give birth to daughters
But we only take what we are given

It is amazing that this blood is sufficient for one embryo, and it is also sufficient for two or three, and even more. We just heard recently of a woman who gave birth to seven; despite that, she was in good health (i.e. her weight did not decrease at all). It is as if the Creator is reminding us not to worry about food and provisions. Look at what he did for you when you when you were in the wombs of your mothers. Each one of you had your provision. He did not overlook it and He did not make a mistake.

The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him spoke the truth when he said: 'The food of one person is enough for two, and the food of two people is enough for three.'(1)

Despite the advancement of science, they are still not able to decisively determine the time of birth, and this exact moment is to remain in the knowledge of Allah Glorified is He. Why? Because we know the duration of the pregnancy, but we do not exactly know when the zygote clings on to the womb. This is why obstetricians always say that the birth will take place between these days and these days.

Therefore, the moment of birth resembles, in terms of its secrecy, the moment of death. No one but Allah knows it. The meaning of 'knows it' is that He knows all the events and phenomena that surround it.

After giving birth the woman becomes both a wet nurse and a dry nurse, and the Creator Glorified is He causes the sustenance of her child to flow from her without taking anything away from her sustenance because Allah continues to provide for her, and something is deficient if it is taken from without any maintenance.

Then He Glorified is He says: 'And no aged person is granted [additional] life nor is his life span lessened but that it is in a register.' (Fatir: 11)

(1) Related by Ahmad in his (Musnad) (2/407) from the Hadith of Abu Hurayra, and related by Muslim in his (Sahih) (2059) in the Book of Drinks, and Ibn Majah in his (Sunnan) (3254) from the Hadith of Jabir ibn ʿAbdullah

This is one of the topics that the orientalists object to because of their ignorance of the Arabic language and its methods. They say: ‘How can one’s life actually be prolonged, for one hundred years, for example, but then his life span is decreased?’ We say that they are excused because they don not know that in the language a pronoun can refer back to the pronoun.

You say, for example: ‘I met so-and-so and I honoured him’. ‘Him’ refers to this so-and-so. You say: ‘I gave charity with a dirham and a half of it.’ Does this mean that you gave charity with one dirham, and then went back a second time and halved it? No. The meaning is that you gave charity with a dirham and half a dirham like it. Sometimes the pronoun refers back to the thing itself, and sometimes it refers back to something like it, as in: ‘I gave charity with a dirham and a half of it’.

Man has an essence and he has attributes. His essence is the body of his creation, and his attributes are the descriptions that happen to the essence. Him having his life prolonged means that he will reach old age, and as such the pronoun refers back to something like the first thing, or part of something like the first thing. The reference of the pronoun in ‘nor is his life span lessened,’ is correct. If someone lives to be one hundred years old then we ca not kill him when he is twenty years old, for example.

Hence, you must return the pronoun back to the essence and not the attribute, and none that is long-lived has his days lengthened; neither his life span is lessened. Longevity of life cannot be affirmed for the essence unless it is by the permission of Allah. The meaning is similar to: ‘I gave charity with a dirham and a half of it’.

The True Lord Glorified is He told us about longevity when he spoke about the Jews: ‘And they claim, “None shall ever enter paradise unless he be a Jew” – or, “a Christian.”’ (al-Baqara: 111) And they say: ‘The fire will most certainly not touch us for more than a limited number of days.’ (al-Baqara: 80)

Allah has refuted them: If you have guaranteed for yourselves the paradise, and no-one is going to take it from you, then desire death which will lead you to it: ‘Say, [O Muhammad], “If the home of the Hereafter with Allah is for you alone and not the [other] people, then wish for death, if you should be truthful.”’ (al-Baqara: 94) Then Allah Glorified is He judges against them:

'But they will never wish for it, ever, because of what their hands have put forth. And Allah is Knowing of the wrongdoers. And you will surely find them the greediest of people for life - [even] more than those who associate others with Allah. One of them wishes that he could be granted life a thousand years, but it would not remove him in the least from the [coming] punishment that he should be granted life. And Allah is seeing of what they do.' (al-Baqara: 95-96)

His saying: 'but that it is in a register' means the Preserved Tablet because everything that happens, every increase, and decrease in our lifetimes and in the periods of pregnancy and childbirth are recorded in the Preserved Tablet.

'Indeed, that for Allah is easy.' Everything that is hard for you to understand is simple and easy for Allah Glorified is He. Have you not seen how Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him called on Allah to grant him a righteous son who would inherit prophethood after him, despite the fact that he was too old in years and his wife was barren? Any progeny that comes at that age is special if the wife is barren, but if it is by Allah's laws then the matter is easy and facilitated.

Read: 'And indeed, I fear the successors after me, and my wife has been barren, so give me from Yourself an heir Who will inherit me and inherit from the family of Ya'qub (Jacob). And make him, my Lord, pleasing [to You]." [He was told], "O Zakaryya, indeed We give you good tidings of a boy whose name will be John. We have not assigned to any before [this] name." He said, "My Lord, how will I have a boy when my wife has been barren and I have reached extreme old age?" [An angel] said, "Thus [it will be]; your Lord says, 'It is easy for Me, for I created you before, while you were nothing.'"' (Maryam: 5-9)

Therefore, do not compare the issue to our capabilities and our human laws because this action is attributed to Allah and not to human beings.

Likewise, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when Pharaoh and his army pursued him until they had surrounded him and tightened their grip on him such that the followers of Musa said: 'Behold, we are to be overtaken' (ash-Shu'ara': 61). And why not are they overtaken, with the sea in front of them and Pharaoh's army behind them? Musa peace be upon him spoke as one who trusts in his Lord and His Unlimited Power: 'He replied: "No, indeed!"' (ash-Shu'ara': 62) He meant: They will not overtake us. He said this because of the sum of trust he had in Allah: 'with me is my Lord; He will guide me.'

(ash-Shu'ara': 62) Then the relief came instantly: ‘Then We inspired to Musa, “Strike with your staff the sea,” and it parted, and each portion was like a great towering mountain.’ (ash-Shu'ara': 63)

Musa peace be upon him saw a dry path splitting the sea, and he and his people crossed until they reached the other side. He wanted to strike the sea another time so that it would return to its fluid state, and prevent Pharaoh from crossing, but His Lord forbade him, as the miracle had not yet been completed and there was still something left. Allah Glorified is He is able to save and destroy with the same thing, and the dry path remained dry so that Pharaoh would be deceived by it. He began to cross it in order to catch up with Musa. When the last of Pharaoh’s army treaded on the path, Allah covered them with water, returned (the sea) to its fluidity and Pharaoh and his army were drowned. This is His Absolute Power that has no limits, and it is not subjected to causes.

Likewise, by reflecting on the issue of creation and multiplication, you find that the mankind has come from a male and a female, but logical and rational distribution in this matter do not prevent Allah’s Power from bringing about creation at any stage. The Creator Glorified is He created Adam peace be upon him without a father and without a mother. He then created Eve from a father but not a mother, and he created ‘Isa peace be upon him from a mother but not a father. Therefore, we say that the matter is easy and simple for Allah, even though you may think it is difficult.

وَمَا يَسۡتَوِى ٱلۡبَحۡرَانِ هَٰذَا عَذۡبٞ فُرَاتٞ سَآئِغٞ شَرَابُهُۥ وَهَٰذَا مِلۡحٌ أُجَاجٞۖ وَمِن
كُلّٖ تَأۡكُلُونَ لَحۡمٗا طَرِيّٗا وَتَسۡتَخۡرِجُونَ حِلۡيَةٗ تَلۡبَسُونَهَاۖ وَتَرَى ٱلۡفُلۡكَ
فِيهِ مَوَاخِرَ لِتَبۡتَغُواْ مِن فَضۡلِهِۦ وَلَعَلَّكُمۡ تَشۡكُرُونَ ١٢

The two bodies of water are not alike – one is palatable, sweet, and pleasant to drink, the other salty and bitter – yet from each you eat fresh fish and extract ornaments to wear, and in each you see the ships ploughing their course so that you may seek Allah’s bounty and be grateful [12] (The Quran, Fatir: 12)

The True Lord Glorified is He wants to make it easy for us to understand this issue rationally and in a value-related sense, so He presents it to us in a palpable, imaginable way: ‘And not alike are the two bodies of water.’ Allah Glorified is He is saying to us: as there are palpable things that are not like other things in terms of their palpability, there are also value-related things that are unlike anything else.

The sea is known; it is the vast expanse composed of salty water, and rivers can also be called Sea in most cases. The river contains fresh water, so they are different and not alike. ‘One is fresh and sweet’ and ‘one is salty and bitter.’ This one is fresh and that one is salty and ‘fresh’ is described as being: ‘sweet, palatable for drinking,’ and passes through the throat easily and comfortably. ‘Salty’ is described as ‘salty and bitter.’

Between the fresh and the salty are some of the wonders of creation, for we find in both of them, for example, fish that we eat, and we don not distinguish between freshwater fish and saltwater fish. This is because Allah has prepared the living being to take his life’s essentials from the water, and leave aside what he does not want. Another example is a tree that you plant. It takes from the earth the necessary elements and discards what it does not need.

In the same soil, you can grow, for example, capsicum tree and sugar cane; both plants are nourished by the same elements and irrigated by the same water, but the food that they each produce is completely different. As He Glorified is He said: ‘And within the land are neighbouring plots and gardens of grapevines and crops and palm trees, [growing] several from a root or otherwise, watered with one water; but We make some of them exceed others in [quality of] fruit.’ (ar-Ra‘d: 4)

This is a natural disposition and characteristic that Allah has made in all living beings; that they only take the nourishment that they need. When the scientists want to make it easier for us to understand the process by which plants are nourished they say: ‘they rely on the particularity of the small hair-like tubes, and the small root hairs absorb the water and the food from the soil; this particularity transmits it to the trunk and the leaves. But they have not realized that the hair-like tubes absorb the water without discrimination and without differentiation from one element to another, and without selecting one substance over another. Thus, it is not the particularity of the small hairs but only the divine and natural characteristic that Allah has placed in living beings.

Natural issues happen to man, as do emotional and mental issues. Legislation has no say regarding emotional issues such as love and hate because man has no control over them. Love whom you will and hate whom you will, but on the condition that love and hatred do not push you beyond being just and toward oppression and transgression, as He Glorified is He said: ‘and do not let the hatred of a people prevent you from being just. Be just; that is nearer to righteousness.’ (al-Ma‘ida: 8)

Legislation also has no say regarding natural issues, as hunger and thirst, for example, are natural impulses that a person knows by himself and from experience. You do not teach your child hunger and thirst. He knows it himself when he feels hungry and when he feels thirsty.

For this reason, it is strange that we hear people calling for boys and girls to be educated in schools about sexual matters, and that they want to have a new subject called ‘sex Education’ that can be taught to children from a young age. We say: Glory be to Allah that He allowed small children to learn natural impulses. Natural impulses are not taught, but man comes to know them at their appropriate time.

It is from the wonders of creation that freshwater does not mix with saltwater, as He Glorified is He said: ‘Between them is a barrier [so] neither of them transgresses.’ (ar-Rahman: 20) This is an evidence of a miracle because we always find that the level of saltwater in the seas and large oceans is less than the level of water in the rivers, and if the opposite were the case the saltwater would cover the rivers and the dry land.

This means that the plants would die and the soil would be ruined. This is why the Creator’s wisdom willed for the level of water in the rivers to be higher, and that (the rivers) would have outlets into the sea so that the surplus water can be disposed of.

The Creator Glorified is He has wisdom behind the freshwater being suitable for drinking, watering plants and quenching thirst. As for saltwater, Allah is preserving it according to its salt content so that it does not spoil or putrefy. This is because the seas and oceans are the storehouses for fresh water and from them the rainwater evaporates which the rivers flow with, and you notice that the level of salt differs according to the nature of a place. For example, you find that water in the Baltic Sea has the lowest salt content because it is an outlet for a number of rivers and it is located in a region where there is a lot of rain. All of this contributes to the low salt content.

As for the Dead Sea, for example, it has the highest salt content of any sea, so much so that fish do not live in it. The reason is that no rivers flow into it, and it is located in a dry region that receives little rain. Thus, a lot of water evaporates from it. As for the remaining water that gathers in the seas and oceans, it has almost the same level of saltiness.

We have already mentioned the wisdom behind the surface area of the saltwater being so vast in the seas and oceans, and we said: the vastness of the surface of the water increases the rate of evaporation so there can be an abundance of suitable freshwater for irrigation and drinking. Our example of this process is that if you leave a glass of water on a desk for a month you would return and find that it is more or less how you left it. However, if you spilled it on the floor of the room it would dry before you leave. Why? Because you have expanded the surface area that is necessary for evaporation.

Allah has expanded the surface of saltwater in order to give us enough rain to continue our lives. Also, saltwater is not mixed when it comes into contact with fresh water because it is the source of its existence. This is why a poet (1) said in praise:

I am guided to His noble gathering and I am

Only guided to it because of what I have gained from His blessings

Like the sea that is rained upon by the clouds and it (the sea) sea has

No preference over them (the clouds) because it is from their water

It is known that water has a recognized cycle in existence. Allah Glorified is He says regarding it: ‘By those [winds] scattering [dust] dispersing. And those [clouds] carrying a load [of water] And those [ships] sailing with ease.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 1-3)

---

(1) These two verses are from the saying of Hibat Allah Al-Astarlabi, and they were mentioned to him by Ibn Maʿsum in his book (Salafat al-ʿAsr fi Mahasin Ash-Shuʿaraʿ bi kuli Misr)

The water that Allah has created in the universe is as it is and it does not increase or decrease. Whatever waterman consumes, for example, exits from him in the form of excrement, urine, sweat etc., and the proportion of water in his body remains at 90% of his weight, and it is absorbed by the earth after he dies. The same can be said of plants and animals, as there is a recognized and witnessed cycle. Life is also a cycle, for when we say to you: ‘Indeed, Allah is able to repeat it’ then take that which you witness as evidence for the veracity of that which is absent.

His saying: ‘And from each,’ is referring to the freshwater and the saltwater. ‘You eat tender meat’ refers to fish which is found in freshwater as it is found in saltwater. It is the same food, and you will not find, for example, that the fish in saltwater is salty like the flathead mullet, for example, or sardines. This is because living things only absorb what they need, and they leave the other elements alone.

The term: ‘tender meat’ is an indication that fish should be eaten whilst fresh and tender. If it becomes dry and its freshness dissipates then do not eat it. Jerked meat has become popular amongst the Arabs, in which they dry the meat of livestock in the sun and then cut it into strips so that is lasts longer. This is one of the ways of preserving meat that is suited to the meat of livestock. As for the meat of fish, it is ruined if is no longer: ‘tender meat.’

Then the True Lord Glorified is He mentions another blessing that comes from the sea: ‘and extract ornaments which you wear.’ Ornaments are what one uses to beautify oneself, such as pearls and corals and other gems that come from the sea. This is ornamentation applies to both men and women, as opposed to the ornamentation of gold which is impermissible for men. Men can ornament themselves with what they want from the sea, as nothing from it has been made impermissible for them. Even the ornamentation of gold for women, for who does a woman ornament herself for? She does so for the husband.

‘And you see the ships ploughing through [them].’ Ships they split the sea on fishing trips and other travels. Here is one of the aspects of the miraculous nature of the Quran. The Quran first of all addresses the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and then it addresses his nation by means of his speech, although the Prophet Muhammad had neither travelled by sea nor seen one.

When the Quran says: ‘And to Him belong the ships [with sails] elevated in the sea like mountains.’ (ar-Rahman: 24) We say: ‘And when did these huge ocean liners appear that can be described in such a manner? They have only appeared in modern times. Before modern times there were only the normal, primitive ships. Who informed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of this current advancement that is taking place in the manufacturing of ships, such that you are made to imagine that it is a city moving on the waves of the sea.’

His saying ‘that you might seek of His bounty’ means: so that you may seek Allah’s provision and His bounty in the movement of the ships, whether it is fishing or travelling. ‘And perhaps you will be grateful.’ The meaning is that perhaps, after all these blessings, you will receive them with gratitude, and this is an indication that only a minority are grateful.

After this, the verses move to address another phenomenon of the universe:

يُولِجُ ٱلَّيۡلَ فِي ٱلنَّهَارِ وَيُولِجُ ٱلنَّهَارَ فِي ٱلَّيۡلِ وَسَخَّرَ ٱلشَّمۡسَ وَٱلۡقَمَرَ
كُلّٞ يَجۡرِي لِأَجَلٖ مُّسَمّٗىۚ ذَٰلِكُمُ ٱللَّهُ رَبُّكُمۡ لَهُ ٱلۡمُلۡكُۚ وَٱلَّذِينَ
تَدۡعُونَ مِن دُونِهِۦ مَا يَمۡلِكُونَ مِن قِطۡمِيرٍ ١٣

He makes the night merge into the day and the day into the night; He has subjected the sun and the moon – each runs for an appointed term. Such is Allah your Lord: all control belongs to Him. Those you invoke beside Him do not even control the skin of a date stone [13] (The Quran, Fatir: 13)

It is true that the day and the night are sometimes of equal length, but the night is longer in the winter and it takes a portion away from the day. The day is longer in the summer and it takes a portion away from the night. In short, an increase in either of them leads to a decrease in the other, and this is the meaning of ‘He causes the night to enter the day, and He causes the day to enter the night.’ The phenomenon of the night being inserted into the day and the day being inserted into the night is the result of the earth being tilted on its axis. The True Lord Glorified is He as He has distributed water and preserved it in the vast seas, has also distributed temperature. If the earth was not tilting on its axis then the sun would burn the side of the earth that was facing it, whilst the other side would freeze.

One of the wonders of creation is that whether man lives at the North Pole or the South Pole his body temperature is 37 degrees, just as it would be if he were living at the equator. This is because the human body has been constructed in such a way so as to maintain its normal temperature regardless of where it is. Indeed, each organ maintains its own normal temperature despite all the organs being in the same body, and the heat spreads and reaches everywhere.

It is amazing that the liver can only carry out its natural function at a temperature of 40 degrees, and the temperature of the eye never goes above 7 degrees. Who prevents the liver's heat from spreading to the rest of the body, and reaching the eye, for example? Indeed, He is the Creator: 'Who created and proportioned. And who destined and [then] guided.' (al-A'la: 2-3)

And His saying: 'and has subjected the sun and the moon,' (Fatir: 13) means that He has subdued them for the benefit of man, and made them serve him without him having any power over them and without any volition from him. The sun and the moon are two signs in the general structure of the universe, and he can do nothing about them. If he was able to, they would be ruined and in chaos. Allah Glorified is He spoke the truth when He said: 'But if the Truth had followed their inclinations, the heavens, and the earth and whoever is in them would have been ruined.' (al-Mu'minun: 71)

If you said: 'Man ruining the earth is something possible, so how would he ruin the heavens?' They said: 'did people not desire for the sky to fall on them by saying: 'Or you make the heaven fall upon us in fragments as you have claimed.' (al-Isra': 92) If the truth followed the desires of these people the life of this world would have been ruined.

This issue was debated by the philosophical school in Germany with another school. It had two contradicting opinions despite being in the same era. Each one of them took their opinion to be an evidence for atheism and stating that there was no God, and this is strange. One of them says: 'There are no irregularities in the world. It functions according to regular laws that are similar to mechanics. If there was a creator, a God for this universe, the creation would be at variance and there would be irregularities in it.' The other says: 'The universe does not function according to a fixed order. There are irregularities in creation, based on the evidence that some people are born handicapped, and if the world had a God, the creation would be one and equal with no variance in it.'

Glory be to Allah! Either way they desire atheism and their natural disposition is to reject the existence of Allah.

We say to these people: 'Come and we will lead you to that which is correct and to a common word. O you who desire irregularity in things as evidence for the existence of an all-powerful god, then you have your evidence. O you who desire stability in things as evidence for the existence of a wise God, then you have your evidence. But they have a distorted way of looking at things. How?

The fixed order that has no irregularity in it is found in the upper universe which functions monotonously and orderly without ever becoming unbalanced. The entire movement of the sun, the moon, the stars, and the other celestial bodies function according to one system that does not become disordered, and now we are able, for example, to determine the moment of a solar eclipse and a lunar eclipse, and we actually witness them at their exact time.

Therefore, if you desire stability as evidence then take it from the higher celestial bodies because they must be established upon a fixed order that has no irregularities in it. If not, the entire universe would be in chaos.

If you desire irregularities then you can see them in the particulars because the irregularities of the particulars do not affect the general order of the universe. That is why you see that this person is in perfect health, this person is blind, this person is one-eyed and so forth. Stability is in its place for wisdom and irregularities are in their place for wisdom. This and that are two evidences for the existence of the God Who is the Creator and the fully Capable.

His saying 'each running [its course] for a specified term,' (Fatir: 13) means that both the sun and the moon are circulating until a known time in which they will be destroyed and come to an end. 'That is Allah, your Lord; to Him belongs sovereignty,' (Fatir: 13) referring to the sensory world that is witnessed by you. As for that which you do not see from the kingdom, then that is the world of the supreme, unseen by you and your senses cannot comprehend it.

This is why, when Abraham peace be upon him was successful in his test, as Allah Glorified is He said: 'And [mention, O Muhammad], when Ibrahim was tried by his Lord with commands and he fulfilled them.’ (al-Baqara: 124) He gave him a great rank and He showed him the ‘world of the supreme’ that had not been seen by anyone else, and He Glorified is He said: ‘And thus did We show Abraham the realm of the heavens and the earth.’ (al-Anʿam: 75) What comes from the world of the witnessed kingdom has its origin in the world of the world of the supreme which we do not comprehend.

The True Lord Glorified is He points out this world in His saying: ‘O you who have believed, if you fear Allah, He will grant you a criterion.’ (al-Anfal: 29) How can this be when we are not conscious of Allah unless we use the standard by which to discern the true from the false, and it is the Quran? So what is the meaning of ‘He will grant you a criterion’? They say: ‘It is that Allah will show you the world of the supreme of the heavens and the earth.

And His saying: ‘And those whom you invoke other than Him do not possess [as much as] the membrane of a date seed’ (Fatir: 15) means that if it was the True Lord who created this and that for you and subjugated the sun and the moon for you, then your claimed, alleged gods ‘do not possess [as much as] the membrane of a date seed’ but what is the membrane of a date seed?

The one who reflects on the Quran will find that it pays a great deal of attention to the date palm, and the first people it addresses are the Arabs; they are the first to be presented with Islam and to be called to it, and the Quran addresses them in a manner that is appropriate to them. It mentions to them examples from their own environment, and the date palm is well known in the Arab environment and it has a rank in our religion, so much so that the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is related to have said: ‘Honour your paternal aunt, the date palm.’(1)

This statement, even if it cannot be authentically traced back to the Messenger of Allah, was not made by someone out of a vacuum. There is no doubt that this statement has an origin and that there is a connection between man and the date palm.

(1) The completion of the Hadith is: “for indeed it was created from the leftover clay of your father Adam.” Related by As-Suyuti in (Ad-Durar Al-Muntathira) (p.107) Hadith (97) who attributed it to Abu Yaʿla and Abu Naʿim from Ibn ʿAbbas, and he said it was weak. Ibn Al-Qayyim says in (Zad Al-Maʿad) (2/194): ‘In its chain of narrations there is some difference of opinion. Also see (Kashf Al-Khafa’ 1/195).

There is an authentic statement from the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in which he said to His companions: 'Indeed there is a tree whose leaves do not fall.'(1)

When 'Abdullah Ibn 'Umar may Allah be pleased with them heard this he said to his father: 'It has occurred to me that it is the date palm because its leaves do not fall and it resembles the believer because everything in it is beneficial.' 'Umar made haste to the prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said: 'O Messenger of Allah, indeed my son 'Abdullah says that the tree you mention is the date palm.' He said: 'He has spoken the truth.' 'Umar said: 'By Allah, I could not be happier if I had red camels,' meaning that he rejoiced because his son(2) had understood what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had said.

The scholars have tried to make it easier for us to understand this reality and establish the link between man and the date palm. Maybe it is the case that it was created from the leftover clay of Adam. They said: 'The pollen of the date palm, through which the pollination takes place, has the same smell as man's semen', and this gives weight to the veracity of whoever said that the (date palm) is our paternal aunt.

There are many wonders and secrets in the date palm being created this way, but it suffices to mention that everything in it is beneficial and nothing from it is discarded. Allah has made it to be used as an example and a lesson. When Allah addressed the Arabs about the crescent, He said: 'And the moon - We have determined for it phases, until it returns [appearing] like the old date stalk.' (Ya Sin: 39)

The date stalk is the cluster that carries the dates when they dry and become curved and bent, so they (Arabs) are made to understand that which is high above by mentioning that which is below and known to them.

(1) Related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (61) and its completion is: "and it is like the Muslim. Tell me what it is.' The people thought about the trees of the desert. 'Abdullah ibn 'Umar may Allah be pleased with them said: 'It occurred to me that it was the date palm but I felt shy.' The people said; 'Tell us what it is O Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him.' He said: 'It is the date palm."

(2) This narration is found in the Sahih of Al-Bukhari (121) and it adds that Ibn 'Umar said: 'I told my father what had occurred to me and he said: "If you had said it, this would have been dearer to me than possessing this or that."

Take the example of the date stone. It is the most insignificant thing there is, except for the fact that Allah Glorified is He ennobled it when He mentioned three parts of it as examples for clarification. He mentioned the husk of the date stone in the verse that we have here: ‘do not possess [as much as] the membrane of a date seed’ and it is the thin membrane that covers the stone. Something similar would be the white substance that is between an egg and its shell.

The tiny spot on the date pit is mentioned in His saying: ‘those will enter paradise and will not be wronged, [even as much as] the speck on a date seed.’ (an-Nisa’: 124) This speck is a small hollow, or a tiny spot on the surface of the stone.

The wick (fatil) is mentioned in His saying: ‘Say, The enjoyment of this world is little, and the Hereafter is better for he who fears Allah. And injustice will not be done to you, [even] as much as a thread [inside a date seed].’ (an-Nisa’: 77) These three parts are used as examples for that which is simple and absolutely tiny.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

إِن تَدۡعُوهُمۡ لَا يَسۡمَعُواْ دُعَآءَكُمۡ وَلَوۡ سَمِعُواْ مَا ٱسۡتَجَابُواْ لَكُمۡۖ
وَيَوۡمَ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِ يَكۡفُرُونَ بِشِرۡكِكُمۡۚ وَلَا يُنَبِّئُكَ مِثۡلُ خَبِيرٖ ﴿١٤﴾

If you call them they cannot hear you; if they could hear, they could not answer you; on the Day of Resurrection they will disown your idolatry. None can inform you [Prophet] like the One who is all aware [14] (The Quran, Fatir: 14)

His saying ‘If you invoke them’ refers to worship because each of them would stand in front of their own idol and invoke it, beseech it and talk to it etc. But this is so ridiculous because this rock does not hear, so invoking it is pointless, let alone being an act of disbelief. The meaning of ‘they do not hear your supplication’ is the deities that do not comprehend or hear, like trees, rocks and so forth.

But why do the disbelievers worship idols, for example, when they know that they are rocks they chiselled with their own hands, and they can see a gust of wind knocking over their object of worship; tossing it on the ground and breaking its arms. Then they need to repair it. It is very strange to see idols worshipped instead of Allah but the reason is the innate disposition towards religion that is found in the human soul.

Every human being, by nature, loves religiosity, and the bane of religiosity is that it has requirements, so what will prevent man from going towards some form of religiosity in order to satisfy this innate disposition, despite the fact that there are no requirements? This is how idols are worshipped, and stars and trees are worshipped and taken as gods.

The meaning of worship is that the worshipper obeys the command of the one he worships, and refrains from that which he has prohibited. If there is no command and no prohibition then the worship is disreputable and false because you cannot worship a deity without a method. If that is not the case, then what has this deity commanded them and what has it forbade them? What has it prepared for the one who worships it? What has it prepared for the one who disbelieves in it?

His saying: ‘and if they heard.’ Supposing that they were worshipping a human being that could hear them ‘they would not respond to you,’ (Fatir: 14) meaning: they would not agree to you worshipping them and they would refuse to be a deity. An example would be those who worship Jesus peace be upon him instead of Allah.

A poet dealt with this matter when he imagined the cave of Thawr being jealous of the cave of Hiraʾ because the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him had made it a place for seclusion and devotion and in it the first revelation came down. When the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him dismounted in the cave of Thawr during his migration, Thawr rejoiced, as now things were even. Hiraʾ was for the mission of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and Thawr was for his migration, which was the start of the call.

A poet(1) says:

How we envied Hiraʾ when you saw

The Trustworthy Spirit coming to you with lights

---

(1) From the poetry of Ash-Sh'arawi, may God be pleased with him.

Thus Hira᾽ and Thawr became equal
With them I shall intercede for the nation of stones
They worshipped us and we are more devoted to Allah
Than those who stand in the early hours of the morning
They took our silence as evidence against us
Take us to them as fuel for the Fire
You harvested ignorance as you harvested it
Against the Son of Mary and the disciples
For the excesses that are its reward and the excesses that are in it
Can be saved by the mercy of the All-Forgiving

The stone itself refuses to be worshipped instead of Allah. It knows the reality of the oneness of Allah, and it falls down in glorification of Him. What does that make you think of human beings?

This is why, when we stand on the Day of Resurrection, amongst the wonders we will see will be the arguments and disputes between the worshipper and the worshipped, the follower and the followed. He says: ‘[And they should consider that] when those who have been followed disassociate themselves from those who followed [them], and they [all] see the punishment, and cut off from them are the ties [of relationship].’ (al-Baqara: 166) He quotes those who have gone astray: ‘And those who disbelieved will [then] say, “Our Lord, show us those who misled us of the jinn and men [so] we may put them under our feet that they will be among the lowest.”’ (Fussilat: 29)

Here He Glorified is He says: ‘And on the Day of Resurrection they will deny your association.’ (Fatir: 14) Those that you have turned to in worship and taken as gods will declare themselves innocent of you and your idolatry. ‘And none can inform you like [one] Acquainted [with all matters].’ That is, the knower of the secrets of things, as if Allah Glorified is He is saying to you: ‘I am informing you of what will happen in the future, so take from My truthfulness regarding what has already happened as proof of My truthfulness regarding what is yet to come. Take from My truthfulness regarding what you see as proof of my truthfulness regarding what you don not see.

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلنَّاسُ أَنتُمُ ٱلۡفُقَرَآءُ إِلَى ٱللَّهِۖ وَٱللَّهُ هُوَ ٱلۡغَنِيُّ ٱلۡحَمِيدُ ﴿١٥﴾
إِن يَشَأۡ يُذۡهِبۡكُمۡ وَيَأۡتِ بِخَلۡقٖ جَدِيدٖ ﴿١٦﴾ وَمَا ذَٰلِكَ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ بِعَزِيزٖ ﴿١٧﴾

People, it is you who stand in need of Allah – Allah needs nothing and is worthy of all praise [15] If He wills, He can do away with you and bring in a new creation [16] That is not difficult for Allah [17] (The Quran, Fatir: 15 - 17)

The address in ‘O mankind!’ is a general address for all of mankind, the believer and the disbeliever, the obedient and the disobedient. ‘you are those in need of Allah, while Allah is the Free of need, the Praiseworthy.’ This is the reality that Allah uses to humiliate arrogant people who refuse to believe in Him and rebel against Allah’s way. It is as if Allah Glorified is He is saying to them: ‘As long as you accustom yourselves to rebellion then rebel against poverty if I impoverish you, or against sickness if it strikes you. Rebel against death when your time has come’ you are therefore subjugated to the Lordship of Allah and you cannot escape from it.

‘While Allah is the Free of need, the Praiseworthy,’ He stands in an absolute self-sufficiency, and the meaning of ‘Praiseworthy’ is the One who is praised much. A wealthy person is not praised unless he gives, and his giving is abundant. The wealthy person who is miserly is not praised but in fact he is rebuked.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He reminds them of another reality that is hidden from them: ‘If He wills, He can do away with you and bring forth a new creation.’ As he said in another place: ‘And if you turn away, He will replace you with another people; then they will not be the likes of you.’ (Muhammad: 38) Recreating mankind or coming with a new creation is something easy for Allah: ‘nor is this difficult for Allah.’ (Fatir: 17) But the True Lord Glorified is He does want to come with a creation that is obedient, and that believes in Him even though they are able to disbelieve and they have absolute choice. This choice is a point of greatness in Allah’s religion.

Bringing about a new creation is something that is easy and effortless for Allah; Glorified is He because He does not create according to a procedure. He just creates with ‘“Be!” and it is’. This is from Allah Glorified is He and it does not take time.

If you wanted to reflect deeply into the meaning of His statement: ‘His command is only when He intends a thing that He says to it, “Be,” and it is,” (Ya Sin: 82) you will find that a thing in reality is in fact present, but in the world of the unseen and the command (‘Be!’ and it is) it is for Him to make it manifest to us in the material world. This is why, when a knowledgeable person was asked, he said: ‘He reveals some things and He hides other things.’

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَلَا تَزِرُ وَازِرَةٌ وِزْرَ أُخْرَىٰ ۚ وَإِن تَدْعُ مُثْقَلَةٌ إِلَىٰ حِمْلِهَا لَا يُحْمَلْ مِنْهُ شَيْءٌ وَلَوْ
كَانَ ذَا قُرْبَىٰٓ ۗ إِنَّمَا تُنذِرُ ٱلَّذِينَ يَخْشَوْنَ رَبَّهُم بِٱلْغَيْبِ وَأَقَامُوا۟ ٱلصَّلَوٰةَ ۚ
وَمَن تَزَكَّىٰ فَإِنَّمَا يَتَزَكَّىٰ لِنَفْسِهِۦ ۚ وَإِلَى ٱللَّهِ ٱلْمَصِيرُ ﴿١٨﴾

No burdened soul will bear the burden of another: even if a heavily laden soul should cry for help, none of its load will be carried, not even by a close relative. But you [Prophet] can only warn those who fear their Lord, though they cannot see Him, and keep up the prayer – whoever purifies himself does so for his own benefit — everything returns to Allah [18]
(The Quran, Fatir: 18)

The meaning of ‘And no bearer of burdens will bear the burden of another’ is that no soul shall carry the sins of another soul. This is because it is weighed down with its own burden. The burden is a heavy load that does not manifest itself, and we have His saying regarding the matter of revelation: ‘And We removed from you your burden. Which had weighed upon your back’ (ash-Sharh: 2-3) which means that the meeting between the angelic realm and the human realm tired you.

This is why the Prophet’s forehead used to sweat after meeting Angel Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him. He said by way of illustrating this meeting: ‘He pressed me until I could no longer bear it,’(1) and he returned to his family saying: ‘Wrap me up! Wrap me up! Cover me! Cover me!’ Despite this, during cessation of the divine revelation, he missed it and longed for it to return because he had tasted its sweetness. The sweetness of something makes you forget whatever difficulty you have had to endure in order to achieve it.

(1) It was narrated in a long Hadith by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (vol. 3) in the Book of Bid’ Al-Wahy (Beginning of Revelation) on the authority of `Aisha Allah be pleased with her.

The meaning of no soul taking on the burdens and sins of another soul has been explained to us by the True Lord in His saying: ‘On a Day when everyone will [want to] flee from his brother, and from his mother and father, and from his spouse and his children; on that Day, to every one of them will his own state be of sufficient concern.’ (‘Abasa: 34-37) Everyone shall be wholly absorbed in their own concerns, confined within their own actions. There is no time for courtesy. The father will say to his son: ‘My dear son! My burden is heavy. Relieve me of some of it.’ And the son will say: ‘my burden is enough, O father.’

It is likewise here: ‘And no bearer of burdens will bear the burden of another...’ (Fatir: 18). A soul weighed down with misdeeds will ask another soul to carry some of its sins, but this is impossible: ‘...nothing of it will be carried, even if he should be a close relative...’ (Fatir: 18). Even if this plea were to be made to the people closest to this soul, they would not answer and they would not carry anything. How can a burdened soul carry the burden of another soul when it is preoccupied with its own load?

Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He refutes the assertion of the disbelievers that they would carry the misdeeds of their followers. He the Exalted says: ‘And those who disbelieve say to those who believe, “Follow our way, and we will carry your sins.” But they will not carry anything of their sins. Indeed, they are liars. But they will surely carry their [own] burdens and [other] burdens along with their burdens, and they will surely be questioned on the Day of Resurrection about what they used to invent.’ (al-’Ankabut: 12-13) This issue is clear. Every soul (on that Day) shall be engrossed in its own concerns: ‘[On the Day of Judgment] every soul is held in pledge for its deeds.’ (al-Muddaththir: 38) the human in the life of this world is bound either by a family relationship that entails obligation, or by acquaintances and friends, or by a source of assistance that he seeks help from if he does not have any relatives or friends. But on the Day of Resurrection all these bonds shall be broken because the situation on that day will not allow for any courtesies and sacrifices.

When the Mother of the Believers, `Aishah Allah be pleased with her heard our Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him telling people about the Day of Resurrection and warning how the sun would draw close to the heads, and the people would be standing naked, she became upset and asked the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him: ‘How can the people be standing naked, looking at one another?’ The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him responded to her by saying that every person would be too engrossed in his own affairs, and the situation on that Day would be too grave to allow any looking at the nakedness of others.(1)

Then Allah says addressing His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘…You can only warn those who fear their Lord unseen...’ (Fatir: 18), meaning: Your warning them, O Muhammad, and your admonishing them will only benefit those who fear their Lord although they cannot see Him and He is beyond their perception. As for the others, they have oppressed their own souls by depriving them from the abundant goodness that Allah has intended for them. They have wronged their own souls when they allowed the life of this world to delude them with its fleeting joys and to distract them from the eternal bliss of the Hereafter.

The Arabic word indhar means an early warning of evil to be able to protect oneself from it. The opportunity is favourable before it suddenly attacks. For example, when you want to encourage your child to study and to warn him about carelessness that will lead to failure, you do not say this to him the night before the exam. You only do so when there is enough time for him to put things in order, and rectify whatever carelessness or laziness he has.

Warning and evoking fear are of no use unless it is with someone who believes in that which you are telling him to fear and be in awe of. When Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was warning about the punishment of the Hereafter, such warnings only benefited those who believed in Allah and the Resurrection.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (vol. 2, p. 53) on the authority of `A’ishah Allah be pleased with her that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘You will be assembled on the Day of Resurrection barefooted, naked, and uncircumcised.’ (`Aisha) said, ‘O Messenger of Allah, will the men and women look at one another?’ He replied, ‘O `Aisha, the situation will be too hard for them to pay attention to that.’

The meaning of khashya in '…those who fear their Lord unseen...' (Fatir: 18) is reverential fear accompanied with love, not antipathy. For example, you fear the aggression of a tyrant or an oppressor; you fear him reluctantly and with aversion. But your fear of Allah is a kind of fear emanating from awe and love. That is the reason why this fear is accompanied by hope and desire for His Mercy. You are travelling the journey of your life on two wings: fear of punishment and hope for mercy.

A human should not focus on the action in and of itself, but rather look at both the action and the receiver of that action. The action may be one and the same but has different receivers. For example, when the Quran was heard by a group of men (1) who were with Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Allah described their response in these words: 'And among them, [O Muhammad], are those who listen to you, until when they depart from you, they say to those who were given knowledge, "What has he said just now?" Those are the ones of whom Allah has sealed over their hearts and who have followed their [own] desires.' (Muhammad: 16)

But another person(2) who heard the Quran reacted with a different response; he said: 'By Allah, indeed it has sweetness and there is grace upon it. The highest part of it is fruitful and the lowest part of it is gushing forth with bounty. It is highest, nothing can be above it.

'Umar's heart softened and opened up to embrace Islam when he heard the Quran being recited. The Quran is one, but there is a difference between the one who hears it reluctantly and so shuts himself off from its guidance;

(1) That is, the hypocrites. It was narrated by As-Suyuti in Asbab An-Nuzul (p.154) and Ibn Kathir in his Tafsir (vol. 4, p. 177).

(2) The man in question was Al-Walid ibn Al-Mughirah. A group of the Quraysh had gathered with him to agree on what to say about the Quran. They wanted to settle on one opinion so that they would not voice different opinions regarding it in front of the people who would come to them during the Hajj season. One of them said: 'Shall we say he is a soothsayer?' Al-Walid said: 'He is not a soothsayer. I have seen soothsayers. He does not have the tone or rhymed prose of a soothsayer.' Another one of them said: 'We will say he is a madman.' Al-Walid said: 'He is not a madman. We have seen madness and know what it is like - it does not throttle him, engage him, or whisper to him.' Another one of them said: 'So we will say he is a poet.' Al-Walid said: 'He is not a poet. We know poetry in all its forms; its meters [rajaz and hazaj], rhymes and rhythms, and it is not poetry.' Then he said: 'By Allah, the speech he says is very sweet; the first part is fruitful and the last part is abundant. [Narrated by Ibn Hisham in As-Sirah An-Nabawiyyah, vol. 1. pp. 281-282] and the one who hears it with a heedful heart open to receive the spiritual radiance and revelation contained in it.

Have you not seen that iron will respond to you if you strike it while it is hot? It becomes like dough in your hands. If you strike it while it is cold, it will not interact with you. Likewise, we say, as an example, that on a cold day you blow into your hands so that you can feel the warmth. You also blow into a cup of tea to cool it down. How can one action combine opposite purposes? We say that although the actor is one, the receiver of the action is different.

Likewise, Allah's Warning was the same to all, but it was received with humility and desire for guidance by one group of people, so they believed; and it was received with stubbornness and persistence in error by another group of people, so they benefited nothing from it and obtained no fruit at all.

Allah's saying: '…those who fear their Lord unseen...' (Fatir: 18) indicates that faith within the souls of these people has reached a perfect level at which the seen and the unseen are viewed as equal. This is exemplified by what `Ali Allah be pleased with him said: 'Even if the veil were lifted off from me, it would not increase my certainty.'

Also, when our Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked Abu Dhar Allah be pleased with him 'How are you this morning, O Abu Dhar?' He said: 'A true believer.' He said: 'Indeed, every truth has a reality, so what is the reality of your belief?' He replied: 'My soul has lost interest in this world so much that its gold and mud have become of the same value for me. And it is as if I can see the people of Paradise enjoying its bounties and the people of the Fire being punished.' The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said to him: 'You have known, so hold fast.'(1)

Then the True Lord the Exalted mentions another attribute of those who respond to the warning of the Messenger of Allah Glorified is He and are benefited by it: '…and have established prayer…' (Fatir: 18). For they have a fear of Allah; a fear that makes them have the same level of faith whether they see

(1) Narrated by Al-Haythami in Majma' Az-Zawa'id (vol. 1, p. 57) and he attributed it to At-Tabarani in his book Al-Mu`jam Al-Kabir based on the Hadith of Al-Harith ibn Malik Al-Ansari, and not Abu Dhar. Ibn Hajar Al-`Asqalani attributed the Hadith to Ibn Mubarak in Az-Zuhd, in his book: Al-Isaba Fi Tamyiz As-Sahaba (Accuracy in Distinguishing the Companions)'

Allah or not. They also establish prayer. They perform it in the most perfect manner. Prayer (Salat), as we have mentioned, is the one act of worship that every accountable has no excuse for omitting. There may be certain circumstances that excuse you from obligatory charity (zakat) or from fasting (sawm) or from pilgrimage to Mecca (Hajj) so that all that is left is the testimony that there is no god but Allah and Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the Messenger of Allah. It is enough for you to say it, even if it is only for one time.

As for the prayer, it is the one act of worship that is practiced every day throughout the life of the Muslim because the prayer, in essence, is a constant devotion to Allah the Exalted. Your Lord is inviting you to meet Him five times each day and night. He is calling you so that the created comes before its Creator. What do you think of a made thing being shown to its maker five times in the day and night? Can any damage occur to it after this?

On the other hand, if you want to meet an important official in the life of this world, you have to go through barriers, gates, security guards, appointments and strict procedures. You do not have control over any of the elements of this meeting. Rather, the time, the topic, and even what you should say are set for you. You ask permission at the beginning of this meeting and you do not decide when to leave.

Your meeting with your Lord is totally different. You control all the elements of the meeting. You begin when you want to and you finish when you want to. You can talk privately to your Lord about whatever you desire. You let Him know your complaints. You present to Him your needs, and He hears and responds.

After the True Lord the Glorious and Exalted mentions this ongoing worship, He confirms the following reality: ‘and whoever purifies himself only purifies himself for [the benefit of] his soul’ (Fatir: 18) which means that your worship is for your own good. Allah the Most High does not benefit in the least from it. He does not benefit by the obedience of those who obey Him, nor is He harmed by the disobedience of those who disobey Him.

He Glorified is He is absolutely Self-Sufficient and in no way dependent on or in need of any of His creatures. Our worshipping of Allah does not add a new attribute of perfection to His already Perfect Nature. Because with all the attributes of perfection eternally present in Him, He created us; and with all the attributes of perfection eternally present in Him, He commissioned us.

Therefore, the Qudsi Hadith says: ‘O My slaves, were the first of you and the last of you, the human of you and the jinn of you, those of you who are present and those of you who are absent had the heart of the most pious person among you, this would not increase My Kingdom in anything. And were the first of you and the last of you, the human of you and the jinn of you, those of you who are present and those of you who are absent had the heart of the most wicked person among you, this would not decrease My Kingdom in anything. That is because I am the Magnanimous, the Glorious, and the All-Rich (the Independent). My Giving is speech and My Punishment is speech. My only Command for something if I want it to be is that I say ‘Be’ and it is.’(1)

We are Allah’s workmanship, and we have not seen a craftsman who demolishes or spoils his handiwork. Rather, he repairs and takes care of it. Therefore, if you are ever afflicted with ruin or suffering, know that in the end it is for you benefit.

‘…And to Allah is the [final] destination’ (Fatir: 18) means the final return of all and the final destination of all on the Day of Resurrection is to Allah so that He can arbitrate between adversaries, and everyone gets what they deserve. So whoever has escaped punishment in the life of this world, there is a final destination to which he must return.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَمَا يَسۡتَوِي ٱلۡأَعۡمَىٰ وَٱلۡبَصِيرُ ﴿١٩﴾ وَلَا ٱلظُّلُمَٰتُ وَلَا ٱلنُّورُ ﴿٢٠﴾ وَلَا ٱلظِّلُّ وَلَا ٱلۡحَرُورُ ﴿٢١﴾
وَمَا يَسۡتَوِي ٱلۡأَحۡيَآءُ وَلَا ٱلۡأَمۡوَٰتُۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يُسۡمِعُ مَن يَشَآءُۖ وَمَآ أَنتَ بِمُسۡمِعٖ مَّن فِي ٱلۡقُبُورِ ﴿٢٢﴾

The blind and the seeing are not alike [19] nor are darkness and light [20] Shade and heat are not alike [21] nor are the living and the dead. Allah makes anyone He wills hear [His message]: you cannot make those in their graves hear [22] (The Quran, Fatir: 19 - 22)

These are realities that the True Lord the Exalted has established; two mutually contradictory things are not equal. The blind person does not know the locations of things while he is moving, but a seeing person can. The seeing person can watch the locations of things and avoid danger. As for the blind person, he must have a companion who volunteers, as a friend, to help him navigate his surroundings and make up by his healthy eyes for the absence of his sight. This is the reason why we say: ‘If the blind person gives blindness its right, he begins to see. How? Because he is not too arrogant to seek help from someone who can see, and when he calls on someone to hold his hand, all eyes around him compete to help him. But if he is arrogant, he will trip and fall on his face very quickly.

(1) Narrated by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (2495) on the authority of Abu Dhar Allah be pleased with him. He classed the Hadith as hasan (good authenticity). It was also narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (vol. 5, pp. 77, 154) and Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (4257).

Blindness and sight are sensations that clarify the abstract, for what is meant is that the ignorant and the knowledgeable are not equal. The movement of life is divided into a material movement that comes and goes, grows and declines etc., and a moral, immaterial movement, such as spiritualties and high moralities, which include faith, truthfulness, fidelity, justice and mercy, etc.

If it is the case that material, physical movement requires a sensory light to guide you so that you do not collide into something stronger than you, which could break you, or something weaker than you, in which case you would break it. The same applies to immaterial, spiritual movement. It also needs a moral light that guides your steps so that you do not go astray. This moral light is the law and way that Allah Glorified is He describes saying: ‘Indeed, there has come to you from Allah a light and a plain Book (this Quran) wherewith Allah guides all those who seek His Good Pleasure to ways of peace, and He brings them out of darkness by His Will unto light and guides them to a Straight Way.’ (al-Ma‘ida: 15-16)

Just as the sun is the physical light, the Quran is the spiritual light; and, therefore, we say concerning Allah’s saying: ‘Allah is the Light of the heavens and the earth...’ (an-Nur: 35) that it means: He irradiates them with both kinds of light.

The True Lord Glorified is He has already mentioned to us the contrary nature of freshwater and saltwater. Regarding them, He says: ‘and the two seas (kinds of water) are not alike, this fresh sweet, and pleasant to drink, and that salty and bitter...’ (Fatir: 12). Yes, they are not equal; but rather, the relation between them is that of contrast, like the night and the day, not contradiction like the blind and the seeing. The evidence is that Allah the Most High has combined them together in one statement: '...And from them both you eat fresh tender meat (fish), and derive the ornaments that you wear...' (Fatir: 12). Contrasts are different, as each one of them has a task to perform; so they are mutually supportive and not mutually opposed.

After the True Lord Glorified is He states that the blind and the seeing are not equal, He says: '…nor are (alike) the darknesses and the light…' (Fatir: 20) because light is the source of seeing, and even the one endowed with sight cannot see anything in darkness.

This is with respect to physical blindness and sight. As for values and morals, they have another standard. This is why Allah the Glorious and Exalted says: '…verily, it is not the eyes that grow blind, but it is the hearts which are in the breasts that grow blind.' (al-Hajj: 46) So you can have a seeing person who is blind of insight. The one who is blind to morals is the one who is ignorant of the law that guides him to the sphere of the truth in all values. The seeing person is the one who knows these principles.

When you consider the style of these two glorious verses, you find in them the powerful features of the inimitability of Allah's speech. The first is: 'Not alike are the blind and the seeing…' (Fatir: 19) where the conjunction waw al-`atf (and) connects the two nouns. As for the part saying: '…nor are (alike) the darknesses and the light…' (Fatir: 20), the negative particle la (translated as nor) is used which emphasizes the lack of equality. The True Lord Glorified is He did not express it in the same way as the first, using ma-yastawi (not alike or equal). Why? Scholars opined that blindness and sight are two attributes that may both exist in one person. As someone may be blind today and see tomorrow or someone may be ignorant and then learn, or be a disbeliever and then believe. So the two attributes apply to him. Therefore, the meaning of the lack of equality is not emphasised. As for the darkness and light, they are opposites and mutually exclusive.

Likewise, we notice the precision of the Quranic diction; indeed because the Speaker is the True Lord Himself. He says: '…nor are (alike) the darknesses and the light…' (Fatir: 20). The darkness here is stated in the plural (zhulumat), whereas light is in the singular because erroneous beliefs are manifold; some worship the stars, some worship idols, some worship the angels etc. But the light is one, which is Allah's Law as revealed in His Book.

Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him wanted to teach his Companions this lesson, so he drew before them a straight line, and around it several twisting lines, and then he read: 'And verily, this is my Straight Path, so follow it, and follow not (other) paths, for they will separate you away from His Path.' (al-An'am: 153)

Then He the Exalted says: '…nor are (alike) the shade and the sun's heat…' (Fatir: 21) and these two are also opposites and mutually exclusive. Likewise '…nor are (alike) the living and the dead...' (Fatir: 22). We notice here that the True Lord Glorified is He has again mentioned the negation of the verb '...nor are alike...' (Fatir: 22) to emphasize the lack of equality between the living and the dead

Likewise, Allah has mentioned the negative particle la (translated as nor) which indicates emphasis because 'the living' refers, in this context, to the true believers, who deserve eternal and everlasting life continuous with their transient worldly life. As for the dead, they are the disbelievers who have rejected Allah's way. We can also say that the living are those who have known that true life is to live according to their Lord's Way, and this will lead them to the true and everlasting life of which Allah the Most High says: 'The life of this world is merely an amusement and a diversion; the true life is in the Hereafter, if only they knew.' (al-'Ankabut: 64)

This is the life that is meant in Allah's saying: 'O you who have believed, respond to Allah and to the Messenger when he calls you to that which gives you life.' (al-Anfal: 24) How can this be addressing them if they are actually alive? The meaning, therefore, is that they will be given true life that does not end in death, and without losing any of its gifts.

Also pertinent to this subject is Allah's saying: 'Is he who was dead and We gave him life and set for him a light (of Belief) whereby he can walk among people, like him who is in the darkness from which he can never come out?...' (al-An'am: 122)

One of the meanings that we can understand from the lack of parity between the living and the dead is that Allah has created the living being and provided it with physical apparatuses, such as an intellect, nerves, muscles, ears, eyes etc. Each of these organs has significance and a function. It is the duty of the living being to use these blessings in a way that makes them a means for obtaining other blessings. A human must realize that he is on the journey of his life and he will most certainly die. But his Lord Glorified is He has obscured from him his appointed time of death and that amounts to disclosure in itself, so that it can remain as a reminder to him throughout his life and he can expect it at every moment. Your lifetime is being counted down, and the arrow of death has already been fired in your direction. How long you have to live depend on how long it takes to reach you.

After the True Lord the Glorious and Exalted talks about the state of being accountable, He says that the one who is blind and ignorant of the principles of his religion is not like the one who sees and has knowledge of them, and the light of faith and guidance is not equal to the darkness of misguidance. He the Most High talks about the final outcome, He says: '…nor are alike the shade and the sun's heat…' (Fatir: 21). This shade is an allusion to the bliss of the Paradise. In another place in the Quran, He says: '…We (Allah) shall admit them to shades wide and ever deepening (Paradise).' (an-Nisa': 57) The word al-harur (translated as the intense heat of the sun) is an allusion to torture in Hell and the severity of its heat.

Then Allah the Exalted says to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in consolation: '...verily, Allah makes whom He will hear, but you cannot make hear those who are in graves.' (Fatir: 22) The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him confronted disbelief and ignorance from his people, and his call was to bring them out of blindness and ignorance to that which would enlighten their understandings, and take them out of the darkness of misguidance into the light of faith.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was very keen for his people to be guided, so much so that he almost destroyed himself in the course of calling them. Therefore, His Lord addressed him, saying: 'Then perhaps you would kill yourself through grief over them, [O Muhammad], if they do not believe in this message, [and] out of sorrow.' (al-Kahf: 6)

Likewise here, Allah addresses him, saying: '...verily, Allah makes whom He will hear...' (Fatir: 22), That is, attentive hearing of guidance and acceptance of it; otherwise, they all hear. There is receptive and unreceptive hearing of Allah's Word. There are those who respond, believe, and are affected by Allah's Speech; and there are also those who hear and then reject and turn away from what they have heard. This is the reason why Allah says about them: 'Had Allah known of any good in them, He would indeed have made them listen, and even if He had made them listen, they would but have turned away, averse (to the truth).' (al-Anfal: 23)

Therefore, O Muhammad, you have done what you have been commanded to do regarding them, and you have called them to guidance. You have given them gentle guidance, and also straightforward admonition, full of warning and threatening: '...but you cannot make hear those who are in graves' (Fatir: 22) because they refused to listen, Allah has likened them to the dead. Such being the case, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did, indeed, address the dead disbelievers at the well of Badr (where their corpses were thrown). He stood at it and called them by their names: 'O `Utbah bin Rabi'a! O Shaybah ibn Rabi'a! O Abu Jahl! Have you found what your Lord has promised you to be true? Indeed, we have found what our Lord has promised us to be true.'

When 'Umar Allah be pleased with him heard this, he said: 'Are you talking to people who have rotted?' He peace and blessings be upon him replied: 'By Allah, you do not hear what I am saying better than they, but they cannot reply.'(1) The meaning is that you cannot make them hear in a way that makes them accept guidance, just as you cannot make those in the graves hear because the time for hearing and accepting guidance ends with death.

But if Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not able to make those in the graves hear what, then, was his mission? Allah the Exalted afterwards says:

(1) Narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (2874) from the Hadith of Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him. According to this Hadith, `Umar Allah be pleased with him said: 'O Messenger of Allah, how can they hear and respond to you when they are rotting corpses?' He peace and blessings be upon him said: 'By the One in Whose Hand is my soul, you do not hear what I say any better than they do, but they cannot reply.' He then commanded that they be dragged away and thrown into the well of Badr.

إِنۡ أَنتَ إِلَّا نَذِيرٌ ﴿٢٣﴾

You are only here to warn them [23]
(The Quran, Fatir: 23)

The meaning here is: You are no more than a warner; that is, you warn people against sin and subsequent punishment. As if Allah the Exalted wanted to makes things easy for His Messenger so He specified to him his only mission. It was not for him to go beyond it and bring hardship upon himself to the extent of almost destroying himself. If Allah wanted all mankind to be believers, they would have come obediently and submissively, like all other creatures. ‘Perhaps, [O Muhammad], you would kill yourself with grief that they will not be believers. If We willed, We could send down to them from the heaven a sign for which their necks would remain humbled.’ (ash-Shu'ara': 3-4)

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

إِنَّآ أَرۡسَلۡنَٰكَ بِٱلۡحَقِّ بَشِيرٗا وَنَذِيرٗاۚ وَإِن مِّنۡ أُمَّةٍ إِلَّا خَلَا فِيهَا نَذِيرٞ ﴿٢٤﴾

We have sent you with the Truth as a bearer of good news and warning – every community has been sent a warner [24] (The Quran, Fatir: 24)

The truth is that which is firmly established and does not change. Allah Glorified is He gives us a perceptible example to clarify the difference between truth and falsehood, saying: ‘He sends water from the sky that fills riverbed to overflowing, each according to its measure. The stream carries on its surface a growing layer of froth, like the froth that appears when people melt metals in the fire to make ornaments and tools: in this way Allah illustrates truth and falsehood— the froth disappears, but what is of benefit to mankind remains in the earth— this is how Allah makes illustrations.’ (ar-Ra‘d: 17)

We have already explained the relationship between truth and falsehood in a way that is relevant to our time, and we said: Right is right. Even if falsehood takes on the appearance of truth for some time, it is like froth that is quickly blown away by the wind to reveal the truth underneath and the obvious reality.

Allah’s saying to His Prophet: ‘Indeed, We have sent you with the truth…’ (Fatir: 24) is an indication that he is the Last of all the Messengers and Prophets after whom there will be no prophet. No part of the guidance he brought will be changed. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has come with the firmly established, unalterable truth. No one can come and amend anything after him. The bane of humanity now is that they rule their era and the developing circumstances of reign and authority based on infringements against Islamic law. So when we come across a law infringing on the principles of Islam, we hear them say that it is an inevitable evolution. These people are the advocates of modernizing the religion, meaning the subjugation of the religion to suit the age.

This means that the changing times are the legislator, when in fact it should be the age that receives the legislation of the heavens, and the progress of the age should be based on its light and guidance. Certainly, progress that is based on the guidance of the heavens is the superior progress, being provided by the Lord the Most High Who truly knows what, is good for you, and He will never be corrected. As for what a man, like you, legislates for you, even when he views it as good for you, it is good as far as his own point of view is concerned and according to the limit of his knowledge. So it will inevitably be deficient and lacking. There will always be someone who will come along afterwards to abrogate it and correct it.

This is why we have seen how even non-Muslims find it necessary, due to issues in their own lives, to seek recourse in adopting Islamic solutions in order to overcome their problems. Of course, they do not adopt the Islamic rulings because they love them. They only do so because they cannot find a solution elsewhere. One of these issues is that of divorce, which they often surround it with doubts and use it to criticize Islam. In Italy now they are establishing divorce, not because Islam legislated it, but because their problems cannot be solved without it.

This issue clarifies for us the meaning of Allah’s saying: ‘It is He Who has sent His Messenger with the guidance and the religion of truth to make it prevail over all religions – however hateful this may be to those who ascribe partners to Allah.’ (at-Tawba: 33)

We were asked during some of our travels about how the Quran says: ‘...to make it prevail over all religions – however hateful this may be to those who ascribe partners to Allah...’ (at-Tawba: 33) and in another verse: ‘...but

Allah will perfect His Light – however hateful this may be to the disbelievers' (as-Saff: 8), so how is Allah's Light spread in all its fullness while there are many other religions besides Islam, and they still exist, and most of them have greater numbers of followers than Islam and are more powerful? These people have understood '...but Allah will perfect His Light...' (as-Saff: 8) to mean that all people will become Muslims. But if that was the case, then Allah the Exalted would not have said: '...however hateful this may be to the disbelievers' (as-Saff: 8) and '...however hateful this may be to those who ascribe partners to Allah' (as-Saff: 9) accordingly, the True Lord the Most High is affirming the presence of Shirk (associating others with Allah in His Divinity or worship) and disbelief alongside Islam. The intended meaning is that Allah will spread His Light in all its fullness, despite people's disbelief and Shirk throughout history, yet still no people will ever be able to put out this light. It will remain, and it will triumph and prevail over their laws such that they will not find solutions to their issues except in this light (religion).

Allah says: '...as a bearer of good tidings and a warner...' (Fatir: 24). A bearer of good tidings (bashir) is the person who gives good news of good things before they take place. A warner (nadhir) warns against evil before it takes place. '...And there was no nation but that there had passed within it a warner.' (Fatir: 24) Again we have the meaning of negation and exception, as in 'You are only a warner' (Fatir: 23). The meaning is that there was never a community that has not had a warner who came to it and passed away.

A community (ummah; literally a nation) is a group of people united by a common land, customs, or creed. One of the meanings of the word (ummah) is also found in Allah's saying: 'Verily, Ibrahim (Abraham) was an Ummah (a leader having all the good righteous qualities) (an-Nahl: 120) meaning although Prophet Ibrahim peace be upon him was but one individual, yet he was described as a 'nation' by uniting in his person all virtues and attributes of goodness such that if all the good qualities of one community were gathered together, you would find them all in Prophet Ibrahim peace be upon him.

Since all the previous communities had a warner sent to them, Messenger Muhammad peace be upon him is the last warner. Why? Because the situation of the world in the past was that people were dispersed and cut off from one another due to the difficulties of communication. Communities lived in isolation and there was no contact between them. So every environment had its own frailties, shortcomings and traditions, and then a messenger would come to treat the maladies of his people only. Our master Nuh (Noah peace be upon him) came to guide a people who were worshipping a number of idols: Wudd, Suwa`, Yaghuth, Ya`uq and Nasr. Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him came to treat the social ill of homosexuality among his people, and so forth.

As for our master Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him he came at a time in which people from all over the world were coming into contact with one another, civilizations and societies were crossing paths, and thus a flaw in one community would become a flaw in all other communities. This intermingling has increased to such an extent that today we can see and hear what is happening in the far corners of the earth in a second. We can learn about the weaknesses and deficiencies of other people; as though they are the same as those in our own country. Therefore, all maladies and defects have converged into common problems, and the entire world has become one global environment (with global solutions). This is why the message of Islam is a global message, and our master Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is sent to all of mankind.

Then the True Lord the Exalted says:

وَإِن يُكَذِّبُوكَ فَقَدْ كَذَّبَ ٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبْلِهِمْ جَآءَتْهُمْ
رُسُلُهُم بِٱلْبَيِّنَٰتِ وَبِٱلزُّبُرِ وَبِٱلْكِتَٰبِ ٱلْمُنِيرِ ٢٥

If they call you a liar, their predecessors did the same: messengers came to them with clear signs, scriptures, and enlightening revelation [25] (The Quran, Fatir: 25)

Here the meaning is: O Muhammad, take an example for yourself from your brothers, the previous messengers. They were all denied and rejected. This has been a habitual attitude. You, O Muhammad, are not a new kind of messenger. Earlier, we have explained that Allah Glorified is He does not send a messenger unless corruption is widespread and the treatment for it is lacking. The people there are no longer the souls who are self-reproaching (al-nafs al-lawwama), which holds one back from disobedience and sin. And the society is no longer a place that enjoins the right and forbids the wrong. This means that there is nothing restraining the individual or the society from evil; both are not immune. The society itself has turned corrupt in total, and its people have agreed upon error and misguidance. At this point the heavens must intervene with a new messenger who comes with a miraculous supporting sign that is appropriate to the age he is living in.

Allah says: 'And if they belie you, those before them also belied…' (Fatir: 25). A messenger only comes to confront corruption in a society, and it is natural that he will face people who are astray, or are transgressors, or tyrants and oppressors who benefit from this corruption. If they deny him, then Allah explains this fact saying: 'And thus We have placed within every city the greatest of its criminals to conspire therein…' (al-An'am: 123).

The word bayyinat (clear incontestable signs) in Allah's saying: '…their Messengers came to them with clear signs...' (Fatir: 25) signifies obvious concrete proofs that attest to the veracity of the speaker and his mission of conveying his Lord's Message to mankind. This constitutes mu`jizah (a miracle or extraordinary occurrence). A messenger comes with a miracle so that it can be evidence of the veracity of his mission as a prophet and messenger of Allah. Miracles are not the objective of the message. The objective of the message is only to convey the divine laws and doctrine.

The meaning of: '...and with the Scriptures (the Zubur, pl. of Zabur)...' (Fatir: 25) is the heavenly books that have been sent down, such as the Suhuf (Scrolls) of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him the Torah of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him the Injil (Gospel) of `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. However, the heavenly books specified here in this verse are the Zabur (the Psalms) and the Quran '…the Scriptures (the Zubur), and the book giving light (the Quran)…' because the Zabur, which was the Book revealed to Prophet Dawud peace be upon him was distinguished by the fact that it was inscribed in clear prominent letters. This is why it was firmly established; it was not written in ink, which would have allowed it to be erased, for example. It resembles the engraving of stones, and it is what they call (al-awima).(1)

(1) Az-Zabidi said in Al-Basa'ir: 'The book of Dawud (David) peace be upon him was called Zabur because it descended from the heavens in a written form. It was also said that it=

The light-giving Book is the Noble Quran because it provides the moral light that illuminates for humanity the path of life and directs and guides their movement. If the sun is the physical light that guides your physical movement, the Quran is the spiritual light that guides whoever believes in it.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

ثُمَّ أَخَذْتُ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْۖ فَكَيْفَ كَانَ نَكِيرِ ﴿٢٦﴾

And afterwards I seized the disbelievers – how terrible My punishment was! [26] (The Quran, Fatir: 26)

This is Allah's constant Way of dealing with the messengers; that He punishes those who disbelieve in them and oppose them. Have you ever seen a prophet that Allah surrendered or allowed to be defeated in the face of his own people who were opposing him? Allah has promised His messengers victory and support, as He Glorified is He has said: 'Verily, We (Allah) will indeed make victorious Our Messengers and those who believe in this world's life…' (Ghafir: 51).

Allah the Most High also says: 'and that Our hosts, they verily would be the victors' (as-Saffat: 173). For this reason, if you see a soldier of Allah being defeated in some areas and not being victorious, know that one of the requirements of being a soldier is missing. The first requirement of being Allah's soldier is obedience. If a soldier disobeys Allah's Commands, he must be defeated. This is why we say the Muslims were victorious at the Battle of Badr even though they were a small group: '…How often a small group overcame a mighty host by Allah's Leave' (al-Baqara: 249).

Less than a year after Badr the battle of Uhud took place, and while it is true that the Muslims were not defeated, they were not victorious either. This is because they lost control of the battle when the archers went against the command of Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him by abandoning their positions and descending in order to gather the spoils. Allah wanted to discipline His sincere servants so it was necessary to give them this severe shock, and thus they saw the result of their disobedience.

= was the name of a book that was confined to rational wisdom and contained no legal rulings. It can be called a (kitab; book) when it contains rulings.' See the book of Taj Al-`Arus by Az-Zabidi, under the root (za-ba-ra).

This is why we say that Islam was victorious at Uhud, even though the Muslims were not victorious because if they had been victorious in spite of disobeying Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him afterwards the Muslims would have slighted the importance of the Messenger of Allah's Commands. They would have said: 'We disobeyed his commands, but we were victorious at Uhud.' There is no doubt that this unsettled result was to let the Muslims know the importance of obeying the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and taking him as an example.

Likewise, in the Battle of Hunayn, Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him saw the great number of Muslims and said: 'We will not be defeated today for lack of numbers,' and they were ten thousand fighters. Allah wanted to shatter this arrogant illusion of the Muslims, and thus the disbelievers had the upper hand from the beginning of the battle until the Muslims were surrounded. But Allah's Mercy did not forsake them and once again encompassed them, as if He only wanted to correct this mistake on their part and did not want them to be struck with defeat.

When we reflect on the meaning of 'Then I seized the ones who disbelieved…' (Fatir: 26), we find that the verb akhadh (seize or take) indicates the strength behind taking and pulling by force which grips the entire entity that is being seized or taken. When talking about human beings, the phrase 'he took so and so' means 'he drove him' or 'he dragged him,' for example, by his clothes, and kept him in his grip. But if you say, 'Allah seized him,' then learn that Allah's seizing of wrongdoers is severe; He is Almighty, All-Capable. Therefore, Allah says next: '...and how [terrible] was My Reproach (nakir)!' (Fatir: 26) that is to say: My Reproach and rejection of what they have done. The word (nakir) expresses something that evokes your condemnation and anger.

So what do you think about a people whose ways have been condemned by Allah and He becomes angry with them? He will most certainly seize them in a way that satisfies His devoted servants and those who believe in Him.

Allah's saying: '...and how [terrible] was My Reproach' (Fatir: 26) means: 'Tell me, O Muhammad, have I punished them with what they deserve'. This meaning is also clear in His saying: 'Indeed, those who committed crimes used to laugh at those who believed. And when they passed by them, they would exchange derisive glances. And when they returned to their people, they would return jesting. And when they saw them, they would say, “Indeed, those are truly lost.” But they had not been sent as guardians over them. So today those who believed are laughing at the disbelievers, on adorned couches, observing. Have the disbelievers [not] been repaid [this Day] for what they used to do?’ (al-Mutaffifin: 29-36)

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

أَلَمْ تَرَ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ أَنزَلَ مِنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ مَآءً فَأَخْرَجْنَا بِهِۦ ثَمَرَٰتٍ مُّخْتَلِفًا أَلْوَٰنُهَا ۚ
وَمِنَ ٱلْجِبَالِ جُدَدٌۢ بِيضٌ وَحُمْرٌ مُّخْتَلِفٌ أَلْوَٰنُهَا وَغَرَابِيبُ سُودٌ ﴿٢٧﴾

Have you [Prophet] not considered how Allah sends water down from the sky and that We produce with it fruits of varied colours; that there are in the mountains layers of white and red of various hues, and jet black [27]
(The Quran, Fatir: 27)

We notice that the True Lord the Glorious and Exalted is reminding us of some of His Blessings upon us, and he then He states some of the requirements. This is how He puts your heart at ease with beneficence towards you so that you respond to His requirements. The True Lord the Exalted is reminding His servants through this cosmic sign; the sign of water being sent down from the sky, after He has made it clear to His Prophet that He will severely seize the disbelievers. It is as if Allah the Exalted is saying to His Messenger: Put aside the issue of these disbelievers, as I am able to punish them. Instead, reflect on this cosmic sign: ‘Do you not see that Allah sends down rain from the sky...’ (Fatir: 27).

His saying: ‘Do you not see that Allah…’ (Fatir: 27) means have you not watched or witnessed because everyone can see the water descending from above and the sky is everything that is above you, sheltering you. ‘Have you not seen how your Lord…’ (al-Fil: 1) means: Have you not known? This was regarding the issues that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not witness, as in Allah’s saying: ‘Have you (O Muhammad) not seen how your Lord dealt with the Owners of the Elephant?’ (al-Fil: 1)

It is known that our master Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not see the Event of the Elephant, but his Lord addressed him with ‘Have you not seen how your Lord…' (al-Fil: 1) to indicate that whatever Allah informs him of is more reliable and truthful than that which is witnessed by the eye.

Water being sent down from the sky means coming from its direction; otherwise the sky is something else because rain only comes down from the clouds that are close to the earth. We say: The issue of water being sent down from the direction of the sky appears to be a natural matter, as water vapour collects itself in the sky in the form of clouds that are saturated with water. The water has a weight which causes it to descend due to the gravitational pull of the earth. This is why Allah the Exalted mentions the descent of rain and immediately after the bringing forth of vegetation '...and We produce thereby fruits of varying colours...' (Fatir: 27). But if you said that the descent of rain from the sky is a natural phenomenon, there could be doubt that it is an act of nature; if so, is the bringing of the earth back to life and the bringing forth of plants that have different fruits and colours also an act of nature?

The phrase '...sends down...' (Fatir: 27) indicate the highness of what is being sent down and the lowness of where it is going; even if the opposite is the 'sending down' process is from a lower place to a higher place, as in Allah's saying: '...And We sent down iron, wherein is mighty power (in matters of war) and benefits for the people...' (al-Hadid: 25). Iron is actually extracted from the depths of the earth, but Allah has called it 'sending down' (inzal) because what is intended is the bringing forth of something from on high to that which is below regardless of whether the direction is from above or below.

We witness the process of water being sent down from the sky, but we do not witness the evaporation process that takes place on the surface of the water on earth. It then ascends to the stratums of the upper atmosphere where clouds are formed by way of condensation. Mankind knew nothing about these processes before the advancement of science, but we learned about the process of water filtration.

As for the process of bringing forth plants and fruits that have different colours, this is something that is clear and witnessed in gardens and fields. We all see the amazing and wonderful colours and different shapes that are limitless in number and variety because the colours of the spectrum, if they are the original colours, can produce an unlimited number of colours. If you take the colour black, for example, and add to it a drop of brown, for example, you will have another colour. If you add two drops, you will have a third colour; this is how colours are unlimited. We can see this now in the manufacturing of fabrics. Their colours have become so numerous, with endless shades and patterns. Therefore, we say that colours are limitless entities.

It is for you to reflect upon the intersecting of colours and their harmony in a flower or rose in a garden, and you will see in their colours a dazzling wonder. The seed is one and the same, the earth is one and the same, the water is one and the same, but from all of this there emerge these splendid shapes and harmonious colours. This is because a phenomenon bears the fingerings of the one who authored it. If the author is of limited power, the traces of his power are also limited. And if the Author possesses unlimited power, the traces of His Power are also unlimited. The True Lord possesses Absolute and Infinite Power, and so are His Traces and Fingerprints in creation.

You will notice in the context of this glorious verse that when the True Lord the Exalted speaks about sending down rain from the sky, He says: '...[He] sends down rain from the sky...' (Fatir: 27) using the third person pronoun. But when He talks about the bringing forth of fruits, He says: '…We produce thereby fruits of varying colours...' (Fatir: 27). So, He shifts to the first person plural pronoun Arabic word nahnu (Royal, used by Allah in the Quran to indicate majesty and power) to indicate grandeur and majesty. Why? Because sending down water from the sky is not the objective in and of itself; it is not what is important. Evidence for this is that rain may descend on marshland areas where it is of no benefit. As for the process of bringing forth fruits, this is the important process for which Allah sends down rain. This is the reason why He mentions it using the first person plural pronoun – royal 'We' – that emphasizes majesty and sublimity because the True Lord wants to exalt Himself in reference to this act, as in His saying: 'We have sent down the Quran Ourselves, and We ourselves will guard it.' (al-Hijr: 9)

We know from convention that events differ if the producer is different. If the event is brought about by a single individual, it will be according to the ability of this single individual. If a group of people support one another, it will be according to the level of this mutual support. Thus, when we hear a king or ruler issuing laws that govern people, he says, ‘We the President of the Republic’ or ‘We the King of Egypt’ or ‘We the Sultan of such and such...’ because issuing laws is not an individual matter that is established by the ruler or king alone, and it is not pronounced in his name. His subjects participate with him in this, and it is pronounced in the name of all of them.

Therefore, we find the True Lord Glorified is He using the first person plural pronoun when talking to us about one of His Actions. But when He talks about His Essence, He uses the singular pronoun, such as: ‘Verily, I – I alone – am God; there is no god save Me. Hence, worship Me alone, and be constant in prayer, so as to remember Me!’ (Ta Ha: 14)

The sending down of rain is a process that has one form, but bringing forth of vegetation encompasses wide varieties of forms. The water that is sent down from the sky is one and the same, yet the effects of the water are numerous. This fruit is yellow, this is white, this is red etc. Therefore, this process of bringing forth deserves an appropriate exaltation.

However, is the bringing forth of fruits happens directly or involves first the bringing forth of the plants that bear the fruit? The answer is that there is first the bringing forth of the plants that bear fruit. The True Lord the Exaltd defines for us a thing in terms of its ultimate purpose, which is the fruit. This fruit comes in different colours despite having one environment and being irrigated by the same water. When you reflect on the various colours of fruits, you see in them Allah’s Absolute Creative Power. These colours are not just for the sake of outward appearance and ornamentation, but rather, there is wisdom that the Creator Glorified is He intended for them. One of them is that these colours attract fertilizing insects.

If you contemplate these colours, you will find that they are varied even within one colour. Have you not noticed that the white of snow is not like the white of clothes, or the white of lime? This is why people describe colours by saying ‘bright white,’ ‘brilliant yellow,’ ‘blood-red,’ and ‘dark green.’

After talking to us about one of His signs in plants, the True Lord the Exalted talks to us about inanimate bodies: ‘…And in the mountains, are tracts, white and red of varying shades and [some] raven-black.’ (Fatir: 27) In inanimate bodies we can also see colours; for example, when we split rock formations to extract what is in the earth. You can see granite, marble, and carnelian in different colours as well.

The word ‘...tracts...’ (Fatir: 27) is the plural of juda (narrow tract or streak), and it is a dividing line between two things. You must have seen a striped wild donkey and the extent to which these streaks are symmetrical. You can also see an example of this in the strata of mountains as they have different shades of red and white.

The meaning of ‘...raven-black…’ (Fatir: 27) is extremely black. The word gharbib (raven-black) is used to describe very dark black colour and is ascribed to the raven due to its intense blackness.

After the True Lord Glorified is He reminds us of the categories of plants and inanimate objects, He reminds us that these differences are also found in mankind and animals, and these present the categories of existence. He the Most High says:

وَمِنَ ٱلنَّاسِ وَٱلدَّوَآبِّ وَٱلْأَنْعَٰمِ مُخْتَلِفٌ أَلْوَٰنُهُۥ كَذَٰلِكَ ۗ إِنَّمَا
يَخْشَى ٱللَّهَ مِنْ عِبَادِهِ ٱلْعُلَمَٰٓؤُا۟ ۗ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ عَزِيزٌ غَفُورٌ ﴿٢٨﴾

That there are various colours among human beings, wild animals, and livestock too? It is those of His servants who have knowledge who stand in true awe of Allah. Allah is almighty, most forgiving [28]
(The Quran, Fatir: 28)

Therefore, difference is found in all categories because the creation is based on Allah’s Absolute Power. All humans, despite their multiplicity, are different. This wondrous marvel indicates Allah’s Absolute Power. Creation is not based on one mould from which copies are made. When you look at a man you might say that he resembles so and so, but at a closer look, you are bound to notice some differences. Thus we can see that Allah’s Absolute Power necessitates that there be variation in all the categories of existence: inanimate objects, plants, animals, and humans.

The meaning of dawab (moving living creatures) is every creature that moves on the earth aside from mankind and cattle which includes cows, sheep, camels, and goats.

Allah says: '...It is those of His servants who have knowledge who stand in true awe of Allah...' (Fatir: 28). Awe (khashya) is fear that is combined with hope. It is one of the actions of the hearts within the souls of those who possess true knowledge of Allah. You may fear your enemy, for example, but you have no hope in him. Allah is the only One Who, when you fear Him, you also hope in Him, while feeling love for Him. For this reason, they said: There is no refuge from Allah except in Him.

Knowledge can refer to Islamic legal knowledge, which is the knowledge of Islamic rulings: the permissible, the impermissible, the obligatory, the supererogatory, the recommended etc. Or else it can refer to cosmic knowledge. This verse is stated within the context of discussing signs in the cosmos, and nothing regarding legal rulings is mentioned prior to it. We therefore say that what is meant by `ulama' (scholars or knowledgeable people) here is cosmic and natural phenomena researchers and scientists. It is apt that these people, more than anyone else, should fear Allah the Glorious and Exalted because they are most aware of the signs in nature, as found in inanimate objects, plants, animals, and humans. Of all people, they are the most capable of discovering the secrets that Allah has embedded in these signs of creation.

The cosmic phenomena of the universe are evidence of the One Who necessarily exists. It is the beginning of finding the Creator the Most High and believing in Him. For this reason, we find in the Quran numerous verses such as the following: 'And of His Signs is your sleep by night and day and your seeking of His Bounty. Indeed in that are signs for a people who listen.' (ar-Rum: 23)

If knowledge is decisive and evidence-based with respect to the field of Islamic legal knowledge, which the True Lord the Exalted has sent down to us in the form of the Islamic law and defined for us its limits, without us having in say in it because Allah has perfected it and protected it against distortion. This is because people's likes and dislikes differ, and the True Lord points this out when He says: 'But if the Truth had followed their inclinations, the heavens and the earth and whoever is in them would have been ruined…'

(al-Mu'minun: 71). As for knowledge of the cosmos, the Creator the Exalted has left it open to the intellects to research into it, derive conclusions, and compete excel in it. Some countries even steal such knowledge from one another.

The bane of the modern age is that the scholars of Islamic law poke their noses into natural phenomena, or the scholars of natural phenomena poke their noses into legal rulings. We have already witnessed an example of this. When some scientists said that the earth was round and that it revolved around the sun, some Islamic legal scholars rushed to accuse them of disbelief. This is a serious error. They should have considered the rule that the True Lord the Exalted has set down to protect against professing views according to personal opinions and whims because the shape of the earth and its movement is a cosmic matter that has nothing to do with the permissible and the impermissible.

In this regard, the True Lord Glorifierd is He says: 'Ask those who have knowledge if you do not know.' (an-Nahl: 43) The people of knowledge in the sciences of Islamic law and jurisprudence are different from the people of knowledge in the natural sciences. They must both respect the specialist knowledge that each of them has in their respective fields. The scholars of the Islamic law must not forget that it is the scholars of natural science who are uncovering for us Allah's secrets in creation, They are the ones who engender in our hearts the certainty in the proofs for belief in the One Who necessarily exists, the One from Whom the rulings of the permissible and the impermissible are issued.

The True Lord Glorified is He created the universe in a pristine state. If you were to enter an untouched wilderness – that no one had yet entered and it was still as it was when Allah created it – you would not find any filthiness or unpleasant smells and there would be no litter or broken twigs and so forth. You would see it in perfect tidiness, order, and harmony. Any residues from it would be food for other animals, so it is self-cleaning.

I remember that we saw in the valley of Fatimah in Saudi Arabia a spring of water irrigating the valley around it, and in one of the little streams we saw some small fish, all of the same size like tiny ears of corn. So I asked the owner of the garden: 'Does this fish grow?' He said: 'No. It stays like this, and it only comes after we have thrown some leftover food in the water. It appears to feed on it and then vanishes.' It is as if it has the specific task of cleaning the water. When we went back to Egypt, we found the same fish at the Marine Life Museum performing the same task: cleaning the fish tanks of waste.

That is why we say that there is no corruption in nature until man interferes, based on the evidence that created things untouched by man continue to follow a strict and controlled system that has no imbalance. For this reason, when you see a food crisis, know that it is the result of human error, or the result of negligence in extracting the earth's resources.

Therefore, the scholars of law must not involve themselves in natural sciences, and the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him taught us this when he forbade them from pollinating the date palm, and the date palm did not bear fruit. When the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him saw this, he took it upon himself and said: 'You know best about the affairs of your world.'(1) This means that the issues of natural science as well as laboratory and empirical issues are matters in which legal rulings have no say, but the bane of scholars today is that they do not stick to what they specialise in.

That is why Allah specifically means the scholars of the natural sciences here because they are the ones who are most capable of closely examining Allah's secrets. The True Lord Glorified is He has made His universe replete with secrets that suit the development of the age and the passing of time. The secrets that man knew in the Stone Age, for example, are not the ones that are known in the modern age. Allah's wisdom wanted to set a date for each of His secrets to manifest itself such that the secrets would not be manifested all at one time and leave man facing the rest of time without anything new.

When you reflect on this matter, you find that the True Lord Glorified is He has made the essentials of man's life manifest, and He then left the self-evident matters that people know for them to make progress in them. Man, for example, makes use intuitively of the fact that water flows downwards, and this intuition developed such that man began to receive water in his house via taps, after he had been transferring water from wells and rivers, undergoing difficulty in the process. However, when he puts his intellect to use, regarding the self-evident truths of the universe, he advances and reaps the rewards of this advancement. That is why we find that the most difficult scientific and electronic theories are taken, in the beginning, from self-evident truths. We say in the science of engineering that you prove the veracity of the one-hundredth theorems by using the ninety-ninth theorem, and so on until you reach the first theorem. It is based on the self-evident truths of the universe over which there is no difference of opinion.

(1) Narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (2363) from the Hadith of Anas ibn-Malik Allah be pleased with him that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him passed by a people who were pollinating and said: 'If you did not do this, it would flourish.' He said the result was shisa (bad dates) and he passed by them and asked, 'What happened to your date palm?' They said: 'You said such and such.' He said: 'You know best the about the affairs of your world.'

That is why the True Lord Glorified is He is always calling us to think, reflect, and ponder, etc. What human beings have achieved today of appliances and modern equipment, such as the washing machine, the refrigerator, the television and so forth, are nothing other than the results of thinking, which promoted self-evident truths until they arrived at where they are now. Whoever wants to stop and think about this advancement will see Allah's Power in the continuing growth of industries and their development from decade to decade, so let one go to Detroit and see Henry Ford's exhibition which shows the development of industry from the sewing needle to the rocket.

The universe therefore contains secrets that are discovered by man, and every secret has a date on which it will appear, either by way of man's research or even by chance. It is from Allah's Grace that atheists, when they discover some of the secrets of the universe, say, 'We discovered', and none of them say 'We invented'. It is as if Allah the Exalted turned them away and diverted them from using the word 'invent' and distorted their tongues so that they would not have audacity before Allah. Gravity, for example, has existed since the creation of the heavens and the earth and the role of man is that he discovered this secret. That is why we say to the one who says, 'I invented': 'This is a lie. What is correct is to say that you discovered'.

In His saying: '...verily Allah is Almighty, Much-Forgiving' (Fatir: 28), 'Almighty' means that He is not overcome, and He is Much-Forgiving towards you if you avoid neglect and deficiency whilst extracting Allah's secrets in the universe. He will forgive you if you make a mistake in one of your experiments, as someone will come afterwards and correct it.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يَتۡلُونَ كِتَٰبَ ٱللَّهِ وَأَقَامُواْ ٱلصَّلَوٰةَ وَأَنفَقُواْ مِمَّا رَزَقۡنَٰهُمۡ
سِرّٗا وَعَلَانِيَةٗ يَرۡجُونَ تِجَٰرَةٗ لَّن تَبُورَ ٢٩ لِيُوَفِّيَهُمۡ أُجُورَهُمۡ
وَيَزِيدَهُم مِّن فَضۡلِهِۦٓۚ إِنَّهُۥ غَفُورٞ شَكُورٞ ٣٠

Those who recite Allah's scripture, keep up the prayer, give secretly and openly from what We have provided for them, may hope for a trade that will never decline [29] He will repay them in full, and give them extra from His bounty. He is most forgiving, most appreciative [30] (The Quran, Fatir: 29 - 30)

The True Lord Glorified is He mentions the natural sciences, and that it is a means of acquiring awe of Allah and knowing His secrets in the universe, Allah Glorified is He wants to divert our attention and warn us: You who are being tried with the natural sciences! It is making you forget your duty to take from Allah what will please you. Allah Glorified is He then talks about the way: '[It is] they who [truly] follow Allah's revelation...' (Fatir: 29), and this is referring to legal knowledge and the reminder that protects people from their contradicting likes and dislikes.

The meaning of '[truly] follow Allah's revelation' (Fatir: 29) is that they articulate it with their tongues and they follow it with their hearts; 'and are constant in prayer' (Fatir: 29) which means worship that involves all the limbs, and 'and spend on others, secretly and openly, out of what We provide for them as sustenance...' (Fatir: 29) means spending on others and especially financially as this is an evidence of the generosity of the soul in what it gives out, and its love for spending and giving secretly and openly. By spending on others, the soul is perfecting the attributes of goodness, and the actions of the heart and the actions of the limbs are coming together to obey Allah.

His saying: 'out of what We provide for them as sustenance' (Fatir: 29) means that spending on others is not from your private wealth, but rather, it is from Allah Who has provided you, and made you appoint someone else over it. Your expenditure is nothing but a means and the means in existence are veiled by the Hand of Allah in giving.

Those who spend on others from what Allah has provided them, secretly and openly '...it is they who may look forward to a bargain that can never fail.' (Fatir: 29) Spending on others for Allah's sake is commerce with Allah '...that can never fail.' (Fatir: 29) That is, it will never result in loss, but it is only gain. You, when you spend on the needy and when you feed the hungry, you are only endearing Allah to His creation. Have you seen that if one of the kings in the like of this world has slaves, is he not responsible for feeding them and satisfying their needs? This is from the characteristics of greatness in him. Likewise, the True Lord Glorified is He is the Creator of these poor people, and He is the One Who summoned them to exist, and Allah Glorified is He is responsible for providing for them.

Therefore, when you feed them you are carrying out Allah's duty, and you are endearing Allah's creation to Allah. When the True Lord Glorified is He causes a created being to have affection for another created being, it is as if He is saying, 'My slave was assisting Me with regards to My creation' because Allah the Exalted summoned the creation to exist, and He took it upon Himself to make them free of want. When a wealthy servant of His assists a poor person, it is as if Allah Glorified is He is saying: 'My servant was helping his brother out of his own capacity, so I must help him out of My capacity', and the servant will never be more generous than his Creator. How can the servant show compassion when he has not created anything, and he has not summoned anyone to exist, and the Creator Glorified is He does not show compassion?

If you ask, 'Since the True Lord has summoned the creation to existence, then why does He not guarantee for them a noble life in which they will not need compassion from someone else'? We say: 'The True Lord Glorified is He wanted to distribute the seeds of love and mutual compassion amongst His creation. He wanted a Muslim community based on love, co-operation, and solidarity. Then Allah Glorified is He promised the generous and giving that He would deal with them according to His Generosity and Giving'.

This is the trade which will never fail with Allah. Failure is ruin, i.e. corruption, and it can afflict trade in one of two ways; either corruption in profit, in the case that your trade tires you and you do not make any profit, or corruption in profit and in the foundation, meaning that you lose the foundation of the trade. As we know, man does not trade except with the intention of making profit. That is why the people of knowledge and the people who trade with Allah say, ‘If you want to establish trade, then trade with the Generous One Who will grant you what you can be generous with, and after that He will reward you for it’.

That is why one of the righteous people was smiling in the face of a supplicant, and he was being friendly when he said to him: ‘Welcome to the one who has come to carry my provision to the Hereafter without charging a fee’.

`Ali Allah be pleased with him was once asked (1): ‘O Abu Al-Hassan! I want to know myself. Am I from the people of the life of this world, or am I of the people of the Hereafter?’ He said: ‘If you smile at the one who gives you more than the one who takes from you, then you are from the people of the life of this world because man loves the one who builds what he loves’.

One of the Companions Allah be pleased with him told Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘I hate death.’ The Messenger peace be upon him asked him: ‘Do you have wealth?’ The Companion said: ‘Yes.’ The Messenger peace be upon him asked: ‘Do you give out from it in charity?’ The Companion said: ‘No.’ Prophet Muhammad said: ‘Indeed wealth loves its owner, and if you love it in the Hereafter then you will love to die for the Hereafter. And if you love it in the life of this world then you will love to remain with it in the life of this world.’(2)

The use of the tool of negation (lan) (will not) requires comment. Lan negates the present and the future. Because man may die before realizing the good fruits of giving, and before seeing the result of his charity His Lord puts him at ease that this trade will never fail, and its reward will wait for him in the Hereafter. His saying: ‘secretly and openly’ (Fatir: 29) means to do so in any case. As for giving out in secret, the wisdom behind this is that it distances the one doing it from ostentation and boastfulness, and it also hides the shame of the one receiving it. That is why some wealthy people who wanted to show compassion to a poor or needy person, would devise a strategy to preserve the honour of this person such as hiring him to do some simple work and then giving him money as his wage for the work, not as charity. Some of them would be very polite and give to the needy in the form of a loan, all the while intending charity, and maybe this meaning is affirmed, and he said to his companion: 'Our Lord is helping you discharge this payment but you (are consuming it).'

(1) The story of the question of a man to one of the pious people: ‘Am I among the dwellers of heaven or hell?’” and the response of `Ali Allah be pleased with him.

(2) Mentioned by Abu-Hamid Al-Ghazali in Ihya` `Ulum Ad-Din (2/232) that a man said: ‘O Messenger of Allah, why do I not love death? He said: ‘Do you have wealth?’ He said: ‘Yes, O Messenger of Allah.’ He said: ‘Send your wealth forward, for indeed the heart of the believer is with his wealth. If he sends it forward he will love to be with it, and if he leaves it behind he will love to stay behind with it.’ Al-Hafizh Al-Iraqi said: ‘I do not stand by it.’

Some of them would give charity in the form of a trust, but say to the recipient: 'If this amount becomes easy for you and becomes something surplus to your requirements, then give it to someone who needs it, and tell him to give it in turn to whomever needs it after him, and this is how the charity increases and reaches whomever Allah wills from those who need it.

This is about charity in secret. As for giving openly, the wisdom behind it is that it represents an impediment to one such that they are not miserly or stingy with what they have. Likewise, it safeguards the one doing it from the tongues of people and safeguards his honour in case people engross themselves with his affairs and say: 'He is miserly even though he is wealthy'. Also, giving out openly can be considered a model and example for others to give.

The scholars say: What is intended by secret charity is that which is supererogatory, and it is better for this to be veiled. By 'openly' they mean obligatory charity (zakat) because to do things openly is what is desired in worship, as is the case with prayer, for example. The one who reflects will find that (zakat) is more manifest than prayer because it is easy to perform the prayer at its designated times. As for (zakat), you may be capable, but you are miserly and stingy in giving.

And when you spend on others who do you spend on? Do you spend on the needy who is powerless or the one who is unsuccessful? Who is the one who made him unsuccessful? Allah did, and therefore you are charged with the task of spending on the one that He has made unsuccessful, and helping him, primarily so that he does not harbour ill feelings towards you and hopes for more goodness from you because your goodness will help him. That is why we see the people in the countryside, for example, grieving and crying when the cow of so-and-so or the buffalo of so-and-so dies. Why? This is because it was providing milk for the poor and cultivating the land of the needy.

The second wisdom is more exalted than the first, and it is that spending on the powerless makes him stay firm in his opinion of his Lord and safeguards him from opposing the preordainment of Allah, Who withholds from him and gives to others, and constricts his affair while expanding that of others.

Spending on the powerless makes him feel that he is more fortunate than the one who is wealthy, and why not when it is He who takes care of his sustenance without any exertion from him and without any fatigue? And the wealthy one comes to his door to give his right regarding Allah's wealth, and therefore the scholars say: 'The poor person is a condition for the wealthy person's faith, but the wealthy person is not a condition for the poor person's faith'. It was for this reason that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him taught us by saying: '...a man who gives in charity and he conceals it such that his left hand does not know what his right hand is doing.'(1)

The True Lord Glorified is He when He talks about those who do good and take it upon themselves to do more than what Allah has required them to do, and more of what Allah Glorified is He has specifically required them to do, says, '[But,] behold, the Allah-conscious will find themselves amid gardens and springs, enjoying all that their Lord will have granted them [because], verily, they were doers of good in the past: they would lie asleep during but a small part of the night, and would pray for forgiveness from their innermost hearts and [would assign] in all that they possessed a due share unto such as might ask [for help] and such as might suffer privation.' (adh-Dhariyat: 15-19)

The 'due share' (haqq) is not known and it is the voluntary charity. As for the obligatory zakat which is the right of the poor from the wealth of the rich, this is mentioned in the descriptions of the believers found in the chapter of Sa`ala[1] (al-Ma`arij), as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘and in whose possessions there is a due share, acknowledged [by them], for such as ask [for help] and such as are deprived [of what is good in life]’ (al-Ma’arij: 24-25).

(1) Narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (1031) from the Hadith of Abu-Hurayra Allah be pleased with him. The full Hadith is as follows: 'Seven people are shaded by Allah's shade on the Day when there is no shade but His: The just ruler, the youth who is raised in the worship of Allah, a man whose heart is attached to the mosques, two men who love each other for the sake of Allah and they meet for His sake and they part for His sake, a man who was beckoned by a woman of beauty and rank and said "'I fear Allah."', a man who gives in charity and he conceals it such that his left hand does not know what his right hand is doing and a man who remembered Allah in private and his eyes overflowed with tears.'

So, for this reason zakat is not hidden but given openly because fulfilling a right that the poor have over you such that some of the jurists of Andalusia may Allah be pleased with them said: ‘If I were in charge of an affair over the believers, and I saw someone denying the poor person his right according to the payable amount that I had stipulated for him, I would cut his hand off.’ Consider this legal reasoning, and how they equated withholding the right of the poor with theft.

Regardless of whether the spending on others is done secretly or openly, it must be performed with a sincere intention, as our Lord teaches us in the Qudsi Hadith: ‘Sincerity is a secret from My secrets. I place it in the hearts of the slaves that I love. It does not appear to any angel so that he can write it down and neither to Satan so that he can corrupt it.’[2]

By giving, you are working with Allah, and Allah is free of need, Glorified and Bountiful is He. He does not diminish your right and your trade with Him Glorified is He; without a doubt, He will always be lucrative. That is why He says afterwards: ‘...look forward to a bargain that can never fail.’ (Fatir: 29)

Likewise, our Prophet peace and blessings be upon him warned us about ostentation that can nullify our deeds, and corrupt them and prevent the one doing them from having any reward on the Day of Resurrection, and it is said to him: ‘You did it so that they would say this and that about you.’

Our Prophet peace and blessings be upon him warned us against our deeds becoming like those of the disbelievers, of whom Allah Glorified is He says, ‘But as for those who are bent on denying the truth, their [good] deeds are like a

(1) This is the chapter of al-Ma`arij, and has been called the chapter of Sa`ala (he asked) because it begins with His words: “‘One who is minded to ask, might ask about the suffering which [in the hereafter] is bound to befall those who deny the truth. [Know, then, that] nothing can ward it off”’ (al-Ma’arij: 1-2).

(2) Mentioned by Imam Al-Ghazali in Ihya` `Ulum Ad-Din (4/271) from the Hadith of Al-Hassan Al-Basri, and it is mursal (discontinued). It was declared weak by Al-Hafizh Al-Iraqi and Al-Hafizh ibn-Hajar Al-`Asqalani.

mirage in the desert, which the thirsty supposes to be water – until, when he approaches it, he finds that it was nothing: instead, he finds [that] Allah [has always been present] with him, and [that] He will pay him his account in full – for Allah is swift in reckoning!' (an-Nur: 39) Then Allah Glorified is He says, 'since He will grant them their just rewards, and give them yet more out of His Bounty...' (Fatir: 30), i.e. they will take the reward of their deeds and their giving as compensation from Allah, and then He will increase them graciously from His Bounty. They say this increase is that their intercession of whom they love is accepted, and if they intercede for one of their loved ones Allah accepts their intercession. Why? Because they had previously helped the poor and needy from amongst Allah's servants, and Allah honours them because of this and favours them as they had favoured His servants.

'...He is Much-Forgiving, Exceedingly Grateful.' (Fatir: 30). You may ask: 'Why does this verse end with Allah's Name the Much-Forgiving when it is discussing righteous actions such as reciting the Book of Allah, establishing the prayer, and spending on others for Allah's sake. Which of these actions would require forgiveness'? They say: 'Forgiveness is mentioned here because when the servant does one of these good actions some snobbery or conceit may come in to it and this would tarnish the righteous action, so Allah forgives him for it so that he can take the full reward for it'. We have the Hadith in which our Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, 'O Allah! I seek refuge in you from an action with which I sought Your Face but it contained that which does not befit you.'(1) And His saying: 'Exceedingly Grateful' (Fatir: 30).

Shakur is the hyperbolic form of shakir (grateful), and Allah the Exalted in His Exaltedness is grateful to His slave, and indeed He goes to great lengths in His Gratitude because the servant, if we look at the apparent picture, is assisting his Lord by providing for those whom Allah has been asked to provide for. That is why Allah thanks him and does not diminish his right, even though in reality it is Allah who is helping him.

(1) Included by Ibn-Rajab Al-Hanbali in his book, Jami` Al-`Ulum Wa Al-Hikam (p.27), from the supplication of Matraf ibn-`Abdullah, saying: 'O Allah! I seek Your forgiveness for that which I repented to You for, and then returned to it. I seek Your forgiveness for that which I made for You upon myself, and then I did not fulfil it. And I seek Your forgiveness for that which I claimed I had done seeking Your Face but my heart mixed in with it that which I did not know.'

When you read: ‘...He is Much-Forgiving, Exceedingly Grateful’ (Fatir: 30), you know that Allah the Exalted is thanking you and all you can do is thank Him Glorified is He and then He will give you more of His blessings. We are therefore standing before everlasting gratitude that will never be cut off and giving that will never be depleted

وَٱلَّذِىٓ أَوۡحَيۡنَآ إِلَيۡكَ مِنَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ هُوَ ٱلۡحَقُّ مُصَدِّقٗا لِّمَا
بَيۡنَ يَدَيۡهِۗ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ بِعِبَادِهِۦ لَخَبِيرُۢ بَصِيرٞ ﴿٣١﴾

The Scripture We have revealed to you [Prophet] is the Truth and confirms the scriptures that preceded it. Allah is well informed about His servants, He sees everything [31]
(The Quran, Fatir: 31)

Wahi (Inspiration) in its general meaning is to state something secretly. If it is done outwardly and openly it is not considered inspiration. If you, for example, had a group of guests at your house you could merely look at your servant and he would understand what you want without anyone noticing you. This is considered wahi. Likewise, the wahi, meaning the revelation, does not come openly. It is a concealed matter between Allah the Exalted and His Messenger peace be upon him.

Wahi is different depending on who is giving it, whom it is being given to and what is being given. Allah gives wahi to inanimate objects, as He did to the earth: ‘as you Lord will have inspired her to do’ (az-Zalzala: 5), and He gave wahi to the bee: ‘and [consider how] you Lord has inspired the bee: “Prepare for yourself dwellings in mountains...’ (an-Nahl: 68). He also gave wahi to human beings without messengers: ‘...We inspired [thus] the mother of Musa (Moses): “Suckle him...”’ (al-Qasas: 7), as He gave wahi to the disciples of `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him.

As for the revelation wahi that has to do with commandments, this is wahi from Allah and it is addressed to the messengers along with a method for them to communicate it from Allah. It is not just an idea or an inspiration like the aforementioned wahi.

Wahi also includes that which the devils give to their associates. The True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘...and, verily, the devils whisper unto those who have made them their own that they should involve you in argument [as to what is and what is not a sin]; and if you pay heed unto them, lo! You will become [like] those who ascribe divinity to other beings or forces beside Allah' (al-An'am: 121), and His saying: 'and [know that] all of the Book with which We have inspired you...' (Fatir: 31), i.e. from the Quran, or from the Preserved Tablet is '...the very truth...' (Fatir: 31), i.e. the Quran is the epitome of truth. We already know from our grammar lessons that the subject is always definite because you are going to give it a predicate. You ca not give a predicate to something that is unknown. For example, you say, 'Zayd is diligent'. Zayd is known to you and you have given him the predicate of being diligent. Therefore, the predicate is that which is not known and that is why it is always indefinite. If you said: 'Zayd is the diligent one', this would mean that he has acquired diligence to such an extent that the attribute of diligence can only be applied to him.

Likewise, in His saying: '...the very truth...' (Fatir: 31), i.e. the attribute of truth can only be applied to it, and it is the epitome of truth. The truth is that which is firmly established and does not change and neither is it inconsistent. In case someone misunderstands and thinks that as long as the Quran is the truth all of the previous books must be false, Allah Glorified is He says, '...confirming the truth of whatever there still remains of earlier revelations...' (Fatir: 31). For the Quran is true and it confirms the divine books that preceded it, as they are also true because the Quran confirms them and does not contradict them.

In another place Allah the Exalted says, '...determining what is true therein...' (al-Ma'ida: 48). It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He is giving the Quran the force of being the final seal for the perfection of humanity, for if we have a ruling from the previous books and then a ruling from the Quran is revealed, we take the latter because it has abrogated the former for a benefit that is required by the age and the nature of the commandments that are gradated according to the states of nations.

It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He was distinguishing His Messenger peace be upon him with a distinction that was not fulfilled for any of the other messengers, and it is that the previous messengers were conveying to their nations what had been revealed to them, but Allah allowed Prophet Muhammad peace be upon him to convey from Allah and authorised him to legislate for his people. That is why Allah Glorified is He says: '...Hence, accept [willingly] whatever the Apostle gives you [thereof], and refrain from what he forbids you...' (al-Hashr: 7). This verse is a refutation of those who say that you should follow the Quran but not the Sunna. This ancient and modern falsehood that we hear people calling to from time to time; these people do not know that the text of the Quran forces them to follow the Sunna and respect it since it clarifies the Quran and explains it, and elucidates what it contains. If not, then what do they have to say about His words: '...Hence, accept [willingly] whatever the Apostle gives you [thereof], and refrain from [demanding] anything that he withholds from you...' (al-Hashr: 7)?

If I were to ask you: 'Is there an article in our constitution that stipulates the dismissal of an employee if he is absent from work for fifteen days'? This article is not in the constitution, but it is a law that was set by a group of specialists who were authorised to do so such that a committee was formed for civil servants and those who work in the government so that laws could be set by authorisation, and likewise the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was authorised by His Lord the Exalted to legislate for his nation and make things clear for them.

Then Allah Glorified is He says, '...for, behold, of [the needs of] His servants Allah is Fully Aware, All Seeing.' (Fatir: 31) The Fully Aware refers to the One Who knows the secrets of all things as they really are. The All Seeing refers to the One from Whom nothing is hidden and not even a mustard seed is concealed from him, for you may know something but not see it. The True Lord Glorified is He brings the Fully Aware and the All Seeing together many times in the Quran, as in this verse(1), or the Subtle and the Aware[1] because awareness requires sight, and sight requires subtlety. The Subtle, as we have said, is the one who Penetrates deeply into things and no one prevents him. That is why we say: 'Indeed, the most violent and destructive of things are the subtle tiny things that can' not be seen by just the eye and for some time now we have been calling them microbes'. Now we have the virus, and I believe it is more subtle and tinier than the microbe, and it is more destructive.

(1) Likewise, His statement: 'And how many a generation have We [thus] destroyed after [the time of] Nuh (Noah)! For none has the like of you Lord's Awareness and Insight into His creatures' sins.' (al-Isra': 17), and His statement: 'Behold, your Lord grants abundant sustenance, or gives it in scant measure, unto whomever He wills: verily, Fully Aware is He of [the needs of] His creatures, and sees them all.' (al-Isra': 30) and His statement: 'Say, "None can bear witness between me and you as Allah does: verily, Fully Aware is He of His creatures, and He Sees all [that is in their hearts]."' (al-Isra': 96).

We have clarified this matter by using the example of someone who builds a house and he wants to keep harmful animals and insects out, so he puts iron netting, for example, on the windows. However, this netting must be made to suit the subtlety of the thing that you fear. That which keeps out a wolf will not keep out rats, and that which keeps out rats will not keep out flies and mosquitoes, etc.

Therefore, the tinier something is the harder it is to catch and the more cautious one has to be because it penetrates deeply into the most constricted of things and reaches you without you noticing it.

We understand from His saying: '...for, behold, of [the needs of] His servants Allah is Fully Aware, All Seeing' (Fatir: 31), that it is only Allah the Exalted who is capable of legislating for His servants what is appropriate for them in every time and place. That is why there were various divine books for differing maladies, but when people of the world began to make contact and communicate with one another the Quran came to determine the truth of what remains in those books.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

---

[1] The Subtle and the All Seeing are found together many times in the Quran: 'No human vision can encompass Him, whereas He encompasses all human vision: for He alone is Unfathomable, All Aware.' (al-An'am: 103); 'are you not aware that it is Allah who sends down water from the skies, whereupon the earth becomes green? Verily, Allah is Unfathomable [in His wisdom], All Aware.' (al-Hajj: 63); '"O my dear son"(continued Luqman), "verily, though there be aught of but the weight of a mustard-seed, and though it be [hidden] in a rock, or in the skies, or in the earth, Allah will bring it to light: for, behold, Allah is Unfathomable [in His wisdom], All Aware."' (Luqman 16) and 'How could it be that He who has created [all] should not know [all]? Yes! He alone is Unfathomable [in His wisdom], All Aware!' (al-Mulk: 14)

ثُمَّ أَوۡرَثۡنَا ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱصۡطَفَيۡنَا مِنۡ عِبَادِنَاۖ فَمِنۡهُمۡ ظَالِمٞ لِّنَفۡسِهِۦ وَمِنۡهُم
مُّقۡتَصِدٞ وَمِنۡهُمۡ سَابِقُۢ بِٱلۡخَيۡرَٰتِ بِإِذۡنِ ٱللَّهِۚ ذَٰلِكَ هُوَ ٱلۡفَضۡلُ ٱلۡكَبِيرُ ٣٢

We gave the Scripture as a heritage to Our chosen servants: some of them wronged their own souls, some stayed between [right and wrong], and some, by Allah's leave, were foremost in good deeds. That is the greatest favour [32]
(The Quran, Fatir: 32)

The 'Book' is the Quran. Therefore, this inheritance was after our Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and it is evidence that the phase after the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him is the phase of inheriting the Book and the Sunnah. The scholars inherit it from the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him: 'The scholars are the inheritors of the prophets, and the scholars do not leave dinars and dirhams as inheritance, but rather, they leave knowledge, and whoever takes it has taken much good.'(1)

The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was the one conveying and teaching during his life, but after his death Allah passed this duty on to the scholars. The meaning of '...We have bestowed...as a heritage...' (Fatir: 32) is that we asked them to do with it what someone would do if they had inherited money because the one who inherits money will put it towards something of general benefit, and this is also the objective of the Message. Allah the Exalted says, 'And thus have We willed you to be a community of the middle way, so that [with your lives] you might bear witness to the truth before all mankind, and that the Apostle might bear witness to it before you...' (al-Baqara: 143); so we are the inheritors of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and whoever learns a ruling from him must convey it, for the Messenger peace be upon him is a witness to whoever it is conveyed to and likewise his nation will be witnesses to the people that they convey it to.

The meaning of '...We chose...' (Fatir: 32) is that Allah selected and preferred over all the other nations. Then the True Lord Glorified is He divides these people into three categories: '...and among them are some who sin against themselves...' (Fatir: 32). They sin against themselves by neglecting their duty towards the book that they have inherited, and they don not act with it as they should act. Indeed, they may commit enormities, and we seek refuge with Allah from such a thing.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (5/196), Ibn-Majah in his Sunnan (232) and Abu Dawud in his Sunnan (2641) from the Hadith of Abu-Darda` Allah be pleased with him.

This category wrongs itself, because it denies itself reward. Every commandment requires that you do something easy, and you are rewarded abundantly in return, so when you are neglectful regarding something that is easy to do then you are, without a doubt, wronging yourself.

And '...some who keep halfway [between right and wrong] ...' (Fatir: 32) mean is that they act some of the time, so they mix righteous acts with others that are sinful.

And '...some who, by Allah's leave, are foremost in deeds of goodness...' (Fatir: 32). May Allah make us from amongst them. The word sabiq (foremost) indicates that there is a contest and a competition, i.e. those who compete to arrive at an objective before anyone else, and the people of this category are competing in good deeds.

His saying '...We chose...' (Fatir: 32) indicates that proclaiming Allah's Oneness (tawhid) has a price, belief in Allah's Messenger peace be upon him has a price and acting in accordance with what Allah's Messenger peace be upon him has a price. And if there are amongst these chosen people some who oppress themselves due to negligence or indeed by committing sins, they are still considered to be amongst the chosen ones because they say that there is no god but Allah, and the True Lord Glorified is He does not equate between those who accept this word and those who reject it. 'There is no god but Allah' is my fortress. Whoever says it enters my fortress.'(1)

The True Lord Glorified is He mentions that these believers who have inherited the book have two attributes: '...of Our servants as We chose...' (Fatir: 32); he describes them as being chosen and as being His servants.

Therefore, the Book was revealed to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his nation inherited the book after him, and it is the spreading of his message. That is why Allah has entrusted this nation with conveying the way of Allah to all of mankind until the Hour is established, and no one other than us has been entrusted with this.

(1) Narrated by Ibn`Asakir in what is mentioned by his Encyclopaedia of Sections of the Hadith (2/82), Tahdhib Tarikh Dimashq

The True Lord Glorified is He has indeed taken it upon Himself to preserve this Book, and he did not entrust anyone else to preserve it as is the case with the books that preceded the Quran, and as Allah Glorified is He says: '...Verily, it is We who bestowed from on high the Torah, wherein there was guidance and light. On its strength did the prophets, who had surrendered themselves unto Allah, deliver judgment unto those who followed the Jewish faith; and so did the [early] men of Allah and the rabbis, inasmuch as some of Allah's scripture had been entrusted to their care; and they [all] bore witness to its truth. Therefore, [O Children of Israel,] hold not men in awe, but stand in awe of Me...' (al-Ma'ida: 44).

The meaning of '...entrusted to their care...' (al-Ma'ida: 44) is that they were asked to preserve it, but they were negligent and forgot some of the verses, changed some of them and concealed others. Indeed, some of them came up with their own words and claimed that they were from Allah, but because the Quran is the final Book Allah is preserving it Himself, and He has not entrusted anyone else to preserve it.

If you ask: 'How can the one who wrongs himself be from the chosen ones when he is committing sins and possibly major sins'? We say: 'By the simple fact that the servant says, "I bear witness that there is no god but Allah and that Muhammad is His Messenger," so he is chosen, and with these words Allah has chosen him over the disbelievers, even if he disobeys after that'.

When The True Lord Glorified is He mentions a sin and makes it a crime he decrees a punishment for it, and it is an indication that such a thing will take place. For example, Allah has declared theft to be a crime and He has decreed a legal punishment for it. He has declared fornication to be a crime and He decreed a legal punishment for it. This indicates that such things do take place in a Muslim society. As for lying, for example, there is no legal punishment and no penalty. We find in a Hadith that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was asked: 'Does a believer fornicate, O Messenger of Allah?' He said 'Yes'.

‘Does a believer steal, O Messenger of Allah?’ He said ‘Yes’. ‘Does a believer lie, O Messenger of Allah?’ He said ‘No’.(1)

It is as if fornication and stealing are to be expected from the believer, but lying is not expected from him. It is the furthest attribute from a believer. Why? They say: Because lying contradicts and goes against reality, and the believer does not lie because he says that there is no god but Allah. If he is a liar then how do we know that he is truthful when he says these words? It is as if lying destroys faith at its foundation. That is why Allah has not decreed a punishment for it because it is not conceived as an act of a believer.

Those who keep halfway are those whose good deeds equal their bad deeds, and mix righteous acts with other acts that are sinful. In another place Allah the Exalted says regarding this category: ‘and [there are] others – [people who] have become conscious of their sinning after having done righteous deeds side by side with evil ones; [and] it may well be that Allah will accept their repentance: for, verily, Allah is Much-Forgiving, a Dispenser of Mercy.’ (at-Tawba: 102) The grammarians say that the word `asa (perhaps) indicates hope, and hope is mostly expectation and the possibility of something happening, as opposed to laita (if only) which is used for a wish. A wish is for something that is farfetched or impossible, and it is only an expression of love for the thing for which it is wished. It does not indicate hope.We have the words of the poet:

If only youth would return one day
so that I would inform it of what old age does(2)

We have already said that ‘perhaps’ indicates hope that something will be done, except that hope has levels and degrees some of which are more reliable than others. For example, if you had hope in a human being like you and you said: ‘Perhaps he will give me’. This is hope at a specific level in terms of the possibility of it being realised. If you said: ‘Perhaps I will give you’ in the first person, this is stronger and more reliable than the first. If you said: ‘Perhaps Allah will give you’ then this is the most reliable because it is hope in Allah. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘... [and] it may well be that Allah will accept their repentance...’ (at-Tawba: 102). ‘Perhaps’ here is for hope that is realised. Therefore, this is one of the most hopeful verses that those who keep halfway and are negligent in their duty to Allah wait for.

(1) Narrated by Imam Malik in his Muwatta` from the Hadith of Safwan ibn-Salim and classified as mursal

(2) Most sources agree that this verse comes from Abu Al-`Atahiyah, and it is attributed to him by Al-Hafizh in Al-Bayan Wa At-Tabyin Kitab Al-`Asa, and also Abu-Hilal Al-`Askari in his book, Diwan Al-Ma`ani in the chapter on Youth and Old age and Ar-Raghib Al-Asfahani in Muhadarat Al-Udaba`, but Az-Zuzani attributed it to Hatim At-Ta`i in Hamasat Ath-Zhurafa`, in the chapter on Old Age and Seniority.

As for the one who competes in good deeds, he is the one who carries out a command and completes it, and does it in the most perfect of ways. Allah the Exalted says, ‘...let all such aspire as [are willing to] aspire to things of high account.’ (al-Mutaffifin: 26)

Consider, for example, what Allah the Exalted says regarding Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: ‘and [remember this:] when his Lord tried Ibrahim (Abraham) by [His] commandments and the latter fulfilled them...’ (al-Baqara: 124).

This means that he fulfilled the commands primarily with conventional strength and then with mental strength and force. When Allah commanded him, for example, to raise the foundations of the House: ‘and when Ibrahim (Abraham) and Ismail (Ishmael) were raising the foundations of the House...’ (al-Baqara: 127), what did He ask from him? What did he do? He told him to raise the foundations of the House, and in obeying this command, it would have been sufficient for him to build the foundations as high as his hands could reach, but he went beyond that and used his mental capacity. After he had fulfilled the command and carried it out he wanted to do more, and beautify the act beyond what had been required from him, so he brought a huge stone to use as a scaffold and he stood on it so that he could raise the building as high as the stone would allow him, and his son Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him was helping him.

Likewise, in his youth, when he was tested with being burned, he was patient and trusted in Allah. When Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him came and offered help, and he is the mediator between him and his Lord, he refused and said, ‘as for you, no’ meaning, ‘You connect me to Allah but you are not considered a mediator between me and my Lord’.

This is something amazing; a high level of faith and trust in Allah that leaves no room for any doubt or misgiving. That is why Allah saved him and suspended the norm for him. For his sake the law that fire burns was nullified: ‘…O fire! Be you cool, and [a source of] inner peace for Ibrahim (Abraham)!’ (al-Anbiya’: 69)

Consider the caution from the Lord of the command: ‘…O fire! Be you cool, and [a source of] inner peace...’ (al-Anbiya’: 69). That is why the scholars say that had the command been ‘be cold’ only, then it would have become lethally cold for him, possibly more severe than fire.

It should also be considered that this test happened to Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him himself when he was still young, before he had children, he only had to worry about his own wellbeing. When he is blessed with a son, his main concern becomes the wellbeing of his son, and he loves him more than he loves himself, and he desires to give to his son what he could not do for himself. That is why they say that man does not like to have anyone preferred over him except for his son. Therefore, man’s devotion in loving his son is more than his devotion to himself.

Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him after succeeding in his own personal test, Allah tested him with his son, and you know that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was given a son by Allah when he was old and had given up on having children. Then Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him came after long yearning from Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. The boy became a young man and reached the age at which he was old enough to assist his father, and then the command came from Allah that he should slaughter him. This command came in a dream, and dreams are open to interpretation, but Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him did not interpret and took it literally.

This test actually consists of four tests. The first is that he is to slaughter the son that came in old age and after a long wait. The second is that he is not being slaughtered by someone else such that this person would become an enemy to Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. The third is that he is to slaughter him with his own hands. The fourth is that his son is to participate with him in this test and he cannot take him by surprise.

When Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was concerned with carrying out what he had been commanded to do he refused to take his son by surprise for a number of reasons. The first is so that he would not be accused of being harsh and hard-hearted. The second is so that his son does not have a different opinion of his father and accuse him of something that does not befit him. The third is so that his son can participate with him in the test and share in the reward, and in being pleased with Allah's judgement. That' is why he said to him: '...O my dear son! I have seen in a dream that I should sacrifice you: consider, then, what would be your view!...' (as-Saffat: 102)

It is as if he was seeking his opinion in the matter: '...O my father! Do as you are commanded...' (as-Saffat: 102). He did not say, for example 'Do what you want' because this is submission and obedience to the command of Allah Glorified is He: '...you will find me, if Allah so wills, among those who are patient in adversity.' (as-Saffat: 102)

This is how the two of them shared in the (Divine) pleasure, and in patience and in the reward. Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him grabbed victory in this test at the last moment, and this is why Allah the Exalted says, 'But as soon as the two had surrendered themselves...' (as-Saffat: 103), the son and his father '...and [Ibrahim (Abraham)] had laid him down on his face' (as-Saffat: 103) meaning that he intended to slaughter him, or he was about to do it: 'We called out to him: "O Ibrahim (Abraham)! You hast already fulfilled [the purpose of] that dream-vision!" Thus, verily, do We reward the doers of good: for, behold, all this was indeed a trial, clear in itself. And We ransomed him with a tremendous sacrifice.' (as-Saffat: 104 – 107)

When you reflect on this story, you find that The True Lord Glorified is He received these four tests with four gifts: He saved Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him from being slaughtered. He redeemed him with a tremendous sacrifice. Then He gave Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him the glad tidings of Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him and from Ishaq (Isaac) came Ya`qub (Jacob) peace be upon him and then He made all of them prophets as a bounty from Allah.

Allah says '... [and] this, indeed, is a merit most high!' (Fatir: 32) Yes, the True Lord Glorified is He is treating us with great virtue and He is giving us examples to make us love the religion. A good deed with Him is rewarded tenfold, or He increases it to seven hundred times, multiplying it over and over again, but a bad deed is treated like for like.

If one's good deeds outweigh one's bad deeds, then paradise is hoped for him, and if one's bad deeds outweigh one's good deeds, then he waits for the command of Allah. If He wills He will punish him out of His justice and make paradise his final destination and if He wills He will forgive him out of His Grace, and if he rushes to make sincere and heartfelt repentance, Allah will turn his bad deeds into good deeds.

We even have some witty people who say: 'If only I were of the people who commit major sins'. The knowers of Allah supplicate: 'O Allah! Treat us with grace and not with justice. Treat us with beneficence and not with the scale, and treat us with a smaller test and not with reckoning'.

Our Lord treats us with grace as is evidenced by the fact that He includes the one who wrongs himself and the one who keeps halfway amongst those of His servants that are chosen.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He clarifies for us this great virtue by saying:

جَنَّٰتُ عَدۡنٖ يَدۡخُلُونَهَا يُحَلَّوۡنَ فِيهَا مِنۡ أَسَاوِرَ
مِن ذَهَبٖ وَلُؤۡلُؤٗاۖ وَلِبَاسُهُمۡ فِيهَا حَرِيرٞ ﴿٣٣﴾

They will enter lasting Gardens where they will be adorned with bracelets of gold and pearls, where they will wear silk garments [33]
(The Quran, Fatir: 33)

You notice that '...gardens...' (Fatir: 33) is plural because there are numerous gardens, not just one. Gardens (of perpetual bliss) mean that they are permanently established and never-ending. These gardens are described with permanence because Adam peace be upon him had previously been admitted into the garden, but he left(1). As for the gardens of the Hereafter, they are permanent and everlasting and whoever enters paradise will never leave.

In His saying: '...will they enter, therein to be adorned with many bracelets of gold and pearls...' (Fatir: 33), you notice that the True Lord Glorified is He has mentioned the embellishments and adornments before the necessities, and this means that the necessities have already been taken care of. In the Hereafter, this embellishing will be of gold and silk, and this is prohibited for men in the life of this world, but in the Hereafter, it is something else.

The word bracelets is a broken plural that indicates more than ten and you will be adorned, if Allah so wills, in paradise with several bracelets that will cover your arm from the wrist all the way to the shoulder. It is known that a bracelet is used to adorn the wrist and women in the life of this world wear it to beautify themselves. Everything is according to what is possible such that some wealthy women wear expensive bracelets on their upper arm called dumluk (bangles) because of their extravagance.

It is amazing that we see some men receiving the ornamentation of the Hereafter ahead of its time but by other than the proper means. They wear bracelets; what are now called al-insiyal.

The True Lord Glorified is He has mentioned bracelets of gold as ornamentation because ancient kings used to wear them and adorn themselves with them. Khosrau had two bracelets, which have a story(2) in history. When Suraqa ibn Malik(3) became Muslim, he was very thin and his arms were like a goat's legs(4), and some of the Companions used to make fun of him. Prophet Muhammad peace and

(1) From Proofreader: This information is per the knowledge and belief of Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi may Allah rest his soul and it was stated by him to further clarify certain points, but it does not necessarily confirm to the scientific facts and information proven true.

(2) The story of Suraqa ibn-Malik with Khosrau's bracelets.

(3) He is Suraqa ibn-Malik ibn-Ja`shim Al-Madlaji Al-Kinani, Abu-Sufyan, a Companion and was a tracker of footprints before Islam. Abu-Sufyan sent him out to track the traces of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him when he left for the cave with Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him. He became Muslim after the siege of At-Ta`if in the year 8 A.H. Nineteen Hadiths are attributed to him in the books of Hadith and he died in the year 24 A.H. Al-`Alam by Az-Zirikli, 2/80

(4) Abu`Abdullah Al-Husairi mentions in his book, Ar-Rawd Al-Mi`tar Fi Akhbar Al-Aqtar), whilst relating this incident, that Suraqa was a man who had a lot of hair on his forearms.

blessings be upon him forbade them and said something the meaning of which would only be known afterwards: ‘How, when these – Suraqa’s arms – will be wearing Khosrau’s bracelets?’

The Muslims conquered Persia and gathered the spoils from Khosrau’s palaces and wealth and when the spoils were distributed the two bracelets were given to Suraqa. When 'Umar Allah be pleased with him saw them in his hands he said: ‘The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him spoke truthfully.’(1) These bracelets are ‘...of gold and pearls...’ (Fatir: 33), and we know that gold comes from mountains, whilst pearls are from the finery of the oceans.

Consider the precision of the Quranic rendition. When it talks about bracelets it employs the plural form that indicates more than ten, but when it talks about clothes it says: ‘...and therein to be clad in raiment of silk.’ (Fatir: 33) employing the singular form. Why? Because you do not need several clothes unless you have to protect yourself from cold or heat, and there is none of this in paradise, and they will say:

وَقَالُواْ ٱلْحَمْدُ لِلَّهِ ٱلَّذِىٓ أَذْهَبَ عَنَّا ٱلْحَزَنَ إِنَّ رَبَّنَا لَغَفُورٌ شَكُورٌ ﴿٣٤﴾

They will say, ‘Praise be to Allah, who has separated us from all sorrow! Our Lord is truly most forgiving, most appreciative [34]
(The Quran, Fatir: 34)

This is what the believers say when they are enjoying the blessings of paradise, for they do not forget the Giver of blessings Glorified is He. They praise Him, first because He legislated for them the way and brought them to this blessing. They praise Him because He granted them salvation, saved them from disbelief, and guided them to faith. Therefore, this praise is manifold.

---

(1) Narrated by Al-Bayhaqi in Dala`il An-Nubuwwa (6/325) from the Hadith of `Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him that the fur of Khosrau was brought to him and placed in front of him and Suraqa ibn-Malik was amongst the people and he said ‘Give him the bracelets of Khosrau ibn-Hormazd and he put them on his hands and they reached his shoulders. When he saw them on the hands of Suraqa he said, ‘Praise be to Allah, the bracelets of Khosrau ibn-Hormazd are in the hand of Suraqa ibn-Malik.’. Ash-Shafi`i said Suraqa only wore them because the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said ‘Suraqa’ and looked at his arms: ‘It is as if I am seeing you wearing the bracelets of Khosrau.’

The phrase '…all praise is due to Allah...' (Fatir: 34) is the last thing that those who are blessed will say in the Hereafter, as Allah Glorified is He says, '...and their call will close with [the words] "All praise is due to Allah, the Lord of all the worlds!"' (Yunus: 10)

It is from Allah's subtlety and affection towards His slaves that He teaches them how to praise Him Glorified is He and He teaches them this concise phrase that consists of a subject and a predicate: all praise is due to Allah. This is because people differ in their capacity for rhetoric and eloquence. Some people are very eloquent and well spoken, and can beautify their speech, whilst others are not able to do so at all. That is why Allah has taught us how to praise Him, with an utterance that is easy and simple for all.

This is also why the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him when conversing intimately with his Lord, would say: '...I cannot enumerate praise upon You. You are as You have praised Yourself.'(1)

We say that the phrase 'All praise is due to Allah' necessitates a never-ending sequence of praise. When you say, 'all praise is due to Allah' for a blessing the praise itself is a blessing that necessitates further praise, and it deserves praise, and this how the True Lord Glorified is He continues to be praised and the slave continues to praise, endlessly.

His saying: '...who has caused all sorrow to leave us...' (Fatir: 34) refers to the third blessing that deserves praise, for praise, primarily, is for blessings. Secondly, it is because you have praised Allah for His blessings and thirdly it is because Allah has removed sadness from you. Huzn (sadness) is everything that grieves or distresses you, or it is the persistence of man's sadness.

Man is happy and joyous about the blessings in the life of this world, but he is worried because he is scared of losing them. He lives in an anxious and distressed state, fearing that the blessings will desert him or that he will desert them by way of death. In the Hereafter people don not think about these things at all. Thoughts like this disappear when the life of this world disappears, as the reward in the Hereafter is permanent and everlasting. It will not desert you and you will not desert it.

(1) Narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (486) from the Hadith of `Aisha Allah be pleased with her who said: 'One night I realised that Allah's Messenger peace be upon him was not in bed, so I looked for him and my hand fell upon the soles of his feet whilst he was in prostration, and they were raised. He said: "O Allah! I seek refuge in Your pleasure from your wrath, and in Your pardon from Your punishment, and I seek refuge in You from You. I cannot enumerate praise upon you. You are as you have praised yourself."'

And their saying: ‘...our Lord is indeed Much-Forgiving, Exceedingly Grateful’ (Fatir: 34) is as if they are accusing themselves of inadequacy; they have not given Allah His right as is befitting to Him. The blessings that they have are only because their Lord is Much Forgiving and He overlooks their inadequacy, and He is Grateful; He thanks them for their righteous action even though He helped them and enabled them to do it.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He mentions their being established in the blessing that He has granted them. He says:

ٱلَّذِىٓ أَحَلَّنَا دَارَ ٱلْمُقَامَةِ مِن فَضْلِهِۦ لَا يَمَسُّنَا فِيهَا نَصَبٌ وَلَا يَمَسُّنَا فِيهَا لُغُوبٌ ﴿٣٥﴾

He has, in His bounty, settled us in the everlasting
Home where no toil or fatigue will touch us [35]
(The Quran, Fatir: 35)

The phrase ‘...has made us alight...’ (Fatir: 35) means that He has admitted us and made it a dwelling for us. It is an ‘...abode of life enduring...’ (Fatir: 35), i.e. the everlasting abode, which is paradise. Paradise is the everlasting abode. As for the life of this world, it is merely a bridge to the Hereafter, so it is not considered an enduring abode. This paradise that Allah has made as a dwelling for them is not because of their deeds. Rather, it is only out of Allah’s Bounty and Kindness. If you have any righteous action it is only because Allah decreed it for you, so all of it goes back to Allah’s Bounty.

Their saying: ‘...wherein no struggle can assail us...’ (Fatir: 35) means that in paradise, there will be no difficulty or discomfort. ‘...and wherein no weariness can touch us’ (Fatir: 35) refers to the fatigue and lassitude they experience from the moving of equipment. Man suffers in his efforts for the life of this world and is exposed to a lot of difficulties such that we say, ‘he strikes the earth’ which means that he strives as if it is an exhausting and burdensome process from which man returns exhausted and tired. This is weariness until one finds rest from it and relaxes. Then your strength and energy comes back to you and you can work again.

Another example of this meaning is His words: ‘and [who knows that] We have indeed created the heavens and the earth and all that is between them in six days, and [that] no weariness could ever touch Us.’ (Qaf: 38)

Some of them say that nasab (struggle) is the tiredness of the limbs, while lughub (weariness) is the tiredness of the hearts, and what they mean by this is the anxiety that occupies man’s mind. The poet Shawqi Allah rest his soul said the following about this meaning:

a burden is not what the back can bear a burden is only what is in the heart

When(1) `Ali Allah be pleased with him was asked about the strongest of Allah’s soldiers on earth. He replied: ‘Distress, for indeed it takes hold of man, makes him anxious and deprives him of sleep.’ That is why they said: ‘anxiety overcomes sleep, because it is stronger than it’(2), and this anxiety persists until man becomes gaunt after being corpulent, as Al-Mutanabbi(3) said:

Anxiety seizes (4) the corpulent and makes him gaunt
And it makes the youth’s head go grey, and makes him decrepit

(1) The story of asking `Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him about the strongest soldiers of Allah

(2) Mentioned by Abu-`Ali Al-Qali in Dhayl Al-Amali Wa An-Nawadir (2: 193) that `Ali ibn-Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him said: ‘The strongest of your Lord’s soldiers are ten: the unshakable mountains, the iron that cuts the mountains, the fire that melts the iron, the water that puts out the fire, the clouds placed between the sky and the earth that bring water, the wind that cuts through the clouds, and the son of Adam overcomes the wind by covering himself with a garment or something else and he carries out his need, intoxication overcomes the son of Adam and sleep overcomes intoxication, and anxiety overcomes sleep, so the strongest of Allah’s creation is anxiety.’

(3) Al-Mutanabbi is Ahmad ibn Al-Hussain ibn Al-Hassan Al-Kindi, also known as Abu At-Tayyib, born in Kufa in 303 A.H. He wise poet whose lineage goes back to Kinda in Al-Kufa. He was raised in Greater Syria. He recited poetry as a boy and he claimed prophecy in the desert of Samawa and this is why he is called Al-Mutanabbi (the one who claims prophecy), but he repented and rejected being called this. He wrote poetry in praise of Kafur Al-Ikshidi in Egypt and then wrote poetry lampooning him. He also wrote poetry in praise of `Adu Ad-Dawla ibn-Buwayh in Shiraz. He was murdered in 354 A.H.

(4) The actual wording is ‘anxiety destroys’ as it is in the Diwan of Al-Mutanabbi from a poem he has in a complete metre Bahr Al-Kamil which consists of 26 verses, and the most famous verses in this poem are:
The possessor of intellect is miserable, even in paradise, by his intellect and his ignorant brother in distress lives carefree

After the True Lord Glorified is He has told us about the people of faith who are chosen from His servants, their reward in the gardens of perpetual bliss in which the soul rejoices and the glad tidings of the pious; Allah Glorified is He mentions the opposite, i.e. the warnings for the foolish. Mentioning the opposite makes the meaning clearer and it is one of the features of Quranic discourse. For example, Allah Glorified is He says, 'Behold, [in the life to come] the truly virtuous will indeed be in bliss, whereas, behold, the wicked will indeed be in a blazing fire.' (al-Infitar: 13-14), and: 'Let them, then, laugh a little – for they will weep a lot in return for what they have earned.' (at-Tawba: 82)

Allah says:

وَٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ لَهُمۡ نَارُ جَهَنَّمَ لَا يُقۡضَىٰ عَلَيۡهِمۡ فَيَمُوتُواْ وَلَا يُخَفَّفُ
عَنۡهُم مِّنۡ عَذَابِهَاۚ كَذَٰلِكَ نَجۡزِي كُلَّ كَفُورٖ ٣٦

But those who reject the truth will stay in Hellfire, where they will neither be finished off by death, nor be relieved from Hell's torment: this is how We reward hardened disbelievers [36] (The Quran, Fatir: 36)

His saying '...the fire of Hell awaits them...' (Fatir: 36) means that they own it and it is their jurisdiction. For example, when we say that so and so has such and such, as if they are attached to it, and it is attached to them in a relationship of owner and owned. The moment they enter it, and we seek refuge in Allah, they will wish they could get out of it, even by way of death, as the poet said:

It suffices you as a malady that you see death as a cure
What agony can be harder than wishing for death?(1)

Yes, they desire liberation, even by way of death, but this is completely out of the question. This understanding is clear in another verse: 'and they will cry: "O you [angel] who rules [over hell]! Let you Lord put an end to us!" – [whereupon] he will reply: "Verily, you must live on [in this state]"' (az-Zukhruf: 77) because death is not a punishment, but rather for them, it is relief from a punishment that is more severe and longer lasting.

---

(1) This is also a verse of Al-Mutanabbi and it is the opening line of a poem in his Diwan; part of a long metre, that consists of 47 verses.

I want to mention that some justices claim that the Book of Allah does not contain any evidence for stoning a free married woman who commits fornication, and they infer this from His saying regarding slave girls: '...they shall be liable to half the penalty to which free married women are liable...' (an-Nisa': 25). They say that because the act of stoning is not divisible; there cannot be a half of stoning, so as long as stoning is indivisible then stoning cannot be. Our Lord the Glorified and Exalted inspired us and we said, 'all praise is for Allah'. We must first define what punishment is. Punishment means to cause pain to a living thing. If we gather together the verses in the Quran that deal with this issue then we have a clearer picture and a fuller understanding. In the story of Sulaiman's (Solomon's) hoopoe, Allah Glorified is He says, '[If so,] I will punish him most severely or kill him...' (an-Naml: 21). Therefore death, slaughter, or killing is not a punishment. Stoning is a means of causing death, and to cause death is to terminate punishment.

In this verse, the True Lord Glorified is He wanted to make something clear to His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him by way of this verse, and He distinguished between a ruling that is based on a text and a ruling that is based on the legislator's practical application because you can interpret a text, but you cannot interpret the Prophet's practical application, and it has been established that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him did practice stoning.

And if the case was as the justice claims then the verse would be: 'they shall be liable to half of that which free married women are liable' without any punishment being mentioned. His saying: '...the penalty...' (an-Nisa': 25) means that it cannot be anything else. It is a clarification of what the half refers to, and it is a half of the punishment, but stoning is not punishment but rather a termination of punishment.

Then, Allah Glorified is He told us about the state of the people of the fire: '...nor shall any of the suffering caused by that (fire) be lightened for them' (Fatir: 36). It is a permanent punishment that will not cease or be mitigated. We seek refuge in Allah Glorified is He from such punishments, but a man may be tested in the life of this world by being arrested and beaten. He may become accustomed to the pain, to an extent, that his body may become numb. At that point, he may start feeling less pain with the same painful stimuli. People who are daily whipped with a lash, or many lashes, may feel the pain dwindling as more time passes. An Arab poet described this phenomenon truthfully when he said:

‘Whoever is insignificant finds shame bearable,
Wounding a corpse does not cause any pain.’(1)

Another poet also said:

‘I was struck with many arrows,
While arrowheads broke the other arrowheads’ (2)

Therefore, punishment may be mitigated in the life of this world. This is a result of a process known as habituation, which is the inability to feel repetitive and chronic stimuli, such as pain. This resembles the skin losing its connection to the brain. However, the punishment of the Hereafter will not be mitigated for the disbelievers, regardless of its period. That is why Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: ‘For, verily, We shall cause those who denied the truth of Our messages to endure fire: (and) every time their skins are burnt off, We shall replace them with new skins, so that they may taste the suffering (in full). Verily, Allah is Almighty and Wise.’ (an-Nisa’: 56) Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

مَّا يَتَذَكَّرُ فِيهِ مَن تَذَكَّرَ وَجَآءَكُمُ ٱلنَّذِيرُ ۖ فَذُوقُوا۟ فَمَا لِلظَّـٰلِمِينَ مِن نَّصِيرٍ ﴿٣٧﴾

They will cry out loud in Hell, ‘Lord, let us out, and we will do righteous deeds, not what we did before!’ –‘ Did We not give you a life long enough to take warning if you were going to? The warner came to you, now taste the punishment.’ The evildoers will have nobody to help them [37] (The Quran, Fatir: 37)

The meaning of the words: ‘...they will cry aloud (yastirikhoon)’ (Fatir: 37) is that they will scream and shout while calling for help. The word yastirikhoon is the plural verb derived from the noun surakh (cry). This is when a person shouts while asking someone else to save them from a predicament, crisis, or punishment. An example of this is what we hear when a fire breaks out, Allah, forbid these fires from harming our loved ones, and the people find themselves shouting while crying for help.

(1) This verse is also by Al-Mutanabbi. It is from a poem which starts with the verse: ‘There is no pride except for the one who is not wronged. Intelligent or belligerent, he does not sleep.’ And it is in his Diwan, which is of the light metre, Bahr Al-Khafeef, and it consists of 42 verses.

(2) Al-Mutanabbi has also used a similar verse in another poem of his Diwan, which is based on the abundant poetic metre Bahr Al-Wafir. This poem consists of 45 verses, and it precedes the meaning in this wording.

These disbelievers will cry aloud: ‘in that (hell-fire)’ (Fatir: 37). They will say, ‘O our Lord! Cause us to come out (of this suffering)! We shall (henceforth) do good deeds, not such as we were turned to do (before this time)!’ (Fatir: 37)

First, it is noticeable that they will use the words, ‘Our Lord’, while they are suffering in the hell-fire. They had rejected the concept of Allah’s Divinity and Lordship in their lives of this world. Indeed, they will acknowledge it in the hell-fire, but it will be too late. At that point, they will affirm, against themselves, that their worldly actions were not righteous. Their confessions will only be used as arguments against them, and their punishment will be continued without mitigation. If Allah Glorified is He were to respond to their request and return them to this worldly life again, would they act righteously according to their promises? Allah Glorified is He knows very well that they are lying, as He says, ‘And if they were sent back, they would return unto that which they are forbidden. Lo! They are liars.’ (al-An‘am: 28)

Therefore, it is just something that they say because of the difficulty in which they are. If they were to be sent back to this world, they will only resume their regular disbelieving ways. That is why Allah Glorified is He will respond to them: ‘Did We not grant you a life that was long enough, so that whoever was willing to take thought could bethink himself?’ (Fatir: 37) Allah Glorified is He has prolonged their lives in this world, and they had enough time and an ample opportunity to reflect upon their choices.

‘...And (withal,) a warning messenger had been sent to you!’ (Fatir: 37) This is the messenger who admonished and warned them against the consequences of their actions. Despite that, they did not take the matter seriously and did not correct themselves in due time. ‘Taste, then, (the fruit of your evil deeds): for evildoers shall have none to succour them.’ (Fatir: 37) They will only taste the punishment, and they will have: ‘...no supporter (naseer) to succour them’ (Fatir: 37). A naseer (supporter) is the one who is prepared to go into battles to defend you. In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says, '...no protecting friend nor any helper' (ash-Shura: 31). A wali (protecting friend) is a person who is close to you and defends you with hope, affection and compassion. The disbelievers in the hell-fire will have no protecting friend or helper in their situation. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ عَـٰلِمُ غَيْبِ ٱلسَّمَـٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ عَلِيمٌۢ بِذَاتِ ٱلصُّدُورِ ﴿٣٨﴾

Allah knows all that is hidden in the heavens and earth;
He knows the thoughts contained in the heart [38]
(The Quran, Fatir: 38)

This verse comes as an explanation of the verses that preceded it. Allah Glorified is He knows everything that is concealed in the heavens and the earth. He also knows the secrets of the hearts, as well as their hidden contents and intentions. He knew the intentions of the people of the fire, and He knew that if they were sent back to the life of this world, they would have resumed their evil ways. Thus, Allah Glorified is He will leave them in that severe situation and will not send them back to this life, as this worldly life will not be repeated. Then, Allah Glorified is He says,

هُوَ ٱلَّذِى جَعَلَكُمْ خَلَـٰٓئِفَ فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ ۚ فَمَن كَفَرَ فَعَلَيْهِ كُفْرُهُۥ ۖ وَلَا يَزِيدُ ٱلْكَـٰفِرِينَ
كُفْرُهُمْ عِندَ رَبِّهِمْ إِلَّا مَقْتًا ۖ وَلَا يَزِيدُ ٱلْكَـٰفِرِينَ كُفْرُهُمْ إِلَّا خَسَارًا ﴿٣٩﴾

It is He who made you [people] successors to the land. Those who deny the truth will bear the consequences: their denial will only make them more odious to their Lord, and add only to their loss [39] (The Quran, Fatir: 39)

The meaning of the word khala`if (inheriting successors) is that Allah Glorified is He created human beings as successive generations that inherit one another. Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: 'I am about to place a successor in the earth' (al-Baqara: 30) referring to Prophet Adam peace be upon him. That is why we said that Allah Glorified is He has granted us some of His attributes so that we can carry out our duties on this earth. Our power to act is from Allah's Power. If we have wisdom in our behaviour, then it is from Allah's Wisdom, and so forth. This is the meaning of the concept of khilafah (succession) because a human being will find that everything which he can essentially do has been granted to him by his Creator. None of his power or nature is intrinsic.

We previously stated that, when you stand up from your seat, you are able to perform that action without knowing what took place in your organs and muscles, and how the commands were issued to these muscles to move. In reality, this is one of the attributes of the Creator and He has granted you a portion of it. The evidence is that He has already deprived other people of this ability, to make it clear to you that your power is not intrinsic in your body. Therefore, do not be deluded by it.

Scientists have imitated human movements to make robots and bulldozers. A single mechanical movement from the machine requires several commands and movements by their driver, who needs to press on a specific button for each movement. You do not have to do anything like this to move the various parts of your body. If you want to carry out a movement, you simply will it and your organs and limbs cooperate with you. They obey your commands without you having to contemplate the involved processes. If one of Allah's creatures can carry out such movements without commanding any limb or organ of their body, what do you perceive about the Creator's Absolute Might Glorified is He? Do you deny that He can say to anything 'Be!' and it exists, following his Will?

Allah Glorified is He says, 'His command alone is such that when He wills a thing to be, He but says unto it, "Be!", and it is.' (Ya Sin: 82) When you want to move, you do not command any of your organs because you do not know which ones to command. In addition, you do not know what happens inside these interconnected organs, muscles and limbs to carry out this movement. That is why the Creator has arranged you in a way such that your limbs act merely according to your will. When Allah Glorified is He commands things with the word, 'Be', He knows the precise mechanisms and instruments that are going to move.

The Creator did not give you complete command over any of your limbs. He only subjected them to you and subjugated them to your will, but you cannot guarantee that they will obey your commands. In some diseases, the person orders his limbs to move and they disobey his orders. On the other hand, everything obeys the Creator's command.

Before summoning a human being into existence, Allah Glorified is He created their subsistence on earth before actually creating them. Additionally, Allah guaranteed that these essential forms of sustenance will be sufficient until the Day of Resurrection. Then, Allah Glorified is He left their intellects to work and discover what is necessary for life to be luxurious and comfortable.

Therefore, a vicegerent of Allah Glorified is He on earth has no choice but to receive Allah's Commandments with obedience and compliance. If they disbelieve after these blessings, they should know that: '…denial will fall back upon those who disbelieve' (Fatir: 39). Disbelief (kufr) means that a person did not obey Allah's Commandments. The Arabic word kufr means to cover something, so disbelieving in Allah Glorified is He is to cover and deny His Existence. That is why we previously said that disbelief is an indicator of the existence of faith because if faith in Allah Glorified is He never existed, there would not have been any disbelief.

In addition to disbelief in Allah Glorified is He there is also disbelief in the bounties and responsibilities that He has granted us. Some people disbelieve in Allah Glorified is He by forgetting Him the One Who provided these blessings for them. They may have also been idle and indolent by setting aside the exploration and extraction of these blessings from the depths of the earth. This leaves the blessings in places where people cannot benefit from them. Disbelief in these blessings also includes not fulfilling Allah's rights regarding them, and concealing such bounties from the deprived people who direly need them.

The famines and food crises that the world is suffering from today are natural consequences of disbelieving in Allah's blessings, either by being lazy and refraining from exploring them, or by extracting them from the earth while being miserly and stingy towards the poorer people. For instance, we lived for a long time in a narrow river valley without trying to explore the resources of the desert. Even when we started to farm the desert lands, we cultivated luxurious cash crops instead of cultivating the essential sources of our food. Now, we find our markets full of oranges, bananas, grapes, cantaloupes and strawberries, while we beg for a loaf of bread and beseech others for the actual necessities of our lives.

Therefore, the punishment here follows the poor nature of the work. ‘Denial will fall back upon those who disbelieve’ (Fatir: 39). The penalty of the disbelievers in Allah Glorified is He will be punishment in the Hereafter. The penalty of the disbelievers in Allah’s blessings will be hunger and humiliation at the hands of other people. If a man is humiliated by someone else, he will never fulfil a divine command or prohibition, and he will never be concerned with any religion or way. May Allah Glorified is He have mercy upon our grandparents who said, ‘The more you consume food that comes from your axe, the more you speak from your head’.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says, clarifying the end result of disbelief: ‘…for (persistent) denial of this truth only adds to the disbelievers’ loathsomeness in their Lord’s sight, and thus, their denial of this truth does but add to the disbelievers’ loss’ (Fatir: 39). Yes, disbelief will increase Allah’s contempt for the disbelievers because they denied their Lord, Creator, Provider, and the One Who granted their blessings. Any disbelief in one of these attributes will lead to hatred and contempt from Allah Glorified is He and this contempt will increase as the person persists in their disbelief. Then, that person will be at a ‘loss’ (Fatir: 39), and what loss is more than disbelieving in Allah Glorified is He? The loss here is massive because it involves the destruction and loss of all good in the life of this world and the Hereafter. Then, Allah Glorified is He says,

قُلْ أَرَءَيْتُمْ شُرَكَآءَكُمُ ٱلَّذِينَ تَدْعُونَ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ أَرُونِى مَاذَا خَلَقُوا۟ مِنَ
ٱلْأَرْضِ أَمْ لَهُمْ شِرْكٌ فِى ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ أَمْ ءَاتَيْنَٰهُمْ كِتَٰبًا فَهُمْ عَلَىٰ بَيِّنَتٍ مِّنْهُ ۚ
بَلْ إِن يَعِدُ ٱلظَّٰلِمُونَ بَعْضُهُم بَعْضًا إِلَّا غُرُورًا ﴿٤٠﴾

Say, ‘Consider those “partners” of yours that you call upon beside Allah. Show me! What part of the earth did they create? What share of the heavens do they possess?’ Have We given them a book that contains clear evidence? No indeed! The idolaters promise each other only delusion [40]
(The Quran, Fatir: 40)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was told to ask the disbelievers: ‘Have you seen (and considered) those beings and forces to whom you ascribe a share in Allah’s divinity, (and) whom you invoke beside Allah?' (Fatir: 40) This question is intended to order the disbelievers, 'Tell me about these partners you worship besides Allah'. It is not intended as a simple question asking whether they have seen their false deities. Instead, the verse is demanding any credible information that these disbelievers had, which forced them to worship the false deities that they were accustomed to worship besides Allah Glorified is He. Allah Glorified is He wanted them to judge their dimness in this matter.

The words 'Show me what it is that they have created on Earth' (Fatir: 40) mean, 'Tell me about anything they have created on this earth'. '...or do (you claim that) they have a share in (governing) the heavens?' (Fatir: 40) means, 'Did they assist Allah in creating the heavens?' and 'Have We ever revealed them a divine book on which they could rely as evidence (in support of their views)?' (Fatir: 40), means, 'Is there a book that permits idolatry for you, as polytheists, and is an argument that supports your polytheism'?

Allah Glorified is He explained this matter to us in another verse in the Quran, where He says, 'I did not make them witnesses of the creation of the heavens and the earth, nor of the creation of their own selves; and neither do I (have any need to) take as My helpers those (beings) that lead (men) astray.' (al-Kahf: 51) Allah Glorified is He does not only negate their partaking with Him in the creation, but He negates their mere witnessing of their creation. They have no knowledge of creation, nor do they have any connection to it. They are not able to describe how the skies and the earth were created, nor how they, themselves, were made.

Then He says, 'Nay' (Fatir: 40), which is a word that negates what was said before it and confirms the judgement that is made after it. '(the hope which) the evildoers hold out to one another (is) nothing but a delusion' (Fatir: 40); what the evildoers hope of one another is nothing but a delusion. A deluder is an impostor who fashions falsehood in the form of truth, in order to attract people to it, and he embellishes it in order to delude them with it.

In this regard, Allah Glorified is He also says in another verse: 'O man! What is it that lures you away from your Bountiful (kareem) Lord?' (al-Infitar: 6) This verse means: 'What has deluded you into disobeying Him? What encouraged you to go against His commands'? It is as if Allah Glorified is He is teaching us the answer in the same words of the question. He used the word kareem (bountiful) because it is His Bounty and Generosity that has lured us away from Him.

The meaning of the word ‘Nay’ establishes that all these disbelievers’ concepts that were mentioned are false. Their false deities and idols have not participated in the creation of anything. In addition, no divine revelation has come to these polytheists to act as a proof in their favour. Their disbelief is the result of their own deceptive ornamentation, and the reality is that they are deluding and deceiving one another with these false concepts. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ يُمْسِكُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضَ أَن تَزُولَا ۚ وَلَئِن زَالَتَآ إِنْ
أَمْسَكَهُمَا مِنْ أَحَدٍ مِّنۢ بَعْدِهِۦٓ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ كَانَ حَلِيمًا غَفُورًا ﴿٤١﴾

Allah keeps the heavens and earth from vanishing; if they did vanish, no one else could stop them. Allah is most forbearing, most forgiving [41] (The Quran, Fatir: 41)

Indeed, Allah Glorified is He alone is the One Who keeps the skies from collapsing. He keeps the heavens and the earth from ceasing to be. If the Creator were to leave them, no one else would be able to hold them from wreaking disorder. The words: ‘...after He (Allah Glorified is He) will have ceased to do so’ (Fatir: 41) confirmed that this matter belongs to Allah Glorified is He alone. He has no partner or adversary in this universe. This concept arises from the essence of the verse: ‘Say, “He Allah, the One.”’ (al-Ikhlas: 1)

This is because Allah Glorified is He created the skies and the earth without any visible pillars or supports to carry them. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘(He) created the skies without any supports that you could see’ (Luqman: 10). There is no one besides Allah Glorified is He who raised this blue dome in this way without pillars. Indeed, the utmost progress that humans have achieved in construction was the building of bridges that are several metres long without any pillars in the middle. To do that, they use supports that are stronger at the ends, and this is called a suspension bridge. The construction of these bridges is not even close to the magnificence of the sky. The sky, as we have previously said, is everything that is above you. Allah Glorified is He is holding the sky and everything that is in it, such as the stars, moons, celestial bodies, and constellations. He also keeps the earth from shaking with its inhabitants and troubling them.

Scientists tell us that gravity holds these bodies together, but if there is a gravitational force that pulls us towards the earth, divine power has still maintained other objects in their orbits away from colliding and destroying the earth during our lives. The system of the universe is perfect. Everything in the skies and the earth has what it needs to preserve its equilibrium and prevent it from escaping its path.

Allah Glorified is He says, '…for if they should ever deviate, none could uphold them after He will have ceased to do so' (Fatir: 41). These words carry the meaning of negation, as in Allah's saying: '...none are their mothers except those who gave them birth' (al-Mujadala: 2). The verse is concluded with Allah's saying: '(But) verily, He is Ever-Forbearing, Much-Forgiving.' (Fatir: 41) What is the relationship between these attributes of Allah Glorified is He (Ever-Forbearing and Much-Forgiving) and the cosmic issue of upholding the heavens and the earth? Scholars said that Allah mentions these attributes in this verse because a lot of debate has surrounded the issue of cosmic creation. Many people transgressed in their arguments against Allah's Divine Power. They ignorantly refuted that the skies and the earth are upheld by supports because they did not notice any pillars when they walked the earth or flew airplanes in the atmosphere.

It suffices that the Creator Glorified is He informed us of it by saying: 'He has created the skies without any supports that you could see' (Luqman: 10). This means that they do not really have pillars or do have pillars which we cannot see. Both understandings are valid and we must not refute them without knowledge.

Allah Glorified is He is Ever Forbearing and does not punish those who show audacity towards Him or those who occupy themselves with what is His right. Indeed, He does not even hasten to punish those who deny His Existence. Without this forbearance, He would have collapsed His creation upon our heads.

Allah Glorified is He says in a Qudsi Hadith: ‘The earth said, “O Lord! Allow me to swallow up the children of Adam, for they enjoy the good that You have given them, but they do not thank You.” The sky said, “O Lord! Allow me to send down darkness upon the children of Adam, for they enjoy the good that You have given them, but they do not thank You.” The mountains said, “O Lord! Allow us to fall upon the children of Adam, for they enjoy the good that you have given them, but they do not thank You.” The seas said, “O Lord! Allow us to drown the children of Adam, for they enjoy the good that You have given them, but they do not thank You.”’ Allah, responds: ‘Leave Me and My creation. If you had created them, you would have had mercy upon them. If they repent, then I am their beloved, and if they do not repent, then I am their source of cure.’[1] Therefore, if it was not for Allah’s Forbearance towards us and His Forgiveness for our sins, He would not uphold the skies and the earth, and this universe would collapse upon itself. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَأَقۡسَمُواْ بِٱللَّهِ جَهۡدَ أَيۡمَٰنِهِمۡ لَئِن جَآءَهُمۡ نَذِيرٞ لَّيَكُونُنَّ أَهۡدَىٰ
مِنۡ إِحۡدَى ٱلۡأُمَمِۖ فَلَمَّا جَآءَهُمۡ نَذِيرٞ مَّا زَادَهُمۡ إِلَّا نُفُورًا ﴿٤٢﴾

[The idolaters] swore their most solemn oath that, if someone came to warn them, they would be more rightly guided than any [other] community, but when someone did come they turned yet further away [42] (The Quran, Fatir: 42)

Allah Glorified is He says that they swore: ‘...their most solemn oaths’ (Fatir: 42). They strived in their oaths to the greatest extent possible, ‘that if a warning messenger should ever come to them, they would follow his guidance better’ and they would be better in action, ‘...than any of the (older) communities' (Fatir: 42). Therefore, they claimed that they would have been better than the previous nations.

---

(1) Included by Al-Ghazali in his Ihya` `Ulum Ad-Din (4/52) from the Hadith of some of the first three generations of Muslims, the wording is: ‘There is not a slave that disobeys (Allah) except that the space he occupies on the earth asks permission to swallow him up, and what is above him in the sky asks permission to send darkness upon him. Allah said to the sky and the earth: ‘Leave my slave alone and give him respite, for indeed you two did not create him. Had you created him, you would show him mercy. He may turn to Me in repentance, and if so I will forgive him, and he may change and act righteously, and if so I will turn his bad deeds into good ones.’

Allah Glorified is He clarifies this meaning in another verse, as He says, 'And, indeed, they (who deny the truth) have always said, "If only we had a Scripture (to this effect) from our forefathers, we would certainly be true servants of Allah."' (as-Saffat: 167-169) They said these words with their mouths, and Allah knew that they were lying. However, He loosened the reins for them and did not disclose their lies. Indeed, they should not have worried or concerned themselves about those nations of ancient times because the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was the reminder sent to guide their own nation.

Allah Glorified is He says, '...but now that a warning messenger (Prophet Muhammad) has been sent to them, (his call) but increased their aversion' (Fatir: 42). They avoided the truth and distanced themselves from its guidance, because the message came through Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They claimed that if it had come through the way of a leading tribesman, they would have certainly accepted it. Allah Glorified is He says, 'And they say, "Why was not this Quran bestowed on some great man of the two cities?"' (az-Zukhruf: 31)

Allah Glorified is He responds to them by saying: 'Is it they who distribute your Lord's Grace? (Nay, as) it is We who distribute their means of livelihood among them in the life of this world, and raise some of them by degrees above others.' (az-Zukhruf: 32) It is amazing that they want Allah's Mercy to be distributed according to their desires and the choice of Allah's Messenger to be made as they wish. Allah Glorified is He says, 'Allah knows best upon whom to bestow His Message' (al-An'am: 124).

Allah Glorified is He distributed amongst them the simplest affairs of their life in this world. He made some people rich, some people poor, some people strong, and some people weak. The disbeliever's words are evidence that they have no objections regarding the Quran itself. They did not deny it because it was a form of magic, sorcery, or poetry as they had previously claimed. They only rejected it because it was revealed to none other than Prophet

Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Then, Allah Glorified is He explains the reasons behind their aversion:

ٱسۡتِكۡبَارٗا فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ وَمَكۡرَ ٱلسَّيِّيِٕۚ وَلَا يَحِيقُ ٱلۡمَكۡرُ ٱلسَّيِّئُ إِلَّا بِأَهۡلِهِۦۚ فَهَلۡ يَنظُرُونَ
إِلَّا سُنَّتَ ٱلۡأَوَّلِينَۚ فَلَن تَجِدَ لِسُنَّتِ ٱللَّهِ تَبۡدِيلٗاۖ وَلَن تَجِدَ لِسُنَّتِ ٱللَّهِ تَحۡوِيلًا ﴿٤٣﴾

Became more arrogant in the land, and intensified their plotting of evil – the plotting of evil only rebounds on those who plot. Do they expect anything but what happened to earlier people? You will never find any change in Allah's practice; you will never find any deviation there [43]
(The Quran, Fatir: 43)

They were arrogant towards the truth and did not accept it because this truth affected their positions of power and leadership. It only allowed them a position of servitude and equality with all the other beings in creation. They were used to authority and control, so it was difficult for them to be equal to their slaves. It is as if Allah Glorified is He was responding to them, 'O you who are too arrogant to accept the truth because of the authority you have! Does it not befit you to swallow your pride and ask yourselves where your leadership came from'?

By Allah, if Allah had enabled Abraha to destroy the Ka'ba during the event of the elephant, the people of the peninsula would have flocked to another Ka`ba in the Yemeni city of Sana'a. If that had happened, would the Quraysh polytheists have had any leadership? Would they have any dignity or mention amongst the people? They used to forbid people from walking around the Ka`ba unless they were naked, so that the pilgrims would buy clothes from them! Therefore, they should have used their intellects and thought about the source of their dignity. Where did their provisions come from?

Allah Glorified is He says, 'Are you not aware how your Lord dealt with the Army of the Elephant? Did He not utterly confound their artful planning? Thus, He let loose upon them great swarms of flying creatures, which smote them with stone-hard blows of chastisement pre-ordained, and caused them to become like a field of grain that has been eaten down to its roots.' (al-Fil: 1-5)

Why did Allah Glorified is He do this to the Army of the Elephant? Allah Glorified is He gives the answer in the chapter of Quraysh which comes immediately after the chapter of al-Fil: ‘So that Quraysh might remain habitually secure, in their winter and summer journeys. Let them, therefore, worship the Lord of this House, who has given them food against hunger, and made them safe from danger.’ (Quraysh: 1-4)

Allah Glorified is He punished the Army of the Elephant for the sake of Quraysh. This was to prolong their positions of leadership and augment their nourishment and security. Despite all of this, they arrogantly rejected Allah’s way and then stubbornly resisted His Messenger, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him while plotting against him.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘(It was due to) their arrogant behaviour on earth, and their devising of evil (arguments against Allah’s messages)’ (Fatir: 43). They devised their evil plots against Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the believers with him, in order to make them stop their call to Islam. If they had known the cause of their arrogance, this arrogance would have guided them to believe in the One Who made them powerful.

Then Allah Glorified is He affirms this reality in the words: ‘...Yet (in the end,) such evil scheming will engulf none but its authors’ (Fatir: 43), for they schemed and plotted against Allah’s Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and conspired against him, and they wronged the believers and tortured them. However, Allah Glorified is He made their plans futile, as He mentioned in another verse: ‘And (remember, O Prophet,) how those who were bent on denying the truth were scheming against you.’ (al-Anfal: 30) They wanted to imprison Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says, regarding their schemes to stop Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘Or to slay you, or to drive you away: thus, have they (always) schemed: but Allah brought their scheming to nothing – for Allah is above all schemers.’ (al-Anfal: 30)

They had resorted to all kinds of tactics and tricks to put an end to the call of Islam, but they were unsuccessful. Even when they made plans to kill Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Allah Glorified is He thwarted their efforts and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him escaped while they were sleeping, as he scattered dust on their heads. Then, when they despaired of putting an end to him with different tactics, they turned to the jinn. They asked them to bewitch Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him but Allah Glorified is He saved him from them, and they still tried to place poison into his food.

It is as if Allah Glorified is He was saying to them, ‘Save your efforts. You will not put out Allah’s Light, and you will not prevent Muhammad from His call. You will not be able to do that with all your mockery, derisions, harm, conspiracies, plots or magic’. ‘Yet (in the end,) such evil scheming will engulf none but its authors’ (Fatir: 43), which means that their schemes will descend upon them and encompass them.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Can they expect anything but the traditional outcome (and punishment) of those (sinners) of older times?’ (Fatir: 43) This means that they should not expect any other outcome than the same Sunna (outcome or tradition) of those older nations regarding the previous messengers. A Sunna is a way or custom that is traditionally followed. So, did they find that Allah Glorified is He had abandoned any of the previous messengers he had sent to the previous nations, or found any enemies and deniers whom Allah did not destroy when they harmed His messengers? Supporting the messengers is a followed divine practice, as Allah say, ‘…and that, verily, Our hosts – they indeed – would (in the end) be victorious’ (as-Saffat: 173).

Then, Allah Glorified is He emphasizes this meaning by saying: ‘Thus (it is): no change will you ever find in Allah’s way.’ (Fatir: 43) Why does Allah’s way never change or alter? Allah Glorified is He does not have a bida`, and the meaning of a bida` is any primary draft that may be subject to alteration or improvement. Allah Glorified is He does not have a bida` because there is no way that is better than Allah’s way. Secondly, it is because Allah Glorified is He is the Only True Deity. There are no partners to His Divinity, and there is no one to change what He does.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

أَوَلَمْ يَسِيرُوا۟ فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ فَيَنظُرُوا۟ كَيْفَ كَانَ عَـٰقِبَةُ ٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبْلِهِمْ وَكَانُوٓا۟ أَشَدَّ مِنْهُمْ قُوَّةً ۚ وَمَا
كَانَ ٱللَّهُ لِيُعْجِزَهُۥ مِن شَىْءٍ فِى ٱلسَّمَـٰوَٰتِ وَلَا فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ كَانَ عَلِيمًا قَدِيرًا ﴿٤٤﴾

Have they not travelled in the land and seen how those before them met their end, although they were superior to them in strength? Allah is not to be frustrated by anything in the heavens or on the earth: He is all knowing, all powerful [44] (The Quran, Fatir: 44)

The question in: ‘Have they never walked through the land and beheld’ (Fatir: 44) is a question expressing astonishment ‘Have they never walked through the land and beheld what happened to those (deniers of the truth) who lived before their time’ (Fatir: 44)? This is a reference to the disbelievers who were punished by Allah Glorified is He ‘and were greater in power than they are?’ (Fatir: 44) These previous nations had more power than Quraysh’s polytheists.

Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: ‘And, verily, (to this day) you pass by the remnants of their dwellings at morning-time, and by night. Will you not, then, use your reasoning?’ (as-Saffat: 137-138) In their travels and movements, they did pass by the towns of `Ad and Thamud, as well as the people of Lut (Lot) and Saleh (Shelah). Although these previous nations had civilizations, as well as great monuments and palaces that were unmatched, the polytheists saw their ruins and the destruction and annihilation that befell them after denying their messengers.

Allah Glorified is He says in another chapter: ‘Are you not aware of how your Lord has dealt with (the tribe of) `Ad, (the people of) Iram who had many pillars, the like of whom has never been reared in all the land? And with (the tribe of) Thamud, who hollowed out rocks in the valley? And with Pharaoh of the (many) monuments? (It was they) who transgressed all bounds of equity all over their lands, and brought about great corruption therein: and therefore, your Lord let loose upon them a scourge of suffering: for, verily, your Lord is ever observation!’ (al-Fajr: 6-14) It is startling that the people who had these civilizations, and whom everyone had heard of, were unable to do anything to protect themselves from falling into oblivion.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Have they never walked through the land…’ (Fatir: 44). We used to think that walking in the earth meant travelling upon its land because we travel on the earth and not in it. However, the chief form of sustenance upon the earth is its atmosphere of air. You can survive without water for several days, and you can survive longer without food, but you cannot survive without air except for a short time.

This atmosphere of air is part of the earth, and that is why it turns around with the globe and is attached to it. According to this meaning, we do not travel upon the earth, but rather, travel in it. Even a plane that flies in the upper strata of the atmosphere is travelling in the earth because this air is part of the earth itself and a main source of its sustenance needed for breathing and nourishment.

To convince you that this air is a chief force of the earth’s sustenance, try this experiment. Take a flowerpot or a barrel and put in it some agricultural soil of a specific weight. Then, plant in it a fruit-bearing tree, like bananas for example. After some time, weigh the fruits that you have taken from the tree and weigh what has been subtracted from the soil. You will find that a significant portion of the weight of the fruit came from the atmosphere, as its carbon was formed from the carbon dioxide molecules in the air.

Air is the essential nutrient for plants, and that is why we say that it is the source of their nourishment, we used to believe that the soil was the main source needed for their nourishment. That is why the Quran pointed out this matter saying: ‘And if they would but truly observe the Torah and the Gospel and all (the revelation) that has been bestowed upon them from their Lord, they would indeed be nourished from above them and from below them.’ (al-Ma‘ida: 66) Allah Glorified is He mentions the nourishment coming from above them before mentioning the nourishment coming from below them.

Allah Glorified is He says in this verse: ‘Have they never walked through the land and beheld what happened to those (deniers of the truth)…’ (Fatir: 44)? Allah Glorified is He wants the disbelievers to look at the realities of their lives. He wants them to avoid looking at the believers’ speech, but rather, observe the reality of their own lives. He says, ‘Have they never walked…’ (Fatir: 44) because they did indeed, travel in the earth. These people traded in the North of the Arabian Peninsula in the summer and in the South of the peninsula in the winter. So, in this verse, Allah Glorified is He was not commanding them to start travelling, but rather, He wanted them to remember the reality of their past journeys.

On these journeys, they saw many of the traces of those disbelieving nations who preceded them. Indeed, they did not see amongst the previous nations a messenger who had been defeated by those who denied him. Allah Glorified is He defeated the deniers and disbelievers and decreed victory for the true believers. Those nations who were punished have had greater powers than the polytheists had. However, this created power was not a match to counteract the Power of Allah Glorified is He. So, do not look at the Messenger’s power, but look at the Power of the One Who sent him. Allah Glorified is He also took it upon Himself to protect and support His Messenger.

Therefore, this futile opposition was directed from the creation to their Creator. Did they really think that they would be able to incapacitate Allah? That is why Allah Glorified is He negated two concepts. The first concept He annulled was their ability to incapacitate or overcome their Creator. He also negated their ability to merely confront or compete with their Lord.

Allah Glorified is He was dictating to them and inspiring them, while giving them victory in some excursions, so that they could enjoy the full extents of their powers and exhaust all their forces. Therefore, this showed them that their strength and any help they were able to seek from other people would not able to incapacitate Allah Glorified is He because Allah is not incapacitated by anything. He does not have a partner or rival that could assist them against Allah, as Allah is the One Who helps the believers and gives them victory. Allah Glorified is He destroyed the stronger disbelievers before them, and indeed, was able to destroy their powers.

When Allah Glorified is He wants to emphasize some Quranic matters, He often informs us of an event that outlined the concept by using words such as: ‘You travelled in the earth, and you saw such and such’. However, in this verse, He did not state the concept, but rather placed it as a question that asked: ‘Did they not travel in the earth’? The certain and undeniable answer to this divine question was that they, indeed, travelled. This emphasised the statement because it had a greater effect on the listener, just as negative questioning has a greater effect on the listener as affirmative questioning.

The topic of travelling in the earth takes up a large portion of the Noble Quran, because Allah Glorified is He wants people to look at the signs that exist in the universe. That is why He commanded us in one verse by saying: 'Say, "Walk in the Earth and behold' (an-Naml: 69). Allah Glorified is He also says in another verse: 'Say, "Walk in the Earth, and then behold' (al-An'am: 11). What is the difference between the two expressions? Travelling in the Earth either is done for studying it and contemplating its signs, or is done for gaining particular benefits.

In the first expression, Allah Glorified is He says, '...and behold' (an-Naml: 69). This is a reference to a journey done mainly to consider and reflect upon the signs of Allah Glorified is He and His amazing architecture of the universe.

In the second expression, Allah Glorified is He says, 'and then behold' (al-An'am: 11). This expression referred to journeys that are conducted for the purpose of work, taking benefits and seeking provisions. Even if you visit the different lands of the earth seeking provision and benefit, do not forget to reflect and contemplate the signs of Allah's vast dominion, especially if you are in an environment different from your traditional environment.

If you travel in a rural, desert environment, such as the Hijaz area, for example, you will almost never see a trace of the colour green. On the other hand, in Indonesia, we went to places that were clothed in green. There was not a spot on the ground that did not have vegetation. There are treasures in both environments that distinguish them from each other, and that is why they say by way of parable, 'The more you live the more you see, and if you walk you see more'.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says, 'And (do they not see that the will of) Allah can never be foiled by anything in the heavens or on earth, since, verily, He is All Knowing, Infinite in His power?' (Fatir: 44) We already spoke about the concept of incapacitation. This verse is not just stating that nothing in the heavens or the earth will ever incapacitate Allah Glorified is He but furthermore, that such a concept can never even be imagined.

In the words, '...anything', the word 'any' indicated generality. For instance, when you say, 'I do not have money', you could have a small inconsiderable amount of money. But if you said, ‘I do not have anything called money’, then you have negated the presence of the most inconsiderable amounts of money.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘...He is All Knowing, Infinite in His Power’ (Fatir: 44). This clarified why Allah Glorified is He cannot be incapacitated by anything, for Allah Glorified is He is the All Knowing Who has the Encompassing Knowledge from which nothing can escape. If the disbelievers want to plot anything, Allah Glorified is He knows it and He knows its place. He is Infinite in His power and Knowledge of all things, and knowledge and power are the two elements of victory. If you truly know something, you will be able to repel it.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

يُؤَخِّرُهُمْ إِلَىٰٓ أَجَلٍ مُّسَمًّى ۖ فَإِذَا جَآءَ أَجَلُهُمْ فَإِنَّ ٱللَّهَ كَانَ بِعِبَادِهِۦ بَصِيرًۢا ﴿٤٥﴾

If Allah were to punish people [at once] for the wrong they have done, there would not be a single creature left on the surface of the earth. He gives them respite for a stated time and, whenever their time comes, Allah has been watching His servants [45] (The Quran, Fatir: 45)

Allah Glorified is He is full of Mercy and is constantly dispensing His Blessings to His servants. He grants these blessings even to those who do not believe in Him and those who disobey His commands. If Allah Glorified is He were to punish them for their grave acts of transgression, He would not leave a single one of them on this earth. So, why does Allah Glorified is He deal with us in this way and grant us this relief? This is because Allah Glorified is He is our Lord and Creator. He knows that men are weak in the face of their desires and demons. That is why His Forbearance takes precedence over His Anger, and His Pardon takes precedence over His punishment. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘...although He pardons many of them’ (ash-Shura: 30).

There is a Hadith narrated that Allah Glorified is He addressed us with the following words: ‘If you did not sin, I would create another creation besides you that would sin, and they would seek my forgiveness and I would forgive them.'(1) Or else, how could Allah Glorified is He be described as the All-Forgiving. Allah Glorified is He wanted to affirm that He possesses all the Attributes of Perfection. The first of these attributes is the attribute of Necessary Existence. The second attribute is Life. All the other attributes are subsequent to these two.

These attributes of Allah Glorified is He can be divided into two categories. The first category consists of the Divine attributes that have an opposite, and they are the attributes of action done by Allah Glorified is He. These include the bringing of beings into life, which is the opposite of causing beings to die, and the Exalter, which is the opposite of the Humiliator.

On the other hand, the attributes that do not have an opposite are Allah's Essential attributes, such as that He is The Ever-Living, the Almighty, the All-Dominant, and the Ever-Forbearing. All these attributes have no opposing actions.

Allah Glorified is He did not punish people for the transgressions and oppressions that they have earned because Allah Glorified is He created man, and He created his desires and natural impulses. All the religious commandments came to overcome these desires and rise above these natural impulses, not to wipe them out. They came to refine them, and not to terminate them. Otherwise, had Allah Glorified is He willed for these transgressions and oppression not to occur, He would not have made these natural impulses in the first place.

For example, Allah Glorified is He created the natural impulse of sexual attraction so that the world would be populated. Allah Glorified is He wanted mankind to rise above this natural impulse, by making it lawful and within the bounds of legislation. We have already clarified the difference between lawful and unlawful sexual relationships. When these relations are born in the public light and within the bounds of Allah's legislation, we rejoice in its ceremonies, announce it, and are proud of it. However, when it is done in secrecy, far from what Allah Glorified is He has legislated, we try to hide it and rid ourselves of its yield. If it is then disclosed to the people, it is a stark disgrace that will never be rubbed out.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (2/309) and also by Muslim in his Sahih (3749) in the Book of Repentance, Its wording is: 'By the One in whose hand is my soul, if you did not sin, Allah will remove you and bring about a people who did sin. They would seek Allah's forgiveness and He would forgive them.'

A Hadith narrated that a Companion of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was known to be overly protective over his daughters. When a man proposed to marry one of the Companion's daughters, the father informed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him smiled and said to him, 'The lawful bond cuts off the nose of jealousy.'(1) This means that the same concept which the Companion had once refused to accept became a matter of rejoicing, and he even called the people to witness his daughter's marital agreement. This is because it has been brought about lawfully in a way that Allah has permitted. The word of truth during the marriage agreement made these hidden sensual feelings manifests, and transformed a concealed sensational action into a lawful permissible event of happiness.

The natural impulse of sexual gratification in animals was made for a divine wisdom. A young child, for example, needs a parent to raise him and provide for him. He remains dependant on his father for a difficult period of fifteen years. If Allah Glorified is He had not based procreation on the sexual act, and placed within it such pleasures, many people would abstain from having children. Likewise, the mother bears great difficulty in pregnancy, childbirth; breastfeeding and so forth to the extent that she may even vow to avoid having another child. However, after the pain of delivery ceases and the child grows up, she longs to have another one, and this is how life continues.

Likewise, the natural impulse to be curious and love exploration exists in man so that he can reflect upon the universe around him and look for Allah's secrets therein. Allah Glorified is He did not make it so that people could act stealthily towards one another and track each other's disgraces and honours. Likewise, eating and drinking are natural impulses that Allah Glorified is He has made because they constitute the essential sources of life. They should only be consumed within these limits that preserve life, so that they do not turn into gluttony, greed or fullness and indigestion.

(1) Abu Hilal Al-`Askari mentioned in As-Sana`atain in the chapter on analogy and metaphor, that He saw `Ali with Fatima in a room, so he closed the door for them, and said: 'The lawful cuts off the nose of jealousy.' Al-Maidani said, in Majma` Al-Amthal, that this took place on the wedding night of `Ali and Fatima, and he said that this Hadith was related from Al-Hajaj ibn Minhal, who classed it as 'marfu'. You can also look at Abu Mansur At-Th`alabi in Al-`Ijaz Wa Al-`Ijaz, in the chapter on his analogy, and Ibn Hamdun in At-Tadhkira Al-Hamduniyyah, on what comes in gentleness and firmness.

When you consider the matter of natural impulses, you will find that the Creator has instilled natural impulses in man, along with their opposite impulses. So, you may see a man being merciful during some events and bad-tempered in other instances. He might appear mighty in one instance and show humility and modesty in other occasions. These two natural impulses are naturally not found at the same instance. Belief dictates that a believer must act mightily and strongly in some cases, while acting with humility during other times.

Allah Glorified is He says, '...Allah will in time bring forth (instead of you) people whom He loves and who love Him – humble towards the believers, proud towards all who deny the truth.' (al-Ma'ida: 54) He also says, 'Muhammad is Allah's Apostle; and those who are (truly) with him are firm and unyielding towards all deniers of the truth, (yet) full of mercy towards one another.' (al-Fath: 29) Therefore, the Creator has placed opposing natural impulses in you and He has not repressed any of them, so you can use each natural impulse at its appropriate time.

The meaning of the words: 'If Allah were to hold men (at once) to account' (Fatir: 45) refers to punishing them '...for whatever (wrong) they earn (kasabu) (on Earth)' (Fatir: 45). The word kasabu used here is the plural verb of the word kasaba. It indicates the earning or acquisition of a natural profit that is additional to the capital investment. On the other hand, the word iktasaba follows the lexical pattern of the word ifta`ala which indicates an earning that is fabricated or that resulted from unnatural or unlawful actions.

For that reason, the Quran generally used the word kasaba for acts of goodness and used the word iktasaba for acts of evil. For instance, Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: '...in its favour shall be whatever good it does (kasabat), and against it whatever evil it does (iktasabat)' (al-Baqara: 286). This is because righteousness comes naturally without any fabrication, while acts of evil require stealthy efforts and cautious plots. Therefore, we say that the burden of obedience on man is insignificant compared to the burden of disobedience.

However, Allah Glorified is He says regarding evil deeds: ‘Indeed, those who earn (kasaba) evil and by their sinfulness are engulfed are destined for the Fire’ (al-Baqara: 81). The Quran used the word kasaba in this verse regarding evil deeds because it is talking about those who have sinned excessively, to the extent that they have come to love and adore disobedience. They talk about their sins and declare them openly as if disobedience comes naturally for them. In their transgression, they have started to disobey Allah Glorified is He without any dissimilation or caution. So, their earnings are a kasb and not an iktisab, as they rejoice with their sins as if they were lawful gains, and do not censure, blame themselves or feel regret for their disobedience.

The verse we are discussing here has the same meaning. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘If Allah were to hold men (at once) to account for whatever (wrong) they earn (kasaba) (on earth), He would not leave a single living creature upon its back’ (Fatir: 45). This means that these people adore their disobedience and transgressions, while rejoicing in the process as if it was a profit.

Then, Allah Glorified is He gave the outcome of this conditional sentence: ‘If Allah were to hold men (at once) to account, He would not leave a single living (stepping) creature (daabba) on its back’ (Fatir: 45). The meaning of the word daabba includes everything that steps on the earth or crawls on its surface gently, but it is mostly used for that which is ridden or carries a load. That is why an Arab once said to another Arab, ‘You had tired me when you were a young man (shabban) (walking swiftly) and still exhaust me as an old man (dabba) (stepping gently)’.

What sin have these creatures committed to bear the consequence of man’s oppression? The scholars said that the connection here is that the creature is created and subjugated to the service of man and his comfort. So, the creatures may get destroyed so that man’s comfort is withheld. The rain is withheld and the earth becomes dry. Thus, at that point, man will not find any nourishment, either from the flesh of animals or from the vegetation of the earth. This will be a humiliation for mankind, as they see their means of livelihood and causes of comfort being taken from them, while they can do nothing.

If you cross-reference the verses of the Quran, you will find that two verses talk about this meaning. The first verse is in the chapter of an-Nahl, in which Allah Glorified is He says, ‘If Allah were to hold men (at once) to account for all the evil transgression that they do (on earth), He would not leave a single living creature upon it. However, He grants them respite until a term set (by Him): but when the end of their term approaches, they can neither delay it by a single moment, nor can they hasten it.’ (an-Nahl: 61)

The second verse is here in the chapter of Fatir: ‘If Allah were to hold men (at once) to account for the (wrong) they earn (on earth), He would not leave a single living creature upon its back. However, He grants them respite for a term set (by Him): but when their term comes to an end – then, verily, (they will come to know that) Allah sees all that is in (the hearts of) His servants.’ (Fatir: 45)

Some people may see repetition in these two verses, but Allah Glorified is He forbade that there be any futile repetition in His speech. If you reflected upon the verses, you would find a distinct meaning in each of these verses. The first verse talked about the transgressions of people, while the second verse talked about the evil deeds that they earned. Each of the two expressions gives you a different meaning because a person may act with transgression, but then may feel remorse for their sins, and not rejoice at it or persist in it. However, if it becomes a habit for the person and he starts to adore it, then it is iktisab and unnatural as we have already mentioned.

The first verse says, ‘...He would not leave a single living creature upon its back,’ (Fatir: 45) while the second verse says, ‘...He would not leave a single living creature upon it’ (an-Nahl: 61). We find that, in the first verse, Allah Glorified is He talked about time and the set term that will not be hastened and will not be delayed. In the second verse, He talked about the reward awaiting His servants’ actions, and that Allah sees all the actions of His servants. Nothing from them is hidden from him. Therefore, the two verses are complementary and there is no repetition in them at all.

In the words: ‘...He would not leave a single living creature upon its back’ (Fatir: 45) and the words: ‘...He would not leave a single living creature upon it’ (an-Nahl: 61), the pronoun ‘it’ is attached to the verse preceding it, in which Allah Glorified is He says, ‘...And (do they not see that the will of) Allah can never be foiled by anything in the heavens or on earth’ (Fatir: 44)? The pronoun referred to the closest noun mentioned, which is the earth. This reference is also understood by looking at the context logically because the meaning applies to it.

This verse also has a story(1). When we were children in the Quranic school of Sheikh Hasan Allah rest his soul the Sheikh used to normally assign a prefect from the students to correct the tablets for us. There was a day in which Sheikh Hasan sat and corrected our tablets by himself. However, on this day, I had not corrected my tablet at all, and I was waiting to be punished. The Sheikh said to me, ‘Listen to me, as I will teach you how to read this verse without confusing it with the verse in the chapter of an-Nahl. Do not gather between the two dha words or between the two seen phrases. If you say bi zhulmihim (for all the evil transgression), do not then say `ala zhahriha (upon its back) (as both phrases contain the dha sounds) and if you say bima kasabu (the (wrong) they earn), do not then say la yasta`khiruna sa`ah (can neither delay it by a single moment) (because both phrases had the seen sound).’

This is how our Sheikh taught us to live with the Quran and to interact with it, and Allah Glorified is He the Most Great, speaks the truth saying: ‘Hence, indeed, We made this Quran easy to bear in mind: who, then, is willing to take it to heart?’ (al-Qamar: 22)

I also have another story about him that I still remember, concerning the chapter ash-Shura. The Sheikh sat and was correcting the tablets for us while we had run away and not done any correction. When I sat in front of the Sheikh, I had to recite the verse, ‘`Ain. Seen. Qaf.’ (ash-Shura: 2), but incorrectly pronounced them as one single word, ‘`asq’! The Sheikh punished me, until he realized that I had not corrected my tablet. So, he said, ‘Say these letters as ‘‘ain. seen. qaf.’ This story has stayed with me until now. Allah have mercy and be pleased with all of these scholars.

The meaning of the word ajal (term) in the words: ‘...but when their term (`ajal) comes to an end’ (Fatir: 45) refers to the time of their final resurrection and reckoning on the Day of Judgment, or to a time when they will be destroyed by an annihilating punishment.

(1) The story of Ash-Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi with the teaching school of Sheikh Hasan Allah rest their souls

We know that annihilating punishments such as a screaming storm, earthquake or being swallowed up by the earth, are only sent down when the guidance of a people is despaired of. This is when all hope has been lost of them being guided, as we have seen in the story of Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him: ‘O my Lord! Leave not on Earth any of those who deny the truth. And then, on Resurrection Day, He will cover them (all) with humiliation, and will say, “Where, now, are those beings to whom you ascribed a share in My Divinity, (and) for whose sake you cut yourselves off (from My guidance)?” (Whereupon) those who (in their lifetime) were endowed with knowledge will say, “Verily, disgrace and misery (have fallen) this day upon those who have been denying the truth.”’ (Nuh: 26-27) However, if there is still hope that some of the people will believe in Allah’s call, punishments like these do not descend upon them.

The word ajal (term) here could be referring to the period assigned to a particular nation, as Allah Glorified is He says, ‘For every nation of people, a term has been set’ (Yunus: 49). Thus, we can deduce that there are three types of terms. These are: the term of the life of this world and its end, the term of each individual that ends with his own life and the term of an entire nation if an annihilating punishment removes them completely.

Ajal here may also indicate that every nation has a time at which it is made victorious and triumphant despite the presence of stubborn deniers and disbelievers, as what happened to Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when the Muslims were made victorious at the Battle of Badr. The nation of disbelief and oppression had a term that was ended with Islam and the power of the Muslims, though the hope, for the Muslims, had been, then, only a glimmer of light to the extent that despair had overcome hope.

Even 'Umar Allah be pleased with him said when: ‘Their forces will be routed and they will turn tail and flee.’ (al-Qamar: 45), was revealed: ‘what hosts are these when we are incapable of protecting ourselves?’ When the Battle of Badr took place and the Muslims were victorious, He said: ‘Allah spoke the truth.’(1):

(1) Included by Ibn Kathir in his Tafsir and he attributed it to Ibn Abu Hatim (an-Nisa’: 366) from `Ikrima Allah be pleased with him who said: ‘When ‘(Yet) the hosts (of those who deny the truth) shall be routed, and they shall turn their backs (in flight)!’ (al-Qamar: 45)=

'Their forces will be routed and they will turn tail and flee.' (al-Qamar: 45) The might of Islam had indeed intensified, as had the forces of the Muslims, and the nation of disbelief was declared finished. The term of the oppressive, disbelieving nation came to an end and the term of the believing nation had begun.

That is why when we reflect on Allah's words: 'Not equal are the blind and the seeing, nor are the darkness and the light, nor are the shade and the heat and not equal are the living and the dead. Indeed, Allah causes to hear whom He wills, but you cannot make those in the graves hear' (Fatir: 19-22), we find four opposites: the first two correspond to Prophet Muhammad's situation with regards to his nation before the spread of Islam, when pre-Islamic paganism was dominant over Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his followers in Mecca. 'The blind' are those who are ignorant of the ruling. 'The seeing' are those who know the ruling. The 'darkness' means misguidance and disbelief, while 'light' is faith because they were blind and Allah Glorified is He wanted to make them see. They were in the deep darkness of ignorance and misguidance and Allah Glorified is He brought them out of it and into the light of faith.

As for the two other opposites, they correspond to Prophet Muhammad's situation with regards to his nation after the foundations of Islam had been firmly anchored and the souls of the believers had been strengthened. '…nor are the darkness and the light, nor are the shade and the heat and not equal are the living and the dead. Indeed, Allah causes to hear whom He wills, but you cannot make those in the graves hear.' (Fatir: 21-22) You will see that it begins with a positive attribute, as it did not say 'scorching heat and no shade' as in '...the blind and the seeing' (Fatir: 19). Why? Because what is being discussed here is the nation of victory and the nation of faith, so it was appropriate to begin this pair of opposites with the goodness that is appropriate for this new nation.

= was revealed `Umar Allah be pleased with him said: 'What hosts are these that shall be routed?' i.e. what hosts will be defeated? `Umar Allah be pleased with him said: 'On the day of Badr, I saw the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him jumping in his armour and saying: "(Hence, too,) behold, the Allah-conscious will find themselves in (a paradise of) gardens and running waters" (al-Qamar: 45), and on that day, I realised what it meant.'

In this meaning, there is a subtle indication that the ‘age of Ignorance’ (of the guidance from Allah) coming to an end and along with it its darkness and blindness, as well as the declaration of the beginning of a new age for the nation of faith that is to remain an oasis of faith, and this is after Allah Glorified is He brings them to life with faith after they had been dead in disbelief, as Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: ‘Is a dead person brought back to life by Us, and given light with which to walk among people, comparable to someone trapped in deep darkness who cannot escape? ...’ (al-An‘am: 122)

We already clarified the difference between mayt and mayyit. Mayyit refers to someone who, sooner or later, is going to die, even though he is alive now. An example of this is when the True Lord addresses Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘you [Prophet] will certainly die, and so will they…’ (az-Zumar: 30) meaning that, eventually, you are going to die. As for mayt this is the one who is already dead.

We can therefore say that His words: ‘...whenever their time comes...’ (Fatir: 45) refer to the victory of faith over disbelief. ‘...Allah has been watching His servants.’ (Fatir: 45) The words 'ibad and 'abid are both plurals of 'abd (slave) and even though they are both plurals for one singular noun, their meanings differ. This is because a human slave is the property of his master, and as long as he is his property, he obeys his commands. The human believer has a choice, for Allah Glorified is He addresses him and he chooses to obey or disobey, whereas a slave, for a human, does not disobey his master.

Yes, he may go against Allah’s Command, but he will not go against his human master’s command. How is this so? They say: because Allah Glorified is He is the Forbearing, the All-Forgiving. As for the human master, he can never be absolutely devoid of tyranny, transgression, despotism, or autocracy.

The difference between the obedience of the slave who can choose to disobey and the slave who is compelled to obey has been clarified in an example that we gave earlier, in which we have the two slaves: Sa'id and Sa'ad. Sa'id is chained to his master and is unable to break free while Sa'ad is free and unchained. When the master summons them, which of the two is more obedient? There is no doubt that Sa'ad is more obedient than Sa'id because he responds to his master even though he can choose not to. As for Sa'id, he has no choice but to respond because if he disobeys, his master will pull him back with the chain.

This is how the True Lord created us: with the ability to choose; and given them this precept: ‘...let those who wish to believe in it do so, and let those who wish to reject it do so...’ (al-Kahf: 29). That is: whoever wants to obey can do so and whoever wants to disobey can do so. This is how the servants of Allah behave with their Master. If the slave were to say: ‘My Lord! You are the One Who created me, gave me sustenance, and provided me with limbs, and you have given me the ability to choose. I am one of Your slaves 'abid, and for that reason I relinquish my choice in favour of Your choice, and what I desire in favour of what You desire’, then this slave has chosen to be forced and subjugated by his Lord in the same way that the skies and the earth are subjugated.

These people are real 'ibad slaves (servants of Allah). They are the elite of creation because they prefer what Allah Glorified is He desires over what they desire. That is why the True Lord talks about them and gives us an image of them: ‘The servants of the Lord of Mercy are those who walk humbly on the earth...’ (al-Furqan: 63). That is to say: they are humble and not arrogant and how can one be arrogant when: ‘...Indeed, you will never tear the earth [apart], and you will never reach the mountains in height.’ (al-Isra’: 37)

The True Lord continues describing the servants of the Lord of Mercy: ‘...and who, when the foolish address them, reply, “Peace”; those who spend the night bowed down or standing, worshipping their Lord, who plead, “Our Lord, turn away from us the suffering of Hell, for it is a dreadful torment to suffer! It is an evil home, a foul resting place!” They are those who are neither wasteful nor stingy when they spend, but keep to a just balance; those who never invoke any other deity beside Allah, nor take a life, which Allah has made sacred, except in the pursuit of justice, nor commit adultery.’ (al-Furqan: 63 - 68)

These are eight attributes that give us a complete picture of those who deserve to be called the slaves (servants) of Allah. That is why their Lord addresses them in another place: ‘Say, “[Allah says], My servants who have harmed yourselves by your own excess, do not despair of Allah’s Mercy. Allah Forgives all sins: He is truly the Most Forgiving, the Most Merciful.”’ (az-Zumar: 53)

It is due to His Mercy towards His slaves that a good deed wipes out an evil deed, as He Glorified is He says, '[Prophet], keep up the prayer at both ends of the day, and during parts of the night, for good things drive bad away— this is a reminder for those who are aware.' (Hud: 114)

What is even greater is that Allah's Mercy is not restricted to the wiping out of evil deeds: after repentance, bad deeds can, in fact, become good deeds: 'Except those who repent, believe and do good deeds: Allah will change the evil deeds of such people into good ones. He is Most Forgiving, Most Merciful.' (al-Furqan: 70)

Regarding the meanings of 'ibad (servants of Allah who choose to prefer what Allah desires over what they desire), and 'abid (slaves who serve humans and are compelled to obey them) that we have clarified, we have heard those who object and say: there is a contradiction in the Quran concerning this meaning, for Allah says on the Day of Resurrection, addressing the leaders and other personalities who have misguided people and made disbelief pleasing to them: '...Was it you who led astray these My servants, or did they themselves go astray from the path?' (al-Furqan: 17) Here, He says: 'ibadi' (My servants). We say: there is no contradiction between these verses as you say because the discussion here concerns the Hereafter, and in the Hereafter, there is no choice. Thus, there is no difference between 'ibad and 'abid in the Hereafter.

In His saying: 'Allah has been watching His servants.' (Fatir: 45) He mentions the attribute of seeing because it is the strongest means of obtaining knowledge and realisation. Obtaining knowledge has various means that the True Lord Glorified is He mentions in His saying: 'It is Allah who brought you out of your mothers' wombs knowing nothing, and gave you hearing and sight and minds so that you might be thankful.' (an-Nahl: 78)

Hearing is the primary means of realization, and in the case of the newborns, it is the first organ to sense and carry out its task. The proof is that if you put your finger, for example, in front of his eye, he would not blink. However, if you shouted in his ear he would be roused and he would respond to the sound. Furthermore, hearing is the one sense that is not inactive during sleep because it is the only sense by which one can be summoned. Hearing is the primary means of acquiring values and ideals, and with it one receives the way of Allah Glorified is He.

As for seeing, even if its rank is secondary, it is greater and stronger than hearing. This is because you could hear of something but not pay attention to it. If you move from hearing to seeing you arrive at full realization that has no doubt about it. That is why they say: 'with the eye you do not ask: "where?"' The thing that you hear could be false, but the thing that you see can be nothing but true.

That is why the True Lord Glorified is He when He wants to emphasise a piece of information, He says, 'Have you not seen...' (az-Zumar: 21). This is because what you see with the eye is certain. When Abu Ja`far said to Muqatil, 'Admonish me Muqatil', he said to him 'Should I admonish you with what I have heard or with what I have seen?'—By Allah, you tell me which one? (Ash-Sha'rawi is addressing the audience)—Abu Ja`far said, 'Admonish me with what you have seen.'

Indeed, this is true because what you hear may be false, but what you see with the eye is the truth.

the chapter of

Ya Sin

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of Ya Sin(1):

يسٓ ۝١ وَٱلۡقُرۡءَانِ ٱلۡحَكِيمِ ۝٢

Ya Sin* [1] By the wise Quran [2]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 1 - 2)

It is correct that Ya Sin are amongst the disjointed letters*,* such as Alif, Lam, Mim and Ta Ha and it is also correct that they are disjointed letters that can be a name. That is why Ta Ha and Ya Sin are included in Prophet Muhammad's names peace and blessings be upon him. There is nothing to stop a name from being composed of two letters, or even just one letter, such as the Arabic letter nun in His saying: 'Nun. By the pen! By all they write!' (al-Qalam: 1) 'Nun' was made a proper name for Dhun Nun(2) peace be upon him. Likewise, qaf became a proper name for Mount Qaf. So, these are disjointed letters and they can become proper nouns and be used as names.(1)

---

(1) The chapter of Ya Sin is number 36 according to the order of the Quran and it consists of 83 verses. It was revealed after the chapter of al-Jinn, and it is also said that it was revealed before the chapter of al-Furqan. It is the 40th chapter according to the order of revelation. Al-Qurtubi has related in his Tafsir (8/5635) the consensus that it is a Meccan chapter, but he says: 'Except that there is one group that says, 'Indeed His words: "...and We shall record whatever (deeds) they have sent ahead, and the traces (of good and evil) which they have left behind…" (Ya Sin: 12), were revealed with regard to the Bani Salma from the Ansar (Helpers) when they wanted to leave their houses and move in order to live close to Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him.' Ibn Kathir has included this narration in his Tafsir (The Quran, 3/566) from Abu Sa`id Al-Khudri but said: 'What has been mentioned regarding the revelation of this verse is strange because the entire chapter is Meccan and Allah Glorified is He knows best.

(2) 'An-Nun': The whale, and Dhu An-Nun peace be upon him is an epithet given to Yunus (Jonah) Ibn Matta peace be upon him. Allah called him Dhu An-Nun peace be upon him because he held him inside the whale that had swallowed him (The Quran, Lisan Al-Arab – under the article on [nun]). As for 'noon', it is in the chapter of al-Qalam. There are a few statements regarding it, including the statement that it is the whale and another that=

We often talk about the disjointed letters at the beginning of chapters. Every time we come across disjointed letters we have to talk about any possible meanings they may have. What is established in the mind is that a letter has a name and a named thing. The name of the letter is only known to the one who is learned. As for the letter's named thing, it is known by both the learned and the illiterate. For example, the illiterate knows the verb akala (ate) and he can say: 'I ate' but he cannot tell you the letters of the alphabet that make up the verb because he only knows the named thing of the letter. As for the one who is learned, he knows the name of each letter and can say: akala consists of the Arabic letters alif, kaf, and lam. Then, how did Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him know the names of these letters and articulate them as he was unlettered and did not know how to read or write? The answer is that he was taught them by his Lord

The Quran was sent as a miracle to challenge the people in what distinguished them. The Arabs were known for their eloquence and rhetoric. It suffices to say that they held fairs and markets for the sake of speech, as we now spend time in showrooms of prominent industries. Examples for those fairs and

= it is the inkwell. See the narration regarding these statements in the Tafsir of Ibn Kathir (The Quran, 4/400, 401). Al-Azhari says: ''Nun' (al-Qalam: 1), cannot be other than a letter of the alphabet. Have you not seen that the Quranic scribes have always written it as the letter (nun) and if the inkwell or the whale were meant by it they would have written as the word (nun)?' Lisan Al-Arab – under the article on (nun))

(1) There are a few opinions regarding the interpretation of 'Ya Sin.' (Ya Sin: 1):
-It is one of the names of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and this is the opinion of Sa`id ibn Jubayr and his evidence is 'verily, thou art indeed one of Allah's message-bearers,' (Ya Sin: 3) and what follows it.
-It means 'O master of humanity!' and this is the opinion of Abu Bakr Al-Warraq.
-It means 'O man!' and Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is who is intended, and this is the opinion of Ibn `Abbas.
There is another opinion that Al-Qurtubi mentions in his Tafsir (The Quran, 8/5638), in addition to what has already been stated, and it is related from Imam Malik that (Ya Sin) is one of Allah's names, such that he declared it makruh (reprehensible) to use it as a name. Ibn Al-Arabi said: That which is permissible to use as a name is Ya Sin with this spelling, and Allah knows best.

markets were the ‘Ukazh, Al-Murbid and Al-Majna markets, etc. which were known amongst the Arabs.

Their concern with speech and rhetorical style was at such a level that their famous poems were hung upon the Ka`ba. These poems were called ‘al-mu`alaqat’ (the hanging odes) and they were the most famous of what is known as ‘jahiliyy’ (pre-Islamic) poetry.

The fact that the Quran challenges them is a testimony to their pre-eminence because it is the strong and not the weak that are challenged. It is just like when records are being broken in various fields, nowadays.

The Quran challenges the Arabs in eloquence and rhetoric in the same way that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him challenged magicians and `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him challenged the doctors. Therefore, this is a practice that is followed with all nations. The True Lord Glorified is He challenges them in what distinguishes them. Likewise, the Quran came in the language of the Arabs and the letters and words that they use to articulate. Despite all of this, they were unable to produce anything like the Quran. How can this be when the fabric of the speech is one and the same? It has been said: ‘Because the one speaking the Quran is the True Lord’.

We have already clarified this matter by way of similitude— and Allah has the most exalted similitude—and said: if you want to test a group of textile workers to see which one of them is the most skilful, you should not give one of them silk, for example, give another cotton and give a third wool because the raw material, thus, would be different. You must give all of them the same fabric and then see the textile that each of them produces. The same goes for the Quran and the language of the Arabs. The fabric is one and the same, but the speaker in poems is the Arabs, and the speaker in the Quran is the True Lord.

When you consider the letters of the Arabic language you find that there are twenty-eight of them, and the disjointed letters in the Quran are fourteen. Therefore, they are half of the letters of the alphabet. Al-Fakhr Ar-Razi (1) has a marvellous table that arranges these letters, and he explains that they were placed as such for a reason, and they were placed according to a measure and calculation. These fourteen letters are divided as follows:

(1) He is Muhammad ibn 'Umar Abu Abdullah Fakhr Ad-Din Ar-Razi, Qurayshi of lineage who originated from Tabaristan. He was born in Rayy (modern-day Teheran) in the=

The total number of letters in the language is twenty-eight. The first nine letters, from alif through dhal, contain only two of the disjointed letters: the alif and the ha`a. The remaining seven letters are left. As for the last nine letters, from fa`a to the end, there are seven of the disjointed letters and they are: qaf, kaf, lam, mim, nun, ha`a and ya`a while fa`a and waw are left. The last nine are therefore the opposite of the first nine.

As for the ten letters in the middle, from ra`a through to ghayn, they have another arrangement such that the disjointed letters from amongst them do not have diacritical marks. They are ra`a, sin, sad, ta`a, and `ain, leaving us with zay, sheen, dad, dha`a and ghayn.

Likewise, when we consider, for example, the letters of the throat you find that kha`a is in the first group and is not included in the disjointed letters. Mim is included in the last group.

In this manner, we see that these letters were not placed as such haphazardly or accidentally. Rather, they were placed according to a measure and system that has wisdom, and behind it there are secrets. They were placed according to an intended systemization like the cutting of a key. Allah Glorified is He opens them to whomever He wills. It is due to His Wisdom that He has not given all the secrets of these letters to one generation. Indeed, He has spread out the revealing of these secrets over time so that every generation can receive Allah's Speech and discover some of its secrets, and so that the Quran can remain a light that illuminates what is hidden in the life of this world until the establishment of the Hour. He says, 'We shall show them Our signs in every = year 544 A.H. and this accounts for his name Ar-Razi. He was an Imam and Quranic commentator and the unique one of his age in the rational, transmitted, and ancient sciences. It was said about it: 'Where is the speaker of Ray?' The people devoted themselves to his books during his lifetime and studied them amongst themselves. He was also a master of Persian. His various works include (Mafatih Al-Ghayb and Mahhsal Afkar Al-Mutaqadimin Wa Al-Muta`akhirin). He died in the year 606 at the age of 62. (Az-Zirikli, (Al-A`lam) 6/313) region of the earth and in themselves, until it becomes clear to them that this is the Truth…' (Fussilat: 53).

The letter sin, at the beginning of the word sanurihim (we shall show them) indicates the future and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him pronounced it and said '...We shall show them...' (Fussilat: 53). In his time, many secrets were manifested. The generations that followed also articulated it and many secrets were uncovered to them and we will continue to pronounce them. Many of its secrets will continue appearing to us until the coming of the Hour, when the greatest sign is manifested which is the Day of Resurrection. Therefore, the Quran is continuously giving without any interruption.

That is why, when we discussed with some orientalists in San Francisco the subject of inventors and explorers who had served and benefited humanity with their inventions and discoveries, one of them said: 'We are astonished at the Muslims. Why do these explorers who have brought joy to humanity not enter Paradise'? We clarified that they had indeed served humanity, but they did not have Allah in mind when they discovered what they discovered (they did not exert that effort for the sake of Allah). Rather, what they were concerned with was fame, glory, and being mentioned amongst people. Thus, they have achieved what they sought, and we have immortalized their memory, erected statues in their honour and so forth. The Hadith describes them as such: 'You worked so that it might be said [of you] such and such, and so it was said.'(1)

Thus, these scientists who have served humanity and brought joy to it while not believing in Allah Glorified is He are nothing other than servants that Allah has subjugated for the service of humanity. They are like the sun and the moon and other creations that Allah Glorified is He has subjugated for the benefit and prosperity of man. They are nothing other than soldiers from amongst Allah's soldiers that are included in the meaning of this letter sin in '...We shall show them...' (Fussilat: 53) so that the Quran continues to give throughout the passing of time and into the future.

(1) Narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (The Quran, 1905), Ahmad in his Musnad (2/322) and An-Nasa`i in his Sunnan (6/23, 24) from the Hadith of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him

These scientists who do not believe in Allah Glorified is He are like a servant that works for another human. When the later asks him to lift a stone, for example, he tells him that it is too heavy and he cannot lift it. The master, then, suggests that the servant gets someone who can help him, but he says that he cannot find anyone. However, when the master tells him that if he lifts it, he will find some treasure underneath which he can have for himself, he lifts it by himself. Has he lifted it out of respect for his master's command or has he lifted it because he wanted the treasure?

Likewise, with the advancement of science, people have discovered wine to be of harmful effect on the liver, and many people have abstained from drinking it because they fear its harms, i.e. they have done so for a reason. As for the believer, he abstains from it before knowing anything about this reality, and he abstains from it because his Lord has forbidden him from drinking it. He desists it because he trusts in the Wisdom of his Lord and respects His Command, even if he does not know the reason.

Being the heart of the Quran, as established in the Hadith, reading the chapter of Ya Sin should be preceded by isti`adhah (seeking refuge in Allah from the cursed Satan) and basmalah (in the name of Allah, The All-Merciful, The Ever-Merciful), as we did with the chapters preceding it. The True Lord is the one who has revealed the Quran as a miracle and a book of guidance to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so that the believers can regulate their lives according to it. He says, '[Prophet], when you recite the Quran, seek Allah's protection from the outcast, Satan. He has no power over those who believe and trust in their Lord.' (an-Nahl: 98)

We said before that the reason behind this command from the Most Exalted is that Satan, when he disobeyed his Lord by refusing to prostrate to Adam peace be upon him a conversation started between him and his Lord when he said: 'I swear by Your Might! I will tempt all.' (Sad: 82) That is to say: 'I will tempt Adam and his progeny until they do not differ from me in terms of disobedience'. He proceeds: 'Except your servants from among them, the purified ones' (Sad: 83). His saying '...I will tempt all' (Sad: 82) means that they will take a path other than the path that Allah Glorified is He has made for them. The path that Allah Glorified is He has made for them is the straight path of which Satan said: '...I will lie in wait for them all on Your straight path.' (al-A'raf: 16)

Yes indeed, for Satan does not visit people to tempt them at taverns, casinos and other places of disobedience. Instead, he meddles in the affairs of the obedient in order to corrupt their obedience. The straight path, here, is the way of Allah Glorified is He that He has laid down for the contentment of humanity. So, Satan, instead of waiting to see what a human's limbs do in accordance with Allah's way, either through obedience or disobedience, he targets the foundations from which these limbs base their movements, so if you read the Quran he comes to corrupt your reading.

That is why your Lord teaches you to seek refuge in Him, primarily to block this path of Satan's because he will not wait until you read and the benefits of this reading manifest in the way you live your life. Indeed, he targets the Quran itself in order to ruin it for you from the outset, so if you want to overcome him, then seek refuge in Allah Glorified is He from him.

When you seek refuge from him in Allah, you are seeking refuge in a powerful support and a protective shield, which nothing of Satan's whispering; his goading or his beckoning can penetrate. That is why Satan was fully aware of this when he said: 'Except your servants from among them, the purified ones.' (Sad: 83) So, the purified ones are the ones who are protected from Satan in the protection of their Lord and Creator.

As for His words 'In the name of Allah, The All-Merciful, The Ever-Merciful', the True Lord created man and made him the master of this universe. Moreover, He subjugated everything for him, and from that which He has subjugated, are its parts for him to use as he pleases. For example, he subjugated man's tongue for him to use as he pleases, that if he is a believer he says: 'Allah is One'. If he is not, he says, for example: 'Allah is the third of three'. Likewise, He has subjugated the eye so that it can look at what is permissible and at what is impermissible; and the same applies to the feet. Allah Glorified is He has subjugated all your limbs to your will, and so if you seek obedience they will behave accordingly, and if you want disobedience, they will behave accordingly, too. The will is that which dictates what you want, and the limbs can do nothing but carry out acts of obedience or disobedience because they are subjugated.

Previously, we gave the example of the commander of the army when he sends, for example, the subordinate commander to be the head of a regiment on some mission. The regiment must obey the commands of this immediate commander with blind obedience even if these commands go against what is good for them. They cannot protest against him or even go back to the commander and complain to him about their immediate commander. It is in this way that the limbs obey man's will in this worldly life.

By contrast, in the Hereafter, man's command over his limbs will be stripped from him, and these limbs will bear witness against their owner in front of the True Lord. This is because in the Hereafter no one has authority except Allah Glorified is He: '...Who has control today? Allah, the One, the Subduer (of all).' (Ghafir: 16) He also says, 'On the day when their tongues and their hands and their feet shall bear witness against them as to what they did.' (an-Nur: 24) Allah also says, 'They will say to their skins, "Why did you testify against us?" and their skins will reply, "Allah, who gave speech to everything..."' (Fussilat: 21).

If you want to do some action then this action requires from you, first, the rational and mental capacity to delineate it. Then it requires strength from the limbs in order to do it. Who created for you a mind that thinks? Who gave your limbs the strength and capacity to do things? Do they carry out your commands and do as you ask because of some inherent strength within you; or is it because of Allah's Power over them?

Therefore, you must approach every act, thinking, planning, implementing, and doing, by saying 'In the Name of Allah'. When you say it, this is as if you are saying to your limbs: 'I am not making demands of you with my own strength, but by the strength of "In the Name of Allah", and in Allah's Name I act, not by my power'.

If Allah Glorified is He wants to strip man of his movement, ability, and thinking, then the limbs will be paralysed and the thought processes will also be paralysed. This is proof that you must approach every action of yours with 'In the Name of Allah', as He is the One helping you to do them.

Moreover, your actions require wisdom, power, knowledge, and so forth. Who is the one who combines all these attributes? Indeed, it is Allah Glorified is He so say ‘In the Name of Allah’: the One Who combines all the attributes of perfection and grants them to His creation. He is the All Knowing who provides you with knowledge; the fully Capable Who provides you with capability; the Wise Who provides you with wisdom the Almighty Who provides you with might; the All-Dominant Who provides you with the ability to dominate and so forth.

Have we not heard what the judge says when he sits for a verdict? He says, ‘In the name of the people…’ because he is not giving the verdict by himself. He only gives the verdict by the power of the people. Likewise, the believer says, ‘In the Name of Allah’ with every act, meaning ‘O limbs! Obey me as part of your obedience to Allah’!

The True Lord describes Himself by saying: ‘...The All-Merciful, The Ever-Merciful’ (al-Fatiha: 1) because the True Lord created His creation with the ability to choose, so amongst them are the believer and the disbeliever; the obedient and the disobedient. Maybe man is heedless of Allah’s way so he commits minor sins and even major sins. How, then, can he approach his actions with ‘In the Name of Allah’? How can he seek help from Him when he has disobeyed Him?

That is why his Lord says to him: ‘Do not be ashamed to say, ‘In the Name of Allah’ because I am Most Merciful and I dispense mercy. I forgive you and I overlook what you have done, and I will not abandon you. Therefore, have courage and do not leave seeking help in My Name, regardless of whatever sins you have committed, and rely on the fact that I am Most Merciful and I dispense mercy’.

It is related (1) that Al-Asma`i (2) heard a man saying, while he was making circumambulation around the Ka`ba, ‘O Allah! I disobey you and I am ashamed to ask of you, but from whom can I ask when there is no one in the universe besides you?' Al-Asma`i said to him 'O you! Indeed, your Lord has answered you because of the beauty of the way you have stated your supplication to Him.'

(2) Al-Asma`i is Abd Al- Malik Qurayb Al-Bahili Abu Sa`id, the narrator of the Arabs and one of the chief scholars of language and poetry as well as countries. His name goes back to his grandfather, Asma`a. He was born in Basra in the year 132 A.H. and he spent a lot of time travelling in the desert. Many stories are attributed to him. He was the most proficient of people in language and the most knowledgeable of them in poetry. His works include Al-Addad and Khalq Al-Ansan ... Al-Ibl. He died in Basra in the year 216 A.H. at the age of 94. Az-Zirikli, Al-A`lam 4/162)

When the True Lord wants to enumerate His blessing that He has bestowed upon His servants He says '...If you tried to count Allah's favour you could never calculate it...' (Ibrahim: 34). Yes, because when you count something you are expected to arrive at some statistic. Despite the advancement of science and the fact that various universities and institutes are specialised in statistics, no one has ever tried to count Allah's blessings. That is why He did not say 'and if you try to count Allah's ni`am (favours)' but rather, one ni`mah (favour) because a single favour covers so many favours that we cannot perceive.

You will notice that this verse is found in two places, but each one of them has its own supplement. The first is: '...If you tried to count Allah's favour you could never calculate it...' (Ibrahim: 34), and the other is: 'And if you should count the favour of Allah, you could not enumerate it. Indeed, Allah is Forgiving and Merciful.' (an-Nahl: 18)

It is as if the True Lord is saying to us: 'You, O man, are blessed, even though you receive Allah's favours with wrongdoing and ingratitude. Your Lord is the One Who bestows favours and He receives your wrongdoing and ingratitude towards His favours by extending these favours, because He is much forgiving and the Ever-Merciful.

The scholars have different sayings regarding 'Ya Sin'. Some of them say: The ya` is vocative and the sin is one of Prophet Muhammad's names because it was normal for the Arabs to omit some of the letters of a word and leave the letter that is distinguished by its strong sound. For example, in the word insan (a human) it is the sin that is the strongest letter. That is why, in another example, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says: 'The sword is a sufficient sha`'(1), and what he meant was shahidan (witness). In the same vein, the poet said:

---

(1) From Salma ibn Al-Mahhbuq who said: 'It was said to Abu Thabit, Sa`ad ibn `Iyada, when the verse of prescribed punishments was revealed and a man was very jealous: "Have you not considered what you would do if you found a man with your wife?" He said: "I would strike them with my sword. Would I wait until I brought four people? Until that time, he had done what he needed to do and left. Or I say: 'I have seen such-=

O Fatim! Take it easy with this coquettishness
And if you are resolved to leave me then say it once and for all (1)
And what is meant is Fatima.

In our daily speech, we also abridge some letters, so when we say, for example: 'O Ahmad', some of us do not say the dal (d), especially in the dialect of Damietta. Therefore, the omission of some letters and leaving the others that have a strong sound is something normal in the language of the Arabs.

Others say: Ya Sin is Muhammad's name and he is being addressed while the vocative ya`a is omitted.

The True Lord taught man the names of all things, which means that he taught him the speech that is required for conversation. While human beings speak and converse, they devise new names and terms. For example, people now know the word 'television' and they are familiar with it. Did Allah Glorified is He teach Adam peace be upon him the word 'television'? No, but it is a word that people have devised based on what Allah Glorified is He had taught them.

'The names of all things' in the statement: 'And He imparted unto Adam the names of all things...' (al-Baqara: 31) refer to those which are suitable for conversing then (at the time when Adam lived on earth), in a primitive environment. It was Adam's duty to develop his language and devise names for this and that.

We know that letters fall into two categories. The first category consists of the 'building' letters. Their function is to form or build the word, without them having any other meaning. An example would be kataba: the kaf, the ta`a and

= and-such, so let me be struck with a punishment and never accept testimony from me.' He said: "This was mentioned to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and he said: 'The sword suffices as a witness.'" Narrated by Ibn Majah in his Sunnan (2606) and Abu Dawud in his Sunnan (4417) The conclusion of the Hadith is: He then said: "I fear that a furious man and a jealous man may follow this course."'

(1) This is from an ode of Imru` Al-Qays from the Tawil metre and it consists of 77 verses. It is his renowned 'suspended ode' which begins thus: 'Halt and let us weep in remembrance of a beloved and an encampment As-Saram): a severance or break of relations. The meaning of the meter is:
'O Fatima! Leave aside some of your flirtation and make up your mind regarding separating from me. Tell me once and for all and leave me.'

the ba`a are the letters from which the word is built without giving another meaning in addition to the meaning of the verb that these letters have produced.

The second category consists of the letters of meaning, and they are the letters that have a meaning that independently signifies them, as in katabtu (I wrote). The final ta`a has a meaning that is different from the meaning of writing. This is because it indicates a first-person subject. If it has a fatha; i.e. katabta (you wrote) then it indicates a second person subject and if it has a kasra i.e. katabti (you, female, wrote) it indicates a second person female subject.

We have stated that the name of a letter can be the proper name of something, as in the example of sin, which is the name of a known river (Seine). `Ain is an unintelligible letter, yet, many things are called by it, such as: `ain (the seeing eye/s); `ain (a spring of water); `ain (a spy) and having an eye; and `ain (precious things like gold and silver).

In His saying: 'By the wise Quran' (Ya Sin: 2), this letter waw (by) is called the waw of swearing as it is used in making oaths. However, is that which the speaker wants from the addressee coming by way of oath or by way of evidence? It is coming by way of evidence because an oath can contain an indication of a desired purpose. For example, your companion says to you: 'O brother! You do not appreciate me. I was in a crisis and you did not stand by my side'. You respond to him (in Egyptian dialect): 'By the life of the cheque that I wrote for you on such-and-such day; by the life of the gift that you accepted from me on such-and-such day!' So, you swear to him by the evidence of your truthfulness.

Likewise, here, the True Lord is saying to His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him: 'you have been sent and I swear by the Quran because it is a proof that you are a true messenger'.

The word Quran is the verbal noun of the verb qara`a (past form of read), and if there is an addition to the original root letters, then there must be an increase in meaning. We say Quranan to distinguish between the reading of the Quran and the reading of anything else. It also indicates that it is a book that is recited. In other times, it is called 'The Book' because it is written down. Thus, the Quran is recited from the hearts and written down in lines.

The Quran is also called Adh-Dhikr (The Remembrance) because it reminds us of the primordial covenant in which Allah Glorified is He says, '[Prophet], when your Lord took out the offspring from the loins of the children of Adam and made them bear witness about themselves, He said, "Am I not your Lord?" and they replied, "Yes, we bear witness." So, you cannot say on the Day of Resurrection, "We were not aware of this."' (al-A'raf: 172)

This reminder of the first covenant is out of Allah's Mercy towards us. It is from His Mercy towards us that He reminds us when we forget or become heedless, from the time that He created Adam peace be upon him until now. The True Lord Glorified is He reminds His servants, just as a father instructs his son regarding his life, and the first thing he teaches him is the applications of this religion. This instruction and reminding must continue and be passed on from one generation to the next because it is the nature of human beings to be heedless and forgetful, and thus fall into disobedience.

That is why those who said: 'We saw our fathers following this scripture; we are guided by their footsteps' (az-Zukhruf: 22) were lying when they said it because Adam peace be upon him and his nation were upon guidance in the beginning, so why have you not followed them? Therefore, you have followed your forefathers who were astray, not guided.

Likewise, when you consider how the Quran was compiled you find that those who compiled the Quran used to investigate the verse before recording it in order to be written down. This was done first on a sheet of paper, or pieces of cloth and bones upon which the Quran was first recorded, and then two reciters would testify to its authenticity. Why? They said: 'Because a sheet of paper does not has desires such that it would change what is written on it. As for the man who memorises, he is liable to make mistakes, forget, and be heedless. So, there must be someone else with him to remind him, in accordance with Allah's saying: "...so that if one of the two women should forget, the other can remind her..." (al-Baqara: 282).

Allah Glorified is He describes the Quran with wisdom, and wisdom is to put things in their proper place so that they can carry out their duties. All religious meanings are derived from sensory perception, before the religion. For example, a man rides a horse in order to get to his destination, but if your intention behind riding the horse is to roam around the fields, then your journey is very slow like that of a carriage, for example. By contrast, if you want to traverse a long distance, then it will take you like the wind.

That is why they have made a bridle for the horse that is placed on its palate to check its speed and control it. This bridle is called a hakamah(1), and from this word is derived the word hikma (wisdom) that checks the defiance of desires so that they do not break free, and so that all matters are in their proper place. Indeed, man has desires towards which he inclines, deviate from the main path. The Quran comes with the clear truth that puts this inclination straight and rectifies it. In reality, the Quran is wise because it is perfect and from the Wise, the Most Exalted. Thus, the Quran is speech from the Wise, and with regards to man it is like the horse's bridle.

It is due to the wisdom of the Quran that it has certain distinctions and it is not treated the way other books are treated. I can read a normal book at any time and in any state, even if I am in a state of minor or major ritual impurity. As for the Quran, no one touches it except those who are pure(2) because with the Quran you are devoting yourself to something sacred and precious. Beware of handling it whilst being impure, as the True Lord(3) says, 'that this is truly a noble Quran, in a protected Record that only the purified can touch.' (al-Waqi'a: 77-79) The True Lord has placed these spiritual rules for you so that you know that you are approaching a book that has a distinction over all other books.

(1) Hakamat Al-Lijam: what encompasses the palates of the riding beast, and it goes around the mouth of the riding beast. Al-Hakama is a piece of iron on the bridle that goes over the nose of the horse and its palate to prevent it from disobeying the one riding it. And in the Hadith: 'There is not a single human being except that he has a bridle (hakama) on his head.' In another narration: 'On the head of every slave is a bridle (hakama) such that when he intends an evil deed Allah, if He wants to, can restrain him with it. (Lissan Al-`Arab) – under the entry on hakama.

(2) All the Imams have agreed and none of the Companions disputed the prohibition of touching the Quran and carrying it whilst in a state of major ritual impurity. As for minor ritual impurity, Ibn `Abbas, Ash-Sha`bi, Ad-Dahhak, Zaid ibn `Ali, Ibn Hazem and others are of the position that it is permissible for a person in this state to touch the Quran. As for reading it without touching it, this is permissible without any argument. Mentioned by Sheikh Sayyid Sabiq in Fiqh As-Sunna 1: 43 and what follows:

(3) There are two statements regarding this verse:
The first: The 'pure' here are the angels. This was stated by Ibn `Abbas, Mujahid, 'Ikrima, Sa`id ibn Jubair and others. Based on this statement the verse does not refer to reading the Quran with ablution or without ablution.
The second: The 'pure' are those who have purified themselves from both major and minor ritual impurity. What is meant by 'Quran' here is the mushhaf. At-Tabarani and Ibn Marduwayh have narrated from Ibn `Umar that he said: 'The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said: 'No one touches the Quran except the pure.'

Likewise, the Quran has certain distinctions in its letters, and letters are that which words are comprised of as they are an expression of vocal tones. Each one of them has a place in the organs of speech. For example, the letters that are articulated from the throat and chest are: Hamza, `ain and ha`a. The two that do not have diacritical marks are ghayn and fa`a.

If we move on from the throat area, we find the tongue letters, i.e. those that are articulated from the tongue, beginning from the oropharynx to the middle and then the tip. For example, the letter qaf is articulated from the farthest part of the tongue, the sheen and jeem from the middle, while the dad, lam and ra`a are from the tip. There are also letters that are articulated from the lips, such as the fa`a which comes from the inside of the lower lip, the ba`a which comes from the inside of both lips and the waw which is also articulated from both lips.

To ensure that we read the Quran correctly, we must stick to these vocal places of articulation, which is unlike reading any other book, as no other book stipulates this condition. That is why we say: 'Indeed the perfection of the Quran cannot be violated as long as there is a specific way and a precise tone which must be observed'.

For example, if you were giving a normal speech, you would say: 'Gentlemen! May Allah's Peace, Mercy, and Blessings be upon you! I have been invited by so-and-so to meet him in such-and-such place. ...' If you were to say these words in the tone and style of the Quran it would be unacceptable, but if you apply this tone to the words of the Quran, then it is beautiful and appropriate.

Therefore, the perfection of the Quran is never violated, even in its articulation because it is something that is specific to it and different from all other kinds of speech. If you applied the particularities of the Quran to any other kind of speech it would be seen as absurd and thus be rejected.

I remember when we were young and they used to advise us to read books of literature such as the books of Al-Manfaluti like Al-`Ibarat or An-Nazharat, so that we would learn how to write in an elegant style. In fact, our style improved and progressed by reading books of literature, and we learned new expressions from them. If you went to someone who had memorised the Quran and can recite it in the ten variant readings, or the fourteen, and you read a word from a book to him or even an article, his style of reading the Quran would not be affected. Why? This is because the perfection of the Quran is never surpassed.

Thus, we understand that the wisdom of the Quran came from this distinctiveness. There is wisdom in its letters; in its words; in its tone; its recitation and its style that cannot be matched or applied to anything else.

Then, the True Lord says:

إِنَّكَ لَمِنَ ٱلۡمُرۡسَلِينَ ٣

You [Muhammad] are truly one of the messengers sent [3] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 3)

This is the response of the oath in the preceding verse that we have discussed. The True Lord is responding to the disbelievers of Mecca and swearing an oath to them: ‘Indeed you, O Muhammad, are from the messengers sent’. When the one speaking sees that the one he is speaking to is merely unfamiliar with what he is talking about, he speaks to him normally without any emphasis. However, if this person is doubtful of what is being said to him, or he rejects it, then the one speaking emphasises what he is saying to an extent that is commensurate with the doubt or rejection.

That is why the True Lord is emphasising His speech with more than one means of emphasis. ‘You [Muhammad] are truly one of the messengers sent.’ (Ya Sin: 3) For emphasis, the True Lord uses `inna (truly) and lam (indeed), and this is preceded by an oath because the disbelievers were rejecting Prophet Muhammad’s message, and the emphasis of the speech is commensurate with the rejection.

In this regard, you may also consider His words: ‘We sent two messengers, but they rejected both. Then We reinforced them with a third. They said, “Truly, we are messengers to you.”’ (Ya Sin: 14) The result was rejection:

'but they answered, "You are only men like ourselves. The Lord of Mercy has sent nothing; you are just lying."' (Ya Sin: 15) That is why they emphasise their speech with more than one means of emphasis: 'They said, "Our Lord knows that we have been sent to you."' (Ya Sin: 16)

We have said that this verse came as a proof and evidence in the form of an oath, as if Allah Glorified is He is saying: 'The one who reads the Quran must believe that you, O Muhammad, are a messenger sent by Allah'. Why? It is because they are a nation known by its skill in arts of speech and its high taste for eloquence. No nation, even contemporary ones, ever established exhibitions for speech. As for the Arabs, in their jahiliyyah (Pre-Islamic ignorance), established markets and exhibitions for speech in which poets and orators vied with one another every year; such as Al-Murbid, 'Ukazh, Dhu Al-Majana(1) and others.

Their concern for poetry was to such an extent that they hung their most eloquent poems on the curtains of the Ka`ba. As long as the Arabs were a nation noted for speech they had to receive the Quran with this talent of theirs. Its inimitability was not hidden from them, but they rejected it and said that it was magic; that it was poetry; that it was falsehood, and when they had become tired of employing various schemes and plots, from which they had achieved nothing, they said: 'Why was this Quran not sent down to a distinguished man, from either of the two cities?' (az-Zukhruf: 31) This means that there was no objection to the Quran other than the fact that it was revealed to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. This was their problem with it. Their rhetorical talent could not oppose the Quran or reject it.

That is why, despite their disbelief, they loved listening to the Quran. One of them would conceal his identity and secretly listen to the Quran being read at night by Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. Two of them would accidentally meet outside the chambers of Messenger, Muhammad

(1) Abu Bakr Al-Azdi said, in what has been mentioned by Al-Marzuqi in his book, Al-Azmina Wa Al-Amkina, in the chapter in the markets of the Arabs: 'In (jahiliyyah) the large markets of the Arabs were thirteen in number, and the first to be built was the market of Dumat Al-Jandal, then Sahhar, then Daba, then Shahhr, then Rabiya Hadramawt, then Dhu Al-Majar, then Natat Khababar, then Al-Mushqir, then Hajr Bil-Yamama, then Mata, then `Ukazh, then `Adan then San`a`.'

peace and blessings be upon him and one of them would ask the other: ‘What are you doing here, O so-and-so?’ and he would have to say, ‘I came to visit my sick aunt’; the other would say ‘I came for such-and-such’. This was hardly successful, for one’s state reveals the truth of one’s words.(1) In this regard, a poet said:

Look at them, everyone has infiltrated
After the gathering of nighttime conversation had ended
Secretly he heads for the chamber of Taha (a name of Prophet Muhammad)
To hear the revelation in the early hours
Excuse them for its beauty. When they see one another
They seek to justify it with the lamest of excuses

That is why when one of them heard the Quran from Allah’s Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and then returned to his people, they would say: ‘So-and-so has returned with a face other than the one he went with.’

Then, the True Lord says:

عَلَىٰ صِرَٰطٖ مُّسۡتَقِيمٖ ٤

On a straight path [4]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 4)

As-sirat is the Straight Path, and it has another meaning on the Day of Resurrection. It is the path that is taken over hell and is traversed by the righteous and the wicked, the believer and the disbeliever. Those traversing it will differ according to their deeds in the life of this world. Some will traverse it like a flash of lightning even though it is sharper than a sword and thinner than a hair. Others will traverse it faster than racehorses, and still others will traverse it crawling. Then, there will be others who will fall into hell(1)—we seek refuge in Allah from that.

(1) Ibn Hisham has mentioned in his, As-Sira An-Nabawwiyah, (The Quran, 1: 227 in the Dar At-Turath edition), that Abu Sufyan ibn Harb, Abu Jahl and Al-Akhnas ibn Shariq went out one night to listen to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him while he was praying at night in his house. Each one of them found a spot in which to sit and listen and none of them knew where the others were sitting. They would listen to him until the break of dawn and then leave, and then they would bump into each other on the way home. At this point they would start rebuking one another. They would say to each other: ‘Do not go back, for if some of your fools saw you, you would put ideas in his head.’ Then they left (and this was repeated for three consecutive nights) until on the third night they said to each other: ‘We are not leaving until we pledge to one another not to return.’ Thus, they pledged to one another and then they departed. In the story there is a position that they changed their minds about what they had heard.

When you traverse the sirat, you will not have a stick with which to keep your balance, like a tightrope walker in the circus, for example. That which balances your movement on the sirat is the Quran that you clung to in the life of this world. When the believer traverses the sirat, his balancing is not from below but from above, from the direction of the Quran; for he will be like a suspension bridge that is not supported by anything from underneath but is strengthened from above by what is holding it and keeping its balance. This is how the believer will be on the sirat.

The sirat in its general meaning is the straight path that takes you to your destination in the quickest and easiest way, but in the Quran's expression: 'On a straight path.' (Ya Sin: 4), there is an indication that the sirat has a duty, and it is to take you to the intended destination. Thus, the sirat (path) serves you.

We have an example of this where Allah says: 'Such people are following their Lord's guidance...' (al-Baqara: 5). Some people understand that guidance requires responsibilities and restriction of movement, and that there is difficulty and hardship in following the guidance, but the wording of the verse has the opposite meaning. The meaning of 'Such people are following their Lord's guidance...' (al-Baqara: 5) is that you are upon guidance, and it is like a riding animal that is taking you to your glorious destination. Thus, it is carrying you. You are not carrying it.

(1) Ahmad narrates from `Aisha Allah be pleased with her that she said: 'The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said: "Hell has a bridge over it that is thinner than a hair and sharper than a sword and there are hooks on it and spikes that take whomever Allah wills. The people cross it in the blink of an eye, or like lightning, or like racehorses and riders, and the angels say: 'Lord, grant him safety! Lord, grant him safety!', and a saved person is safe and a shamed person is safe, and another is rolled up and thrown into the Fire on his face."' Narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (6: 110) and included by Al-Haithami in his Majma` Az-Zawaa`id [10: 359] and he said: 'It includes Ibn Lahima and he is weak but has been relied upon.'

The sirat is described as being straight, for we know from the basics of engineering that the straight line is the shortest distance between two points. Thus, when you want to move from one place to another 'from' indicates the starting point and 'to' indicates the desired destination. As long as you are only concerned with the starting point and the destination, then facilitation requires that you take the quickest and shortest of ways, which is the straight line. This is because every starting point in the road or curve will constitute a two-sided triangle in the line of travel and the straight path is the third side.

It is known that the total of any two sides of a triangle is longer than the third. Therefore, the path is longer for you. That is why the Quran talks to us about al-sirat al-mustaqim (the straight path); and about sawa`a as-sabil (the even path): sawa`a means that its right side is equal to its left side.

Why is the path of the believers a straight path? Because Allah Glorified is He is the One Who has ordained it as a way for His creation and because it is sent down from Allah Glorified is He.

Then, the True Lord says:

تَنزِيلَ ٱلْعَزِيزِ ٱلرَّحِيمِ ﴿٥﴾

With a revelation from the Almighty, the Lord of Mercy [5] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 5)

When you hear the word tanzil (a revelation sent down) (Ya Sin: 5), you know that it is from an upper direction, even if that which is sent down is in the depths of the earth because it been sent from above, as Allah says: '...We also sent down iron, with its mighty strength and many uses for mankind...' (al-Hadid: 25). Iron is only found in the earth, but you should look at the highness of its Creator. That is why Allah Glorified is He has given it two attributes: a worldly attribute and a religious attribute. '…We also sent down iron, with its mighty strength and many uses for mankind...' (al-Hadid: 25). The mighty strength is for the enemies of Allah Glorified is He. '...so that Allah could mark out those who would help Him and His messengers though they cannot see Him...' (al-Hadid: 25), and this is for the Hereafter. It also contains benefits for man i.e. in the life of this world. That is why we find that it is a metal that is widely benefitted from and it is the strongest and most firm.

In Allah’s saying: ‘...the Almighty, the Lord of Mercy’ (Ya Sin: 5), He is mentioning here the Attribute of Might and the Attribute of Mercy because that which is being bestowed from on high is a way that restricts man’s movement by telling him to ‘do such-and-such’ and ‘do not do such-and-such’. You have the choice to obey or disobey. The True Lord who has ordained this way for you, wants good for you, because He is not increased in the slightest by your obedience and He is not harmed by your disobedience.

Thus, it is you who are intended in this matter because Allah Glorified is He is Almighty over His creation and Gracious towards them. Thus, if you see someone who is disobedient and contravening Allah’s way, know that Allah Glorified is He is Almighty and capable of exacting revenge. No one is able to save a human from His grasp. On the other hand, if you look at the one who is obedient, know that Allah Glorified is He is Merciful.

Then, the True Lord says:

لِتُنذِرَ قَوْمًا مَّآ أُنذِرَ ءَابَآؤُهُمْ فَهُمْ غَٰفِلُونَ ﴿٦﴾

To warn a people whose forefathers were not warned, and so they are unaware [6] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 6)

`Indhar (warning) is to induce fear of something that is lethal and destructive. It is a condition that the warning comes before something happens so that the warning can fulfil its task of preventing man from doing wrong; so that he does not fall into that which will destroy him, and thus he is able to protect and save himself.

The meaning of ‘...whose forefathers were not warned...’ (Ya Sin: 6) is as follows: whenever you hear the particle ma you assume that it indicates negation, and this is what the Quranic commentators have said. They have said: ‘because they—the forefathers—were people of heedlessness, and lived in a time when there were no messengers and so they did not have a messenger to warn them’. Additionally, if we say: ‘Indeed Allah’s Messenger peace and blessings be upon him was sent as a warner for all of mankind, including the Jews and the Christians’, they say: ‘He is not a warner unto us because warners have already come to us before him. Musa (Moses) peace be upon him came to us and `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him came to us.

The solution to this problem is to say: ‘Yes, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him did indeed warn his people, and `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him did indeed warn his people, but many years have elapsed since then and the people have differed amongst themselves and gone astray, and no warner has come to bring them back from their misguidance. So, a warner did come to you, but you failed to continue paying heed to his warning, and here is Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who has come to you as a new warner.

Ma, here may have the meaning of a relative pronoun, i.e. to warn a people with what their forefathers had been warned before them, meaning: you are not the first of the messengers.

In His saying: ‘...and so they are unaware’ (Ya Sin: 6), ghafla (heedlessness) indicates that something occurs to your mind, but then your heart is not attached to it, so eventually it is forgotten. Thus, you do not remember it until someone comes and draws your attention to it, and reminds you of it. Forgetfulness is not a function of the heart but of the intellect and the memory; for if the heart is attached to something, then, whenever heedless occurs this attachment of the heart blocks it, and thus it remains in the memory and you do not become heedless of it.

لَقَدۡ حَقَّ ٱلۡقَوۡلُ عَلَىٰٓ أَكۡثَرِهِمۡ فَهُمۡ لَا يُؤۡمِنُونَ ﴿٧﴾

The verdict has been passed against most of them, for they refuse to believe [7] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 7)

The True Lord recorded in pre-eternity every response of those who receive any kind of religious call; the believers and the disbelievers, but He granted mankind the freedom of choice. He records what will be done by mankind. Then, the events happen according to what has been recorded. This means that what he said in pre-eternity is the truth.

The Quran says at one point: ‘...The verdict has been passed…’ (Ya Sin: 7), and at another time ‘…the sentence has already been passed…’ (Hud: 40), and in another place ‘…When the verdict is given against them…’ (an-Naml: 82). All these verses indicate that what Allah Glorified is He already knew regarding those who have the choice, and thus choose guidance or misguidance, is recorded with Him. It is true just as Allah Glorified is He has informed us, and if it were the case that the slave could not choose we would say: 'Indeed Allah has compelled him to do as He has willed', but in fact, he has the choice.

The True Lord has Absolute Power and Absolute Knowledge, and His Knowledge of whatever will be is recorded and written down. We already clarified this matter when we spoke about Abu Lahab: 'May the hands of Abu Lahab be ruined! May he be ruined too.' (al-Masad: 1) When he heard this verse, Abu Lahab could have declared himself to be a believer, even if he did not mean it, and then accuse the Quran of lying, but he did not do this— even though he had the choice — and remained in his state of disbelief until Allah's information regarding him came true.

Likewise, in His words: '...and say inwardly, "Why does Allah not punish us for what we say?"' (al-Mujadala: 8) It is something amazing on their part, after the Quran had disgraced and had informed them of what they say inwardly, that they did not believe in it or ask themselves: who had informed Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about their thoughts? Had it been the case that they did not say this inwardly, then they would have confronted Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said: 'We did not do such thing'.

They denied the mission of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him although he informed them of some invisible matters unknown to human minds. After denying his message, they wanted to affirm that he was above a human messenger— a God. However, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him told them, 'I am a messenger, not God. The prior word expresses what happened to those people; they did not believe and rejected stubbornly, 'Indeed, the word [of Allah's condemnation] is bound to come true against most of them, for they will not believe' (Ya Sin: 7). They even said that angels sometimes wonder when something happens in the universe in conformity with information they have in the Book. The angels then exclaim, 'How Knowledgeable and Powerful our Lord is'! Everything happens just as He said! However, human beings have absolute freedom of choice.

Philosophers attempted to explain the verse: 'Indeed, the word [of Allah's condemnation] is bound to come true against most of them: for they will not believe' (Ya Sin: 7) saying, 'the Lord allows human beings freewill. Simply, they accepted to assume the responsibility of free choice. Unlike heaven, earth and the mountains among other things that refused free choice and, instead, are completely subject to Allah and His will.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Verily, We did offer the trust [of reason and volition] to the heavens, and the earth, and the mountains: but they refused to bear it because they were afraid of it. Yet man took it up – for, verily, he has always been prone to be most wicked, most ignorant’ (al-Ahzab: 72).

The Lord the Exalted allowed them choice. The heavens, earth, and mountains refused, but man, deluded by intellect, intelligence, and independence, accepted the choice. Allah declared that man was wicked and ignorant. Man is wicked because of wronging himself with bearing that great responsibility. He is ignorant because he declared responsible but failed to carry out his duty. An intelligent person envisages the time of fulfilment before taking duties on. A friend may come to you to deposit an amount of money as trust. You think it easy for you to accept it in determination to give it back when requested. However, you cannot be certain that your own circumstances will not change. You may need the money or face spiritual change! Here, human ignorance lies in human carelessness about the time of fulfilment. As such, man wrongs himself by bearing duties beyond his abilities. Simply, human desires are very strong and may lead him to sins.

They said that two matters judge the entire world; the seen and the unseen. It is amazing that the seen is evidence of the unseen; what you see tells of what you do not see. To teach people how to believe in Allah, encourage them to look at the creation of skies and earth: ‘Now among His signs are the night and the day, as well as the sun and the moon: [hence,] adore not the sun or the moon, but prostrate yourselves in adoration before Allah, who has created them – if it is Him whom you [really] worship’ (Fussilat: 37).

‘For among His signs is this: you see the earth lying desolate – and lo! When We send down water upon it, it stirs and swells [with life]! Verily, He who brings it to life can surely give life to the dead [of heart as well]: for, behold, He has the power to will anything’ (Fussilat: 39).

After you have reflected on Allah’s kingdom and His signs in the universe, and thus believe in Him, he gives you other issues that your mind cannot comprehend. Why? Because Allah Glorified is He wants faith in Him to be based on two aspects: that you believe in what can be seen, and that you accept, when you have come to believe in what can be seen, the existence of truth, and He is the Lord who exists by necessity, and you hear Him. Thus, if He informs you of something that your intellect cannot comprehend you must accept it as part of your faith in Him.

If He says to you that the sirat, for example, is thinner than a hair and sharper than a sword you do not reject it, even though your intellect cannot comprehend it. This is because Allah, the legislator, is the one saying it. You are therefore taking that which can be seen as evidence for that which is unseen, and it is Allah. From the evidence of the unseen, which is Allah, you have taken your faith in the things that your intellect cannot comprehend, so it is as if the seen and the unseen are the axis upon which faith and other things revolve.

The requirements of professing the religion are either necessary for the heart or limbs and tongue. What is required of the heart is the creed that one believes in the One who exists by necessity, and that He is One. One must also believe that He must have conveyed a way for me to conduct my life because He is the One Who created me and I am His making. The maker is the one who determines the principles of maintenance for what has been made, and the principles of maintenance have to be conveyed.

The Lord the Exalted does not talk to His creation one at a time, but rather, He chooses for the task – the task of conveying from Him – whomever He wishes from the angels and from human beings. The one chosen from the angels conveys to the one chosen from the human beings. The one chosen from the human beings conveys to the rest of the people. That is why the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him developed an Islamic nation in twenty-three years, and had it been the case that each individual waited for Allah to speak to him individually the development of the nation would have taken a lot more time.

Therefore, conveying from Allah necessarily follows His Existence. If not, it would be the case that Allah did exist but you would not know that Allah Glorified is He is One and has no partner. You cannot know these things by yourself. There must be a messenger to inform you about the Lord and His Names, Attributes and instructions needed from you.

It is easy to refute the worship of the sun, moon, trees, or rocks based on the following: What is worship? Worship is the worshipper's obedience of the one worshipped in commands and proscriptions. We go on to say, what are commands and proscriptions of the sun? What rewards has it prepared for worshippers? What has it prepared for those who disobey it? This is therefore a deity without any method (for conducting your life) and without any commandments, so it is false and rejected.

For further clarification, if someone came and knocked on the door, we all without doubts think of a person who wants to come in. None of us knows who is there, why he comes, where he comes from, or whether he brings glad tidings or warning. We will certainly differ in these matters.

We must stop at the point upon which we all agree: there is someone knocking on the door. We leave it to this person to explain who he is. We say, 'who are you'? He says, 'I am so-and-so and I come for such-and-such'. Likewise, the creation of this miraculous universe is sufficient to indicate that the Lord is All Knowing, All-Powerful, and All-Wise. His are all Attributes of Perfection. When it comes to the question: Who is He? What does He want from you? The Messenger's mission is to convey that from Allah.

Philosophers failed to stop at understanding the One Who exists by necessity and wanted to imagine Him. This is their mistake. Had they limited themselves to what they understand, it would have been sufficient. You ask: Who are you? What do you want from me? What have you prepared for me if I obey you? What will you do to me if I disobey you? He then sends messengers to answer all these questions. Sincere followers of religions should adopt this way. We believe that Allah does exist by necessity; He is One and Unique. He sends truthful messengers, backed by miracles, to convey from Him. This is clear and rational. After you have come to believe in these clear, rational, and visible matters, He informs you of unseen things that have no evidence, e.g., paradise and its joys, good food and a need-free life there. These matters are beyond human intellect, but who is informing you of them? It is Allah, the Truthful Speaker. You already believe in Him and trust in His words.

We are incessantly in need to be in real contact with the Lord in whom we believe. As such, the five prayers are prescribed to have a devotional constant access. They are five prayers in performance and fifty in reward. The fifty prayers meant to cover the twenty-four hours. It is from Allah's Mercy that He made them five in terms of action and fifty in terms of reward. However, people are still impatient with them.

I remember when we were in Mecca, at the Sacred Mosque, that the calls to prayers followed one another giving us no enough opportunity to sit in the Mosque and reflect on our surroundings. Sheikh Ahmad Allah rest his soul often said, 'Stand up and pray!' In response, we said to him, 'O Sheikh Ahmad! We came here for Hajj and did not come for prayers.'

Evidently, prayers are five to encompass the entire day and night and you establish constant devotion to Allah. Once in prayers, you find one has two units, one has three, and one has four units without being aware of the wisdom behind these numbers. It suffices for you to say that it is Allah Who prescribes them as such. You do not live in society by yourself, but with other people; some are weak, poor, or needy. These people must live just as you must live, so you are obliged to help them with obligatory and voluntary charities. Allah also legislates fasting for you as a form of worship. It distances you from going against the Divine commands until uprightness becomes deeply rooted in you. Allah loves enthusiastic worshippers who obey His commandments persistently. He permits in Sha`ban what He forbids in Ramadan.

The tongue articulates words, some Quranic words you understand and others are beyond your intellect. The introductory beginnings of some Quranic chapters, for example, are beyond the abilities of our intellects, whereas other parts are perceivable to human intellects. There is difference between the one who accepts something because he comprehends it and the one accepting something without comprehension. Simply, the Lord wants it. We already gave an example of a master who has workers in his house. He commands one of them to move a stone from a place to another. However, he replies 'I cannot do it myself; I am going to ask a colleague to help me'. The master then says, 'There is some money underneath it that you can have'! Hearing this, he moves the stone himself. Therefore, did he move it for a reason or because of a command? He did it for a reason. Faith is not like that. Faith is not for a reason; faith is sheer obedience.

‘Indeed, the word [of Allah’s condemnation] is bound to come true’ (Ya Sin: 7) means that His word comes just as decreed and recorded. His saying ‘…against most of them…’ (Ya Sin: 7) proves that some of them would believe, even if it is just one man. Allah’s saying, ‘For they will not believe’ (Ya Sin: 7) indicates most of them will never accept faith. Then Allah Glorified is He says:

إِنَّا جَعَلۡنَا فِيٓ أَعۡنَٰقِهِمۡ أَغۡلَٰلٗا فَهِيَ إِلَى ٱلۡأَذۡقَانِ فَهُم مُّقۡمَحُونَ ٨

[It is as if] We had placed [iron] collars around their necks, right up to their chins so that their heads are forced up [8] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 8)

In this verse, the Lord the Exalted gives an image of the state of the disbelievers, who are opposed to following the truth. He says, ‘Behold, around their necks We have put shackles, reaching up to their chins, so that their heads are forced up’ (Ya Sin: 8). Aghlal is a plural and its singular is ghul (i.e. shackle). It is a piece of iron that grips the hands and ties it under the chin. When the hands are tied under the chin, the head is forced up; one is forced to look up as well, making it almost impossible to see where one is going and where their feet are. This image is also clear in the meaning of the word ‘heads are forced up (muqmahun)’ (Ya Sin: 8). Muqmih is taken from camel’s moving its head high. It does so when it drinks water; it sips it and then it raises its head.(1) Some said, ‘Indeed this is an image that the Lord the Exalted has drawn of the one who shackles his hands from giving in charity and spending on others. Likewise, his hands are chained to the neck on the Day of Resurrection; the way you chose to live this life affects you in the coming life. The Lord the Exalted always creates a balance between what the one deserving the reward has done and the reward itself; the reward is equal to one’s actions. For example, Allah says: ‘But as for all who lay up treasures of gold and silver and do not spend them for the sake of Allah’s cause, Give them the tiding of grievous suffering [in the life to come] on the Day when that [hoarded wealth] shall be heated in the fire of hell and their foreheads and their sides and their backs branded therewith, [those sinners shall be told:] “These are the treasures which you have laid up for yourselves! Taste, then, [the evil of] your hoarded treasures!”’ (at-Tawba: 34-35): (i. e. the reward).

(1) Al-Jawhari says, ‘The camel raises its head (qamaha) and is qamih when it has raised its head from the pond and it has finished drinking, so it is a qamih camel. Lisan Al-`Arab – under the entry qamaha

These three human places: foreheads, sides, and backs come in this sequence in order to correspond completely with what the possessor of wealth did, i.e. hoarding his wealth and withholding it from the poor. The poor person came to him and he would turn his forehead away from them and give them his side. Then he would turn his back to them and walk away. Their punishment is according to what they did. The Lord the Exalted says:

وَجَعَلۡنَا مِنۢ بَيۡنِ أَيۡدِيهِمۡ سَدّٗا وَمِنۡ خَلۡفِهِمۡ سَدّٗا فَأَغۡشَيۡنَٰهُمۡ فَهُمۡ لَا يُبۡصِرُونَ ٩

And set barriers before and behind them, blocking their vision: they cannot see [9] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 9)

Does this mean that Allah Glorified is He will help them in disbelief? They said, ‘Yes, because when I call my slave and he refuses to respond to me and disobey me, I assist him in disbelief. Simply, I am a Lord that has no need of any. If he loves disbelief and adores it and there is no hope for him to restore guidance, I seal his heart. Faith will not enter it and disbelief will not exit from it. No one disbelieves in defiance of Allah, but rather, he disbelieves because of the freewill divinely embedded in man’. Allah Glorified is He is the Lord and Creator of all. He assists all to fulfil their intents, be they believers or disbelievers. That is why Allah the Exalted has sealed the hearts of disbelievers. He says, ‘We have set a barrier before them’ (Ya Sin: 9), i.e. placed in front of them an obstruction and an impediment ‘and a barrier behind them’ (Ya Sin: 9). It is a material barrier that is outside the creation of man ‘We have enshrouded them’ (Ya Sin: 9), i.e. We have put over their eyes a shroud and a veil. They are hindered from the truth of things. In themselves we have shrouded their eyes so that they do not see and they are not guided. From their inside, they themselves have not remembered the primordial covenant they made with Allah. As to the outside, they do not pay attention to the method in front of them or behind them. There is an obstacle preventing them. Had they remembered what was awaiting them, they would have abstained from transgression. Had they considered what had befallen the past denies and the divine punishment that snatched them, they would have gone back.

A barrier in front of them prevents them from knowing what was awaiting them and another behind so as not to reflect on the destiny of past peoples about whom Allah Glorified is He says, ‘For every one of them did We take to task for his sin: Upon some of them We let loose a deadly storm wind. Some of them were overtaken by a [sudden] blast. Some of them We caused to be swallowed by the earth; and some of them We caused to drown(1)’ (al-’Ankabut: 40).

They are surrounded by obstacles and have no hope to return to the way of truth. It is correct that the meaning of ‘We have set a barrier before them and a barrier behind them’ (Ya Sin: 9) is an impediment that prevents them from reflecting on the rational evident proofs in front of them. The ‘barrier behind them’ prevents them from being aware of the primordial state of belief instilled in them. (2) The Lord the Exalted says:

(1) These are the four categories of punishment:

a. ‘...upon some of them We let loose a deadly storm-wind’ (al-’Ankabut: 40): they are the people of `Ad. Hasib is a wind that is bitterly cold and blows very violently and strongly, carrying over them the pebbles of the earth and its sand and stone.

b. ‘Some of them were overtaken by a [sudden] blast’ (al-’Ankabut: 40): they are the people of Thamud. A blast or shout came to them which subdued all their sounds and movements.

c. ‘Some of them We caused to be swallowed by the earth’ (al-’Ankabut: 40): this is Qarun. Allah caused him and his house to be swallowed by the earth.

d. Some of them We caused to drown’ (al-’Ankabut: 40): this is Pharaoh, his minister Haman and their armies who were drowned entirely in one morning

(2) In his commentary of this verse (3/564) Ibn Kathir relates from Muhammad ibn Ka`ab Al-Qurtubi, that Abu Jahl said to the leaders of the Quraysh while they were sitting: ‘Indeed Muhammad claims that if you follow him, you will be kings and that when you die you will be resurrected and you will have gardens that are better than the gardens of Jordan. If you go against him, you will be killed and then resurrected after your death and then you will have a fire in which you will be punished.’ At that point, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him came out to them and in his hand had a handful of dust. Allah had shrouded him from their eyes so he proceeded to scatter it on their heads while reading, “O you human being! Consider this Quran full of wisdom.” (Ya Sin: 1-2) until he finished at His saying, “Verily, We shall indeed bring the dead back to life; and We shall record whatever [deeds] they have sent ahead, and the traces [of good and evil] which they have left behind: for of all things do We take account in a record clear” (Ya Sin: 9). The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings=

وَسَوَآءٌ عَلَيۡهِمۡ ءَأَنذَرۡتَهُمۡ أَمۡ لَمۡ تُنذِرۡهُمۡ لَا يُؤۡمِنُونَ ١٠

It is all the same to them whether you warn them or not: they will not believe [10] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 10)

Parity here is in reference to them, not in reference to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him. The Prophet's duty is only to convey the message. As long as he has conveyed it to them, he has done his job. Allah simply says to them, 'Relax and do not grieve, for whether you warn them or not, it is the same'. Indeed, warning them establishes evidence against them. They previously vowed, 'As it is, they [who are averse to the truth often] swear by Allah with their most solemn oaths that if a warner should ever come to them, they would follow his guidance better than any of the communities [of old had followed the warner sent to them]. Yet, when a warner has come unto them, [his call] but increases their aversion' (Fatir: 42).

Allah the Exalted then says:

إِنَّمَا تُنذِرُ مَنِ ٱتَّبَعَ ٱلذِّكۡرَ وَخَشِيَ ٱلرَّحۡمَٰنَ بِٱلۡغَيۡبِۖ
فَبَشِّرۡهُ بِمَغۡفِرَةٖ وَأَجۡرٖ كَرِيمٍ ١١

You can warn only those who will follow the Quran and hold the Merciful One in awe, though they cannot see Him: give such people the glad news of forgiveness and a noble reward [11] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 11)

In other words, your warning, O Muhammad, benefits those who remember Allah and fear Him; they believe in Him and in His ability to resurrect the dead and call them to account. Contrary to this category, there are the deniers who get no benefit from warnings.

= be upon him went off to do what he needed to do, while they spent the night watching his door. He confronted them afterwards, coming out of the house, and asked: "What is with you?" They said: "We are waiting for Muhammad." He said: "He has left and he did not leave a single man from amongst you except that he put some dust on his head and then went to do what he needed to do." Thus each man from amongst them began to shake the dust off his head.' This has also been mentioned by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (7/43) and he attributed it to Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Mandhur, Ibn Abu Hatim and Abu Na`im in Ad-Dala`il.

Khashya (awe) refers to the fear mixed with reverence. You fear Allah and you revere Him. Likewise, you have hope in Him. Fearing others than Allah is fear with antipathy because it is fear of tyranny. That is why the attribute of Mercy comes after awe 'who stands in awe of the Most Gracious' (Ya Sin: 11). You fear the one described with affection and tenderness. This is more conducive; it makes you love and have affection for the one you fear. Your awe of Him is coupled with reverence, respect, and hope. Allah Glorified is He says, 'who stands in awe of the Most Gracious' (Ya Sin: 11) so that you do not shun the one you fear.

This believer's awe of the Lord manifests when he is absent from people by himself. Indeed, he fears Allah, not people, and needs no one to watch him. A human being watching a human being is of no benefit; whatever deceit and deception works for the observed and the observer alike. When you make the observer do a surprise investigation there is no room for deception.

We gave an example of a traffic man. A car driver must fulfil some conditions to have a driving permit ensuring the safety of the car and the driver's ability to drive the car after passing the necessary tests in this regard. Despite this, there are those of us who adhere to the traffic laws and those that do not. We place a traffic man to observe and regulate the flow of traffic in streets and he has someone who observes him. However, when they discover that the traffic man could engage in fraud such that he revokes the permit of someone who breaks the traffic laws but then pretends to be unaware of someone else, they introduce observation equipment, such as radar in order to be more exact. Now, who uses this equipment? Human beings, of course use it. So, what works for them works for others.

When the observer and the observed are the same, the observation process is useless. If we want to place an observer for each one, we would need an army of security guards. What about observing the entire world! Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came with a perfect message unrestricted to times or places. The time and place delineate events because they are the vessels of events. If the event does not exist, there is no time and no place. That is why it is not correct to speak of 'where?' and 'when?' about Allah. Simply, 'where' and 'when' are created by Allah. The time and place both govern the event, but the place is a fixed vessel while time is changing, dawn, noon, etc. We say this is before such-and-such or after such-and-such.

The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him came with a universal Message in time and place to remain until the Final Hour. He came with a method to preserve humanity throughout the world in different environments, peculiarities, and eras. How can this preservation and observation come true? Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came with a way that governs the entire world in time and place. It is not sound to place an observer, who is of the same species over every single person. The best way is to instil the fear of Allah in souls and hearts of humankind openly and secretly. This constant observer never lies about you or leaves you for a moment. Once(1) a woman was seduced by a man into a deserted place where no one could see them. He said to her, ‘What is keeping you from me? No-one can see us except the celestial bodies.’ She responded, ‘You fool! Where is the Creator of the celestial bodies?’ This is the awe of the Most Gracious when one is away from people.

It is related(2) that during the time of 'Adud Ad-Dawlah, a Buyhid governor under the Abbasid nominal caliphate—noted for intelligence and justice, a man went to the Baghdad market to sell a precious necklace so he could perform Hajj (pilgrimage to Mecca), but he found no buyers for his precious necklace. The man then passed by a respected old man with signs of righteousness and said, ‘This is a trustworthy man and I will entrust him to hold onto the necklace until I return from Hajj.’ When he returned from Hajj, he asked the old man to give him the necklace, but the old man denied all knowledge of it. All attempts to retrieve the necklace failed. Someone walking past them said, ‘O you! Indeed, this man is a crook and a liar. Go to 'Adud Ad-Dawlah. He will get the necklace for you with his intelligence and subterfuge. The man followed the advice and told 'Adud Ad-Dawlah his story. He replied, ‘Go tomorrow and sit next to this man. I will pass by you with my retinue. Do not stand up for me. If I speak to you, then respond while sitting. Leave it me to sort out this matter.’ The following day 'Adud Ad-Dawlah passed by with guards and retinue, surrounded by members of his court with his elaborate sceptre and much wealth and grandeur. He looked at the owner of the necklace and said, ‘O so-and-so! How long have you been here? Why did you not inform me of your presence to receive you and give you your right? The old man heard this speech and thought that the man was an acquaintance of the ruler. He was terribly afraid and approached the owner of the necklace saying, ‘Please, do not mention the story of the necklace to the king.’ He then brought the necklace to the owner. The man went with the necklace to 'Adud Ad-Dawlah with a smile on face. 'Adud Ad-Dawlah said, ‘Wait for me tomorrow in the same place.’ 'Adud Ad-Dawlah did indeed come, but this time he brought a gibbet to the front of this crook’s shop and commanded that man to be hanged. He remarked, ‘Such is the punishment of those whose faith appears in the presence of people and fades when they are alone.(1) As such, Allah places hypocrites in the lowest part of hellfire even though they were the first to rush to prayers and occupied the first row behind the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. However, they contradict themselves and their tongues oppose their hearts.

G*hayb* (i.e. the unseen) refers to what is beyond the reach of human perception (Ya Sin: 11). Allah informs of the Hereafter, resurrection, gathering and reckoning. This awe of Allah implies the belief in the unseen. We believe in Allah Glorified is He even though we cannot see Him. The invisible, unknown, or hidden world is ghayb. There is no physical way or preliminary step in the universe to it. For example, in engineering and theoretical exercises, the premises given and preliminary steps take you to conclusions and may help you discover the unknown. You find that the invisible world has two categories:

- The unseen that is exclusive to Allah and only He knows of it, except if He releases to one of His messengers. This category has no preliminary steps leading to or indicative of it.
- Some parts of the unseen have preliminary indicative steps. If you use them, you can reach what was unseen yesterday. You should use the unseen that becomes visible to verify the unseen

(1) Imam ibn Al-Jawzi, Al-Azkiyas, chapter 11. This event took place in Baghdad. The merchant who denied the trust was a perfume vendor. The other man was Khurasan. The perfume vendor was punished by hanging by the necklace and was crucified on the door of the shop.

> hidden from you. You have no means of sight. What you can see should prompt you to believe in what you do not see. We said that this category of the unseen is the unseen has preliminary steps leading to it. It has a birthdate in which it appears. If this birthdate coincides with some research on the part of man, it appears. If not, Allah may cause it to appear unexpectedly as is the case with many discoveries that now serve human beings. The birthday of the unseen may have come, but your search for it may not.

The believer's faith in the unseen increases when using what is manifest to infer what is hidden. Some gifted scholars explain to you the unseen whose time has not come yet by use of what already exists. For example, it is related (1) that the Romans asked the Commander of the Believers to send them a scholar to make them understand matters of religion, so he sent Ash-Sha`bi.(2) They began asking him about religious matters hidden to them. For example, they asked how man is blessed in paradise by eating without any need to relieve himself. In response, Ash-Sha`bi wonderfully answered that 'have you seen the foetus in the mother's womb; it is fed and grows without relieving itself. If it did relieve itself in the placenta, it would be burned. Likewise, man in paradise eats but does not relieve himself because he is fed by Allah and Allah feeds him in such a way that nothing remains to excrete. Here, we eat our own food and eat much beyond our needs. Thus, we have to excrete'.

They then asked him, 'You have said that you can take from paradise whatever you want without diminishing what is therein at all. How can that be?' He said, 'Because something diminishes when it is consumed if it is not being replenished by something else. If it has replenishment, it does not diminish. The replenishment in paradise is from Allah, so how can there be any diminishing? One more thing: If you went to a lamp and took a flame from it, or even a thousand flames, would you diminish the brightness of the lamp at all?' This was Ash-Sha`bi's answer. People were amazed. They wrote a letter for him and he took it to the Commander of the Believers. They envied the Commander of the Believers that he had such an intelligent and gifted person in his service. The letter reads, 'We wonder how could people who have the like of Ash-Sha`bi make someone else their commander?'

(1) The story of Ash-Sha`bi with the Roman king and their envy to him

(2) Ibn Hamdun in Al-Tadhkira Al-Hamduniyyah states that the man is Khalid ibn Yazid Al-Qurashi. He met with deacons and monks who asked him these questions. Salah Ad-Deen As-Safadi mentions in Al-Wafi Bil-Wafayat that the man is Al-Khalil ibn Ahmad Al-Farahidi and the questioner is a monk in a cell. The same was said by Al-Qadi At-Tanukhi in Nashwar Al-Muhadira.

When Ash-Sha`bi went and handed over the letter, the Commander of the Believers read it and said to Ash-Sha`bi 'Do you know what is in this letter' He said: 'No, O Commander of the Believers.' He said, 'Read!' So Ash-Sha`bi read the statement and said, 'Yes, O Commander of the Believers, but this is because he did not see you. If they saw you, they will change their opinion.' The one who reflects on the matter of warning will find that the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him has two warnings: a general one for all of creation, and it is the warning that is conveyed from Allah to everyone, the believer, and the disbeliever. It is that of which Allah Glorified is He says, 'Verily, We have sent you with the truth, as a bearer of glad tidings and a warner' (Fatir: 24) because those who believe in Allah benefit from being warned, and those who do not believe do not benefit from it at all.

The other warning is that which is specific to the one who fears Allah, whilst alone, and it is the warning for those who have already accepted. The one who fears Allah whilst alone benefits from it because those who do not fear their Lord have already been warned but the warning has been conveyed and they have not benefitted from it. That is why they are not included in the specific warning.

'...unto such, then, give the glad tiding of [Allah's] Forgiveness and of a most excellent reward!' (Ya Sin: 11) We said: 'Indeed glad tidings (bishara) is to give news of something good before it happens so that one is prompted towards the means of goodness and strives for it. You notice here that forgiveness comes before the reward. Why? This is because the Lord the Exalted before giving you a blessing, diverts punishment from you first because something must be emptied before it can be filled. Thus, forgiveness is always the return for believing in Allah, but the reward is the return for acting according to Allah's way. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, 'Verily, Allah does not forgive the ascribing of divinity to aught beside Him, although He forgives any lesser sin unto whomever He wills...' (an-Nisa': 48). Whoever believes in Allah is safe from punishment and wins forgiveness. Whoever wants the reward must act righteously.

The reward is described as being bountiful (karim), even though the Bountiful is the Giver the Most High, so the meaning is that the Giver is being bountiful, beyond giving. The giving has become bountiful, as if it is eager for its owner, as a man is eager to give. That is why we have said: 'Indeed, the blessing with which Allah blesses His creation loves its owner and it strives for him and despises anyone who envies him because of it, or resents him because of it'. That is why it does not go to the resentful envier, and he never obtains any good from it.

Evidently, it is as if the Giver of Graces is saying, 'As long as you hate to see others have blessings, then you will never obtain anything from them because you are claiming that Allah is mistaken in His giving and you have exposed yourself to His judgement, so how can His blessings come to you? However, if you love to see others have blessings, then they will come to you and knock on your door'.

This matter has many evidences in our life. I remember one of them, when a man(1) from our town, Mit Ghamr, came to me and complained about how his rich uncle was harsh towards him. Despite his wealth, he was stingy with him. He employed strangers and left him without work among other things he mentioned. My wife was sitting with me. She said to him, 'My son! You are always reviling your uncle and engrossing yourself in his business.' He said, 'Yes, because he never asks about me.'

I said to him: 'I am going to ask you a question and I want you to promise not to lie!' When he saw that I was going to take solemn oath by the Quran, he backed off. I said to him, 'Do you like to see your uncle have blessings?' He said: 'No. How can I like it when I do not get anything from it?' I said: 'If you love for your uncle to have blessings and desire goodness for him, the blessings would come knocking on your door.' He said, 'I implore you to speak to my uncle and advise him regarding me.'

(1) The story of a man with his harsh hearted uncle and the reply of Sheikh Ash- Sha`rawi to him

It appears that the man really tried to reform himself. Allah did rectify what was between him and his uncle. After the dawn prayer, he came to me and knocked on the door. He was crying and said: ‘O Sheikh! Let me tell you a story stranger than dreams.’ I said, ‘What is it?’ He said: ‘One hour before dawn someone came and knocked on the door really hard. I got up and opened the door. To my surprise, he was my uncle scolding me and saying: ‘How can you leave me with strangers who plunder my wealth while you just mess around. Take the keys and in the morning go open the shops and take care of my interests by yourself.’

I said: ‘Yes, because you have come to love for your uncle to have blessings and you have changed what was in your heart towards him.’ Therefore, whoever wants to possess the blessings of people shall love that others have the blessings also.

إِنَّا نَحۡنُ نُحۡيِ ٱلۡمَوۡتَىٰ وَنَكۡتُبُ مَا قَدَّمُواْ
وَءَاثَٰرَهُمۡۚ وَكُلَّ شَيۡءٍ أَحۡصَيۡنَٰهُ فِيٓ إِمَامٖ مُّبِينٖ ﴿١٢﴾

We shall certainly bring the dead back to life, and We record what they send ahead of them as well as what they leave behind: We keep an account of everything in a clear Record [12] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 12)

His saying in the previous verse: ‘unto such, then, give the glad tiding of [Allah’s] Forgiveness and of a most excellent reward’ (Ya Sin: 11) has a place here because it is appropriate in terms of forgiveness and the excellent reward in the Hereafter, the Lord the Exalted tells us about something visible therein: ‘Verily, We shall indeed bring the dead back to life’ (Ya Sin: 12).

- Inna nahnu, i.e. ‘lit. We, indeed We’ (Ya Sin: 12) has two first-person pronouns used for exaltation. The syntax rule states that a thing is distinguished when it is common. If it is not, there is no need to distinguish. For example, if someone knocks on your door and you said, ‘Who is it?’ He says ‘Muhammad’ and you know many people with this name. So, you ask ‘Which Muhammad are you?’ He says, ‘Muhammad Ahmad’ but again you know many people who share this name. You ask, 'Muhammad Ahmad who?' He says, 'Muhammad Ahmad Mahmud.' At that point, you know him because the first and second names are very common.

- When the Lord the Exalted says, Inna nahnu, i.e. 'verily We' (Ya Sin: 12), i.e. there is no one else; it is as if He is saying 'Indeed We, indeed We': 'There is no one other than Me and no one is equal to Me. We explained that when Allah speaks about Himself, it may be in the form of the plural, e.g., 'Behold, from above We have bestowed this [divine book] on the Night of Destiny' (al-Qadr: 1). Allah also says, 'Behold, it is We Ourselves who have bestowed from above, step by step, this reminder. Behold, it is We who shall truly guard it [from all corruption]' (al-Hijr: 9).

You notice that the pronoun here is for exaltation. This is the case in all verses that speak of the Divine Actions and Blessings. Each of His Actions requires many attributes such as Knowledge, Wisdom, Power, and so forth. All these attributes are embedded in 'We' as embodiment of perfection and exalted beautiful names. When Allah Glorified is He talks about His unique essence, the first-person singular pronoun is used,; e.g., 'Verily, I – I alone – am Allah' (Ta Ha: 14). He does not say, for example, 'Verily We, We are Allah' because 'verily we' and 'we' indicate plurality, while the speech is about oneness, so it must be in the singular form. That is why the Lord the Exalted stresses this oneness in a number of ways when Allah Glorified is He says, 'Verily, I – I alone – am Allah; there is no deity save Me. Hence, worship Me alone, and be constant in prayer, so as to remember Me!' (Ta Ha: 14)

Allah Glorified is He did not say, 'Worship Us and establish the prayer for Our remembrance' but rather, 'Hence, worship Me alone, and be constant in prayer, so as to remember Me!' (Ta Ha: 14) This is because worship is for Allah alone. The process of resurrection and bringing the dead back to life belongs to Allah alone and no one else. Allah Glorified is He says, 'Verily, We shall indeed bring the dead back to life' (Ya Sin: 12), before 'We shall record whatever [deeds] they have sent ahead, and the traces [of good and evil] which they have left behind' (Ya Sin: 12) even though recording comes before the revival of the dead.

Recording takes place in this world, while bringing the dead back to life is in the Hereafter. Why is this? First, you must bear in mind that this speech is not our speech. It is Allah's Speech. Use your intellect to understand what Allah means. The Lord's style is composed of words that befit His Perfection, while your speech is composed of what suits your perfection. We said before that the Quran has certain qualities that distinguish it from other books. You treat it in a way that you would not treat any other book. You must read it in a state of purity after doing ablution. Whilst reading it, you should observe the places of articulation as well as the rules and etiquettes of recitation.

It also has another distinctive feature in its articulation. It is distinct in writing. For example, the word ism is written with an alif as in:

- 'Hallowed be your Lord's name (ismu rabbika), full of Majesty and Glory!' (ar-Rahman: 78)
- 'Extol the Limitless Glory of your Lord's name (ismu rabbika): [the Glory of] The All-Highest' (al-A'la: 1).

However, in the basmala (in the Name of Allah, the Gracious, the Merciful) at the beginning of the Quranic chapters, it is written without the alif. We have bismilahi irahman-iraheem. We say, do we write the Quran according to the human rules of dictation? No, because it is divinely written.

What is the wisdom behind 'Verily, We shall indeed bring the dead back to life' (Ya Sin: 12) coming before 'We shall record whatever [deeds] they have sent ahead, and the traces [of good and evil] which they have left behind' (Ya Sin: 12)?

What is the benefit of recording? Recording the deeds is for the sake of rewards and punishments. If there is no revival of the dead or reckoning and return, then what is the point of recording? Why bringing the dead back to life comes before recording the deeds? Bringing the dead back to life is greater than recording, so it is befitting to come first.

'Whatever [deeds] they have sent ahead' (Ya Sin: 12): The deeds may be profitable beyond death such as the on-going charity. For example, if a man digs a well and people drink from it after he dies. Another example is a person who leaves behind beneficial knowledge. These good deeds are written down before. His words ‘the traces [of good and evil] which they have left behind’ (Ya Sin: 12) refer to these deeds.

The traces of practices left behind. They follow it after death, be they good or evil. They are recorded in a book inclusive of all deeds, minor or major, after the person dies. For example, if a person writes down an unjust bequest which denies someone his due right, the one who inherits his estate carries all the consequences that result from this injustice. This is because he has not just deprived the direct inheritor, but he has also denied his descendants who would have benefited from this estate. That is why its sin remains with him until the Day of Resurrection.

The same goes for whoever introduces a tyrannical law for people. This person bears the sin of this tyrannical law that he imposed. The sin is borne by whoever judges according to this law after him. An example of this would be the issue of the public sector introduced by whoever introduced it, and then its traces caused such tribulation amongst the people that they all protested and the rulers themselves asked to amend it.

This issue clarifies for us the Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘Whoever introduces a good practice has the reward of it and the reward of whoever does it until the Day of Resurrection. Yet, whoever introduces an evil practice has its sin and the sin of whoever does it until the Day of Resurrection.’(1)

Have you seen an old man planting a date palm whose fruits might not benefit him, but those after him will? These will be his traces left after him and Allah writes them for him and credits them to his account. Some scholars say that the meaning of ‘We shall record whatever [deeds] they have sent ahead, and the traces [of good and evil] which they have left behind’ (Ya Sin: 12) is ‘We write down the intention that precedes the action and the action itself, which is the trace of this intention’. When you intend to do a good deed, you get the reward of the intention and if you do it, you get the reward of the deed.

(1) Ahmad, Musnad, 4/361-362; Muslim, Sahih, (Hadith: 1017); Ibn Majah, Sunnan, (Hadith: 207); and At-Tirmidhi, Sunnan, (Hadith: 2675) from Jarir ibn 'Abdullah Al-Bajli. At-Tirmidhi said, ‘It is a good and authentic Hadith.’

This clarifies the Noble Hadith: ‘Whoever intends a good deed but does not do it has a reward written in his favour. Whoever intends it and then does it has ten rewards written in his favour.’(1) This shows us the importance of making an intention before commencing an action so that man can be rewarded for it. The believer does not perform actions aimlessly.

For ‘…of all things do We take account in a record clear’ (Ya Sin: 12). There is a difference between writing and counting. Writing means that you write something, but you do not join everything that has been written, so you need someone to count it and calculate it. The Lord the Exalted records all our deeds by writing them first and then counts and calculates them, and the counting and the calculating are also in a recorded book that contains everything ‘... in a record clear’ (Ya Sin: 12). The record (imam) is that which leads, and what is meant here is the Preserved Tablet from which the angels take their duties regarding the running of the universe. The Lord the Exalted then says:

وَٱضۡرِبۡ لَهُم مَّثَلًا أَصۡحَٰبَ ٱلۡقَرۡيَةِ إِذۡ جَآءَهَا ٱلۡمُرۡسَلُونَ ﴿١٣﴾ إِذۡ أَرۡسَلۡنَآ
إِلَيۡهِمُ ٱثۡنَيۡنِ فَكَذَّبُوهُمَا فَعَزَّزۡنَا بِثَالِثٖ فَقَالُوٓاْ إِنَّآ إِلَيۡكُم مُّرۡسَلُونَ ﴿١٤﴾

Give them the example of the people to whose town messengers came [13] We sent two messengers but they rejected both. Then We reinforced them with a third[14]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 13 - 14)

First, notice that this verse is the one that will explain to us how ‘Ya Sin’ is the ‘heart’ of the Quran. Allah says, ‘Set forth unto them a parable’ (Ya Sin: 13). The word darab (strike) refers to the bodily contact with another body with force such that striking body affects the body struck and causes pain. The one striking must be stronger than the one being struck. If they are equal or the one struck is stronger, the act is futile and fruitless. Note the words of Ar-Rafi`i(2) addressing the one who mocks the Divine Power:

---

(1) Muslim, Sahih, (Hadith: 206), Book of Faith from Abu Hurayra; Al-Bukhari, Sahih, in different wordings (Hadith: 6491) from Ibn `Abbas.

(2) Mustafa Sadiq `Abd Ar-Razzaq Ar-Rafi`i is a scholar of literature and poetry; he is a great writer. His forefathers are from Tripoli in Lebanon, but he was born in Bahteem=

O you who mocks the decrees, it is your soul that you mock, not the decrees

O you who strike a rock with a stick, do you strike the stick or the rock

The dareeb means some who is similar to another. If two people dispute something, mention to them a similitude for explanation and say, 'this likes that.' The noblest similitude in the Quran is the one that Allah gives to explain His illumination of the universe, not His own light as some people think. Allah Glorified is He says, 'Allah is the Light of the heavens and the earth. The parable of His Light is, as it were, that of a niche containing a lamp; the lamp is [enclosed] in glass, the glass [shining] like a radiant star: [a lamp] lit from a blessed tree – an olive-tree that is neither of the east nor of the west – the oil whereof [is so bright that it] would well-nigh give light [of itself] even though fire had not touched it: light upon light' (an-Nur: 35).

This is a similitude of Allah's enlightening of the universe. It is not a similitude of Allah's Light. Allah's Light is perfect and unrestricted. It bears no resemblance to the light in this world, which is also dependant on His Light. Evidence is found in the fact that on the Day of Resurrection there will not be any shining sun or radiating moon. There only 'The earth will shine bright with her Lord's Light' (az-Zumar: 69). Allah says, 'Will know therein neither [burning] sun nor cold severe' (al-Insan: 13).

We live in this world with the means that Allah has created. However, in the Hereafter we will live by direct means from the One Who creates all means. In the life of this world, Allah gives you an intellect to think, limbs to act, earth to produce vegetation, and water for irrigation. These means are divinely given to help human life. Man may think that human life belongs to this world and may suffer delusions on account of the Divine Graces. Allah makes these means insufficient at times and they become scarce so that we turn back to Him. He says to us, 'Do not be deluded by the means and do not be heedless of the One Who creates the means.

When the means are insufficient, people suffer drought and famine that may persist until people and animals are on the brink of annihilation. The drought prayer is legislated for people to rush back to Allah along with their women, children, and even animals. They even change their clothes and attire to draw closer to Allah imploring Him for rains. Allah sometimes makes the means insufficient to remind us of Him and teach us that this matter is not mechanical. Behind the means of this matter is the Creator of means who can hold them back.

Again, human limbs are divinely subjugated to human will. Man may even be deluded by them and think that he owns them and that they are subject to his instruction. The reality is that they are a gift from Allah and if He so wills, he can leave them or strip them, e.g. cutting the electric current between the brain and the limbs. The hand thus drops and it does not move. One tries to raise it, but he cannot. For example, we see America distributing aids to countries around the world. It is the most advanced and prosperous country. However, it experiences sudden natural disasters, such as floods in which water covers houses. Likewise, Japan is an earthquake-prone country. The Japanese know it and say: ‘Our country is a land of earthquakes’. They take all necessary steps and precautions. However, massive and destructive earthquakes afflict them, such as what happened in Hokkaido. All these precautions and preparations were of little benefit.

The Lord the Exalted makes these matters insufficient so that we do not become deluded by the means and forget the Creator of means. Allah speaks the truth when He says, ‘Nay, verily, man becomes grossly overweening whenever he believes himself to be self-sufficient’ (al-‘Alaq: 6-7). The Lord the Exalted teaches us how to call Him and how to seek refuge in Him alone when our means are scarce. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Yet when the misfortune decreed by Us befell them, they did not humble themselves’ (al-An‘am: 43). Allah teaches us how to endear Him to us when we say, ‘O Allah! Relieve us from the state we are in!’

Giving examples is part of the rhetorical style of Arabic. It is used to clarify matters and make them convincing. The noblest example that the Lord the Exalted gives is that of His enlightening as said. Simply, Allah’s Light has no likeness. His saying ‘The parable of His Light is’ (an-Nur: 35), i.e. His enlightening ‘as it were, that of a niche’ (an-Nur: 35). Many people think that mishkah (the niche) is the lamp, but mishkah is the window located on a wall. It is an expression referring to a window that is open from one side and it is called a niche as found in farmers' houses built with unburned bricks. This niche acts upon all the light such that it is not scattered here and there.

This mishkah: 'containing a lamp; the lamp is [enclosed] in glass, the glass [shining] like a radiant star [a lamp] lit from a blessed tree – an olive-tree that is neither of the east nor of the west – the oil whereof [is so bright that it] would well-nigh give light [of itself] even though fire had not touched it' (an-Nur: 35).

It is for you to contemplate how distinct this light is that it issues forth from the mishkah (niche) that gathers the radiance. There is also the lamp, which is in a glass that sifts its radiance and purifies it such that no smoke emanates from it. The glass only allows as much air as the lamp needs. Like a twinkling star, this glass is self-radiant.

Then this lamp is fuelled by oil that is of the finest quality, which is olive oil. This olive is not of the East, such that it is hot, and it is not from the West, such that it is cold. It is balanced in its constitution and purity, such that its oil radiates even if it isn not touched by fire.

Therefore, it is from its own qualities that it almost radiates itself, and that is why the similitude is completed by His saying: 'Light upon light' (an-Nur: 35). Allah, therefore, illuminates this vast universe just as this lamp illuminates this tiny niche.

But why does Allah Glorified is He use this similitude as an example? They reply it is because when Allah created man and enabled him to walk the paths of life, he needed a physical light to guide his physical movement and a spiritual light to guide his spiritual movement. We take physical light from the sun during the day and from the moon during the night. If we did not have access to this light, we could manufacture it, and everyone uses what he can afford of means of sustenance. Someone might light his way with a candle, while someone else might use a number five lamp, whereas others will use neon and fluorescent lamps, for example. Thus, if Allah's light, the sun, shined upon earth, spreading its rays everywhere, people would give up using their artificial means of light for His endless natural source. Everyone then becomes equal in basking in His radiance.

As long as Allah's Light is manifest, no one has the ability to shed it except for Him. The same goes for our attitude towards Allah's divine orders. Allah Glorified is He teaches us that we cannot comply with any other than Him. This command is evident in the following verse where Allah says, 'Light upon light. Allah guides to His Light whom He wills' (an-Nur: 35).

Every example has a place in which it is given, in which it is appropriate to be said. Accordingly, when one of them saw a poet being very exhaustive in praising that which he praised, he said, 'Indeed he is miserly, for he needs all of this praise in order to feel tenderness towards the one praising him so that he would give him what he is asking for!' And he said regarding this:(1)

If a person praises another person for his favour

And he is exhaustive in it then he has prolonged his ridiculing

Had he not been able to do so because of the depth of the well

From which he drinks, he would not have elongated his well rope.(2)

This is because the depth of the water level in a well necessitates a long rope, and this is the well rope that has a bucket attached to it.

One of the examples in the Noble Quran that clarifies the issue of associating partners with Allah is when He Glorified is He says, 'Allah presents an example: a slave owned by quarrelling partners and another belonging exclusively to one man - are they equal in comparison?' (az-Zumar: 29)

This means when they are astonished that they are being called to Allah's Oneness, and they differ in this matter, give them this example, and encompass them with it. In other words, how can you be astonished by worshiping Allah alone, Who has no partner, when in your daily lives, you have a live example of this? Do you consider a slave with more than one master controlling him equal to another who has only one master? ‘Are they equal in comparison?’ (az-Zumar: 29)

(1) He is Abu Al-Hasan Ali ibn Abbas ibn Jurayj, also known as Ibn Ar-Rumi, of European origin. He was born in Baghdad in the year 221 A.H. and grew up there and died there due to poisoning. Al-Marzibani said, 'I do not know any ruler or subordinate that he praised except that he went back to him and ridiculed him and this was a cause of his death.'

(2) These two verses are from a poem written by Ibn Ar-Rumi from the Kamil Metre. It consists of four verses, beginning with:
Every person who praises another person for his favour
And he is exhaustive in it, seeks to ridicule him.

Likewise, when you worship other than Allah, how can you go and worship various gods and abandon the One True Lord? Therefore, the True Lord conveys this example to the disbelievers so that this matter which their intellects cannot comprehend is made clear for them.

In our literature, an Arabic proverb always has a story behind it and a place where it is said; the event in which the proverb was first said and an event that resembles the original one. It is as if the original event leads to a firm truth that we must preserve and repeat in a situation that resembles it. For example, when you see a student neglecting his studies throughout the year and right before the exam’s time he starts revising his lessons, at this point you can say: ‘Before you are hit by a misfortune, prepare for it’.(1) This proverb can be said to someone who does not prepare for something before it happens.

If a man challenges you, for example, and he claims that he is stronger than you then you can say, ‘If you are a wind then you have met a hurricane’.(2)

A proverb is said just as it is without alteration. For example, if you sent a male messenger to bring you some news, on his return you would ask him, ‘What did you bring of news, `Isam?’(3) The proverb must remain in the singular feminine form because when it was first said it was said to a woman whose name was `Isam. We have to maintain its original wording without changing it, so we should not say, ‘What did you two bring of news?’ or ‘What did you all bring of news?’ That is how it should be said, short and light on the tongue.

---

(1) This proverb is said in preparation for disasters before they descend. It has been mentioned by Abu Hilal Al-`Askari in Jamhara Al-Amthal and Al-Maydani in Majma` Al-Amthal and Ibn `Abd Rabih in Al-`Iqd Al-Farid Kitab Al-Jawhara Fi Al-Amthal.

(2) This means you have met someone stronger than you. This has been mentioned by Abu Manṣur Ath-Tha`alabi in his book At-Tamthil Wa Al-Muhadara and Az-Zamakhshari in Al-Mustaqsa Fi Amthal Al-'Arab.

(3) Abu `Abid said: ‘One of their parables when they ask questions is: ‘What did you bring of news, `Isam?’ It is said that the speaker is An-Nabigha Adh-Dhubyani and he said it to `Isam ibn Shahir Al-Jarmi, the chamberlain of An-Nu`man, when he was sick. An-Nabigha asked `Isam about An-Nu`man. This has been mentioned by Abu `Abid ibn Salam in Al-Amthal. Abu Hilal Al-`Askari mentioned in Jamhara Al-Amthal that `Isam was a woman that was sent by Al-Harith ibn `Amr Al-Kindi to the daughter of `Awf Al-Kindi. When she came back to him, he said to her, ‘What did you bring of news, `Isam?’ and she described her to him.

Another proverb is said when someone is suddenly confronted with a punishment that has been prepared for him, ‘A camel may break wind when the hot iron is on the fire’(1). When a camel sees hot iron, it immediately learns that it is going to be branded with it. This is an observed method for treating mange(2) amongst the Arabs. When a camel sees it, its stomach starts rumbling, such that it breaks wind and has diarrhoea.

Allah Glorified is He sets an example for those who oppose Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in the following verse when he says: ‘And present to them an example: the people of the city, when the messengers came to it’ (Ya Sin: 13). In other words, Allah addresses his Prophet by telling him to narrate to those who disbelieve in him, deny him, stubbornly oppose, and harm him the parable of the people of the city. It was said that the city referred to in this verse was Antioch, a town in the district of Iskenderun (The Sanjak of Alexandretta) in Turkey. Prophet `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him sent two messengers to the town so that its people would be guided. When they went, the people denied them, so `Isa (Jesus) peace and blessings be upon him supported and strengthened them by sending a third one for their aid. However, this only increased their rejection and opposition. To their relief, amongst the people came a man who heard from them and instantly believed in what they brought from guidance. When he heard that the people wanted to punish these messengers, he rushed to stand in the position of truth alongside the messengers and against the people of the city.

The meaning of, ‘… when the messengers came to it’ (Ya Sin: 13) is messengers from Allah because `Isa’s (Jesus’s) sending them is part of Allah’s decree. And in the following verse, ‘When We sent to them two but they denied them, so we strengthened them with a third, and they said, “Indeed, we are messengers to you.”’ (Ya Sin: 14), Allah Glorified is He reinforced him with them. In other words, He reinforced the truth that they were carrying, so sending the third was not just to assist the first two themselves but also to affirm the truth. The evidence is that Allah did not say, ‘We strengthened the two’ and this is part of the Quran’s subtlety and rhetoric. If the truth were on the tongue of other than these two, we would also assist it. Therefore, the expression here is not for individuals but for the truth that they have come with.

(1) This has been mentioned by `Abd Al Qadir Al-Baghdadi in Khizanat Al-Adab Wa Lub Lubab Lissan Al-`Arab.

(2) An infectious disease in animals that have hair, such as dogs and cats that makes hair fall out and causes areas of rough skin. This has been mentioned by Ibn Qutayba Al-Dinawari in Adab Al-Katib. Al-Jahiz mentioned in his Kitab Al-Hayawan (Book of Animals), that the Arabs used to brand their afflicted animals with hot iron, but they ended up harming the healthy before curing the diseased.

Similarly, in the story of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him Allah says, ‘We will strengthen your arm through your brother’ (Fatir: 28). It is as if Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him came to strengthen Musa (Moses) himself and not the truth that he was sent with as in the previous story. This is because there is a difference between the two situations. Musa (Moses) peace be upon him is the one who asked his Lord to strengthen his arm, and for this he chose his brother Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him so Musa (Moses), the chosen one, is admitting that he needs help and he asks for help and assistance by way of his brother. He loves the truth and wants it to be supported, even if this support came from other than him.

We have already said that speech is the mediation between the speaker and the one being addressed. The speaker conveys his thoughts and desires to the one being addressed and if the one being addressed is unfamiliar with the matter the speech is conveyed to him without any emphasis. If the subject matter is familiar to him and he has doubt about it, or he rejects it and denies it, then you must emphasise what you are saying to the degree that is necessary for the matter to be accepted. If he is merely doubtful, then one tool of emphasis should suffice. However, if he is rejecting the matter altogether, then you will need more tools of emphasis, as Allah, says, ‘Indeed, we are messengers to you’ (Ya Sin: 14).

The first two messengers had to say to the people, ‘We are messengers that have been sent to you on behalf of `Isa (Jesus)’, but the people still rejected. When the third came, they had to make their speech more emphatic, and so they said, ‘Indeed, we are messengers to you’ (Ya Sin: 14); they emphasised their speech with more than one tool of emphasis, and despite this they denied again.

قَالُوا۟ مَآ أَنتُمْ إِلَّا بَشَرٌ مِّثْلُنَا وَمَآ أَنزَلَ ٱلرَّحْمَـٰنُ مِن شَىْءٍ إِنْ أَنتُمْ إِلَّا تَكْذِبُونَ ﴿١٥﴾
قَالُوا۟ رَبُّنَا يَعْلَمُ إِنَّآ إِلَيْكُمْ لَمُرْسَلُونَ ﴿١٦﴾ وَمَا عَلَيْنَآ إِلَّا ٱلْبَلَـٰغُ ٱلْمُبِينُ ﴿١٧﴾

They said, 'Truly, we are messengers to you' [15] But they answered, 'You are only men like ourselves. The Lord of Mercy has sent nothing; you are just lying.' They said, 'Our Lord knows that we have been sent to you [16] Our duty is only to deliver the message to you [17] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 15 - 17)

When they denied and rejected for the second time, they had to emphasise their speech in the following way: 'Our Lord knows that we are messengers to you' (Ya Sin: 16). Every word in this expression has some emphasis. Firstly, there is inna (indeed). Then, there is the method of restriction which is to put the preposition and the object of the preposition at the beginning of the sentence. After that, there is the letter lam (l) - preceding the words 'messengers to you'- for emphasis. The emphasis, therefore, corresponds to the degree of rejection and these people denied the message from several angles beginning with: 'They said, "You are not but human beings like us"' (Ya Sin: 15), followed by: 'and the Most Merciful has not revealed a thing (Ya Sin: 15), and then: 'You are only telling lies' (Ya Sin: 15).

In their saying, 'You are only telling lies' (Ya Sin: 15), they are assuming that the messengers being human beings is a flaw in the divine message. But how could the message be realised if Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were not a human being?

Similarly, elsewhere in another verse, Allah Glorified is He discusses this matter with them, where He says, 'And what prevented the people from believing when guidance came to them except that they said, "Has Allah sent a human messenger?" Say, "If there were upon the earth angels walking securely, We would have sent down to them from the heaven an angel [as a] messenger"' (al-Isra': 94-95). This is the first supporting argument as proof to their refutation; those who walk on earth are human beings, not angels.

Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He demonstrates to us why He chose to send a human being with His message instead of an angel, when He says, 'And if We had made him an angel, We would have made him [appear as] a man, and We would have covered them with that in which they cover themselves' (al-An'am: 9). If it were otherwise, how would you see him? How would you learn from him if he were in his angelic form? Therefore, a messenger must be of the same species as those to whom he is being sent so that he can set an example for them. How can an angelic messenger be an example when he cannot disobey Allah by his very nature? The messenger is responsible for conveying Allah's Message and implementing it within himself. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, 'There has certainly been for you, in the Messenger of Allah an excellent example' (al-Ahzab: 21) which means that he implements the way that he has come with before conveying it to the people.

Their saying, 'You are not but human beings like us, and the Most Merciful has not revealed a thing. You are only telling lies' (Ya Sin: 15) indicate their foolishness in truly comprehending what their prophet has come with. It is astonishing how they recognize Allah having the attribute of Mercy, but at the same time they do not believe in Him. It is one of the requirements of this mercy that He sends them a messenger to show them the right path by following what is good for them, and protects them from evil by staying away from what is harmful for them. They, therefore, acknowledge the aspect that convicts them, and then they go further and accuse the messengers of lying, 'You are only telling lies' (Ya Sin: 15).

When the messengers emphasise their message, they say, 'Our Lord knows that we are messengers to you' (Ya Sin: 16); it is in the place of an oath because they are calling on Allah as a witness to the veracity of their message. When Arabs use an oath in their statements it is to affirm something upon which it is refuted. As long as the messengers have said, 'Our Lord knows' (Ya Sin: 16), then the matter is either true or not true. If it is not true, then they have lied about Allah.

The Arabs believed that an unequivocal lie is enough reason to bring about the destruction of houses. And there is a Hadith which indicates that lying turns houses into a wasteland, (balaqi')(1). He was asked, 'Does the believer steal?' He said, ‘Yes’.’ ‘Does the believer fornicate?’ He said, ‘Yes.’ ‘Does the believer lie?’ He said, ‘No.’(1)

---

(1) Balaqi` which is the plural of balqa`... It is impoverished land that does not grow anything. Al-Bayhaqi narrated in As-Sunnan Al-Kubra, in the book of Faith, in the chapter on ominous oaths, Hadith no. 19655 from the Hadith of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him that Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him said, 'There is=

Lying is, henceforth, a foul trait and prohibited, even amongst those who do not belong to a religion. That is why the disbelievers of Mecca did not utter the words of Allah’s Oneness (There is no deity worthy of worship but Allah) and had they thought that it was merely a phrase that was said, without any reference to His Oneness, they would have said it. However, they knew what it referred to and what it meant. They knew it meant that worship is for none other than Allah; any command for or against something is from Him only and there is no sovereignty for none other than Him. That is why they refused to say it because they knew to what it referred.

These disbelievers, in their denial of the messengers, believed that by doing so they were being protective of Allah and that they were going to seek revenge from the messengers who were lying about Him. The following verse continues:

قَالُوٓاْ إِنَّا تَطَيَّرۡنَا بِكُمۡۖ لَئِن لَّمۡ تَنتَهُواْ لَنَرۡجُمَنَّكُمۡ وَلَيَمَسَّنَّكُم مِّنَّا عَذَابٌ أَلِيمٞ ١٨

But they answered, ‘We think you are an evil omen.
If you do not stop, we shall stone you, and inflict a painful torment on you’ [18] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 18)

It is as if they were saying to the messengers, ‘As long as you have lied about Allah and said, “Our Lord knows” (Ya Sin: 16) in matters in which we think you are lying, then we augur evil from you’. In other words, ‘we see you as an evil omen’. Tatayyur (to augur evil) comes from the word tira (an evil omen). This was something known amongst the Arabs. When one of them wanted to do something, he would approach a bird and drive it away, and then see the direction of its flight. If it flew towards the right, he would carry out what he had intended. If the bird flew to the left, he would see it as an evil omen and refrain from it. Islam has declared this practice unlawful and prohibited.

= nothing in which I obey Allah that is swifter in reward than keeping the ties of kinship, and there is nothing swifter in retribution than injustice and cutting the ties of kinship and a false oath turns the houses into wasteland.’

(1) Mentioned with this wording by Al-Mutaqi Al-Hindi in Muntakhab Al-Kanz (1/215) on the margin of Ahmad’s Musnad, from the Hadith of `Abdullah ibn Jarad and he attributed it to Ibn `Asakir...He also relates that Abu Darda` asked the Prophet Muhammad, ‘O Messenger of Allah! Does the believer lie?’ He said, ‘The one who lies when he speaks does not believe in Allah and the Last Day.’ He attributed it to Al-Khatib Al-Baghdadi in Al-Muttafaq.

Their saying, ‘If you do not desist’ (Ya Sin: 18) - from saying that you have been sent with a message- ‘we will surely stone you, and there will surely touch you, from us, a painful punishment.’ (Ya Sin: 18) In doing so, they have gathered to stone them and give them a grievous punishment. Note that the acts of stoning and incurring punishment differ in nature. Stoning is not a punishment. It is to throw stones until death, so it is the ceasing of punishment, whereas, a punishment is to cause pain to a living being; similarly, someone who has died cannot be punished. That is why the Arabs said, ‘It does not harm a sheep to be skinned after it has been slaughtered’.

That is why, when one of the judges claimed that there was no text in the Quran that indicates stoning, we replied that this is true. There is no verse in the Quran that clearly mentions stoning, but which of the two is stronger in legislation, speech, or action? Which of the two is considered a proof? There is no doubt that action is the stronger proof because speech can be interpreted into different meanings. Action, on the other hand, is not open to interpretation, and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did resort to stoning in the case of Ma`iz and Al-Ghamidiyah.

Therefore, the justification here is not based on a spoken text but rather on an action of Allah’s Messenger peace and blessings be upon him whom Allah authorised to legislate and commanded us to obey. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘And whatever the Messenger has given you - take; and what he has forbidden you - refrain from’ (al-Hashr: 7). Allah Glorified is He would not have enjoined this upon us unless He had left some matters for His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to legislate.

This is one of his distinct qualities that distinguish him from other messengers, as each one of them only had to convey the ruling as it had been ordained by Allah. As for the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him he was commanded to convey some matters from Allah, while others were left for him in which he was authorised to legislate. That is why the following verse was revealed: ‘And whatever the Messenger has given you - take; and what he has forbidden you - refrain from’ (al-Hashr: 7).

Furthermore, when you examine the verses of obedience, you will find that the Quran says at one time: ‘And obey Allah and obey the Messenger’ (al-Ma‘ida: 92). In another verse, Allah says, ‘and obey Allah and the Messenger’ (Al-‘Imran: 132). He also says, ‘… and obey the Messenger’ (an-Nisa’: 59). The repetition of the verb ‘obey’ indicates that the aspect is split into two; Allah Glorified is He has a command and the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him has a command, i.e. obey Allah in the legislation that is general and comprehensive and obey the Messenger in the specifics of that which is general. For example, we have the general command to perform zakat (obligatory charity), but Allah Glorified is He did not determine the minimum amount at which wealth becomes taxable. This minimum amount was clarified by the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him so Allah has a command in this and the Messenger has another.

On the other hand, if the command to obey is only mentioned once and the Messenger of Allah is mentioned in addition to Allah by way of a conjunction, also the command to obey is not repeated for whomever it is to be obeyed, then you should know that the command is one; Allah said it and the Messenger of Allah said it. Obedience to the latter is thus considered part of the obedience to the first. When Allah says, ‘O you who have believed, obey Allah and obey the Messenger and those in authority among you’ (an-Nisa’: 59), he did not say, ‘Obey those in authority among you’ because obedience to those in authority is included in obedience to Allah and obedience to the Messenger of Allah. They do not have a separate independent obedience, but rather obedience to them is in the shadow of obedience to Allah and obedience His Messenger.

Therefore, to base one’s proof on action is stronger than that which is based on words, so if someone said, ‘We want to hear what Allah has said regarding this matter’, we would reply, ‘Yes, there is speech in the form of a text and speech in the form of an action’. When Allah Glorified is He talks about female slaves in this matter, He says, ‘…if they should commit adultery, then for them is half the punishment for free [unmarried] women’ (an-Nisa’: 25).

Punishment is as we have previously mentioned is to cause pain to a living being, whereas stoning is the ceasing of punishment. That is why Allah Glorified is He has clarified that the half refers to the punishment, and this excludes stoning because stoning cannot be halved. Therefore, the command to halve is not absolute, but rather is specific to punishment. This means that they can be stoned too in a complete sense, not in half.

Similarly, in the story of Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him and the hoopoe where Allah says, '[If so,] I will punish him most severely or will kill him' (an-Naml: 21). Therefore, punishment is not slaughter and is not killing.

With regards to what the disbelievers said in the following verse, 'we will surely stone you' (Ya Sin: 18), rajm (stoning) could refer to verbal abuse. It could also mean stoning in its literal sense, either with severe stoning until death or clemency. What is intended is the infliction of pain.

قَالُواْ طَٰٓئِرُكُم مَّعَكُمۡۚ أَئِن ذُكِّرۡتُمۚ بَلۡ أَنتُمۡ قَوۡمٞ مُّسۡرِفُونَ ١٩

The messengers said, 'The evil omen is within yourselves.
Why do you take it as an evil omen when you are reminded of the Truth? You are going too far!' [19]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 19)

The meaning of 'your evil omen' (Ya Sin: 19) is your pessimism and 'is with yourselves' (Ya Sin: 19), i.e. it is attached to you. What is meant here is disbelief. The first hamzah(1) in 'Is it because you were reminded?' (Ya Sin: 19), is for asking a question and in (if) is introducing a conditional clause whose resultant clause is elided, which means, 'Is it the case that if you are reminded of Allah and the way of your Creator, and of what pleases you in your life of this world, the result is that you threaten the one who reminds you with stoning and grievous suffering, instead of being pleased with him and helping him and following what he has brought to you'?!

(1) Hamzah is a letter in the Arabic alphabet, representing the glottal stop [ʔ]. Hamzah is not one of the 28 'full' letters, and owes its existence to historical inconsistencies in the standard writing system.

‘Nay, but ye are a people transgressing all bounds!’ (Ya Sin: 19); in other words, people who transgress the bounds because the matter between you and us, the messengers, has not been other than a spoken exchange; we have not transgressed the bounds of rhetoric by saying more than that we are messengers that have been sent to you. And the result was that you have responded to this spoken exchange with harsh and excessive action that oversteps the bounds such that you have gathered against us for the purpose of stoning and a grievous suffering. Allah the Exalted continues their story:

وَجَآءَ مِنۡ أَقۡصَا ٱلۡمَدِينَةِ رَجُلٞ يَسۡعَىٰ قَالَ يَٰقَوۡمِ ٱتَّبِعُواْ ٱلۡمُرۡسَلِينَ ٢٠
ٱتَّبِعُواْ مَن لَّا يَسۡـَٔلُكُمۡ أَجۡرٗا وَهُم مُّهۡتَدُونَ ٢١
وَمَا لِىَ لَآ أَعۡبُدُ ٱلَّذِى فَطَرَنِى وَإِلَيۡهِ تُرۡجَعُونَ ٢٢

Then, from the furthest part of the city, a man came running. He said, ‘My people, follow the messengers [20] Follow them: they are not asking you to reward them and they are rightly guided [21] Why should I not worship the One who created me? It is to Him that you will be returned [22]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 20 - 22)

When Allah Glorified is He tells us ‘And there came from the farthest end of the city a man, running. He said, “O my people, follow the messengers”’ (Ya Sin: 20), it indicates that the first two messengers whom the people had denied had supporters who believed in them and verified the truth of their call. When the third one came and the people denied him as well, the believers wanted to defend the truth with all their power, and amongst them was this man who had come from the farthest end of the city striving to give victory to the truth and exalt its word. It has been said that his name was Habib An-Najjar.(1)

---

(1) Al-Qurtubi said, ‘He is Habib ibn Mara and he was a carpenter.’ It is also said that he was a shoemaker and others say he was a dyer. Ibn `Abbas, Mujahid and Muqatil said, ‘He is Habib ibn Isra`il An-Najjar and he used to sculpture idols.’ Wahb said, ‘Habib was a leper and his house was by the farthest gate of all the gates of the city. He was devoted to the worship of idols and for seventy years he supplicated to them so that perhaps they would show him mercy and relieve him of harm, but they did not respond=

The first thing you notice in this verse is when Allah Glorified is He says, '…from the farthest end of the city' (Ya Sin: 20) that he was not close to where this debate was taking place, so he underwent difficulty for the sake of giving victory to the truth. This is an evidence of this man's strong faith and that the previous two messengers had conveyed their message to the farthest end of the city. Allah Glorified is He distinctly refers to him as being a 'man', and not as someone. He mentioned the attribute that is obvious in his creation, being a man.

What identifies a man of being manly is how he perceives the world around him. For example, a man who wants life for himself only and wants everyone to serve him sees everything for himself and does not see himself for anyone. This man's homeland is his ego and his self. A man whose homeland is his family and his dependants work on benefitting them, and a man whose homeland is the entire world is like the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him as he is the quintessence of what it means to be a man.

Therefore, how men perceive the world around them is what determines their homelands and their stations, and the highest of these stations is a man whose homeland is the entire world because all of creation is dependent on Allah. Whoever loves goodness for them and works for what benefits them has indeed been entrusted by Allah to provide for the slaves.

To clarify this, imagine if you have children, and one of them uses his pocket money to fulfil his own pleasures and desires which are of no benefit, while the other uses his pocket money to buy sweets which he would distribute among his younger siblings. Which one of them would you prefer after that? Which one of them to whom would you give more? The same goes for the hand that takes from Allah and serves His creation. It is as if Allah is saying

---

= to him. When he saw the messengers calling him to worship Allah, he asked, 'Do you have a sign?' They said, 'We will supplicate our Lord, the Fully Capable, and He will relieve you from whatever you are in.' He said, 'Indeed this is amazing to me. I have been supplicating to these gods for seventy years to relieve me and they have not been able to. How can your Lord relieve someone in one morning?' They said, 'Yes, our Lord is fully capable to do whatever He wills, whereas these gods can not benefit or harm anything.' He then believed and they supplicated to their Lord and Allah relieved him of what he suffered. It was as if he had never been in any hardship. Tafsir Al-Qurtubi (8/5653) to him: ‘You have been entrusted with My blessing, and entrusted with My creation’. In this regard, a poet once said,

Indeed I am a person, my dirhams (money) do not settle
In the hand except rarely, as if they were a passer-by’

Allah Glorified is He mentions ‘running’ (Ya Sin: 20) which means that he was running quickly. And ‘He said, “O my people, follow the messengers”’ (Ya Sin: 20); the man was clearly using a softening tone to approach the one being called, as if he is saying: ‘O my family, O my kinsfolk, O my children’, which is an indication of the bonds of love and mercy that existed between him and them.

His saying: ‘… follow the messengers…’ (Ya Sin: 20), indicates that the man is helping his people by mentioning the primary reason for following them, being the messengers. Then he gives them another reason by saying, ‘Follow those who do not ask of you [any] payment, and they are [rightly] guided’ (Ya Sin: 21). In other words, they did not ask for any price in return for their call to the message of Allah Glorified is He.

The phrase ‘who do not ask of you [any] payment’ (Ya Sin: 21) is not said unless the work that one is doing requires a wage, and a messenger does not come except to benefit those to whom he is sent. However, it is only logical for a messenger to ask to get paid for doing his job, in this case though, who is the only one capable of paying him in return for his services? No one can pay him back except Allah because the benefit of the messenger goes beyond the benefits of the life of this world to the benefits of the Hereafter, so who among the human beings can give the messenger what he truly deserves?

That is why all the messengers say, ‘My reward is only from Allah…’ (Yunus: 72). In other words, you people do not possess the extent of my reward and you cannot possibly estimate it. The only one who can give me my reward is the One for whom I work. Every messenger said these words except for two of them, Ibrahim (Abraham) and Musa (Moses) peace be upon them. Did you know why?

It was said that Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) first call was made to his father Azar, so it would not have been appropriate of him to ask him for a reward for calling him to the truth. Likewise, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him called Pharaoh who had raised him in his own house and had been gracious towards him. So how could he ask him for a reward?

A third consideration with regards to following the messengers is explained in the following verse when Allah Glorified is He says: '…and they are [rightly] guided' (Ya Sin: 21). They were sent by Allah, the One Who sends who is guided upon the straight path that leads to Him. These messengers are guided in and of themselves, and so they can guide others. Therefore, the command and its rationale is clarified; these messengers did not ask for a reward and they did not call to misguidance, but rather to guidance.

Then this man turns to himself and addresses the people, 'I am not commanding you to do something that I do not do myself, and if I was cheating you I would not cheat myself'. 'And why should I not worship He who created me…' (Ya Sin: 22), i.e. the one who created me from nothing the one who should be worshiped? He is the one who made me and brought me into existence from non-existence and provided for me when I had nothing, and He continues to bestow his blessings upon me. Therefore, what is going to prevent me from worshipping Him when he is the One Who should be worshipped? Even if my worship of Him is nothing other than me repaying Him for His blessings, without seeking a reward, then worshipping Him is obligatory.

This is not the speech of a messenger. It is the speech of a man who is an obedient believer and whose heart is rejoicing in faith. He thus wants to purify his faith and pass his guidance on to others in line with what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'None of you shall become a true believer until he loves for his brother what he loves for himself.'(1)

First, Allah Glorified is He created His creation. Then He entrusted the messengers with His Message for their guidance. The messengers, in turn, conveyed it to their companions, and whoever has something conveyed to them becomes responsible for it just like the messenger. That is why the Messenger of

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (13) and Muslim in his Sahih (45) in the Book of Faith from Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him with the following wording, 'By the One in Whose hand is my soul, a slave does not truly believe until he loves for his neighbour' – or he said, 'for his brother' – 'what he loves for himself.'

Allah peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘May Allah freshen the affairs of a person who hears something from us and communicates it to others exactly as he has heard it (i.e., both the meaning and the words), for it may be that the recipient of knowledge understands it better than the one who has heard it’ (1).

Therefore, the responsibility of calling people to Allah is first, borne by the messengers and then those who believe in them, who received their guidance. This bearing is not a courtesy but a commandment from Allah. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…that you will be witnesses over the people and the Messenger will be a witness over you’ (al-Baqara: 143). Accordingly, when the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him testified that he has conveyed the message to you, it will be obligatory for you to testify against mankind that you conveyed the message to them because those who believe in the message are an extension for the Messenger.

As we have seen before, the believing man, who came from the farthest end of the city, striving to exalt the word of truth and assist the messengers, was not a messenger and no one gave him that responsibility- he acted voluntarily. This is because his strong faith prompted him to do so.

He took it upon himself to advise himself first when he said, ‘And why should I not worship He who created me? …’ (Ya Sin: 22) This is politeness in presenting the call and making it more appropriate for it to be accepted. His saying, ‘And why should I not…’ (Ya Sin: 22), is as if he would be amazed at himself if he did not believe in the one who brought him into being, and amazement at oneself is the sincerest form of expression. It is as if one is not arguing and not cheating, but rather saying what is in one’s heart, as Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him said, ‘Why do I not see the hoopoe…?’ (an-Naml: 20)

The answer is not going to come from anyone else. It can only come from him, as if he is saying, ‘The hoopoe must be here, but I cannot see it’. The rule is that one uses the whole and the whole is present, and the amazement is on my part; why do I not see him? Then he repeats, ‘...or is he among the absent?' (an-Naml: 20), which means that either the impediment is on his part or because of it- as if he is casting doubt in the former- then he scrutinises the matter and finds that it is the hoopoe's fault.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (1/437) and At-Tirmidhi in his (Sunnan) (2657, 2658) and Ibn Majah in his Sunnan and Al-Hamidi (1/47) from the Hadith of `Abdullah ibn Mas`ud Allah be pleased with him.

Therefore, His saying: 'And why should I not worship He who created me and to whom you will be returned?' (Ya Sin: 22) indicates that the matter of bringing into existence and creation necessitates that you worship the one who brought all things into existence, and to do otherwise demands astonishment.

That is why, in the chapter of al-Baqara, Allah Glorified is He dictates to us how to address the disbelievers: 'How can you disbelieve in Allah when you were lifeless and He brought you to life…' (al-Baqara: 28), which means, 'How can you disbelieve in Allah Who has created you and provided for you'? This is not rational or logical, so tell us about how you have disbelieved.

The Arabic noun fatr (creation) is the amazing act of creating something that nothing precedes it in form, colour, or resemblance. That is why when Allah Glorified is He talks about Himself, He says: 'Originator of the heavens and the earth' (al-Baqara: 2117) which means that He created the heavens and the earth without there being any previous example that He imitated whilst creating.

Another meaning of 'He who created me' (Ya Sin: 22) is having faith in Him, the faith of one's fitra (primitive nature). Therefore, one's faith in Allah is either of gratitude towards the One Who created him and brought him into existence, for which there was no previous example, or the faith of one's primitive nature upon which Allah Has brought mankind into existence.

When we reflect on the task of this man, we find that what was in his heart resembled what was in the rest of his bodily organs, i.e. the development of the stages of faith. How? The body consists of various limbs, and every limb has a task and a function. In order for this body to survive, it requires means of sustenance such as food, drink, and air.

After the process of taking in the food and the various blessings therein, such as teeth that cut, molars that crush, saliva that helps in the process of swallowing, digestive fluids, etc. the food is then absorbed into the blood. Next, the heart receives it and takes what it needs primarily so that it has the capacity to pump the blood to the remaining organs and each one of them can carry out their tasks.

The same applies to this man and how his faith grew stronger. After believing and having faith settle in his heart, he wanted to pass on this faith to his people and spread among them the guidance that his heart has absorbed. He, therefore, represents the heart of the messages. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Indeed, for everything there is a heart, and the Quran’s heart is Ya Sin.’(1) It came in the last phase of the voluntary messages that serve the obligatory message.

As long as the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him informs us that Ya Sin is the heart of the Quran, then the believer must accept all of its benefits that have been authentically related to us from him. It is not necessary that we stop at the rationale behind everything because faith, as we have said, is both unseen and witnessed. From the truthfulness of what he has witnessed, the believer takes evidence for the existence of what he has not seen.

Therefore, let us take these Hadiths with pleasure such that if you read The Quran and you do not find any Hadiths regarding it, the fact that you are reading Allah’s words is of enough benefit to you. That is why we have seen some of them writing down the Hadiths that encourage the reading of the Quran.

It was narrated in a Hadith that if the Quran was read in the presence of a sick person, rows of angels would come to him to the extent that every letter is worth ten thousand angels. They do not leave him until he dies. Then they watch him being washed and carried to his final resting place, and they watch people praying for him and burying him.(2)

In another narration, ‘Whoever has Ya Sin read in their presence whilst sick, or he reads it himself, Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him will come to him with a cup of water. He will thus drink from it and never thirst again, and he will not need the pools of the Prophets.'(1)

(1) Narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (5/26) from the Hadith of Ma`qal ibn Yassar that the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Ya Sin is the heart of the Quran. No man reads it desiring Allah’s pleasure and the abode of the Hereafter except that He forgives him, and you should read it over your deceased.’

(2) Some Hadiths regarding the virtue of Ya Sin are authentic, but what is mentioned here is not one of them. At-Tirmidhi, Ad-Darimi and Al-Bayhaqi in Shua`b Al-Iman narrated that Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him said, ‘The Messenger of Allah said, “Everything has a heart, and the heart of the Quran is Ya Sin. Whoever reads Ya Sin once, Allah writes for him that he recited Quran ten times”’. This has also been mentioned by As-Suyuti in Ad-Dur Al-Manthur (7/27).

In the following verse: '…and to whom you will be returned?' (Ya Sin: 22), the man explains: do not think that you can escape from Allah because you are in His Grasp. You came into existence by His command and you were witnesses to this creation. Likewise, you will be brought back to Him in the end. If you cannot appreciate the blessing of being brought into existence, then appreciate the result of going back.

We notice in this verse that the believing man is speaking about himself in the singular form, 'And why should I not worship He who created me…' (Ya Sin: 22), and then he turns from the singular to addressing the plural and the denying people, '…and to whom you will be returned?' (Ya Sin: 22) He did not say, '…and to whom I will be returned'? Why? The answer is simple, it was said because obedience is the foundation of worship and it only comes in three stages:

The first stage, you obey the one in whom you find a perfect example that deserves to be obeyed and to be praised for his perfection, even if do not gain any benefit from him. For example, when you look at a wonderful and expressive poem and you are amazed at the one who said it, you praise him even though none of it brings any advantage to you. However, you are able to appreciate the poet for who he is.

The second stage, you obey a man and appreciate him because of a benefit that goes back to you, We very often see people serving a cowardly man who does not deserve to be served, and the people do not serve him except out of greed for what he has.

---

(1) The closest meaning I found to this is what Al-Bayhaqi narrated in Shua`b Al-Iman from Abu Qalaba based on, 'Whoever reads Ya Sin is forgiven. Whoever reads it in the presence of a small amount of food it becomes sufficient. Whoever reads it in the presence of a deceased person will make it a source of ease for him. Whoever reads it in the presence of a woman who is experiencing a difficult labour will find ease thereafter. Whoever reads it, it is as if he has read the entire Quran eleven times.' Al-Bayhaqi said, 'This is how it has been narrated to us from Abu Qalaba and he is one of the great followers.' He is not saying this because it is authentic but merely to inform.

The third stage, you obey an individual or you respect simply because you are afraid of him and you fear his evil.

Indeed the man who ran from the farthest end of the city affirmed the first two stages when he said, ‘And why should I not worship He who created me’ (Ya Sin: 22), i.e. I worship Him because His perfection means that He deserves to be worshipped. I also worship Him because of His continuous blessings. As for the third stage, he applies it to the deniers from among his people by saying, ‘…and to whom you will be returned?’ (Ya Sin: 22) In other words, wake up people! If you have not appreciated Allah for His attributes of perfection, and for which He is loved and you have not appreciated Allah for His continuous blessings towards you, then know that you will go back to Him, and the end and final destination belongs to Him. He has power over you and no one escapes from His Grasp.

Then the man emphasises the matter of worshipping Allah alone, and he continues:

ءَأَتَّخِذُ مِن دُونِهِۦٓ ءَالِهَةً إِن يُرِدۡنِ ٱلرَّحۡمَٰنُ بِضُرّٖ لَّا تُغۡنِ عَنِّي
شَفَٰعَتُهُمۡ شَيۡـٔٗا وَلَا يُنقِذُونِ ﴿٢٣﴾ إِنِّيٓ إِذٗا لَّفِي ضَلَٰلٖ مُّبِينٍ ﴿٢٤﴾
إِنِّيٓ ءَامَنتُ بِرَبِّكُمۡ فَٱسۡمَعُونِ ﴿٢٥﴾

How could I take besides Him any other gods, whose intercession will not help me and who would not be able to save me if the Lord of Mercy wished to harm me? [23] Then I would clearly be in the wrong [24] I believe in your Lord, so listen to me [25] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 23 - 25)

The questioning in ‘Should I take…’ (Ya Sin: 23) carries the meaning of both astonishment and denying; how can he take a god besides Allah when Allah Glorified is He is the One Who created him. When you consider the meaning of the verb ‘I take’, you will find that those false deities do not exist in the first place, so the meaning of ‘taking a god’ means that it is not a god in reality and it does not deserve to be a god. However, you have propped it up and made it a god. An example of this is attributing false children to Allah, as in the following verse. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Allah has not taken any son, nor has there ever been with Him any deity. [If there had been], then each deity would have taken what it created, and some of them would have sought to overcome others. Exalted is Allah above what they describe [concerning Him].' (al-Mu'minun: 91)

Allah Glorified is He explains to us that He does not have a son, and if you say that Allah has taken a son, this would mean that a son had come to Him and He had adopted him. Indeed, Allah is Greatly Exalted above such a thing. Likewise, you can say that you have taken a son, meaning that a son came to you and you did not give birth to him, but rather, you adopted him.

Therefore, as long as those gods are taken, it means that they never existed originally. It is as if the man is fixing the people's concept of worship.

If you ponder on the following verse, '…if the Most Merciful intends for me some adversity…', you will notice an expression that contains a subtle transition which should be considered because the attribute of mercy in 'The Most Gracious' contradicts harm, so how can the context incorporate the two?

If you interpret what happens to you or befalls you from Allah's decree to be harm, then you will reason that it is from the Most Merciful. So, whatever happens to you must be what the Most Merciful Has decreed. That is why we say, 'My Lord, I praise You for all that You have decreed and all that You have destined, praise of submission to Your judgment and certainty in Your wisdom'.

It is as if Allah Glorified is He is teaching you how to submit to His will: 'Wake up and realise that not everything you see according to your own flawed judgment and lack of knowledge is of harm to you. This is because the one causing it to happen is the Most Merciful, and hidden within this harm is great benefit, just like the loving father who brings his son to the doctor so that he can undergo some painful surgery, or amputate a limb so that the rest of the body can be healed, for this is harm in an outward sense but in reality there is mercy in it'.

That is why we previously said that if your son came to you and he was bleeding, you would not welcome this with pleasure nor with anger until after you had asked who had done it to him. If it were an enemy, you would be angry and if it were someone close to you, you would accept what happened with contentment and trust, and you would say to your son, 'Your uncle must have seen you doing something wrong and therefore he punished you'.

Likewise, do not judge what Allah has willed to happen to you as anything other than that which has come from the Most Merciful Lord who is more merciful to you than a mother to her child. You are His creation and His making. For example, if you look at those who have taken their statues for gods, you will find that they take really good care of it. They look after it and work on beautifying it. It is like when you see a carpenter, for example, chiselling wood. Would you say that he is harming what he has made? No. He is improving it and beautifying it. That is why Allah says in a Qudsi Hadith(1): 'O son of Adam! I am beloved to you so I have a right over you that you be beloved to Me.'(2) After this show of affection from the Creator to the creation, can anything happen to them that will harm them?

In our daily lives, we see many testimonies to this matter. For example, you often miss a train or a bus and then you have to take the next one, on the way you find that the train or bus was involved in some sort of accident. So, you change your viewpoint, which was anger at missing the train, and it becomes gratitude to Allah because He saved you. Your attitude was different. Therefore, you should look at the one who makes destiny happen to you. Do not look at superficial benefits because Allah has wisdom in what He causes to happen, whether you understand it or not.

We also often see one of our children, for example, failing an exam, even though he had revised, worked hard, acquired much knowledge, etc. However, something happened to him, a sickness, or other, and he was not successful. A superficial glance at the matter would make you think that it is something evil and a great loss, causing you to be angry. But if you look carefully and reflectively, you will see that Allah Has a wisdom behind this failure.

In such a situation, a rational father will say to his son, 'My son, I praise Allah because you are always successful, and maybe if you had been successful this year you would have felt prey to people's envy of you. This is a golden opportunity to improve your score next time so that you can join your dream college'.

(1) Qudsi Hadiths are attributed to Allah the Most High and related from Him. The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him would receive the meaning from Allah, by way of inspiration or dream, and then he would inform his community of this in his own words. This is contrary to the remaining Hadiths, as the Messenger of Allah would not attribute them to His Lord, nor relate them from Him.

(2) Included by Imam Abu Hamid Al-Ghazali in Ihya` `Ulum Ad-Din (4/296) and he said, 'In some books: "My slave! It is your right that I am beloved to you, and My right over your is that you are beloved to me."'

This is how the father strengthens his son's relationship with Allah and increases his faith in his Lord, and at the same time distancing him from anger and lack of contentment in Allah's decree. This is a matter with which fathers should be concerned.

Therefore, the issue that we want to stop at and examine in this verse is that if the Most Merciful does something that appears to be harmful and contradictory to this attribute, then this is due to your lack of judgment. In the greater scheme of things it is not contradictory, but rather, it is merciful.

His saying: '...their intercession will not avail me at all…' (Ya Sin: 23) means that the intercession of those gods, if they do have an intercession, is of no benefit because they have been put forward as partners and equals to Allah. So how can their intercession be accepted in His presence? A condition of intercession is that the one interceding is beloved to the one who is interceded for. Those gods, supposing that they had an intercession, would be unacceptable according to Allah even though they, in and of themselves, are excused because they never sinned. They never claimed that they were gods, but human beings claimed they were.

We have already mentioned that those gods are excused from being worshipped besides Allah. Indeed, the poet who wrote the following lines of poetry was able to articulate this meaning as if those gods themselves were talking. He said,

They worship us and we are more worshipful of Allah
Than those who stand in the late hours of the night
They have committed an act of ignorance as
They committed it against the Son of Maryam (Mary) and the disciples
They mistook our silence as evidence against us
And we became fuel for fire because of them
Indeed, we are all sinful except for the one
Who will be saved by the Mercy of the All-Forgiving

His saying: ‘nor can they save me’ means that when the intercessor is given his intercession, he can save the one interceded for from those who are with him. As for those gods, their intercession will not be accepted and they will not be able to save whoever asks them to intercede for him.

We have already clarified the meaning of intercession, and it comes from asking for pardon or forgiveness. In other words, if a man has a problem that he is not able to solve himself, he asks someone else to help him. This person joins him to strengthen him in solving this matter, so after being one he, with the help of another, becomes a pair, shafʿ, meaning ‘two’.

When Allah Glorified is He wanted to make this matter clear to us, He tells us in the chapter of al-Baqara: ‘And fear a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all, nor will intercession be accepted from it, nor will compensation be taken from it, nor will they be aided’ (al-Baqara: 48).

He also says in another verse of the same chapter: ‘And fear a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all, and no compensation will be accepted from it, nor will any intercession benefit it, nor will they be aided’ (al-Baqara: 123). You will notice that the beginning of each of these two verses is the same but the endings are different. Why? It is because what the pronoun refers to is different; we have here a soul that is compensating and a soul that is being compensated for. If you make the pronoun refer to the one being compensated for, the one being compensated for cannot intercede for himself, but rather, he will try to make up for whatever harm he has caused so that he can pay his dues. If righteousness is not accepted from him, he looks for someone who will intercede for him. Therefore, the meaning is that uprightness will not be accepted from this soul and it will not be benefitted by anyone else’s intercession.

If you make the pronoun refer to the soul that is compensating, i.e. the one that intercedes, for the intercessor steps forward to intercede at first, and if his intercession is not accepted, he presents righteousness and bears the expenses of the redemption.

Therefore, those gods – supposing that they have an intercession – will be unable to save whoever should seek refuge in them from the grip of Allah as it is an intercession that is rejected and not accepted. They are not suited for intercession or saving, and this meaning is clear in His saying: ‘O people, an example is presented, so listen to it. Indeed, those you invoke besides Allah will never create [as much as] a fly, even if they gathered together for that purpose. And if the fly should steal away from them a [tiny] thing, they could not recover it from him. Weak are the pursuer and pursued’ (al-Hajj: 73).

So, when the man, says, ‘Indeed, I would then be in manifest error’ (Ya Sin: 24), he means, ‘If I did that and went to worship those gods, I would be in error ‘manifest error’, i.e. clear. His saying: ‘Indeed, I would then be in manifest error’ is as if the error would surround him and encompass him from all directions, such that he would not be able to be saved from it.

Then this believing man says, ‘Indeed, I have believed in your Lord, so listen to me’ (Ya Sin: 25). It would be correct to say that this speech was addressed to the messengers whom the man had come to assist in their call and support them, for he looked at them and said, ‘Indeed, I have believed in your Lord...’ (Ya Sin: 25), and the meaning of ‘…so listen to me’ is; hear what I am saying in order to support you, and bear witness that I am acting voluntarily with this faithful support. No one has commanded me to do so.

It would also be correct to say that this speech is directed towards the denying people, as he says to them, ‘Indeed, I have believed in your Lord’ (Ya Sin: 25) which means that Allah is your Lord in spite of you even though you disbelieve in Him, I respect His Lordship over you and I believe in it so I can be included in the greatness of this Lordship, ‘…so listen to me’, i.e. listen to what I have said so that I can say that I have carried out what I am obliged to do in your regard. I have conveyed the message to you and I have not cheated you or deceived you.(1)

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

---

(1) In the first time, he was addressing the messengers, according to Ibn Mas`ud’s narration which was mentioned by Al-Qurtubi in his Tafsir (8/5654) and As-Suyuti narrated it in Ad-Dur Al-Manthur (7/52). As for the second time, he was addressing his people, Al-Qurtubi narrated it in his Tafsir from Ka`ab Al-Ahbar and Wahb ibn Munnabih. The verse follows both interpretations.

قِيلَ ٱدْخُلِ ٱلْجَنَّةَ ۖ قَالَ يَٰلَيْتَ قَوْمِى يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٢٦﴾
بِمَا غَفَرَ لِى رَبِّى وَجَعَلَنِى مِنَ ٱلْمُكْرَمِينَ ﴿٢٧﴾

He was told, ‘Enter the Garden,’ so he said, ‘If only my people knew [26] how my Lord has forgiven me and set me among the highly honoured [27] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 26 - 27)

Using the passive verb ‘it was said’ is for the sake of generalisation because who said to him ‘enter Paradise’ and when? You can find the answer to this question in the following verse, ‘Indeed, those who have said, “Our Lord is Allah” and then remained on a right course - the angels will descend upon them, [saying], “Do not fear and do not grieve but receive good tidings of Paradise, which you were promised.”’ (Fussilat: 30) Accordingly, the man who adopted this position of faith voluntarily from the farthest end of the city came and rushing to support the messengers in a matter that he had not been burdened with in the first place. He came to the people with proofs and evidences that the messengers themselves had not brought. This way, he deserves the angels to descend upon him and give him glad tidings of paradise. Or Allah is using the past tense form, ‘It was said…’ to inform us of what He will tell him after his death when he enters paradise, which is how Allah shows appreciation and esteem to the man.

One of this man’s qualifications for entering paradise is that he did not look at his own faith, but he also looked for that of his brothers, to such an extent that he was given the glad tidings of paradise and after entering it, this did not stop him from thinking about his people, but rather, he said, ‘I wish my people could know…’ (Ya Sin: 26). In other words, the blessings that I am now in and the result of faith and obedience, if they knew what I know, they would attain what I have attained. If they knew, they would flock towards faith and engage in obedience more than they did so in disbelief and disobedience.

In His saying: ‘Of how my Lord has forgiven me and placed me among the honoured’ (Ya Sin: 27), you will notice that forgiveness precedes honour, and this matter is called emptying and filling. We already gave an example of this which was a garment that you want to iron, for example. Are you going to use the iron to clean it? No. You are going to clean it first and then you are going to beautify it by ironing it.

Likewise, Allah Glorified is He and He is above all kinds of examples, cleanses His slave of his sins before he enters paradise. He purifies him of what is attached to him, the emptying, and then He honours him with paradise, the filling. This meaning is clear in His saying: 'So he who is drawn away from the Fire and admitted to Paradise has attained [his desire]' (Al-'Imran: 185).

Allah Glorified is He bestows blessing upon us by moving us away from hell with the forgiveness of sins and then honouring us by admitting us into paradise out of His Generosity and Bounty.

Then the Almighty says:

وَمَآ أَنزَلۡنَا عَلَىٰ قَوۡمِهِۦ مِنۢ بَعۡدِهِۦ مِن جُندٖ مِّنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ وَمَا كُنَّا مُنزِلِينَ ٢٨
إِن كَانَتۡ إِلَّا صَيۡحَةٗ وَٰحِدَةٗ فَإِذَا هُمۡ خَٰمِدُونَ ٢٩

After him We did not send any army from heaven against his people, nor were We about to [28]
There was just one blast, and they fell down lifeless [29] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 28 - 29)

We know from the context of these two verses that the denying people killed this volunteering man, or that he died of natural causes.(1) It is expected that Allah will punish them for their denial of the three messengers first and then for their denial of this man who came from the farthest end of the city, rushing to advise them. So, what did Allah do to them?

He says, what can be interpreted as; 'Indeed, the matter of these deniers is more worthless than sending a host from the sky to destroy them'. One blast was merely enough to wipe them out. The meaning of, 'And We did not send down upon his people after him…' (Ya Sin: 28) is that after the sincere advice, the exhortations and the proofs that were voluntarily given, ‘nor would We have done so’ (Ya Sin: 28). In other words, we did not send any and it was not appropriate for us to send a host from the sky because the matter is much more trivial than that. ‘It was not but one shout’ (Ya Sin: 29) i.e. it was only a single blast, ‘…and immediately they were extinguished’ (Ya Sin: 29). The phrase ‘…and immediately they were extinguished’ indicates that they were so fanatical in their disbelief that they were like a blazing fire of anger against the messengers, first, and secondly against the man who volunteered. So Allah extinguished it.

(1) Ibn Kathir says in his Tafsir (3/568), 'Ibn Ishaq said, conveying from Ibn `Abbas, Ka`ab and Wahb, that when the man said that, his people jumped on him and killed him. While Qatada narrated that they stoned him to death, and the man said- while they were stoning him- 'May Allah have mercy on my people for they do not know.' In another interpretation, Al-Qurtubi mentioned a few narrations in his Tafsir (7/5654), one of which is Ibn Mas`ud's where he said that they killed him by stepping on his stomach with their feet, and then threw him down the well of Rass. That is why they were referred to as the People of the Well or the People of Ar-Rass in the Quran.

After saying these words, which can be said by every believer who sees the destruction of the disobedient and the outcome of the disbelievers to whom death has reached before they themselves reached faith, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

يَٰحَسۡرَةً عَلَى ٱلۡعِبَادِۚ مَا يَأۡتِيهِم مِّن رَّسُولٍ إِلَّا كَانُواْ بِهِۦ يَسۡتَهۡزِءُونَ (٣٠)

Alas for human beings! Whenever a messenger comes to them they ridicule him [30]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 30)

This word ‘regret’ is often used when someone we love misses out on some goodness. Regret here is for the servants who denied Allah’s messengers and mocked them. This is a matter that must be regretted by every believer because Allah Glorified is He created you and created things for you before He summoned you into existence.

He created for you the essentials of your material life and He maintained your material well-being by placing in earth all the nourishment, the necessities and the luxuries that you will ever need. Does it make sense to provide all of this for the body and leave the spirit with nothing even though it is more important than the body?

The spirit must be given something. It must be given some nourishment and values. Values are what Allah demands of His servant because you are going to be a worshipper of Allah; you are going to obey His commands and refrain from what He has prohibited. This is the way that He assigned you: 'Do this and do not do that'.

That is why you find that material sustenance and the essentials of physical life are provided for all, the believer and the disbeliever, the obedient and the disobedient. Allah Glorified is He is the one who summons them all into existence, and that is why He takes it upon himself to provide for them in the same way that you would invite, for example, a guest to your house. You would prepare for him food and drink and a sleeping area for him to stay with you. All of mankind has been given this gift.

As for the giving of values and the spirit, some of them have taken it and some of them have left it. This is because the gift of material sustenance empowers the passions of one's ego, but values restrict these passions and restrain them from certain things. Whenever values restrict the desires of the ego, one abandons them and slips away from them.

The way of values has come from one who loves you and is concerned for your benefit, as we have already mentioned in the Qudsi Hadith that the Lord of Might says, 'You are beloved to me, and it is My right over you that I am beloved to you.' You are the one who benefits from this way because Allah Glorified is He created you with all His attributes of perfection. If you obey Him, this does not increase Him in perfection, and if you disobey Him, this does not decrease Him at all in terms of His attributes, and nothing harms Him.

That is why Allah made from His servants the rich and the poor, even though Allah Glorified is He is fully capable of making all of us rich such that none of us would have need of someone else. If the poor person reflected on the wisdom behind his poverty, he would praise Allah and he would know that his poverty is a condition for the faith of the rich person, while the rich person is not a condition for the faith of the poor person. The rich person needs me before I need him. The rich person strives and becomes tired and must deal with the means of provision, trade and suffer the causes of profit and loss. Then he comes to my door and gives me Allah's right regarding his wealth, while I am free of concern.

The rich person is obliged to perform hajj, and if he does not, he is liable to be punished. If he does perform hajj, it may be accepted or it may be rejected.

If his hajj is not accepted, then the obligation remains. This is the difference between one who is obliged to perform a pillar and one who is not obliged to do anything.

Therefore, the one who reflects will see that the poor person is more fortunate than the rich person is; the one who is unable is more fortunate than the one who is able.

We were with some brothers, and we wanted to perform the sunset prayer in the Hussayn Mosque. When we stood up to pray (a man named) Sayyid Jalal caught our attention and said: ‘Wait two minutes because I have sent Sulaiman (some boy) to change ten pounds for me.’ One of those present said: ‘I have some new pounds on me so here is ten pounds that I can change for you.’ Sayyid said: ‘No, because the man I am intending to give it to will only accept the big pound from before’, so he refused this new currency.

I said to myself: ‘Glory be to Allah! This insane man that is sitting at the gate of the Hussayn Mosque, and he is such-and-such, is making the greatest economist in Egypt, Sayyid Jalal, subservient to him, and he had with him the minister, Ahmad Ta`ima, to help him provide the money that this man liked.

It was amazing that from amongst these people was one sitting at the gate of the Hussayn Mosque and he was crossing his legs, and the retinue of the minister and ministers passed by him and he did not pay any attention to them. He was not concerned with the retinue, and the guards and the world around him. What does this mean, then? It means that he was preoccupied with something greater than all of this, and that Allah had manifested to him that which had made him unaware of this life and what was around him.

That is why one of them saw the retinue of one of these ministers and said to the other: ‘By Allah, we are in bliss, and if these people knew about it, they would fight us with swords’. Are these people not masters? Are they not noble?

Therefore, every believer who sees the final end of the deniers and the destruction of the disbelievers in this story and those that resemble it must say these words ‘How regretful for the servants.’ Why? It is because it is from the perfection of one’s faith that the believer feels regret for the one who does not taste the flavour of virtue and the bliss of obedience. He is wretched and thus deserving of someone who will sympathise with him and be grieved by his state. Also, the believer loves for his brother what he loves for himself, and indeed he loves goodness for all of humanity. Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

أَلَمْ يَرَوْا۟ كَمْ أَهْلَكْنَا قَبْلَهُم مِّنَ ٱلْقُرُونِ أَنَّهُمْ إِلَيْهِمْ لَا يَرْجِعُونَ ﴿٣١﴾
وَإِن كُلٌّ لَّمَّا جَمِيعٌ لَّدَيْنَا مُحْضَرُونَ ﴿٣٢﴾

Do they not see how many generations We have destroyed before them, none of whom will ever come back to them? [31]
[Yet] all of them will be brought before Us [32]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 31-32)

It suffices these deniers to look at the outcome of deniers before them and the punishment that befell them; Allah destroyed them with no one left out. The verb ‘seen’ refers to both knowing and seeing. You can say ‘I saw the scene’ and this is referring to seeing, and you can say ‘I see this opinion’ and this means that you come to know it. Seeing limits your information to what your eyes encounter, whilst knowing gives what your eyes and your other limbs encounter, so knowing is broader than seeing. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, addressing His Prophet: ‘Have you not seen, [O Muhammad], how your Lord dealt with the companions of the elephant?’ (al-Fil: 1)

It is known that the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was born in the Year of the Elephant, and possibly after this event. Therefore, he did not physically see any of it, but despite that his Lord addresses him with ‘Have you not seen’, meaning ‘Do you not know?’ either by being told the story by his people or by Allah Glorified is He informing him of it.

Physically seeing events is the most reliable means of realisation because it is as they say, ‘With the eye you do not say “Where?’’ But why is the context changed from ‘Do you not know?’ to ‘Have you not seen’? It is said: ‘The True Lord Glorified is He indicates to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: ‘Indeed My revelation to you of something is more reliable than you seeing it with your own eyes’.

His saying ‘Have you not seen’ means that amongst these people were those who had actually seen the destruction of the deniers, and on their travels and trade journeys in the winter and summer had passed by their houses that were completely devastated. The meaning of ‘how many’ is that there were many, and it is a matter that is beyond calculation. It is similar to you saying to someone who denies your courtesy: ‘How good have I been to you’! It is as if you are saying to him: ‘I trust your judgement and I am asking you for an answer’; by this mean, your statement has become an affirmation voiced by him.

Regarding the meaning of ‘generations’, it is a period of time that lasts one hundred years, His saying ‘that they to them will not return?’ could have more than one meaning according to what the pronouns ‘they’ and ‘them’ refer to. This is because the verse is talking about the previous generations that have perished while addressing those who are denying at present. If the plural third person pronoun ‘they’ refers to the generations that have perished, then the meaning is: Indeed, they will not return, and we have not see any of them come back after their destruction. If the pronoun refers to those being addressed at present, then the meaning is: Indeed, you who are being addressed! Your lineage does not go back to those whom Allah has destroyed because Allah Glorified is He annihilated them such that no individual and no progeny were left.

In summary, the verse means that the destruction of the disbelievers and the deniers is not something new, but rather, it is a practice that has been followed throughout time. The Quran relates to us what happened to `Ad, Thamud, and Pharaoh. Allah Glorified is He has left traces to prove the veracity of what Allah Glorified is He has informed us, and here we see America, for example. America is the superpower of modern civilization and at the forefront of ingenuity, inventing and exploring space, but despite this, they come to Egypt, for example, to see the remnants of the Pharaohs that were built thousands of years before `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and despite their scientific progress, they are amazed at how the pyramids were built.

This practice – the practice of destroying the disbelievers – has evidence that can be seen in the modern age. Russia, which committed suicide, look at what it did in Chechnya, this small Islamic country, at a time when we were inadequate in our support, or our support for them would not have matched the power and tyranny of these transgressors. That is why Allah responded to the enemies of His religion and avenged them in the earthquake of Sakhalil.

His saying in the following verse: ‘And indeed, all of them will yet be brought present before Us’ comes after His saying: ‘that they to them will not return?’ to clarify that there is no returning in this life; and if not, had they not any return in this life or the Hereafter, then death would have been a relief for these deniers. This is as Fakhr Ad-Din Ar-Razi (1) has said that the meaning is: ‘They are not returning in this life. As for the Hereafter, they have to return for the reckoning, for every major and minor act.’

The phrase ‘all of them’ refers to every single individual from amongst them. It is also not conditional that they are gathered together, but rather, each individual comes on his own so that they can see the humiliation and debasement of the people who have wasted themselves and the disbelievers who have made from amongst themselves a god that is to be obeyed.

The phrase ‘be brought present before Us’ indicates that one is forced and compelled to be gathered, against one’s wishes.

After the True Lord Glorified is He mentions the issue of resurrection in ‘And indeed, all of them will yet be brought present before Us’, He relates evidence for the veracity of this matter because resurrection is one of those matters that many people deny. One poet has said (2):

The doctor and the astrologer both claimed

That the bodies will not be gathered, so I said to the two of them

(1) Muhammad ibn `Umar Abu `Abdullah Fakhr Ad-Din Ar-Razi, Qurayshi of lineage, originated from Tabaristan… He was born in Rayy (modern-day Teheran) in the year 544 A.H. and this accounts for his name Ar-Razi. He was an Imam and Quranic commentator and the unique one of his age in the rational, transmitted, and ancient sciences. It was said: ‘Where is the speaker of Rayy?’ The people devoted themselves to his books during his lifetime and studied them amongst themselves. He was also a master of Persian. His various works include Mafatih Al-Ghaib and Mahsal Afkar Al-Mutaqadimin Wa Al-Muta`akhirin. He died in the year 606 at the age of 62. Az-Zirikli, Al-A`lam (6/313).

(2) Abu Al-`Ala`, Ahmad ibn `Abdullah, At-Tanukhi, born in the year 362 A.H. in Ma`ra Nu`man and died there in the year 449 at the age of 86. He was a poet and philosopher. He was afflicted with smallpox as a child and became blind at the age of 4. He started composing poetry at the age of 11 and he used to wear coarse clothes. He also used to forbid causing pain to animals. His writings include Risalat Al-Fuqran, Lazum Ma La Yulzam) and others.

If what you are saying is true I have not lost anything
But if what I am saying is true then you are truly in loss (1)

One advisor might say to you: ‘If you go along the path of such-and-such then be careful and take precautions because there are wolves, predatory animals and brigand’s. What if you take all these precautions but do not find anything? Of what was he making you scared? Likewise, there is my belief in resurrection, that if it does not benefit me, it has not harmed me, and your belief that if it does not harm you, it has not benefitted you.

The strongest argument that the philosophers have regarding resurrection is that they said: ‘Imagine that a man dies and is buried, and his body disintegrates. Then a tree grows on his grave and nourishes itself from his remains. Then it comes to bear fruit and another man eats its fruits, thus causing the elements of the first man to reach him. So, when the resurrection takes place, how will these elements be resurrected, either from the first or from the last?

The proponents of this argument understood that the elements, when they are created, have a specific identity in creation, but did not understand that they have a generic identity as well. We say: Imagine a man that is afflicted with an illness which causes him to lose twenty kilos in weight. Then Allah guides a doctor to diagnose his sickness and prescribe some medicine for him. Then the man is cured and he nourishes himself until his body returns to its original weight. Where did the original elements that made up his weight before go? Are they the same elements that have come back to him after he has been cured?

Therefore, the matter is not the specificity of elements but the quantity of elements, and the immensity of trying to count the quantity of elements of every human being. If all the elements that exist in me, Muhammad Ash-Sha`rawi, were gathered together because the elements of all human beings are the same, they are the sixteen known elements that begin with, as we have mentioned, oxygen, then carbon, nitrogen, oxygen and so forth. However, individuals differ in the amounts of these elements that each of us has. You all have oxygen, carbon, and nitrogen, but I may have more oxygen and you may have more carbon, and so on.

(1) These lines are from the poem of Abu Al-`Ala` Al-Ma`ri and they are from the Kamil Metre. It consists of seven verses beginning with ‘he said’ instead of ‘he claimed’. See his Diwan and Al-Mawsu`ah Ash-Shi`riyyah.

The True Lord Glorified is He is teaching us that the issue is not the specific identity of the elements, or their specificity, but rather, it is the quantity of elements, for Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of Qaf: 'We know what the earth diminishes of them, and with Us is a retaining record.' (Qaf: 4) This means that He preserves the amounts and calculates them according to their scales. Thus, if Allah Glorified is He wants to resurrect, He gathers a proportion of this and a proportion of that and gives it to so-and-so, and a proportion of this and a proportion of that is given to so-and-so and so forth. The matter does not stop at Him knowing these proportions, but rather, Allah preserves them and records them in a preserved book.

In another place, the True Lord refutes those who deny the resurrection and He says to them: 'Why do you act arrogantly towards resurrection, when it is the restoration of something that did actually exist and its elements were separated? What is more amazing is that I brought it into existence from non-existence, so resurrection is easier than restoration: 'And it is He who begins creation; then He repeats it, and that is [even] easier for Him.' (ar-Rum: 27) This is if we agree with you in your understanding of things and follow your norms of thinking.

We have already clarified that the elements that Allah has created in the universe are as they are. They do not increase at all and they do not decrease at all. Water, for example, has always been the same since Allah created the earth, but it passes through its well-known cycle. Man, for example, drinks about a ton of water in his lifetime. Does he retain all of it? No, it comes out in the form of urine and its residue. After he dies, whatever fluid is left over evaporates and the earth absorbs it to start a new water cycle. This is how the elements of man take part in this cycle. And here the True Lord Glorified is He shows to these deniers the evidence:

وَءَايَةٌ لَّهُمُ ٱلْأَرْضُ ٱلْمَيْتَةُ أَحْيَيْنَٰهَا وَأَخْرَجْنَا مِنْهَا حَبًّا فَمِنْهُ يَأْكُلُونَ ﴿٣٣﴾
وَجَعَلْنَا فِيهَا جَنَّٰتٍ مِّن نَّخِيلٍ وَأَعْنَٰبٍ وَفَجَّرْنَا فِيهَا مِنَ ٱلْعُيُونِ ﴿٣٤﴾
لِيَأْكُلُوا۟ مِن ثَمَرِهِۦ وَمَا عَمِلَتْهُ أَيْدِيهِمْ ۖ أَفَلَا يَشْكُرُونَ ﴿٣٥﴾

There is a sign for them in the lifeless earth: We give it life and We produce grain from it for them to eat [33] We have put gardens of date palms and grapes in the earth, and We have made springs of water gush out of it [34] So that they could eat its fruit. It was not their own hands that made all this. How can they not give thanks? [35] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 33 - 35)

This evidence is something that is witnessed and seen by everybody. No one can possibly deny it. We see the dry, desolate dead earth; when the rain comes, it turns green and life starts in it; it moves and produces. It is upon man to take evidence from what he witnesses for that which he does not witness.

In His saying ‘And a sign for them’ a sign is something amazing within its own category, like when you say, ‘So-and-so is a sign of nobility’, or ‘a sign of beauty’. This sign is for them, meaning only the disbelievers because the believer has no need of this sign. The believer says, ‘But is it not sufficient concerning your Lord that He is, over all things, a Witness?’ (Fussilat: 53)

Seeking evidence for something is the first evidence of its existence. I would not exhaust myself looking for evidence unless I was convinced that this thing existed. Seeking evidence is the essence of evidence, and the believer only seeks evidence so that he can use it to debate with the one who does not believe, and thus show him Allah’s signs.

Regarding this sign, either you take it as a cosmic sign that indicates the power of Allah Glorified is He or you take it evidence that He, if He sends down rain on the dead earth, it moves and produces vegetation from every splendid pair.

The one who reflects on the earth finds that it is a sign in and of itself, and one of the greatest of Allah’s blessings, even if it was a rock that did not produce anything. It suffices as our temporary abode; upon it we dwell and in it we seek shelter, so what do you think about the fact that Allah gives it a shade of life when it thrives with plants and then transforms into a wonderful colour green?

The revival of the earth is in stages. It is the revival of plants that are not rich in nutritional value such as grass, weeds, and shrubs. It suffices that this type clothes the face of the earth in beauty and splendour, while it settles the sand and establishes it on the face of the earth so that the wind does not blow it in our eyes. It is one of the phenomena of life on earth, and one of Allah's blessings. The other stage is that the earth grows plants that we nourish ourselves with, and they are of two types: the necessary seeds essentials for your life and the foundation of nourishment, the most important of them being wheat.

The True Lord Glorified is He indicates its importance when He says, 'And grain is having husks and scented plants.' (ar-Rahman: 12) It turns our attention towards the importance of bran which, until recently, we did not think were important and thus used it as fodder for livestock. It is narrated that Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him whom Allah gave a kingdom unattained for anyone after him, that he ate nothing but grits, i.e. coarsely ground grain.

That is why Allah Glorified is He says, 'And a sign for them is the dead earth. We have brought it to life.' This is the first stage, followed by 'and brought forth from it grain, and from it they eat.' These are the necessities.

Then 'And We placed therein gardens of palm trees and grapevines.' The date palm and the vines are specified because dates and grapes are the most important of fruits, and the nearest of them are from the necessities of nourishment, as they are nourishment for some and fruits for others. That is why the poet Shawqi said the following about dates:

The poor man's food is the rich man's desert

And the provision of the traveller and the stranger(1)

We stop here at the tremendousness of the Quranic rendition because the speech is the Lord's speech, and it is upon us to unveil the aspects of immensity therein. The scholars have noticed, may Allah reward them, that when the Quran talks about fruits, it says: ‘of palm trees and grapevines’ so the tree of the date-palm is mentioned, and the grape is mentioned, but the fruit of the date-palm, which is dates, and the tree of the grape are not mentioned.

---

(1) This verse is from a poem of Ahmad Shawqi, the 'Prince of Poets', from the Mutaqarib Metre, and the number of its verses are 21 beginning with:
I see a tree in the sky hiding itself
The cloud traversed an amazing sight.

When the scholars looked into the matter they found that Quran mentioned the date palm because it has a lot of benefits and it is always giving. Its benefit is not limited to its fruit. Indeed, what is contains is beneficial and profitable. It is enough for us to know that nothing ever falls from it but has a function and task: the trunk, the stalks, and the interior. Even the fibres can be used to make the most splendid of things. As for the grapevines, after you take its fruits nothing remains except a bunch of bent twigs that are of no benefit whatsoever.

Then Allah Glorified is He says, ‘and caused to burst forth therefrom some springs’ because the agricultural land that gives us this gift is irrigated by either rivers or rain, and if it is not supplied adequately by these two sources it is irrigated by springs; and they are the underground waters that flow in the depths of the earth, originally produced by rain water. This is as Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Do you not see that Allah sends down rain from the sky and makes it flow as springs [and rivers] in the earth.’ (az-Zumar: 21)

These springs are one of the phenomena of Allah’s Power; there are those that we look for and drill and there are those that flow by themselves, naturally, with Allah’s Power. It is as if the Lord Glorified is He is reassuring you of His Giving, so if you are in a land that does not receive rain and there is not a valley in which rivers flow then be reassured because in the depths of the earth there are springs that burst forth with fresh water suitable for drinking and irrigating land. We recently became aware of the necessity of cultivating the desert and reclaiming it, and we were assisted in this by the wells and underground water therein. All we had to do was look for them.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He explains the rationale behind causing the springs to pour forth. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘That they may eat the fruit thereof. And their hands have not produced it, so will they not be grateful?’

About His saying ‘fruit thereof’, they say that the fruits are seeds, dates, grapes and so forth, or from the fruits of causing the springs to pour forth. Some of them said: ‘The fruits should be attributed to their source, so the meaning is: from the fruits of the power that is in ‘Be!’ and what is not meant are the fruits nearby’.

It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He wants to take you out of tribulation with means, and turn your attention towards the First Causer. That is why He commands us, when water becomes scarce and the means do not help us, to seek refuge in the Causer Glorified is He by way of the drought prayer. This is because Allah Glorified is He is the final recourse in this issue. When you seek water, do not seek water by yourself but with that which is weaker than you are. If you are disobedient and ungrateful, you will seek water from the one who has not committed disobedience.

That is why, in the drought prayer, we have been commanded to take women, children and livestock, as if we are using some of them as a means to Allah and to purify them from disobedience. It is as if we are saying to our Lord: ‘O Lord! Indeed, we have disobeyed you and we do not deserve rain, so give us rain for the sake of these’.

Indeed, He commanded us in the drought prayer that we go out to Him and we do not wear our normal clothes, but rather we manifest humiliation and brokenness before Allah Glorified is He.(1)

Now, after what has happened in the development of the use of water such that we have come to receive it in reservoirs and tanks, the connection between the Giver of the water and those benefitting from it has become distant. When the water is cut off, you do not think about the drought prayer, and you are not reminded of the one who gives the water. Rather, you think about what could have caused the water to be cut off so you ask about the tanks and the motor, etc. The means themselves have made you distant from the Creator of the means.

(1) Related by Ahmad in his Musnad (2/226), Ibn Majah, (1268) in his Sunnan and Al-Bayhaqi in his Sunnan, from the Hadith of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him who said: ‘Allah’s Prophet peace and blessings be upon him went out one day for the drought prayer and he prayed two units with us without a call to prayer or call to commence the prayer. Then he addressed us and supplicated to Allah, and he turned his face towards Mecca and raised his hands. Then he turned his cloak and put the right on the left and the left on the right.’ Ibn Hajar said in Fath Al-Bari (3/499): ‘The wisdom of this turning over has been differed over.’ Al-Mahlab was certain that it was done out of optimism; that the situation would change for the better. Ibn Al-`Arabi followed him up by saying that one of the conditions of being optimistic is that you do not intend it. He said: ‘The turning over was a sign between him and his Lord. It was said to him ‘Turn over your cloak so that your situation turns for the better.’

His saying: ‘and their hands have not produced it’ takes into consideration the role of man and his action. Some fruits are made ready to eat such as peaches, oranges, and cucumbers, while other fruits need to be treated and prepared before they can be eaten. It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He is determining your role for you, giving you your right, and reminding you of your work, regardless of how easy it is.

This matter is made clear when Allah Glorified is He says, ‘And have you seen that [seed] which you sow? Is it you who makes it grow, or are We the grower?’ (al-Waqi‘a: 63-64).

The Lord Glorified is He determines your work in ploughing the earth and preparing it for cultivation. This is your role. As for bringing forth vegetation, this belongs to Allah alone and we have no say in it.

Likewise, your Lord respects your work when you bring something into existence that did not exist, and He calls you a ‘creator’ accordingly, even if this thing that you created is made from known things already in existence. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘So blessed is Allah, the best of creators.’ (al-Mu’minun: 14)

If your Lord has respected you for creating something that did not exist, then you should respect Him for being the best of creators. You are a creator and you Lord is the best of creators. You are able to treat sand, for example, and make glass from it. This is a type of creation but the glass remains as it is. It is fixed upon the state in which it was created. You cannot give this glass the attribute of life. As for what Allah creates, He gives it the attribute of life and it grows, develops, procreates and so forth.

His saying: ‘so will they not be grateful?’, comes after mentioning the previous blessings which deem it necessary that you thank Allah for them, but this is not a command here. It is as if Allah Glorified is He is saying to us: ‘Answer this. I am asking you for an answer’. But Allah Glorified is He already knows that the answer cannot possibly be other than the affirmation of gratitude for His blessings.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

سُبۡحَٰنَ ٱلَّذِى خَلَقَ ٱلۡأَزۡوَٰجَ كُلَّهَا مِمَّا تُنۢبِتُ ٱلۡأَرۡضُ
وَمِنۡ أَنفُسِهِمۡ وَمِمَّا لَا يَعۡلَمُونَ (٣٦)

Glory be to Him who created all the pairs of things that the earth produces, as well as themselves and other things they do not know about [36] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 36)

The phrase: 'Exalted is He' means absolute transcendence for the One Who exists by necessity, the Most Exalted above being governed by the laws of existence itself. That is why it is said with regards to every amazing matter, such as in the story of the Night Journey and the Ascension, for the Quran begins the story of the Night Journey with His words: 'Exalted is He who took His servant by night.' (al-Isra': 1) The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was made to travel by night from Mecca to Jerusalem. Then he was made to ascend to the seventh sky within a portion of the night, and this is considered something amazing. We should not measure this in relation to our own power, but to the power of the one doing it. This is because the action must be compared to the power of the one doing it, in terms of strength and weakness.

We clarified this matter previously when we said: 'It is as if I said I climbed to the top of Everest with my young son, for example. You would say to me: 'How can your small son climb to the top of Everest'?

The True Lord Glorified is He in His words 'Exalted is He who took His Servant by night' says in other words, 'Do not be astonished by this matter because Muhammad did not say, "I went by night" but rather, "I was taken by night", for indeed I am the one who took him by night and I am transcendent above time, place and power. If every action has its time measured in relation to the power of the one doing it, then compare the time to the doer who is the Most Exalted, and at that point you will find no time'.

That is why you find that the word 'exalted' is not said and has never been said before, except for Allah, despite the abundance of tyrants on the earth and despite there being those who claim divinity, and even the one who said: ‘I am your Lord, Most Exalted’. Despite this, it is not said except for Allah. When we remember Allah that is why we say: ‘Glory be to You’ and we do not say ‘except You’. Why? Because the meaning is absolute transcendence, and it can only be for Allah

For Allah is lory and transcendence before the existence of anyone who can make Him transcendent, for He is transcendent in His Essence before the existence of anyone who can say ‘Glory be to Allah’. This is the same as Him being a Creator before He creates and a provider before providing for anyone. Allah Glorified is He possesses the attribute before its effect appears in existence. It is similar to you saying, ‘So-and-so is a poet’. Is he a poet because he recites a wonderful poem or is he a poet before he recites it? He is a poet before he recites the poem because if he did not have the gift of poetry, he would not have said it.

The True Lord Glorified is He is glorified before He creates the creation. Then, when He created the creation all created things glorified Him, and they still glorify Him and they will continue to glorify Him. Thus, as long as the universe is in a state of glorification, you should do likewise and glorify with them: ‘Exalt the name of your Lord, the Most High.’ (al-A‘la: 1)

The absolute transcendence of the True Lord Glorified is He has three stations:

The first: That His Essence is transcendent above all essences.

The second: That His Attributes are transcendent above all attributes because you can be described with wealth, but your wealth is not like the True Lord’s wealth. You exist and Allah exists, but is your existence like His existence, etc.?

The third: That His Actions are transcendent above being compared to our actions. If it was said: ‘Allah did such and such’ beware of measuring His actions in relation to your actions. That is why we said regarding ‘Exalted is He who took His Servant by night’ that you should judge it according to the Power of the One doing it, not your own power.

When the True Lord Glorified is He brings about something, the ones who are addressed first know it. They do not close the storehouses of His bounty but rather, they leave behind some reserves for everything that is to be found afterwards, as a result of development and the coming together of pairs, for Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Exalted is He who created all pairs - from what the earth grows and from themselves and from that which they do not know.’ Allah Glorified is He says, ‘from that which they do not know.’ It is not known to those who are addressed first, but it will be made known afterwards. The most prominent Quranic verse that indicates this matter is His saying: ‘And [He created] the horses, mules and donkeys for you to ride and [as] adornment. And He creates that which you do not know.’ (an-Nahl: 8)

His saying ‘and He creates that which you do not know’ comes as a reserve for the means of transportation and communication that will come into existence afterwards such as cars, planes, rockets etc.

If you were to say: ‘Why are these things that will come into existence later presented in a general way?’ We say, ‘It is because the intellect was incapable of conceptualizing them at the time of the initial address’. It had not seen anything like this, but when this thing was brought into existence, it will be seen clearly. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says in a general way because every day He will bring us something new and other amazing things that we have never seen before, the latest of these things that we have seen is the rocket. Who knows? Maybe it w ill not be long before we see something more amazing than that. We can thus include all these things under the banner of ‘and He creates that which you do not know.’ (an-Nahl: 8)

Likewise, here in His saying ‘and from that which they do not know’ we know the opposites in ‘what the earth grows’ and we have seen this, for example, in the pollination of the date palm and other crops. We know that from amongst them are crops that are both male and female, such as the date palm and the sycamore. However, there are other crops in which we know of no male or female, and the wind pollinates these kinds by Allah’s Power, as He says: ‘And We have sent the fertilizing winds.’ (al-Hijr: 22)

In some crops, the Creator Glorified is He has made femininity and masculinity in one stalk, and it is the dominant view that this is the case with crops that are necessary for nourishment, such as corn and wheat, as these crops do not have a male stalk and a female stalk. Instead, they are in one stalk. In the corn stalk, for example, we find at the top of the stock a spike that carries the male seeds of pollination and underneath it there is the corncob from which the corn emerges that represents the crop's femininity. Then it comes into contact with the pollination seeds that have been scattered from above by the wind. That is why, if this corn does not emerge and protrude from the cob it is not producing a cob, and on the inside, it does not have any corn seeds. Why? Because it has not come into contact with the male seeds

It is amazing that you find the seeds of the corn gradually becoming bigger as you move from the upper part of the cob to the lower part because every corn is attached to one of the seeds of the cob. This corn represents the tube by which the pollen is transferred to the seed. However, the corns that descend to the lower part of the cob protrude out of it short and dispersed. Because of this they have the opportunity to come into contact with the largest amount of pollen, as opposed to corns on the top, because they are long and they accumulate together. That is why they do not get enough pollen, and thus their seeds are smaller in size such that the cob is thinner at the top and it dwindles.

All of us witness the veracity of His words 'And We have sent the fertilizing winds' when we look, for example, at the mountains, and they are desolate and dry, and then they turn green when the rain falls on them, so who puts these seeds in them?

In His saying: 'Exalted is He who created all pairs - from what the earth grows and from themselves and from that which they do not know.' The True Lord is reassuring us regarding the extent of the blessings and the extent of the one being blessed. By bringing opposites together, the type of crop remains and multiplies, and pairing is found in everything. Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: 'And in everything have We created pairs.' (adh-Dhariyat: 49)

If you look at all of existence with the eye of knowledge; examining, testing and scrutinizing, you will find that everything in existence is in pairs so that the kind can be continued. We are aware of the issue of pairing in some of these things, and in others we are not aware. As long as the pair gathers in order to multiply, then one must pollinate the other, so what tells us the appointed time for this multiplication?

It is said: 'It is that which man has no say regarding it, for Allah knows its appointed time, and He causes everything to multiply according to what is appropriate'. However, the problem for you, O man, is that if you had precise measurements, you would know that there are chemical changes in your body that require a very exact observation from you. These are the changes that indicate to you the appointed time for procreation.

Now they have invented a thermometer which a woman can use after menstruation, and she can use it to observe the temperature of her body. If it goes above 37 degrees, this means that there is a chemical change in the body. It indicates that the ovule has gone down. That is why we see that for many couples the process of giving birth is delayed, and this is because the woman does not have the means of exact observation that would allow her to know the time of ovulation that leads to the birth.

The True Lord Glorified is He mentions pairing in 'from what the earth grows and from themselves and from that which they do not know.' He did not mention animals. Why? It was because Allah Glorified is He mentioned the highest creature which is man, the speaking mammal. The others are like him, and they are subordinate to him.

The meaning of 'and from that which they do not know' is that in the universe there are many things about which we are not aware of the procedure of pairing, but we might know about them in the future with the advancement of empirical science, as is the case with electricity, for example. We knew that it was a positive and a negative, but we do not benefit from electricity unless the negative and the positive make contact. As for matching a negative with a negative or a positive with a positive, the result is the opposite. The negative and the positive here are another example of pairing, as is the case with corn and other things that have been discovered by modern science.

Therefore, the phrase 'and from that which they do not know' has meanings that have occurred, and Allah informed of them before we discovered them so that we would know that the unseen that Allah informs us of comes as a preliminary step for another unseen matter that we will know in the future. It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He is drawing our attention and saying: 'Just as the material world confirms what I have informed you of the unseen, you should confirm what I have informed you of regarding the unseen of the Hereafter'.

After the True Lord Glorified is He talks about place, which is the earth, He talks about time because the life of man is nothing but a series of events and an event needs a time and a place. Thus, after the True Lord Glorified is He tells us about the earth and what is on it, as it is the place, He tells us about time. Allah Glorified is He says:

وَءَايَةٌ لَّهُمُ ٱلَّيْلُ نَسْلَخُ مِنْهُ ٱلنَّهَارَ فَإِذَا هُم مُّظْلِمُونَ ﴿٣٧﴾

The night is also a sign for them: We strip the daylight from it, and – lo and behold! – they are in darkness [37] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 37)

His saying 'And a sign for them', means specifically for them. It is not a sign for everyone because the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him believed due to his natural disposition. He did not need a proof in order to believe. Likewise, the believer does not look for proof unless it is to refute the one who denies.

And 'is the night' is the partner of daytime because the day consists of night and daytime so it is not quite correct to say that the night and the day are opposites; because the day consists of night and daytime. Both make up a day. However, some people look at His saying 'for seven nights and eight days in succession' (al-Haqqa: 7), and designate the day to be the opposite of the night, as opposed to the daytime.

The night is darkness, and in it is a serenity that resembles the sleep that we have in the night, and sleep resembles death. The night is a pair of the daytime, but it does not oppose it or act against it as some people think. There is integration between them because each of them has a duty in life. The night allows us to rest and recuperate from the movement of the daytime so that we can start the new day with energy. The daytime is for working and striving; during it we benefit from our rest in the night.

They are acting in co-operation, not in opposition. Everything has a pair, but beware of taking it as an opponent. Rather, you should see it as something necessary that must exist. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He turns our attention towards time in this matter, as He says, 'Say, "Have you considered if Allah should make for you the night continuous until the Day of Resurrection, what deity other than Allah could bring you light? Then will you not hear?" Say, "Have you considered if Allah should make for you the day continuous until the Day of Resurrection, what deity other than Allah could bring you a night in which you may rest? Then will you not see?"' (al-Qasas: 71-72) Each of them has a duty, and neither is independent of the other. It is from the subtle rendering of the Quran that He says about the night, 'Then will you not hear?' And about the daytime, 'will you not see?' It is because the night is darkness and one must use ears to be summoned. As for the daytime, it is light and in it we see.

Therefore, it is not correct for us to regard every pair of opposites as a pair of antagonists. Integration is not contradiction. Allah Glorified is He willed, with this issue, to solve a problem that has been disputed throughout the ages and until now, and it is the problem of male and female being opposites, or man and woman. Nowadays we hear those who say that the woman is like the man. How can this be when each of them has a specific task? They are complementary, just like the night and daytime.

The True Lord Glorified is He pointed out this complementary relationship: 'By the night when it covers. And [by] the day when it appears. And [by] He who created the male and female. Indeed, your efforts are diverse.' (al-Layl: 1-4) The meaning of 'Indeed, your efforts are diverse' is that it is different, and each has a task that they carry out in life. Those who now call for equality between men and women are only oppressing women because they want women to occupy the role of men in the proceedings of life. After that, they leave women to do the tasks that only they can do. Women have taken on the duties of men but men have not taken on the duties of women. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He created opposites so that they could be complementary and not mutually opposed, so that they would support one another and not act against one another, for it is a matter carefully measured.

In His saying 'W We remove from it [the light of] day,' the Arabic equivalent to the verb 'remove' means to skin a sheep, so what is the connection between this issue and the light of the night and daytime? The original state is one of darkness, and darkness is not apparent unless there is a sudden light source. Then the light of daytime comes and covers this darkness. It is as if the daytime, when it comes to cover the darkness, is like the skin that covers the flesh of a sheep. The True Lord Glorified is He wills that for the darkness to come and remove the light just as we remove the skin from the flesh of a sheep. Therefore, the night comes naturally because it is the original state. Darkness is the absence of light. As for light, it is a furnishing, and it requires a new means. If night was to be left as it is, it would remain dark. If there was no means of lightening, it would remain as night. Therefore, light has means. As for darkness, it does not have means that act when the darkness comes. Or you can say that the matter of darkness is non-existent, while the matter of light is existent. Thus, if it is said ‘we remove from it the light of day’ then the light that covers the darkness resembles the skin that covers the flesh of a sheep. The meaning is that we remove the cover of light that covers the day, and thus the darkness is released, i.e. it is manifested naturally and of its own accord. Then Allah Glorified is He says:

وَٱلشَّمۡسُ تَجۡرِي لِمُسۡتَقَرّٖ لَّهَاۚ ذَٰلِكَ تَقۡدِيرُ ٱلۡعَزِيزِ ٱلۡعَلِيمِ ٣٨

The sun, too, runs its determined course laid down for it by the Almighty, the All Knowing [38]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 38)

The sun is the means of light that We remove from the night. The one who tracks the movement of the sun will find that it has a general place where it appears, the east; and this general place is divided into several places based on the number of days in a year. The places where the sun appears differ. That is why we have seen that the ancient Egyptians, in their temples, realized this cosmic reality and they calculated it exactly. They put 365 windows in their temple and the sun would rise from one of them every day, in order, until it reached the last of them at the end of the year.

Man, already knew that the sun has a group of celestial bodies that orbit around it, and he called it the solar system, which is comprised of seven planets: Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, and Uranus. These seven have duped some scholars, such as Sheikh Al-Maraghi and Sheikh Muhammad `Abdu into saying that they are the seven skies. However, scientists discovered other planets such as Neptune and Pluto. The solar system came to be comprised of nine planets, all of them in the lowest sky, so there is no connection between them and the seven skies. Nonetheless the two sheikhs tried to make religious matters easier to understand.

Each of these planets in the solar system rotates on its own and orbits around the sun. By rotating on their own, the day comes into existence, and the year comes into existence by their orbiting around the sun. The two cycles are different in terms of speed. If a planet's rotation by itself was faster than its orbiting around the sun, its day would be longer than its year.

That is why one of the puzzling things in geography is: what is the longest day of the year? A day on Venus is longer than its year because when they calculated the movement of Venus in relation to a day on Earth, they found that a year on Venus is equivalent to 225 days on earth and a day on Venus is equivalent to 244 days on earth. This is because it rotates by itself at a speed that is greater than the speed at which it orbits around the sun.

The meaning of 'And the sun runs [on course] toward its stopping point' is the sun with its system, and the planets that orbit around it run to a star that the astronomers call Vega and the Arabs call it the (Eagle). The sun runs with its system at a speed of 12 miles per second. The sun moves and the planets that revolve around it moves. This is similar to a man riding some vessel. How do we calculate his movement and his speed?

If he is stationary, then his speed equals the speed of the vessel. If he is going in the same direction as the vessel then his speed equals his own speed plus the speed of the vessel. If he is moving in the opposite direction of the vessel, then his speed is equal to the speed of the vessel minus his own speed.

The meaning of 'toward its stopping point' is that an orbit can either be at the end of the year followed by the beginning of a new year, and it rises from it first place of appearance, or the orbit is the last part of its life and its end, when it is finished and it rolls up into a ball and expires. But what is it that moves this solar system? How does it run at this speed? We know that movement requires a force that fuels it, so what is this force that moves this system in this way and this persistence?

They said: 'It runs because Allah created it in a state of motion and flux. That is why it runs and nothing stops it, and it will continue running for as long as Allah wills'. Therefore, He does not attach any force to it that moves it, and an example of this is His saying: 'Indeed, Allah holds the heavens and the earth, lest they cease. And if they should cease, no one could hold them [in place] after Him.' (Fatir: 41)

In the science of motion, there is a law called the law of inertia, and it states that every moving object continues to move until something stops it, and every stationary object remains stationary until something moves it. This law explains for us the movement of satellites and spaceships that remain moving for long periods of time.

We ask one another: What is the interval of time that moves them for the duration of this period? It is moving because it was placed in its domain in a state of motion. It remains moving, and nothing stops it because it is outside the range of gravity. Therefore, all that these tools need in terms of power is rocket power that can take it beyond the earth's gravitational pull. As for the satellites and spaceships, they keep revolving without any force and without any fuel.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He reminds us of His Grace represented by this motion; He says, '(And) that' (Ya Sin: 38), i.e. the previously mentioned movement of the night and the daytime and the running of the sun; this '…is laid down by the will of the Almighty, the All Knowing' (Ya Sin: 38); that is all of this running and all of this motion have been laid down by the Will of Allah. 'The Almighty' here is completely appropriate because the meaning is that the Almighty is the One Who is not subject to laws, because Allah Glorified is He is the creator of laws.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

وَٱلْقَمَرَ قَدَّرْنَٰهُ مَنَازِلَ حَتَّىٰ عَادَ كَٱلْعُرْجُونِ ٱلْقَدِيمِ ﴿٣٩﴾

We have determined phases for the moon until finally it becomes like an old date-stalk [39]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 39)

After the True Lord Glorified is He talks about the sun, which is the instrument of illumination; He talks about the moon because it has a task that it carries out when the sun is absent. It is as if the moon has borrowed some of the sun’s light in order to lighten up the night for those who only work at night, such as patrol officers[1], security guards, bakery workers, etc. The moon, as you know, is not illuminated by itself, but rather, it reflects some of the sun’s illumination. Thus, its illumination comes calmly, and that is why it is called the mild illumination; it does not send any rays or any heat.

That is why, when the True Lord Glorified is He enumerates some of His blessings and favours, He says, ‘and among His wonders is your sleep, at night or in daytime, as well as your (ability to go about in) quest of some of His bounties…’ (ar-Rum: 23).

If sleep was restricted to the night, then what would people, who have to work at night and rest and sleep in the daytime, do? Thus, this verse is an example of the Quran’s precise style; it states that the night is the normal time for sleep and rest for most people, there is nothing preventing a minority, who work at night, from sleeping during the daytime.

The meaning of ‘...for which We have determined phases (which it must traverse)…’ (Ya Sin: 39) is that we have determined the moon’s trajectory in phases and distances. We witness these phases every month in the movement of the moon: the first lunar quarter, the second lunar quarter, and then a full moon. The moon is faster than the sun because it completes its orbit in a month while the sun completes its orbit in a year.

You may reflect on the Quran’s precise performance that is based on high-level engineering in Allah’s words: ‘...till it becomes like an old date-stalk, dried-up and curved’ (Ya Sin: 39). This is a clarifying image of the moon’s phases taken from the Arab environment. The ‘date-stalk’ is the translation for the Arabic word `arjun which is the cluster of the date palm that carries the fruits, and we call it subata. It is made from a number of thin stalks. However, its base, where it is attached to the trunk of the date palm, is broad and flattened. This cluster dries and becomes lean whenever it loses its green colour and it bends and tightens whenever its moisture dries up. This image perfectly explains the movement of the moon when it becomes lean and narrow until finally it disappears at the end of the month.

(1) Al-`Asas is the plural of `as which is the subject of the verb `asa (past) and ya`assu (present) which means to make the rounds at night in order to protect the people. See Az-Zabidi in Taj Al-`Arus under the entry on `asasa.

Here, the Quran compares the moon to an old date stalk. Some Arabs compare it to a nail clipping, such as an Arab poet who went out to observe the illumination of the moon until it disappeared and he creeped to his beloved:

> The light of the moon disappeared and I was watching it
> Like nail clippings that had been cut off(1)

It is appropriate to compare the high moon that we cannot fully perceive to something low that we can totally conceive; so we can say: ‘that is like this’ in order to make things clear.

Then, Allah Glorified is He gathers the sun with the moon, and the night with the daytime:

لَا ٱلشَّمۡسُ يَنۢبَغِي لَهَآ أَن تُدۡرِكَ ٱلۡقَمَرَ وَلَا ٱلَّيۡلُ
سَابِقُ ٱلنَّهَارِۚ وَكُلّٞ فِي فَلَكٖ يَسۡبَحُونَ ٤٠

The sun cannot overtake the moon, nor can the night outrun the day: each floats in [its own] orbit [40] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 40)

It cannot be said that someone does not overtake another unless the latter is preceding the former. Likewise, the sun does not overtake the moon because, as we said before, the moon is faster than the sun because the former completes its orbit in a month while the latter completes its orbit in a year.

Likewise, ‘...nor can the night usurp the time of day…’ (Ya Sin: 40); the night and the daytime represent the time resulting from the movement of the sun and the moon. The daytime is the son of the sun, while the night is the son of the moon. In this verse, there are two negations; the negation that the sun overtakes and precedes the moon, and the negation that the night precedes the daytime. If the sun is not overtaking the moon, this does not mean that the night, the son of the moon, precedes the daytime, the son of the sun.

(1) Mentioned by Ibn `Abd Al-Mun`im Al-Humairi in Ar-Rawd Al-Mi`tar Fi Khabar Al-Aqtar in Ad-Diyarat Fi Wasf Diyar `Abdun, and he attributed it to Ibn Al-Mu`taz from a poem that begins with:
The peninsula of trees and shade has been irrigated
And in the home of `Abdun it is pouring down with rain
Its wording is ‘the light of the crescent disappeared’ not ‘the light of the moon disappeared’ and the verse is from the Basit metre.

Therefore, you should not say that the night comes before the daytime because these cosmic signs are intended by the True Lord Glorified is He; when He talks about a matter that intellects cannot grasp, He uses imagery so that a rational person, who can think, study, examine and analyse styles, will grasp Allah's objective therein. The others who lack this capability pass by these matters and do not grasp any of it.

Regarding this cosmic matter, we say that, indeed, it is true that the moon precedes the sun, but the night does not precede the daytime. Consider how the style addresses this issue when Allah says: '...nor can the night usurp the time of day…' (Ya Sin: 40); Allah Glorified is He is not saying this unless there is someone who believes that the night usurps the day. Thus, He wanted to correct this belief of theirs and negated the possibility of the night usurping the daytime. This means that there is a precedent cause which is that the day does not usurp the night.

Thus, the conclusion is that the night does not usurp the daytime and the daytime does not usurp the night; that is the issue that they affirmed, Allah wanted to negate, and the issue that they negated, He kept it as it was.

But how did this understanding come to them? They said: they thought that the night preceded the daytime, because the day is affirmed by the night and not by the daytime. For example, in fasting the days of the month of Ramadan, the beginning of the day is affirmed by seeing the crescent of the month which is confirmed by sight at night. Since this was the case, they thought the night preceded the day. Therefore, they have a matter that is decided, which is that the day does not precede the night. This is not objected to by the Quran, which leaves it as it is. As for the matter that contradicts the cosmic sign, it is corrected for them: '...nor can the night usurp the time of day…' (Ya Sin: 40).

Then, we are facing a conundrum which says: 'The night does not precede the daytime and the daytime does not precede the night'. How? They said: 'If Allah had created the earth flat and facing the sun, then daytime would have been first. Then, the sun would disappear and night would fall. On the other hand, had the earth been facing away from the sun, then night would have been first followed by the daytime'. However, the reality is that Allah Glorified is He created the earth in a spherical shape; thus, the night does not precede the daytime nor does the daytime precede the night because they were brought into existence together at the same moment. This is because the earth is round. The side that faces the sun experiences daytime, and when it turns away from the sun night falls. Thus, this verse has solved for us the long-disputed problem, which is the spherical nature of the earth.

His saying '...since all of them float through space (in accordance with Our laws).' (Ya Sin: 40) Yasbahun (Floating) is from the verb sabah (to swim), which is to cut a distance over smooth water, and it is a streamlined movement therein, not like the movement of feet on the ground. This is a similitude for the movement of orbits. This swimming movement is broken down into portions of time.

We do not have scales by which we can measure this movement. We only know it in terms of the sum of time along with the sum of movement. For example, if you had a child and you sat with him in order to observe and watch his growth, you would not notice this growth. A child never grows directly in the eyes of his father. Why? It is because the growth does not happen in one leap that would allow for it to be noticed. Rather, the growth is distributed over time. However, if you were absent from your child for several months or years, you would notice his growth upon returning and seeing him. This is because you are seeing the sum of growth that took place while you were away from him.

Thus, the meaning of '...since all of them float through space (in accordance with Our laws).' (Ya Sin: 40) is that they travel in a streamlined successive fashion that is distributed over time.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَءَايَةٌ لَّهُمْ أَنَّا حَمَلْنَا ذُرِّيَّتَهُمْ فِى ٱلْفُلْكِ ٱلْمَشْحُونِ ﴿٤١﴾ وَخَلَقْنَا لَهُم مِّن مِّثْلِهِۦ مَا يَرْكَبُونَ ﴿٤٢﴾
وَإِن نَّشَأْ نُغْرِقْهُمْ فَلَا صَرِيخَ لَهُمْ وَلَا هُمْ يُنقَذُونَ ﴿٤٣﴾ إِلَّا رَحْمَةً مِّنَّا وَمَتَٰعًا إِلَىٰ حِينٍ ﴿٤٤﴾

Another sign for them is that We carried their seed in the laden Ark, [41] and We have made similar things for them to ride in. [42] If We wished, We could drown them, and there would be no one to help them: they could not be saved. [43] Only by Our mercy could they be reprieved to enjoy life for a while [44] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 41- 44)

His saying 'and (it ought to be) a sign for them…' means it is a sign for us and for them. It is a sign for us to use it as proof to convince them. On the other hand, it is a sign calling them to believe in Allah. That is why `Ali Allah be pleased with him when he was asked 'Do you know your Lord by Muhammad or Muhammad by you Lord?' he said: 'I know my Lord by my Lord, and Muhammad has come to inform me of what my Lord wants from me.'(1)

The meaning of '... laden ships.' (Ya Sin: 41) is the ark of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him. Allah revealed to Nuh (Noah) that he should build the ark and showed him how he should build it. Allah Glorified is He says, 'Thereupon We inspired him thus: "Build, under Our eyes and according to Our inspiration..."' (al-Mu'minun: 27).

Ships themselves are signs of Allah because if Allah Glorified is He had not revealed to Nuh (Noah) to build the ark, how could we travel by water which is a majority of the earth's surface? This is a sign that Allah brought about on the hand of Nuh (Noah) so that all of mankind would know how to build ships. Then, afterwards, intelligent people can develop them and enhance their construction, as we see nowadays with these ocean liners that are the latest of their kind. Sails were replaced with steam and electrical equipment, and iron and metal replaced wood and nails, and so forth.

Despite this development, and after dispensing with wind power for the propulsion of ships, ships still travel in the Name of Allah and by His Power, even if steam or electricity is used. This is because ‘wind’ does not just mean the air that propels the ships but rather ‘wind’ refers to power, in whatever form it is. That is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...and do not (allow yourselves to) be at variance with one another, lest you lose heart and your moral strength desert you...’ (al-Anfal: 46).

(1) The story of the man who asked `Ali: 'Did you recognize Muhammad through your Lord or did you recognize your Lord through Muhammad?'

As well, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘If He so wills, He stills the wind, and then they lie motionless on the sea’s surface ...’ (ash-Shura: 33).

There is something worth noting in the words: ‘...We bear their offspring (over the seas) in laden ships’ (Ya Sin: 41); the verse is talking about the Arabs whom the Quran is primarily addressing. The ones who were carried in the ship are their fathers, not their offspring. How can this be?

The Quran says ‘...We bear their offspring…’ meaning their fathers because the word dhuriyyah (offspring) can also mean the father because the children (dharari; plural of dhuriyyah) come from him. Or it is because those who were saved in the ship are the original source for those who are present and being addressed by the Quran. They were enclosed within their ancestors.

That is why we said previously that each of us, right up to the time that we are in now, contains a living part of our father Adam peace be upon him that has never died. If you traced my ancestors and traced my lineage you would say that I am from a living chromosome that came from my father, and my father was from a living chromosome that came from his father, and so forth until our father Adam. If this chromosome had been dead I would not have been here.

Therefore, within each of us is an original genetic particle from our father Adam peace be upon him that has never changed, and it is this particle that carries the natural disposition towards faith in every person.

The True Lord Glorified is He describes the ship as being laden, meaning full, because Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him did not only take aboard the believers in order to rescue them from drowning, but also to provide them with means of livelihood after being rescued. Otherwise, how could mankind live on earth with nothing else: no plants, no animals, and no birds?

That is why Allah Glorified is He addresses Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him saying: ‘...Place on board of this (ark) one pair of each (kind of animal) of either sex...' (Hud: 40), 'and (that) We create for them things of a similar kind, on which they may embark (in their travels)' (Ya Sin: 42).

People took the ark as a model, and they built others like it and developed its construction. They have produced ships, vessels, boats and other things with which they can embark on the sea. Or the meaning is that we created for them vehicles or other creatures which resembled ships so that they could ride on land and in the deserts. For example, the camel is called the ship of the desert.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He warns us against being deluded by these vessels on the basis that they are a means of rescue. If Allah Glorified is He wants to destroy something, He does. How many times have we seen ocean liners equipped with all the means of safety and protection, swallowed by the waves along with all those on board?

Allah Glorified is He speaks the truth in His saying: 'and (that,) if such be Our will, We may cause them to drown, with none to respond to their cry for help: and (then) they cannot be saved' (Ya Sin: 43). So, beware when you are given a blessing that saves you from destruction, that this blessing deludes you into thinking that you are safe and secure; you will never escape from Allah's Grasp. No one will save you and nothing will protect you, if He wills destruction for you. Do you hold something in your hand that will save you when a storm blows, or when a wave towers over your ship like a mountain? Therefore, your tools and your means will not save you from My power.

With '...none to respond to their cry for help…' (Ya Sin: 43), they will find none to save them when they cry out, looking for someone to help and get them out of whatever predicament they are in. A wonderful remark of faith that the people with illumination said is: 'Man cries out and seeks help from the one who is closest to him, like his father, his mother, his servant, his neighbour etc. If he does not find any of these people he says "O Allah!" That is why we hear some of them saying, when in a critical situation: "YHWH!" which means "O He!" (O Allah!) This is because there is no one else who can save or rescue but Allah'.

One of the subjects that include the theme of crying out is Allah's words regarding Satan: '...It is not for me to respond to your cries, nor for you to respond to mine...' (Ibrahim: 22); the 'responder to your cries' is the translation of the Arabic word musrikh which is the one who puts an end to the crying out, which means that he helps you and relieves you of your distress.

Allah's saying, '...and (then) they cannot be saved' (Ya Sin: 43) means that that they are denied someone who will hear their call. They are also denied someone who will voluntarily rescue them. This is a cutting off of any hope that they will be saved. If Allah wills destruction, then there is absolutely no way for them to be saved, unless it is by Allah's permission and Mercy.

Allah says in the following verse: 'unless it be by an act of mercy from Us…' (Ya Sin: 44), i.e. an act of mercy that saves from drowning; the meaning of '…and a grant of life for a (further span of) time' (Ya Sin: 44) is that this saving is not a contract of permanent security and perpetual existence. This saving is only a grant of life until an appointed time, at which point death will come to you. You are, thus, saved from the fate of death so that the fate of death can come again, and there is no escaping it.

This is similar to what Fakhr Ar-Razi said in his poem:

If we were to die and find rest

Then death would be a comfort for every living thing

But when we die and we are resurrected

We will be asked afterwards about everything (1)

The word 'time' means a period of time according to what it is being compared. For example, in the verse: 'Extol, then, Allah's Limitless Glory when you enter upon the evening hours, and when you rise at Morn' (ar-Rum: 17); Heen (when) means a day and a night. In the verse: '...yielding its fruit at all times...' (Ibrahim: 25), hin (at all times) means a year. And in the verse: 'Has there not been over Man a long period of time, when he was nothing - (not even) mentioned' (al-Ma'arij: 1), it means a defined amount of time.

Then the True Lord Glorified is He says:

---

(1) These two verses are from `Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him from the Wafir metre, with a slight difference: 'find rest' (istarahna) is replaced with 'are left alone' (turikna). Al-Mubarrad has mentioned both in his Al-Fadil Fi Al-Lugha Wal Adab, in the chapter on the virtue of poetry.

وَإِذَا قِيلَ لَهُمُ ٱتَّقُواْ مَا بَيۡنَ أَيۡدِيكُمۡ وَمَا خَلۡفَكُمۡ لَعَلَّكُمۡ تُرۡحَمُونَ ﴿٤٥﴾

Yet when they are told, ‘Beware of what lies before and behind you, so that you may be given mercy’ [45] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 45)

You know that idha (when) is a conditional particle that indicates realization, while inna (if) indicates doubt. The meaning of ‘they are’ is the disbelievers, and then the verb ‘told’ is in the passive form to indicate generality; as if it is an obligation upon every believer to say, to advise and to take others by the hand onto Allah’s way.

The True Lord Glorified is He addresses the believers in this verse: ‘O My slaves! O you who have believed in Me and believed in My Messenger! Do not assume that I am pleased with you just because you have believed in Me and believed in My Messenger. Rather, I love to see you spare no effort in trying to rescue My creation from My anger towards them, when they persist in disbelief and remain in that state’.

This is a type of expectation that the believers will take the disbelievers by the hand and rescue them from the causes of Allah’s anger towards them. This meaning is included within the words of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him: ‘No one of you truly believes until he loves for his brother what he loves for himself.’(1)

The meaning of ‘...all that lies open before you…’ (Ya Sin: 45) is that which is in front of you, and that which awaits you, such as the resurrection, the gathering, the questioning and the reckoning and then the fire. And ‘…all that is hidden from you…’ (Ya Sin: 45) means those who came before you and were also deniers; what was the result of their disbelief? ‘...so that you might be graced with His Mercy…’ (Ya Sin: 45), i.e. is hoping that Allah may have mercy on you.

Therefore, every believer should be concerned with paving the way for the disbeliever to be shown mercy and to exert effort in trying to rescue him, and to show him compassion. He should not adopt a position of hostility and enmity towards them, which is of no benefit whatsoever.

---

(1) `Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (13) and Muslim in his Sahih (45) in the Book of Faith from Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him with the wording: ‘By the One in whose hand in my soul, no slave truly believes until he loves for his neighbour (or he said, ‘for his brother’) what he loves for himself.’

وَمَا تَأۡتِيهِم مِّنۡ ءَايَةٖ مِّنۡ ءَايَٰتِ رَبِّهِمۡ إِلَّا كَانُواْ عَنۡهَا مُعۡرِضِينَ ﴿٤٦﴾

They ignore every single sign that comes to them from their Lord [46] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 46)

This is the very dispute and stubborn rejection because the signs are clearly in front of them. They are turning away from them and abandoning consideration of them. This is because those who disbelieve in Allah, deny His messengers, and reject Allah’s way that has come to maintain soundness of His vicegerent on Earth, are the ones who benefit from corruption; they benefit from rejecting Allah’s way, so it is only natural that they see in every messenger and in every rectifier, someone who has come to cut off their provision, to ruin their lives and to confront them and get in their face.

This verse is explained by what Allah says in another verse: ‘and in their wickedness and self-exaltation they rejected them, although their minds were convinced of their truth...’ (an-Naml: 14).

One may argue that if you are keen to get these disbelievers to have mercy from Allah, why do not you keep presenting new signs to them until they believe, and then Allah will show them mercy? We say: ‘Whatever signs you bring, the result will be what the Quran has confirmed in the verse: “and no message of their Sustainer’s messages ever reaches them without their turning away from it.” (Ya Sin: 46)

وَإِذَا قِيلَ لَهُمۡ أَنفِقُواْ مِمَّا رَزَقَكُمُ ٱللَّهُ قَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ لِلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓاْ
أَنُطۡعِمُ مَن لَّوۡ يَشَآءُ ٱللَّهُ أَطۡعَمَهُۥٓ إِنۡ أَنتُمۡ إِلَّا فِي ضَلَٰلٖ مُّبِينٖ ﴿٤٧﴾

And when they are told, ‘Give to others out of what God has provided for you,’ the disbelievers say to the believers, ‘Why should we feed those that God could feed if He wanted? You must be deeply misguided’ [47] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 47)

This is another aspect of their stubborn rejection and turning truth into lie. When a sincere advisor says to them: ‘...spend on others out of what Allah has provided for you as sustenance…’, i.e. from that which has Allah bestowed you and made you the owner of it and it was not yours; their response is: '…Shall we feed anyone whom, if (your) Allah had so willed, He could have fed (Himself)…?' This is how the disbeliever inverts the reality into falsehood and vaunts it.

'…Shall we feed anyone whom, if (your) Allah had so willed, He could have fed (Himself)…?' (Ya Sin: 47) means: 'We are not miserly. In fact, we love to spend on others and carry out Allah's orders, and He wants to withhold sustenance from these people. Then, how can we give them sustenance ourselves? If we spent on them we would be opposing and resisting the rulings of Allah; if He wants, He can feed them'.

Their stubborn opposition did not stop at this point, but rather, they persisted in their vaunt and accused the believers of being lost in error 'Clearly, you', meaning you are not '…but lost in error!' How strange these people are! They accuse the believers of opposing Allah's order by feeding those whom Allah has deprived from enough sustenance and, thus, committing an outrage against Him.

Indeed, the True Lord Glorified is He is the Lord of all, and He gives sustenance to all. He feeds us and quenches our thirst. However, Allah Glorified is He wants to see the compassion of His servants towards one another to facilitate their progression through life without hatred and without rancour. When the poor receive some goodness from the rich, the former will not despise or envy the latter envy him. Rather, the poor will hope for the blessing of the rich to perpetuate. The states of wealth and poverty are accidental; they come and go, and reality bears witness to this fact.

وَيَقُولُونَ مَتَىٰ هَٰذَا ٱلْوَعْدُ إِن كُنتُمْ صَٰدِقِينَ ﴿٤٨﴾ مَا يَنظُرُونَ إِلَّا صَيْحَةً وَٰحِدَةً تَأْخُذُهُمْ
وَهُمْ يَخِصِّمُونَ ﴿٤٩﴾ فَلَا يَسْتَطِيعُونَ تَوْصِيَةً وَلَآ إِلَىٰٓ أَهْلِهِمْ يَرْجِعُونَ ﴿٥٠﴾

And they say, 'When will this promise be fulfilled, if what you say is true?' [48] But all they are waiting for is a single blast that will overtake them while they are still arguing with each other [49] They will have no time to make bequests, nor will they have the chance to return to their own people [50] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 48 - 50)

Their asking: 'When is this promise?' refers to the promise of the Hereafter; the word wa`d (promise) indicates glad tidings, as opposed to the word wa`eed which is a warning against evil. It is amazing that they are denying the promise, while it is for their benefit, and their prosperity lies in the wa`d and not in the wa`eed.

This questioning of theirs is actually a denial that there will be no Hereafter, reckoning or reward. The sane one among them acknowledges the Hereafter but says like the owner of the garden who said: ‘And neither do I think that the Last Hour will ever come. But even if (it should come, and) I am brought before my Sustainer, I will surely find something even better than this as (my last) resort!’ (al-Kahf: 36) If ‘…you are men of truth!’ (Ya Sin: 48) in claiming that there is a resurrection and a reckoning, it is clear that their denial of the Resurrection bears connotations of challenge, stubbornness, and a hastening of the Resurrection. It is as though they are saying: 'Where is the Resurrection that you are talking about? Bring it about now if you are speaking the truth’. Moreover, they keep on this argument until the Resurrection descends upon them suddenly.

‘And they are unaware that nothing awaits them beyond a single blast (of Allah’s punishment), which will overtake them while they are still arguing (against resurrection)’ (Ya Sin: 49); that is the Resurrection may strike them suddenly while they are having this argument. What could prevent such a thing since it is no more than a single blast from Allah that would overtake them and annihilate all of them?

This is an admonition for the heedless people who are heedless of the Resurrection, the Gathering, and the Reckoning. They are so preoccupied by this worldly life, with its trade, cultivation and its daily problems, such that they wasted their lives in taking and returning, arguing and debating until the Resurrection descends upon them suddenly. A poet said: ‘You should not argue about something that was in your hand, and then someone else took it from you.’

My soul that owns things is fleeting
So how can I grieve over something that is fleeting?

The meaning of ‘...which will overtake them while they are still arguing (against resurrection)’ (Ya Sin: 49) is that it will take them by surprise while they are arguing and debating. The meaning of ‘arguing’ is quarrelling; the word in Arabic yakhissimun is in a format used for the purpose of hyperbole. ‘Overtaking’ indicates severity as in the other verse saying: ‘…as only the Almighty, who determines all things, can take to task.’ (al-Qamar: 42)

Allah’s saying: ‘and so (sudden will be their end that) no testament will they be able to make…’ (Ya Sin: 50) means that the blast and the Resurrection will take them so suddenly that they will not be able to make their own testament. A wasiya (testament or will) is well known; it is when a person advises his wife and his children regarding what is important in their lives. For example, the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him when he was on his farewell pilgrimage and felt he was close to death, made his testament to the Muslims in his comprehensive sermon about the core of the religion and its foundation. Likewise, whoever is approaching their death and they sense their demise should advise their beloved ones regarding important matters.

Thus, these people, in this position, are not granted any time to advise one another ‘...nor to their own people will they return!’ (Ya Sin: 50) They will not even be able to do this. Therefore, no one should find that they have to wait a long time for the resurrection because it comes suddenly. That is why Allah has hidden it. The date of resurrection is only known to Allah alone. It is in order that man constantly remembers it, and waits for it at every moment. The Resurrection in relation to man does not necessarily mean the Hereafter, but rather, it is when he dies that the Resurrection has been established in his regard. Once dead, man cannot take any action, repent or redress.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَنُفِخَ فِي ٱلصُّورِ فَإِذَا هُم مِّنَ ٱلْأَجْدَاثِ إِلَىٰ رَبِّهِمْ يَنسِلُونَ ﴿٥١﴾
قَالُوا۟ يَٰوَيْلَنَا مَنۢ بَعَثَنَا مِن مَّرْقَدِنَا ۜ ۗ هَٰذَا مَا وَعَدَ ٱلرَّحْمَٰنُ وَصَدَقَ ٱلْمُرْسَلُونَ ﴿٥٢﴾
إِن كَانَتْ إِلَّا صَيْحَةً وَٰحِدَةً فَإِذَا هُمْ جَمِيعٌ لَّدَيْنَا مُحْضَرُونَ ﴿٥٣﴾

The Trumpet will be sounded and – lo and behold! – they will rush out to their Lord from their graves [51] They will say, ‘Alas for us! Who has resurrected us from our resting places?’ [They will be told], ‘This is what the Lord of Mercy promised, and the messengers told the truth.’[52] It was just one single blast and then – lo and behold! – they were all brought before Us [53] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 51 - 53)

The words: ‘And (then) the trumpet (of resurrection) will be blown…’ refer to the horn that the angel Israfil will blow into; this is the blow of resurrection.

It is preceded by the blow of thunder (sa`q) that will kill them and subdue them. That is why Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: '…And then it will sound again – and lo! Standing (before the Seat of Judgment), they will begin to see (the truth)!' (az-Zumar: 68)

If you said that it is one blow, then how can the first one kill and the second one revive? We say that the blow in the horn is nothing other than a sign of the event. As for the actual doer, it is Allah Glorified is He. He is the One Who kills with the first and revives with the second.

The meaning of '... out of their graves towards their Sustainer will they all rush forth!' (Ya Sin: 51) is that they will hurry. 'Rush forth' is the translation of the Arabic word yansilun which originally means the unravelling of threads from one another. We say that a garment unravels, which means that its threads come out of place from the weft or the couch. That is why we say to a tailor: 'Kaffif (Hem) the garment', i.e. prevent unravelling by holding the threads together, and thus they do not slip away.

Thus, when they come out of the graves and see the reality that they frequently denied, they will say: '...Oh, woe unto us! Who has roused us from our sleep (of death) …?' (Ya Sin: 52) They are the ones speaking and declaring that they themselves are ruined and destroyed. No one is saying to them: 'Woe unto you!' Rather they are saying it about themselves. It is an expression of grief over what has escaped them. The meaning is: 'Woe unto us! Come! This is your time because the matter is beyond our capacity. We cannot avoid it'. When man suddenly discovers his misjudgement, he turns on himself with reproach, or even he disciplines and punishes himself.

It is amazing that they are now saying: '...Who has roused us from our sleep (of death) …?' because they are acknowledging that death was only a period of sleep; after sleep one must wake up. At that point, Allah responds to them: 'This', i.e. what you are seeing of the Resurrection, '...is what the Most Gracious has promised! And His message-bearers spoke the truth!' (Ya Sin: 52) It is also valid that the demonstrative 'This' refers to '…our sleep of death)…' in '…Who has roused us from our sleep of death?' (Ya Sin: 52)

The True Lord Glorified is He has advised that He will gather mankind on a day in which there is no doubt, and whoever has escaped the punishments of the life of this world and the agony of the life that they live, then he will have a punishment that is more severe. This is because those who first preached Islam in the very beginning were persecuted and harmed, some of them died in the course of their persecution before seeing the victory of Islam and the triumph of the Muslims, and before seeing Allah take revenge from His enemies. Then, Allah must show these believers the final outcome of the disbelievers and the punishment that befalls them.

There is a wa`d (promise) here even though it is an admonition of a calamity that is awaiting the disbelievers; but in relation to them, it is called a wa`d (promise) and not a wa`eed (threat). Why? Because being warned about a calamity before it happens is a great blessing, as in the saying of Allah in the chapter of ar-Rahman: ‘A flash of fire will be let loose upon you, and smoke, and you will be left without succour! Which, then, of your Sustainer’s powers can you disavow?’ (ar-Rahman: 35-36)

Allah the Exalted made the fire and the flames to be from amongst Allah’s blessings because with them, He causes people to have fear, and He warns them about the hell fire. He did not punish them with fire all of a sudden while they were healthy, hearing and seeing and able to return to Allah and repent to Him. They are in the time of respite and making amends; just as you would warn and threaten your child about failing if they neglect their studies. Thus, the threat here is the very blessing, and that is why it is called wa`d (promise) and not a wa`eed (threat).

The meaning of ‘...And His message-bearers spoke the truth!’ (Ya Sin: 52) is that they conveyed it from Allah. ‘Nothing will there have been…’ (Ya Sin: 52), i.e. the blow was nothing ‘but one single blast’ and it will not be repeated because it is human acts that are repeated. If an action is repeated, it means that when it was done for the first time it was insufficient and did not fulfil its objective, but here the doer is Allah Glorified is He.

‘Nothing will there have been but one single blast – and lo! Before Us will all of them be arraigned (and be told)’ (Ya Sin: 53). The tone of this verse expresses the suddenness; once the blast takes place, they will all be arraigned despite them and without having a choice. The word muhdar (arraigned) is the passive participle from the verb ahdara (brought, arraigned) which means to be forced to be present and appear before Allah to be reckoned.

In the previous verse ‘and (that) all of them, all together, will (in the end) before Us be arraigned?’ (Ya Sin: 32), the word kull (all) is added to indicate the generality of individuals. The generality of individuals could be in succession, one group following another; but here all the groups are gathered at the same time so that those who are the followers in this life will see those who are the leaders, and the misguided can see the one who misguided them, etc. That is why the day of judgement is called ‘al-fadeeha’ (the disclosing).

فَٱلْيَوْمَ لَا تُظْلَمُ نَفْسٌ شَيْـًٔا وَلَا تُجْزَوْنَ إِلَّا مَا كُنتُمْ تَعْمَلُونَ ﴿٥٤﴾

Today, no soul will be wronged in the least: you will only be repaid for your deeds [54]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 54)

It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He is assuaging the people of faith and righteous action, meaning: do not be scared of the horror of the Resurrection because We do not oppress anyone, and reward from Us is in accordance with action. And ‘…nor shall you be requited for aught but what you were doing (on earth).’ (Ya Sin: 54) This verse is reassurance for those who do righteousness and it instils fear in those who do evil.

‘Today’ is the Day of Resurrection, and the scales on that day will be in the hand of the True Lord Glorified is He. This means that if you were in the life of this world, and the strong was oppressing the weak and you did not establish the scales with justice, then the scale on the Day of Resurrection will be a just scale; no one will be oppressed. This is because the one who will establish the scale is the True Lord Glorified is He: ‘...With whom will sovereignty rest on that Day? With Allah, the One who holds absolute sway over all that exists!’ (Ghafir: 16).

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He tells us about the reward for the people of Paradise. He says:

إِنَّ أَصۡحَٰبَ ٱلۡجَنَّةِ ٱلۡيَوۡمَ فِي شُغُلٖ فَٰكِهُونَ ٥٥ هُمۡ وَأَزۡوَٰجُهُمۡ فِي ظِلَٰلٍ عَلَى ٱلۡأَرَآئِكِ
مُتَّكِـُٔونَ ٥٦ لَهُمۡ فِيهَا فَٰكِهَةٞ وَلَهُم مَّا يَدَّعُونَ ٥٧ سَلَٰمٞ قَوۡلٗا مِّن رَّبّٖ رَّحِيمٖ ٥٨

The people of Paradise today are happily occupied [55] they and their spouses – seated on couches in the shade [56] There they have fruit and whatever they ask for[57] "Peace," a word from the Lord of Mercy [58] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 55 - 58)

In the verse 'Behold, those who are destined for paradise…': the phrase 'those who are destined' is the translation of the Arabic word sahib which here means the one who you select and choose from amongst your species to accompany you and not to separate from you. It is as if paradise was personified and became a person who accompany other people and are accompanied by them. This is because paradise was in their thoughts and minds, and they were attached to it and preoccupied with it. Thus, they will have the companionship of paradise, and paradise will have their companionship. Whenever they set out to do goodness they remember paradise and they desire it, and whenever they set out to do evil they remember the fire and they flee from it. The other meaning of sahib is the owner of something, as if paradise belongs to them. They own it and they hold its keys because of the righteous actions that they have done.

The meaning of 'Today…' is the Day of Resurrection. '…in whatever they do.' (Ya Sin: 55) It refers to the blessings that will preoccupy them from anything else; or it will preoccupy them from friends and relatives who will have entered the Fire; we seek refuge in Allah. In this regard, Allah Glorified is He says, '...and stand in awe of the Day on which no parent will be of any avail to his child, nor a child will in the least avail his parent...' (Luqman: 33). Thus, they are in blessings that preoccupy them from all these people, as if they do not know them.

The words 'has joy' (Ya Sin: 55) are the translation for the Arabic word fakihun; There are two forms for the word: fakih and fakiha. Fakih (gleeful) means to be pleased and living in luxury. The word fakiha (fruit) is also derived from the same meaning which is something that is not essential, but rather for pleasure and luxury.

As for ‘in happiness will they and their spouses on couches recline;’ (Ya Sin: 56) I remember when I read this verse to some brothers, one of them hit himself on the chest, however he was a respected elder, violently and with agitation. He said: alas! So-and-so (his wife) will come to me again. He saw some bad traits in his wife which chased him away from her, and he was amazed that she would accompany him even in the Hereafter and paradise. We said to him: ‘O Sheikh! You may hate certain things about your wife, but she has good actions that will make her worthy of paradise, and her righteous deeds will cancel out her evil actions with you. Maybe you were bad tempered or covetous; Allah Glorified is He says about married life: “And among His wonders is this: He creates for you mates out of your own kind, so that you might incline towards them, and He engenders love and tenderness between you…” (ar-Rum: 21).

The beginning of married life is characterized by harmony and rest such that spouses find comfort in one another and they enjoy being in each other’s arms. Then, if the circumstances change and one of them abstains from the other, or one of them manifests qualities that push the other away, they should consider the love they have exchanged for some time. If they are afflicted with old age and incapacity, they, then, should show mercy to one another because of the tenderness and mercy that Allah has put between them. Married life in this state is a life of mutual compassion before anything else.

Moreover, this wife in whom you despise certain qualities, and whose behaviour puts you off, will not be the same person in the Hereafter. Rather, she will be a new person, as Allah Glorified is He says, ‘and spouses pure’ (Al-‘Imran: 15); thus, Allah will purify her from that which you were holding against her.

The meaning of ‘in the shade’ (Ya Sin: 56) is that there is no sun there, and no heat that could harm them. Shade is known and all people are familiar with it. In it, they take shelter from the sun’s heat. In the Hereafter, there will be shades which the believers will enjoy with, or they will enjoy the shade of Allah as mentioned in a Noble Hadith: ‘Allah will shade seven people in His shade on the day when there is no shade but His shade....’(1)

---

(1) Narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (1021) from the Hadith of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him: ‘Allah will shade seven people in His shade on the day when there is no shade but=

Al-`Ara`ik (Couches) is the plural of `arika, and it is a bed that has a curtained canopy(1) or it is a pillow that is reclined on. The meaning of 'recline' (Ya Sin: 56) is reclining is a position of the human being; he is either standing, sitting or reclining. Reclining is the most comfortable of these positions because the one standing stands up to do work, and the one sitting sits to think about something important, so he is not able to stand and work and he is not able to recline and relax. Thus, saying 'recline' means that they have complete relaxation.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says, '...will there be for them…' (Ya Sin: 57), i.e. in Paradise '… (Only) delight…' (Ya Sin: 57). The word fakiha (delight) is from delight and pleasure. We know that the food that man eats is either for nourishment, and they are the essentials, or for pleasure and luxury. Here, the True Lord Glorified is He is only mentioning the luxuries because in paradise we only eat for the sake of pleasure and enjoyment not because of need or hunger.

And '...theirs shall be all that they could ask for.' (Ya Sin: 57), i.e. whatever they ask for and whatever occurs to them, they will find it in front of them. Some scholars said that 'all that they could ask for' means that Allah will not let them ask for anything because Allah Glorified is He will give to them before they ask.(2)

= His shade: the righteous ruler, the youth who grew up worshipping Allah, the man whose heart is attached to the mosques, two men who love each other for Allah's sake and they meet for His sake and they part for His sake, a man who is invited (to commit adultery) by a woman of position and beauty and says "Indeed I fear God", a man who gives in charity and he conceals it such that his right hand does not know what his left hand gives, and a man whose eyes overflow with tears when he is alone and remembers Allah.'

(1) Al-Hajla (curtained canopy) is like a dome according to the linguistic meaning. Taj Al-`Arus is a house that is decorated with cloth, beds, and curtains, and it has large tassels. See Lisan Al-`Arab under the entry hajala.

(2) In his Tafsir, Al-Qurtubi mentions a number of explanations regarding this phrase (8/5682):
- Whoever asks for something, it is given to him; so the meaning of 'what they ask for' is 'whatever they wish', and this is the position of Abu Ubayda
- Whoever claims something, then it is his.
- 'What they ask for': what they desire, and this is the position of Yahya ibn Salam
- 'What they ask for' (yas`aluna), and this is the position of Ibn `Abbas.

Then Al-Qurtubi said: 'The meanings are close.'

After that the True Lord Glorified is He talks about an objective that He wanted for His creation in the life of this world to be a result of their travelling upon His way and His straight path. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘peace and fulfilment through the word of a Sustainer who dispenses all grace.’ (Ya Sin: 58)

Thus, the fruit of Islam is that all of them submit their reins to the hand of their Creator and that they are brothers worshipping one deity and that they live in safety, tranquillity, and peace.

Therefore, safety and peace are the objective of Allah’s way, and they are the completion of the blessing. Otherwise, if man was granted all blessings but lost safety and peace, then all his blessings would be made loathsome to him. He would have no calmness in life and enjoy no pleasure. That is why Allah Glorified is He favoured and reminded the tribe Quraysh of His favour in the holy verse saying: ‘who has given them food against hunger, and made them safe from danger.’ (Quraysh: 4)

Peace comes from you when you approach someone else and say, ‘peace be upon you’, meaning: ‘I approach you in peace’. He, then responds to you: ‘peace be upon you too’; the meaning is: ‘I am not harming you and you are not harming me’. Everyone gives peace according to what they are capable of. If the peace is from Allah, then, it is absolute peace. It is peace that protects you from all sides and nothing will be able to penetrate and harm you.

The meaning of ‘peace and fulfilment through the…’ (Ya Sin: 58) is that greeting is said by Allah Glorified is He; it is not delivered through the angels. For example, He does not say to the angels: ‘Give my greetings of peace to so-and-so’. The meaning is that peace is a greeting that is said by the Sustainer who dispenses all grace. It is not conveyed by anyone from Allah. The word ‘Sustainer’ has been chosen here to indicate that the Sustainer loves the one being sustained. So, what do you think about the Sustainer who is described with mercy: ‘...of a Sustainer who dispenses all grace.’ (Ya Sin: 58)

After the True Lord Glorified is He tells us about the believers and the blessings that await them, he tells us about those who are lost in sin.

وَٱمْتَٰزُوا۟ ٱلْيَوْمَ أَيُّهَا ٱلْمُجْرِمُونَ ٥٩

But step aside today, you guilty ones [59]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 59)

The meaning of ‘But stand aside…’ is: ‘O you lost in sin! Separate yourselves from the believers and keep far away from them. Gather yourselves on one side so that you can see the believers enter paradise. Remain there so that you can increase in your grief’.

The Wisdom of Allah Glorified is He necessitated that the believers and the disbelievers be distinguished from one another meaning that each of them is clearly separated from the other. This is what happened in the expedition of Al-Hudaybiyyah, for when the Muslims were prevented from entering Mecca while being positioned on the city’s outlying hills, they became very sad, to such an extent that some of the most senior companions like 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him said to the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him: ‘Why do we accept something disgraceful in our religion?’(1)

The Muslims were about to go against the command of the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him such that he said to his wife Umm Salama Allah be pleased with her: ‘The people are to be destroyed Umm Salama. I have commanded them and they have not obeyed.’ She said, ‘O Messenger of Allah. They are distressed, and this is because they have been prevented from entering the Sacred Mosque while being so close to it. This is a difficult matter for their souls to bear.’ She then advised the Messenger of Allah, saying, ‘O Messenger of Allah. Proceed with what Allah has commanded you and do it, and do not speak to anyone. Indeed, if they saw you determined they would submit.’ The Messenger of Allah indeed took the advice of Umm Salama and the problem was solved.(1)

---

(1) It is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (4/225) from the Hadith of Al-Masur ibn Makhrima and Marwan ibn Al-Hakam in a long Hadith of Al-Hudaybiyyah. It mentions that `Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him when the Treaty of Al-Hudaybiyyah had been completed and nothing was left but the document, he jumped up and went to Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him and said: ‘O Abu Bakr! Is he not the Messenger of Allah? Are we not Muslims? Are they not idolaters?’ He said: ‘Indeed.’ He said: ‘Then why were we being given humiliation in our religion?’ Abu Bakr said: ‘O `Umar! Hang on to the leather stirrup wherever it is!’ The Hadith is in its full length.

Before they returned to Medina, Allah Glorified is He explained to them the wisdom and rationale behind the treaty of Al-Hudaybiyyah, and why Muhammad peace be upon him had accepted its conditions. The rationale was that amongst the disbelievers of Mecca, there were believers who were hiding their faith, and no one knew them. Had the Muslims entered Mecca at that time there would have been clashes between the two sides, and those believers who were hiding their faith would have been harmed and unable to openly declare it. Thus, innocent Muslim people would have been oppressed by either party.

That is why Allah Glorified is He said regarding this story in the chapter al-Fath: ‘It was not for your enemies’ sake that He stayed your hands from them: for it was they who were bent on denying the truth, and who debarred you from the Inviolable House of Worship and prevented your offering from reaching its destination. And had it not been for the believing men and believing women (in Mecca), whom you might have unwittingly trampled underfoot, and on whose account you might have become guilty, without knowing it, of a grievous wrong – (had it not been for this, you would have been allowed to fight your way into the city: but you were forbidden to fight) so that (in time) Allah might admit to His Grace whomever He wills. Had they (who deserve Our Mercy and they whom We have condemned) been clearly discernible (to you), We would indeed have imposed grievous suffering (at your hands) on such of them as were bent on denying the truth.’ (al-Fath: 25)

---

(1) It is narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad (4/225) from the Hadith of Al-Masur ibn Makhrima and Marwan ibn A-Hakam and it mentions that the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him said: ‘O people! Slaughter an animal and cut your hair!’ but no one did anything. Then he repeated it again and not a single man stood up. He repeated it a third time and again not a single man stood up. He, then, went back to Umm Salama and said: ‘O Umm Salama! What is wrong with people?’ She said: ‘O Messenger of Allah! You have seen what has happened to them, so do not speak to any of them, and find your animal wherever it is. Slaughter your animal and cut your hair, for if you had done that the people would have done likewise. Thus, He went out and he didn not speak to anyone until his animal came. He slaughtered it and then sat and cut his hair. Thus, the people rose, slaughtered, and cut their hair until they were half-way between Mecca and Medina when the chapter al-Fath was revealed.

The meaning of '...Had they (who deserve Our mercy and they whom We have condemned) been clearly discernible (to you)...' (al-Fath: 25) is: had the believers been distinguished from the disbelievers.

Or the meaning of 'But stand aside today, O you who were lost in sin' (Ya Sin: 59) is: Be distinguished by signs appropriate to your conditions, which are signs attached to you constantly so that your disgrace is not only in front of us now, but rather, you will have traits that you are known by. These signs are anger and blackness of the face; we seek refuge in Allah! In this regard, Allah Glorified is He has said about the believers: '... (but) thou canst recognize them by their special mark...' (al-Baqara: 273).

أَلَمْ أَعْهَدْ إِلَيْكُمْ يَٰبَنِيٓ ءَادَمَ أَن لَّا تَعْبُدُواْ ٱلشَّيْطَٰنَۖ إِنَّهُۥ لَكُمْ
عَدُوٌّ مُّبِينٌ ﴿٦٠﴾ وَأَنِ ٱعْبُدُونِيۚ هَٰذَا صِرَٰطٌ مُّسْتَقِيمٌ ﴿٦١﴾

Children of Adam, did I not command you not to serve Satan, for he was your sworn enemy [60] But to serve Me? This is the straight path [61] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 60 - 61)

It is as if someone was asking: 'Do the disbelievers deserve all of this punishment and all of this anger from Allah?' The True Lord responds: 'Yes, they deserve it.' This is because Allah has cautioned them and warned them, but they have not responded; thus, Allah says, 'Did I not enjoin on you, O you children of Adam, that you should not worship Satan…' (Ya Sin: 60)?

The True Lord Glorified is He did not take you in a state of inattentiveness, but rather, He cautioned you and explained to you Satan's places of entrance and his tricks and artifices. This is because Satan, desperately, disclosed all his devices against the believers in front of Allah. Thus, Allah has warned us about them and explained to us his enmity towards us and his prior enmity towards Adam peace be upon him when Satan was commanded to prostrate to Adam but refused.

Satan's affair did not end when he did not prostrate. Rather, he wanted to entice Adam and he wanted to take revenge from him and from his progeny after him. Indeed, he swore that he would do so in front of His Creator Glorified is He and he said, with the power of enticing, as the Quran relates: '...Then (I swear) by

Thy very Might: I shall most certainly beguile them all into grievous error – ...' (Sad: 82), but he remembered his true position as a slave of the True Lord, and said: '(all) save such of them as are truly Thy servants!' (Sad: 83) Satan says: 'I have no way of deceiving these people. That is the animosity is not between me and You, but rather, it is between me and the children of Adam'. Satan swore in a way that affirmed his ability to carry out what he was threatening. For example, Pharaoh's magicians swore saying: '...By Pharaoh's might, behold, it is we indeed who have prevailed!' (ash-Shu'ara': 44)

As for Satan, he knows very well how to make an oath, for he said '...Then (I swear) by Thy very Might...' (Sad: 82) which means: 'By Your independence from your creation. Whoever wants to will believe and whoever wants to will disbelieve; this is the door which I will enter to get through to them. As for the one who desires you O Lord, I am unable to get close to him.

The meaning of 'Did I not enjoin on you…' (Ya Sin: 60) is: 'I have already commanded you', as Allah Glorified is He says, 'And, indeed, long ago did We impose Our commandment on Adam; but he forgot it, and We found no firmness of purpose in him.' (Ta Ha: 115) That is Allah Glorified is He is saying: 'O Children of Adam! Did I not command you to beware of Satan's schemes, to be alert regarding his ways of getting through to you and his traps and intentions? Did he himself not say, "...I shall most certainly lie in ambush for them all along Thy straight way." (al-A'raf: 16)'? Then, since you have taken the protective serum (represented by Allah's warning and alerting you), you should have a necessary immunity with which to face this enemy, especially that he has unveiled his face and made clear his intention. He is waiting for you on the straight path and he exploits ways of obedience, not ways of disobedience, to spoil you. Satan does not come to the people of iniquity and the owners of taverns, but rather, he comes to the people of obedience to corrupt them. The poet was truthful who said about the one who is excessive in disobedience:

I was a person in the army of Satan and I was promoted
Because of my state until Satan came to be from my army (1)

(1) This verse is mentioned in Al-Mawsu`ah Ash-Shi`riyyah from the poetry of two poets, the first of whom is Al-Khubz Arza (d.317 AH/969 AD) and his name is Nasr ibn Ahmad.=

The meaning of '...that you should not worship Satan…' (Ya Sin: 60) is to worship Satan is to obey his insinuations and whisperings. The rationale not to worship him is: '…since, verily, he is your open foe.' (Ya Sin: 60); he is an enemy who has openly declared his enmity, and he is familiar with the means of deceiving his enemies.

After our Lord Glorified is He forbids us from worshipping Satan, he directs us towards true worship: 'and that you should worship Me (alone)? This would have been a straight way!' (Ya Sin: 61) When we reflect on these two verses we find that the rationale behind forbidding the worship of Satan is '...since, verily, he is your open foe.' Hence, the following verse should read: 'and that you worship Me because I am your beloved', as stated in the Qudsi Hadith: 'O son of Adam! You are beloved to me, so My right over you is that you make Me beloved to you.(1)

However, the True Lord Glorified is He has not justified His being worshipped because of love, but rather, He is calling them to the straight path that benefits them and brings order to their lives. This is the basis for worshipping Allah. As for the matter of love, it indeed exists and I love you. However, whether I love or I do not love you, you should still follow this straight path because you will benefit from it. In this regard, the scholars have made a note on the following verses: 'Guide us the straight way.' (al-Fatiha: 6), 'And that you should worship Me (alone). This would have been a straight way!' (Ya Sin: 61) and 'And (know) that this is the way leading straight unto Me: follow it' (al-An'am: 153).

They said that the straight path is the even path that has no crookedness in it. It represents the nearest path and the shortest distance between two points.

= He was originally from Basra and moved to Baghdad. His narrations have many channels. The text of the verse that he has is part of a poem from the Tawil Metre and it consists of 46 verses

I was a youth in the army of Satan (Iblis) and I was promoted
Because of my state until Satan (Iblis) came to be from my army
Al-Amir As-San`ani (d.1182 AH/1768 AD) took this verse and said:
I was a youth in the army of Satan (Iblis) and I was promoted
Because of time until Satan (Iblis) came to be from my army
And it is from the Tawil metre from a poem that consists of 15 verses.

(1) Mentioned by Imam Abu Hamid Al-Ghazali in Ihya` `Ulum Ad-Din (4/296). He said: 'In some books (meaning Al-Ilahiyah): 'My slave. Your right over Me is that I love you, and My right over you is that you love Me.'

Whenever you hear the word ‘path’ you know that it has a beginning and an end, i.e. it starts from …and ends to…; there is a subtle indication of which the believer should be aware. It is that the life of this world in relation to you is nothing other than a path along which you are travelling. It has a beginning and it has an end. Therefore, it is not an abode of establishment and permanent residence. Rather, it is a transit point.

When man resides in a place and he does not find repose therein, he leaves it for another place; had the first place been convenient for him, he would not have left it. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Behold, those whom the angels gather in death while they are still sinning against themselves, (the angels) will ask, “What was wrong with you?” They will answer: “We were too weak on Earth.” (The angels) will ask, “Was, then, Allah’s Earth not wide enough for you to forsake the domain of evil…?”’ (an-Nisa’: 97)

This emigration also requires a path upon which I emigrate, from and to; so, it is as if the True Lord Glorified is He is saying to you: ‘In the life of this world, you are crossing a road to an end that is greater and nobler, so travel towards it along the nearest path that takes you to it. If you have seen with your own eyes the ‘starting point’ in this life, then indeed Allah Glorified is He has informed you of the ‘destination’ towards which you are travelling.

In this worldly life, you live according to the means that Allah has created, and are provided to you in the earth upon which you live, the water that you drink, the air that you breathe, the brain that you think with and so forth. However, it is your Lord who has provided you with these means, and He fears that you will be deluded by these means: ‘Nay, verily, man becomes grossly overweening, whenever he believes himself to be self-sufficient.’ (al-‘Alaq: 6-7)

That is why He makes these means differ sometimes so that you can be attached to the Causer Glorified is He to remain in a state of remembering Him, to keep praying to Him and seek refuge in Him. Allah Glorified is He loves to hear the supplications and voices of some people. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He may test these people so that they call upon Him in supplication. On the other hand, there are other people whom Allah Glorified is He hates to hear their call, so He commands the angels to fulfil their needs so that they do not call upon him regularly.

Then, Allah Glorified is He narrated to us the history of Satan may the curse of Allah be upon him with the children of Adam. We must always bear these events in mind. Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَقَدْ أَضَلَّ مِنكُمْ جِبِلًّا كَثِيرًا أَفَلَمْ تَكُونُوا تَعْقِلُونَ ﴿٦٢﴾

He has led great numbers of you astray. Did you not use your reason? [62] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 62)

The Arabic word jibbil is used to describe the strongest and most powerful people. It is derived from the root jabala which indicates power, strength, establishment, and eminence. Jabal, the Arabic word for mountain, is used as such because it indicates their monumental establishment. We also say that a particular person was jubila (moulded) to have a particular character and behaviour which means that it is a deep-rooted quality established in their personality. We also describe a wise person as being a mountain because they are firm and unaffected by adverse events. Thus, there is a correlation in the meanings of all these words. In this regard, we can remind ourselves of the words of an Arab poet, who recited a eulogy in the funeral of one of the Caliphs as the people were carrying him to his grave.(1) The poet said: As if (you are) the Radwa Mountain, being moved by the hands of men.(2) Radwa is a well-known mountain in the Arabian Peninsula.(3)

The meaning of Allah's words: 'And indeed, he (Satan) had led astray many of your strongest (jibbil) people, could you not, then, use your reason?' (Ya Sin: 62) is that you are not the first to be led astray by Satan. He has led many people astray before you, and indeed, they were stronger than you are. Indeed, he fooled them and made them a tool for misguidance. Thus, he did not just stop at misguiding them, but he made them misguide others. They became soldiers in his army, as we have previously mentioned.

(1) Al-Mutanabbi Ahmad ibn Al-Hussain Abu At-Tayyib (born in Kufa in 302 and died in 354 A.H.). He is one of the great figures of Arabic poetry. He claimed prophecy, but later retracted his claim. He was killed by a brigand called Fatik ibn Abu Jahl Al-Asadi.

(2) The full verse is as mentioned in Al-Mawsu`ah Ash-Shi`riyyah:
I never thought that I would see your coffin,
As if (you are) the Radwa Mountain, being moved by the hands of men

(3) Mount Radwa is an inaccessible mountain between Mecca and Medina. It is called the Juhayna Mountain, and is close to Yanbu`.

Modern civilization of the twentieth century, which is characterized with remarkable scientific invention and progress, still stands overwhelmed by the establishments of ancient civilizations. Indeed, modern scientists are incapable of comprehending all the ancients' secrets. At the head of these great and ancient civilizations was the civilization of the Pharaohs.

What did Satan do to Pharaoh? He enticed Pharaoh and led him astray, to such an extent that Pharaoh said to his people: 'I am your Lord All-Highest.' (an-Nazi'at: 24) The Quran describes Pharaoh in the following verse: 'Thus, he (condescendingly) incited his people to levity, and they obeyed him: for, behold, they were immoral people' (az-Zukhruf: 54). Thus, many strong individuals, like Pharaoh, could not confront Satan or save themselves from his schemes. Satan swayed by using their impulsive passions. He made obedience difficult for them and pulled them towards waywardness.

Then, Allah Glorified is He reprimands these disobedient people: 'Could you not, then, use your reason?' (Ya Sin: 62) Where were their intellects when they lined up behind him, after Allah Glorified is He had warned them from his plots and ploys? Allah Glorified is He commands us to use our reasoning and intellect because the result of using our minds in contemplating Allah's signs in the universe leads us to understanding of what he wants from us.

Generally, you would not command someone to use their intellect unless you were confident that the results would be in accordance with what you wanted from them. For example, let us consider an honest merchant who is selling a good commodity. Such merchants may eagerly invite you to examine the quality of their merchandise carefully. A wool merchant, for example, might light a match and burn a thread from its fabric to affirm its superior texture. He would not do that if he was not confident of his products' value. This merchant's confidence will easily convince you of the product's excellence and will make you more eager to buy it. However, if the merchant was a fraudster, he will try to convince you with speculative talk that is packed with lies and deceit. He may even distract you from examining the product carefully because the result will not be for their benefit.

Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says, 'Could you not, then, use your reason?' (Ya Sin: 62) to emphasize the truth of this message. If you use your own reasonable minds, you will be certainly convinced of its certainty. This meant that if the disbelievers had used their intellects, they would have understood the truth and chosen its straight path, Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

هَٰذِهِۦ جَهَنَّمُ ٱلَّتِى كُنتُمۡ تُوعَدُونَ ﴿٦٣﴾ ٱصۡلَوۡهَا ٱلۡيَوۡمَ بِمَا كُنتُمۡ تَكۡفُرُونَ ﴿٦٤﴾
ٱلۡيَوۡمَ نَخۡتِمُ عَلَىٰٓ أَفۡوَٰهِهِمۡ وَتُكَلِّمُنَآ أَيۡدِيهِمۡ وَتَشۡهَدُ أَرۡجُلُهُم بِمَا كَانُواْ يَكۡسِبُونَ ﴿٦٥﴾

So this is the Fire that you were warned against [63] Enter it today, because you went on ignoring [my commands] [64] On that Day We shall seal up their mouths, but their hands will speak to Us, and their feet bear witness to everything they have done [65] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 63 - 65)

Here too, Allah Glorified is He warns us from the hell-fire by using a lexical promise (wa`d) instead of using a lexical threat (wa`eed). We already know that, lexically, the Arabic word wa`d (promise) is used to refer to the good forthcoming events and the word wa`eed (ominous threat) is used to refer to the coming punishments. In this regard, an Arab poet (1) once said:

> O time! You have surely fulfilled your threats (wa`eed),
> and broken your hopeful promises (wa`d)!(2)

However, if you are warned against a calamity before it actually befalls you, this warning is not actually an ominous threat. Allah's words regarding the hell-fire, despite being a threat, cannot hide the caring nature of His Lordship. His divine warning was issued so that the disbelievers will rectify their ways and correct their mistakes before the real punishment occurs. This is the reason why Allah Glorified is He referred to His threats of punishment as a wa`d (promise) instead of a wa`eed (ominous threat).

Allah Glorified is He also tells the disbelievers who will enter the hell-fire: 'Burn in it (islawha)' (Ya Sin: 64). The word islawha combines the meanings of the sentence, ‘Enter the hell-fire and be burned by its flames’. The word ‘today’ (Ya Sin: 64) refers to the Day of Judgment in which they will meet their recompense and reckoning.

(1) Abu Al-`Ala` Al-Ma`ri. He was a poet and a philosopher, born in 449 A.H. and died in his birthplace in Ma`rat An-Nu`man. He went blind at the age of four, and began composing poetry at the age of 11. He used to wear coarse clothing and he did not eat meat for 45 years.

(2) The verse is from the poem of Abu Al-`Ala` Al-Ma`ri from the Saree` poetic metre and it consists of 10 verses.

On their day of punishment, the days of their sinful pleasures in the former world will have passed. They will recognize that their past worldly pleasures brought them to the punishment of an eternal hell-Fire. On that day, the pleasures will have gone, but their consequent punishment in the fire will remain as an outcome of their: ‘…persistent denial of the truth’ (Ya Sin: 64). Indeed, their punishment in this fire is not an oppressive injustice, but rather, is a just recompense for their continuous denial of Allah’s blessings.

Some people may receive your generosity and bounties with insults and miserliness towards you. If you choose to punish such people later, they may find it easier to tolerate any physical punishment, rather than meet or confront their benefactor. This is because the sense of a person’s shame may exceed the severity of any physical punishment they may have to endure.

Due to that, during the physical punishment of the disbelievers in the fire, they will be told: ‘Burn in it (islawha) today as an outcome of your persistent denial of the truth!’ Thus, Allah Glorified is He will remind these disbelievers that the physical fiery punishment is only a direct result of their denial of His blessings. At that point, their feelings of shame will, indeed, be more severe than the physical pain of the fire.

Then, Allah Glorified is He described this future punishment, and we seek refuge in Allah Glorified is He from this destiny. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘On that Day, We shall set a seal on their mouths, but their hands will speak to Us, and their feet will bear witness to whatever they have earned (in their lives).’ (Ya Sin: 65) His saying ‘On that Day...’ (Ya Sin: 65) is a reference to the Day of Resurrection, when we will all be assembled and gathered to meet our Creator. The words: ‘We shall set a seal on their mouths’ (Ya Sin: 65) mean that Allah will stop their mouths from speaking.

In this world, these disbelievers had shown pride and denial, and thus, Allah Glorified is He had sealed their hearts from further messages of guidance. Thus, faith did not enter their hearts and disbelief was rooted in them.

Similarly, in the future of the Hereafter, Allah Glorified is He will seal their mouths, and prevent them from issuing empty apologies or pleas for forgiveness. This is because the Hereafter is a place of reckoning and reward and not an abode of actions. Therefore, the disbelievers' search for forgiveness will be futile and their pleas will have no benefit in the Last Day. The times for speech and woven articulations will end in this world, and the tongue will have no role after Resurrection. The mouths will be closed and the tongues will be tied, so that the limbs can speak freely about their previous lives.

Consider the following words: '...but their hands will speak to Us, and their feet will bear witness to what they have earned (in their lives)' (Ya Sin: 65). Allah Glorified is He does not say that He will make the hands and feet bear witness to their actions by force. On the contrary, their hands will speak and their feet will bear witness voluntarily.

These limbs will volunteer to testify to the person's actions, even though these were the same limbs that carried out the sins in the life of this world. They will not bear witness against themselves, but rather, they will bear witness against the conscious soul to which Allah Glorified is He had subjugated them to act. Allah Glorified is He had commanded them to do as the soul desired, and they were subject to its instructions in the life of this world. Then, in the Hereafter, these limbs will be freed from following the conscious soul. Indeed, the absolute sovereignty and authority belongs to Allah Glorified is He alone. Thus, the limbs will speak as they want, and will bear witness in front of the Lord the Most High.

We previously gave an example of this matter. If an army squadron is sent by the supreme commander for a particular mission, the squadron has to obey the orders of its immediate commander, even if the orders are wrong. Then, when it returns to the supreme commander, it is given a chance to complain about the immediate commander's mistakes. Likewise, the limbs will witness to their soul's commands on the Day of Resurrection.

Some people asked, 'Why will the hands speak while the legs only bear witness to the person's actions'? It is because the multitude of a person's actions is usually attributed to the hands, even if walking is the means of the action. As the hands speak about their individual's actions, they will be making a claim that needs a witness. Therefore, the feet will corroborate the hand's testimonial and bear witness to it.

Some people asked, 'How can the hands speak'? The One Creator, Allah Glorified is He who made the tongue speak, when it is only a mere piece of flesh and blood, is able to make all the other organs speak as well. As long as the action is willed by Allah Glorified is He there is no need to ask about the Creator's methods. Furthermore, we can already see in this world, that the hands can perform movements as fine as the organs of speech.

Allah Glorified is He then said that these testimonies will narrate: '...what they have earned (kasaba) (in their lives)' (Ya Sin: 65). He did not say '…what they did in their lives'. What is the difference between earnings and actions? Generally, there are two types of disobedience. Firstly, there are misdeeds that a sinner perceives as joyful earnings. This is when a sinner feels delight in committing the sin. They may even talk nonchalantly about these sins with other people and boast about committing them. On the other hand, there are people who commit acts of disobedience with shame. They blame themselves for these sins and constantly seek repentance from them.

In this verse, the word kasaba is being used in its most basic linguistic form. In this form, it is defined as the process in which a person makes a profit from buying or selling goods. Thus, the word describes a normal and traditional transaction in which people accomplish earnings without burden or fraud. In this form, the word kasaba can also be used to refer to the lawful acts of righteousness.

On the other hand, there is another form of the word when we add a hamza to it. The resultant word, iktasaba, indicates the earning of unnatural profits that are burdened with fraud. This form of the word can be used to describe the joyful sins we talked about.

When a man does acts of righteousness, they come to him naturally and spontaneously. However, when he commits unlawful actions, he must execute more effort to carry them out stealthily. This is because goodness is simple, gentle and pleasing, whereas evil is tiresome and difficult. For example, a man can sit with his wife and daughters without any burden or difficulty because it is a natural and acceptable occurrence. However, if he sits with a woman he is forbidden from looking at, he may unlawfully and stealthily steal his glances so that no one can be aware of his shortcomings. Therefore, the word kasaba indicates the earnings of a natural profit, whereas the word iktasaba indicates an unlawful and unnatural earning.

Now, in this verse, why did Allah Glorified is He use the word kasaba when referring to the sins of the disbelievers? This is because people who regularly engage in unnatural sins become used to these acts of disobedience and assimilate these sins in their habits. At that point, they start committing these sins naturally without feeling any shame, and may even declare them openly. So, for this malevolent person, the act of iktisab (unnatural earning) has become an act of kasb (natural earning). Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says in this verse: '…and their feet will bear witness to what they have earned (kasaba) (in life)' (Ya Sin: 65).

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَوْ نَشَآءُ لَطَمَسْنَا عَلَىٰٓ أَعْيُنِهِمْ فَٱسْتَبَقُوا۟ ٱلصِّرَٰطَ فَأَنَّىٰ يُبْصِرُونَ ﴿٦٦﴾

If it had been Our will, We could have taken away their sight. They would have struggled to find the way, but how could they have seen it? [66] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 66)

Allah Glorified is He will seal their mouths and prevent them from speaking, and if Allah wants, He could also blot out their eyes by locking them shut and flattening them with no trace. If Allah Glorified is He blots out their eyes, they will lose their sights, so how will they guide themselves while they are racing for the straight path of the sirat to reach paradise?

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَوْ نَشَآءُ لَمَسَخْنَٰهُمْ عَلَىٰ مَكَانَتِهِمْ فَمَا
ٱسْتَطَٰعُوا۟ مُضِيًّا وَلَا يَرْجِعُونَ ﴿٦٧﴾

If it had been Our will, We could have paralysed them where they stood, so that they could not move forward or backward [67] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 67)

Someone might say, 'If they lose their sight on the sirat, they could have alternatives and devices to help guide them. Maybe, they could feel the path with a stick, for example, or someone could hold their hand and guide them through it'.

This will not be the case because Allah Glorified is He will encompass them from all sides, and will cut off all their hopes of salvation. Thus, the matter does not end with their eyes being blotted out. There is an outcome that is more severe which is that Allah Glorified is He can paralyze them in their places.

The word masakhnahum is derived from the Arabic word maskh which may refer to the transformation of a body into a statue-like structure that does not move. It could also indicate that they may be transformed into hideous forms, in order to degrade and humiliate them.

The first meaning is more valid (1) because Allah Glorified is He says afterwards: 'Then, in no way could they move forward or turn back' (Ya Sin: 67). This means that they will be fixed in their places while being unable to move in any direction. Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَمَن نُّعَمِّرۡهُ نُنَكِّسۡهُ فِي ٱلۡخَلۡقِۚ أَفَلَا يَعۡقِلُونَ ٦٨

If We extend anyone's life, We reverse his development. Do they not use their reason? [68]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 68)

Allah Glorified is He clearly warns them in this world. He tells them: 'Do not worship Satan'! He made Satan's enmity clear to them. He also says, 'Worship me and travel along My straight path'. Therefore, they do not have any excuses if they choose to disbelieve in Allah Glorified is He and obey Satan or worship him.

However, some of them may excuse themselves from another perspective. Some of these disbelievers might say, 'O our Lord! If we had lived longer lives, we would have been guided and returned to the straight path'. Allah responds to them in another verse: 'And did We not give you a long (life), enough to remind anyone who would remind himself? And the constant warner came to you.' (Fatir: 37)

---

(1) This is the position of Al-Hasan Al-Basri. He said, 'This means "We could restrain them so that they are unable to move, either forwards or go back to where they came from, just like an inanimate object that does not move forwards or backwards."' As for the second meaning of the word al-maskh which indicates the transformation of a constitution, some scholars said that they may transformed into beasts of burden or other creatures. This was the position of As-Suddi, as has been mentioned by Ibn Kathir in his Tafsir (3/578).

Allah Glorified is He allows them to live a long life which was enough for anyone to think and go back to Allah's righteous path. However, these disbelievers did not go back. Indeed, a long life makes one weak and feeble, and lacking the ability to move properly. In the beginning of your life, you possess youth and strength. You will be active, in body and mind. However, with old age, you will become weak in your physical constitution as your muscular and mental strength gradually decrease. Then, man returns to the weakness that he began with as a young child.

Allah Glorified is He describes man in the later senile stage in life by the following words: 'And of you is he who will be turned back to the most decrepit age, ceasing to know anything of what he once knew so well.' (an-Nahl: 70)

Therefore, if you do not return to Allah's path and take heed when you have physical strength and intellectual soundness, are you going to return when you are senile, weak, and forgetful? That is why Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: 'And (let them know that) to whomever We give a long life, We also cause him to decline (nunakis-hu) in his body' (Ya Sin: 67). Al-Intikas means the return to the formal and primitive constitution. Thus, prolonging the life of a man will take him back to his childhood phase. It is a relapse for him when he becomes a senile old man who cannot move or speak. His memory will become weak and he will include a lot of drivel in his speech. He will resemble a child who needs someone to carry him, feed him, and remove harm from his way. Is he going to return to Allah's path in this state? Would it benefit him to think and reflect at that stage of his life?

'Will they not, then, use their reason?' (Ya Sin: 68) Allah Glorified is He states this verse in the form of a question. He does not merely state it as fact because if they answer this question, they will confirm against themselves that they lack proper minds.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَمَا عَلَّمْنَٰهُ ٱلشِّعْرَ وَمَا يَنۢبَغِى لَهُۥٓ ۚ إِنْ هُوَ إِلَّا ذِكْرٌ وَقُرْءَانٌ مُّبِينٌ ﴿٦٩﴾
لِّيُنذِرَ مَن كَانَ حَيًّا وَيَحِقَّ ٱلْقَوْلُ عَلَى ٱلْكَٰفِرِينَ ﴿٧٠﴾

We have not taught the Prophet poetry, nor could he ever have been a poet [69] This is a revelation, an illuminating Quran to warn anyone who is truly alive, so that God's verdict may be passed against the disbelievers [70]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 69 - 70)

In this verse, there is an apparent shift from the context of the previous verses. What is the connection between the Hereafter's punishment to the disbelievers and Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him?

We know that the foundational principle of religion is monotheism, which involves accepting the Oneness of Allah. The meaning of Allah's Oneness is that you should bear witness that He is the Only (Wahid) and the One (Ahad) Deity in Existence. Each of the words, Wahid and Ahad, has its exclusive meaning, and each of their descriptions also affirms the other attribute.

The meaning of the word Wahid (The Only Deity) means that there is no other deity with Him in existence. On the other hand, the word Ahad (The One) means that He only has One Essence Glorified is He. This means that He is not comprised of constituent parts, and that He is not made from a number of things put together. His Essence does not rely on anything else Glorified is He.

For example, if you have one chair, the chair can be described as the only chair you have (wahid). However, it is not a single entity (ahad) because it has been made from a number of things, such as wood, nails, glue, as well as paint. Thus, it is a wahid but is not an ahad. As for Allah Glorified is He He must be described simultaneously with both descriptions. Thus, we say that He is 'Al-Wahid Al-Ahad', because each of them has a distinct meaning.

The matter of Allah's Oneness is built on a rational argument. Allah Glorified is He has declared that He is the True and Only Deity, and that He has no partners. He is the sole Creator and Provider, and He alone is the One who deserves to be worshipped. No other deities exist that oppose this claim. Logically, the claim can be affirmed for the one who made it until someone else makes an opposing argument. We have not seen anyone claim to be the sole Creator except Allah Glorified is He.

If Allah Glorified is He had any other partners with Him, where are they? Why did they not demand their rights in divinity? Are they quiet about it or have they not become aware of it? In any of these cases, it is not valid for them to be gods. That is why the Quran has already discussed this matter with a logical argument: 'Say, "If there had been (other) gods with Him as they (the polytheist idolaters) claim, lo, indeed they would have constantly sought a way to The Owner of the Throne."' (al-Isra': 42)

Therefore, believing in Allah's oneness is the basic foundation of religion. However, human beings do not know naturally know what Allah Glorified is He wants from them by natural intellect. A messenger must be sent to inform them about their obligations. Therefore, there must be a messenger. This is the second principle of religion.

When Allah Glorified is He the Absolute and Perfect Power, addresses His imperfect creation, there must be a medium that enables the message to be delivered from His Absolute Perfection to those who are less than perfect. Thus, the matter was gradated as Allah Glorified is He addressed the angels, the angels addressed the messengers, and the messengers addressed mankind.

Therefore, believing in the concept of a message is the second objective of religion. The messenger is the medium between the Creator and the creation. The messenger does not merely convey the commandments, but is also an exemplar of conduct and application. Allah Glorified is He describes Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him in the following verse: 'Verily, in the Apostle of Allah you have a good example.' (al-Ahzab: 21) If the messenger had been an angel, he would not have been able to fulfil the role of an exemplar. A messenger can only carry out his duties if he is from the same species as those to whom he is being sent. That is why Allah Glorified is He clarifies this matter by saying: 'Yet, whenever (Allah's) guidance came to them (through a prophet,) nothing prevented mankind from believing as the guidance came to them, except that they said, "Has Allah sent forth a mortal being as a Messenger?"' (al-Isra': 94). Allah Glorified is He ordered Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him to refute their argument by saying: 'If angels were walking about on earth as their natural abode, We would indeed have sent down unto them an angel from the heaven as Our apostle.' (al-Isra': 95)

If an angel had been sent down in its natural luminous form, human beings would not have been able to see it. It would have to come to them in the form of a human being, and their suspicions would still remain intact. Allah Glorified is He says, 'And (even) if We had appointed an angel as Our message-bearer, We would certainly have made him (appear as) a man – and thus We would only have confounded them in the same way as they are now confusing themselves.' (al-An'am: 9) Therefore, there must be a means to convey the message that resembles an electrical transformer which transforms electricity from the stronger power supply to a weaker instrument without burning it.

The third principle of religion is that people will be gathered to a final day of reckoning. This is because the Message came to convey certain commandments and prohibitions. Some people will obey these commandments and refrain from the forbidden prohibitions. Other people will abandon these commandments, or indeed go against it. Therefore, there must be a point of final return, in which the obedient people are rewarded and the transgressors are punished.

Allah Glorified is He talks about monotheism in the following verse: 'Did I not instruct you, O you descendants of Adam, that you should not worship Satan, as surely he is an evident enemy for you, and that you should worship Me (alone)? This is a straight way.' (Ya Sin: 60-61)

Allah Glorified is He also informed us that He will assemble people on the Day of Reckoning when He: 'This, then, is the hell-fire of which you were repeatedly warned. Burn in it today as an outcome of your persistent denial of the truth.' (Ya Sin: 63-64)

Allah Glorified is He also describes the principle of revelation, when He talks about Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him: 'And in no way did We teach him (Prophet Muhammad) poetry; and in no way would poetry have suited him.' (Ya Sin: 69) Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him was not taught poetry by Allah or even by the society and the environment in which he lived. Thus, it was an honour for Allah's Messenger to be unlettered because if he had been literate, his refined teachings would have been attributed to his environment. In actuality, his refinement and his knowledge were from Allah Glorified is He.

Therefore, it is an honour for Prophet Muhammad's ummah that he was unlettered. If his ummah had prior treasures of human knowledge, the events that later happened on the Arabian Peninsula would have only been described as a leap of civilization. For instance, when Allah Glorified is He gave us victory in the War of Ramadan, some people still said, 'It was a victory for our civilization'.

Allah Glorified is He affirmed that the source of this knowledge was divine: 'And in no way did We teach him (Prophet Muhammad) poetry' (Ya Sin: 69). Prophet Muhammad's revelation was only taught by his Lord, Allah Glorified is He.

Poetry needs a linguistic culture and knowledge of measures and rhymes. One must have fine taste, a musical ear, and other tools that poets need. Some people may assume that Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him did not say poetry because he did not possess these tools. Allah Glorified is He refuted this conjecture: 'And in no way would poetry have suited him' (Ya Sin: 69).

This means that Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him did not lack the abilities necessary for a poet. Indeed, had he wanted to say poetry, he would have said the best of its verses. However, his message was not suited for poetry. This was because the mission of a messenger is different from the mission of a poet. Most poetry contains lies and descriptions of sin, and when it entails goodness, it becomes weak and soft. This is because poetry is a craft of weaving fantasy, and a poet could say whatever pleases him irrespective of the objectives. That is why they say that the most pleasant of poetry is the most untruthful.

We often see poets who have sublime values and morals finding it difficult to combine between their faith and their gifts of poetry. They have no choice but to restrict themselves to the verses of virtue, and have to keep their distance from the poetry of ridicule and seduction.

An Arab poet from Mahjar was known for piety and righteousness. He once tried to combine between his piety and the gift of poetry that he had. He said:

My Lord (Allah), indeed I have disobeyed you on purpose,
But I know that you are the most beautiful in forgiveness.
Indeed, I have committed the greatest of sins,
As I did not want your forgiveness to be limited

Thus, he did well in the first verse, but was not successful in illustrating the second verse appropriately.

Hasan ibn Thabit Allah be pleased with him was a proficient poet before Islam. When he embraced Islam, they said to him, 'Your poetry has become soft, O Abu Al-Hussam!' He responded, 'Poetry is laborious and is strengthened by sin.(1) If it contains goodness, it becomes weak and soft.'

Thus, Allah's saying: 'And in no way would poetry have suited him' (Ya Sin: 69) was revealed to defend Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him from the accusation that he does not have a fine sense, or that his ear was not musical. How can the one who is taught by Allah Glorified is He be accused of this, when his ear receives revelation directly?

Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him once recited a particular verse of poetry without following its poetic measure. Thus when he recited(2), 'The days will reveal what you had been ignorant about, and your carrier of news will not need payment,' he changed the wording into, 'And the one you have not paid will carry the news to you.'(3)

---

(1) Ibn Qutaiba Ad-Dinawari, in Ash-Shi`r Wa Ash-Shu`ara`, mentioned this remarks from the sayings of Al-Asma`i. He then mentioned Hassan ibn Thabit and said, 'This was Hassan ibn Thabit who was an outstanding poet before Islam. Then, when Islam came, his poetry came to an end.'

(2) `Aisha Allah be pleased with her was once asked, 'Did the Prophet ever quote any poetry?' She said, 'He used to quote the poetry of Ibn Ruwaha, and quoted poet who said, 'And your carrier of news will not need payment.' This was narrated by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan (2848) and Ahmad in his Musnad (6/151).

(3) Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to quote this verse, but he did not follow the original poetic measure. The verse is by Tarfa ibn Al-`Abd. Abu Ubayd said in Al-Amthal, 'We have related in a Hadith marfu` (traceable in ascending order back to Prophet Muhammad) that he quoted a verse that said: 'And he will come to you the one who has not been paid with bits of news.'

It is also related that Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him said(1), 'The most truthful words of poetry were said by Labeed: 'Indeed everything besides Allah is falsehood, and every joy comes to an end without doubt.' The original wording of this verse was: 'Indeed everything besides Allah is falsehood, and every joy, without doubt, comes to an end.'

Therefore, Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him used to break the poetic measure of the verse so that it could not be said that he recited poetry. Allah Glorified is He says, 'And in no way did We teach him (Prophet Muhammad) poetry; and in no way would poetry have suited him.' (Ya Sin: 69) However, Allah Glorified is He did not forbid Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him from reciting it. The Prophet was only cautious regarding this matter.

Therefore, Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him did not recite the poetry of other poets exactly as they said it. As for him formulating verses of poetry by himself, some scholars are of the opinion that He said a verse of poetry in the Battle of Hunayn (2). He is narrated to have said, 'I am the Prophet, without a lie. I am the son of `Abd Al-Muttalib.'

This Prophetic saying did comply with a poetic measure that is known as rajaz. However, this is only a saying that coincidentally fitted a poetic measure. There is a difference between complete excerpts of speech that are regulated and subjected to a poetic measure and rhyme, and a single sentence of speech that coincidentally fits a measure without intention.

In fact, there are distinct verses in the Quran itself that coincidentally fit a poetic measure. We still do not say that they are verses of poetry. For example, Allah Glorified is He says, '(But as for you, O believers,) never shall you attain to true piety unless you spend on others out of what you cherish yourselves.' (Al-'Imran: 92)

---

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (6147) and Muslim in his Sahih (3256) in the Book of Poetry (Hadiths 2-6) from the Hadith of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him.

(2) Narrated by Muslim in his Sahih (1776) in the Book of Jihad and Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (3217) from the Hadith of Al-Bara` ibn `Azib, which is that a man asked him: 'Did you flee from Allah's Messenger on the day of Hunayn?' Al-Bara` said: 'Allah's Messenger did not flee. On that day, Hawazin took part in the battle as archers. When we attacked them, they retreated and we fell upon the spoils. They advanced towards us with arrows. I then saw Prophet Muhammad on his white mule and Abu Sufyan ibn Al-Harith was holding its bridle. He was saying: "I am the Prophet, without a lie. I am the son of `Abd Al-Muttalib."'

Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: 'This, then, is he about whom you have been blaming me.' (Yusuf: 32) He also says, 'Tell My servants that I alone am truly forgiving, and the True Giver of grace' (al-Hijr: 49).

These verses coincidentally fit a poetic measure, but they are not called poetry because poetry is a measured saying that is intentionally rhymed.

The disbelievers accused Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him of being a magician and a poet. They also claimed that he was a fortune-teller. The Quran refuted their claims regarding poetry: 'And in no way did We teach him poetry; and in no way would poetry have suited him.' (Ya Sin: 69)

On the other hand, the Quran did not negate the claim of magic. This is because the Quran has a sublime style of argumentation. The closest thing to the Quranic verses is poetry, and this is why the Quran negated the claim that Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him was a poet. Magic, on the other hand, involves the usage of cryptic characters and meaningless speech. Therefore, the Quran did not say, 'We have not taught him magic' because the claim was intrinsically fragile. The refutation of this claim was much simpler.

If Prophet Muhammad had been a magician, and those who believed in him had been bewitched by him, then why was he unable to bewitch the disbelievers as well. Therefore, their denial and disbelief in him were the strongest evidence that he was not a magician because a bewitched person does not have any resistance against magic.

Allah Glorified is He also refuted the claim that he was a fortuneteller. Allah Glorified is He says, '...and it is not the word of a foreteller' (al-Haqqa: 42). This is because fortune-tellers speak using inane rhymed prose. The Quran is the complete opposite of this. The Arabs were a people of eloquence and rhetoric. They were the most knowledgeable of people in the issue of linguistic styles and distinguishing between them. They were perfectly capable of distinguishing between the Quran and other types of speech, and they even set markets and exhibitions for the sake of poetry and eloquence.

Allah Glorified is He clarifies the rationale behind Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him not saying poetry: 'Indeed (this revelation) is nothing (else) except a reminder and a divine Quran' (Ya Sin: 69).

Lexically, this verse is in the form of a negation. This method of negation is used to emphasize that the Quran is nothing other than a reminder for the people who use their intellect. It is only a divine discourse that is conveyed by a clear recitation. It may have a tune that is more pleasant in the righteous ears than the music of poetry, and some people transcend into a sublime world of meanings when they hear the Quran. However, the Quran is not a book of poetry.

The reason for this transcendental beauty is that Allah Glorified is He is the One Who revealed these verses to His creation. He revealed the speech that has the most profound effect on His created beings and that will cause them to incline towards Him. This inclination will occur easily if the heart still possesses the natural disposition with which mankind was originally created. However, if people depart from this natural disposition, the Quran will not have the same effect on them. The source of revelation is certainly the same, but the dispositions of the listeners may vary.

Allah Glorified is He explains this matter for us: 'And among them are (the ones) who listen to you (O Muhammad), until, when they go out of your presence, they say to the knowledgeable ones (amongst them), "What did he say just now?"' (Muhammad: 16). So, Allah Glorified is He commanded Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him to respond to them by saying: 'To the ones who have believed it (the Quran), it is a guidance and a cure; and the ones who do not believe, in their ears is an obstruction, and for them it is a blindness.' (Fussilat: 44)

We previously illustrated the importance of the listener's perception and disposition. We said that you may have to exhale over a hot cup of tea in order to cool it down, but in the winter, you probably exhale on your hands to warm them up. The action is the same, but its receiver is different. The same goes for people when they listen to the Quran. Some people receive Allah's Speech with a sound natural disposition. They understand it and are affected by it. Others receive Allah's Speech while they are busy with other engagements, so they are prevented from understanding it. Thus, they will not be transcendentally affected by Allah's speech.

Some people who do not speak a word of Arabic, but are profoundly affected when they hear or read Allah's speech, that their eyes may fill with tears. Why is this? There must be a factor in their natural disposition that allows them to be affected by its style.

Allah Glorified is He gave inspiration to inanimate objects, and they were affected by His speech. He also gave inspiration to animals and they understood it from Him. Thus, it is reasonable that He revealed a speech to rational men that coincides with their nature and affects them greatly.

Then, in the verse we are studying, Allah Glorified is He clarifies the mission of this clear Quran. He says, '…that he may warn whomever has a living (heart)' (Ya Sin: 70). Allah Glorified is He describes them as being alive. However, the material life will end in death. There is another form of life that is being stated in this verse. This is the life of intellect, thought and spiritual values. The rewards of these attributes will not be made completely manifest until after death.

All of mankind take part in a material life. That is why Allah Glorified is He bestowed upon them an element known as the ruh (spirit). This element gives the material existence a spiritual life, and the spirit's existence is part of Allah's Divine Knowledge and Command. After giving them the spirits with which material matter comes to life, He gave them the moral spirit with which their moral dispositions can be elevated. It is this moral spirit that elevates their real value in the Hereafter. It is true that these morals will give them peace of mind, rectitude, and stability in the life of this world, but nevertheless, the real reward will mostly appear in the Hereafter.

If Allah Glorified is He wills, he may give man a continuous life, just as Prophet Yahya (John) peace be upon him was given a continuous life. Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him asked his Lord: 'O my Lord! Surely the bones within me have become feeble, and my head is turned white with flaming white hair, and I have not been unanswered in invoking you, Lord! And surely, I fear what my kinsfolk would do after me, and my wife is barren. So bestow upon me, from Your close Grace, a constant patron, who will be my heir and also inherit the house of Ya`qub (Jacob) and make him, Lord, a pleasant (servant).' (Maryam: 4-6) Allah Glorified is He answered him: 'Thereupon the angels called out unto him: 'O Zakaryya (Zechariah)! We bring you the glad tiding of (the birth of) a son whose name shall be Yahya (John). And Allah said, "Never have We given this name to anyone before him."' (Maryam: 7) Therefore, Allah Glorified is He gave him the glad tidings of a boy, and gave him the name Yahya, which indicated that He was going to have a long life. When you name your child Dhaki (intelligent), for example, you are optimistic that he will be intelligent. If you name him Nabeel (noble), you are optimistic that he will be noble. However, is it within your power to accomplish this hope of yours? That is why an Arab poet once said, in grief about his deceased son:

I called my son Yahya so that he would live longer, but there is no way of stopping Allah's decree.

You may name the child according to an attribute you wanted to see in them, but Allah is the Only Giver of life and its bounties. Allah Glorified is He named him Yahya (John), because He has the Power to give him a continuous life. That is why Yahya (John) died as a martyr, and therefore, his life in this world became connected to the life of the Hereafter and Allah's Will was observed.

Allah Glorified is He says, '…that he may warn whomever has a living heart and that the true word (of punishment) will fall upon the disbelievers.' (Ya Sin: 70) Indeed, these disbelievers will deserve punishment because they did not benefit from the warnings.

Then, after that, Allah Glorified is He stated some of His signs in the universe. He says:

أَوَلَمْ يَرَوْا أَنَّا خَلَقْنَا لَهُم مِّمَّا عَمِلَتْ أَيْدِينَآ أَنْعَـٰمًا فَهُمْ لَهَا مَـٰلِكُونَ ﴿٧١﴾ وَذَلَّلْنَـٰهَا
لَهُمْ فَمِنْهَا رَكُوبُهُمْ وَمِنْهَا يَأْكُلُونَ ﴿٧٢﴾ وَلَهُمْ فِيهَا مَنَـٰفِعُ وَمَشَـٰرِبُ أَفَلَا يَشْكُرُونَ ﴿٧٣﴾

Can they not see how, among the things made by Our hands, We have created livestock they control [71] And made them obedient, so that some can be used for riding, some for food [72] Some for other benefits, and some for drink? Will they not give thanks? [73] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 71-73)

Here, Allah Glorified is He turned their attention towards the material world that they cannot deny. We previously said that the verb yaraw used in such verses could be referring to scientific awareness, or is a reference to the actual practice of seeing these signs with the organs of sight.

Allah says, '…that it is for them that We have created, among all the things which Our hands have made, the farm animals' (Ya Sin: 71). The words: '…which Our hands have made' (Ya Sin: 71) negated that any other creator was a partner with Allah Glorified is He in His creation. Rather, these living beings were created by Allah Glorified is He alone.

The phrase '…farm animals (an`am)' (Ya Sin: 71) refers to the domestic animals that are mentioned in the chapter of al-An`am, in a verse in which Allah Glorified is He says, 'His followers would have it that, in certain cases, any of these four kinds of cattle of either sex (is unlawful to man): either of the two sexes of sheep and of goats. Ask (them): "Is it the two males that He has forbidden, or the two females, or that which the wombs of the two females may contain? Tell me what you know in this respect, if what you say is true." And (likewise they declare as unlawful) either of the two sexes of camels and of bovine cattle. Ask (them): "Is it the two males that He has forbidden, or the two females, or that which the wombs of the two females may contain? Were you (yourselves) witnesses when Allah enjoined (all) this upon you?" And who could be more wicked than he who, without any (real) knowledge, attributes his own lying inventions to Allah, and thus leads people astray? Behold, Allah does not grace (such) evildoing folk with His guidance.' (al-An'am: 143-144)

These cattle, camels, sheep and goats are called an`am (blessings) because they are having manifest bounties in numerous ways. We benefit from them in our lives, and from them we take wool, fur, leather, and different kinds of meat and milk. We also use them for carrying loads. All these are obvious blessings in the Arab culture.

Then, indeed the creation of these animals is a blessing in itself. His saying '...of which they are (now) masters' (Ya Sin: 71) is another blessing because there are other animals that are wild and cannot be controlled by hunting or force. These wild animals are of little benefit when compared to the tame animals that man uses by herding, riding, and milking.

Then, there is another blessing, which is that Allah Glorified is He subjugated these animals for us. Allah Glorified is He says, '…and that We have subjected them to men's will' (Ya Sin: 72). If Allah Glorified is He had not subjected them to mankind's control, we would have been unable to benefit from them easily.

A camel, for example, can be herded by a child easily despite its massive size and strength. The child can make it kneel before riding it. How can this be? It is because Allah Glorified is He subjugated it to our use. On the other hand, a smaller snake scares us away because Allah Glorified is He has not subjected it for us. Indeed, a flea in the bed can disturb you and make you anxious, and you have no real power over it.

Therefore, the creation of these farm animals is a blessing in itself, and our control over them is another blessing. These are bounties granted for both the believers and the disbelievers because they are a gift of Allah's Lordship. Therefore, it is incumbent upon people to respect these blessings, and to ask themselves, 'How can we disbelieve in Allah when He is the One Who constantly bestows all these blessings upon us'? Unfortunately, some disbelievers did not stop at their own disbelief, but furthermore, prevented the messengers from spreading their religious call.

Allah Glorified is He says, '...so that some of them they may use for their riding (rakubuhum)' (Ya Sin: 72). This refers to the beasts of burden. The words: '…and of some they may eat' (Ya Sin: 72) is a reference to the foods we can produce from their milk while they are alive, which includes such food items as cheese, butter and so forth. Allah also says, '…and may have (yet other) benefits from them, and (milk) (masharib) to drink' (Ya Sin: 73). The Arabic word masharib is the plural of mashrab (a drink). Here, it refers to the water-skins that are made from the leather of these animals which the Arabs used to use as drinking utensils. The word masharib could also be a reference to the milk itself that we can consume after the female animals deliver their newly born offspring.

Then, Allah Glorified is He concluded these blessings with His saying: 'Will they not, then, be grateful?' (Ya Sin: 73) This phrase is placed in the form of a question so that the disbelievers can answer it themselves. Allah Glorified is He did not simply command these disbelievers, 'Be grateful to Me for these blessings'! Rather, He asked them, 'Are these blessings worthy of gratitude'? If they show gratitude, they will surely be showered with more blessings, as Allah Glorified is He says, 'If you are grateful (to Me), I shall most certainly give you more bounties' (Ibrahim: 7).

Therefore, it is obligatory upon them to thank Allah Glorified is He for His blessings, as these blessings are inviting them to have faith in this Creator Who constantly bestowed His blessings upon them. When a man receives a monthly wage from his employer, he directs respect and gratitude towards him. Does the One Creator Who bestowed all these blessings not deserve to be worshipped and thanked?

However, the matter did not end at their lack of gratitude. The Quran told us more about them, as Allah Glorified is He says:

وَٱتَّخَذُواْ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ ءَالِهَةً لَّعَلَّهُمْ يُنصَرُونَ ﴿٧٤﴾
لَا يَسْتَطِيعُونَ نَصْرَهُمْ وَهُمْ لَهُمْ جُندٌ مُّحْضَرُونَ ﴿٧٥﴾

Yet they have taken other gods besides God to help them[74]
Though these could not do so even if they called a whole army of them together! [75] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 74 -75)

The Quran stated this fact about them after Allah Glorified is He had explained the signs that confirm His Exalted Existence and Oneness. Men find signs for Allah's Existence in the horizons that surround them and also find such signs within themselves. If a person abandons the first set of universal signs and is heedless towards them, how can they be heedless to the signs within their non-detachable essence? That is why Allah Glorified is He says, 'In time We shall make them fully understand Our messages (through what they perceive) in the utmost horizons (of the universe) and within themselves, so that it will become clear unto them that this (revelation) is indeed the truth.' (Fussilat: 53)

Allah Glorified is He says, 'But (nay,) they worshipped deities other than Allah (hoping) to be succoured (by them)' (Ya Sin: 74). It is true that man may worship a higher being to succour him when he is in difficulty. However, how can he worship an idol that, instead, is in need of man to recover it when the wind topples it over or when it gets swept away by accident? If it falls, he has to put it back up, and if its arm breaks, he has to fix its parts. If a flood washes the idol away, it gets thrown in the mud. Therefore, how can he worship this idol as a partner with Allah Glorified is He?

You know that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him destroyed the idols of his people. They asked him: '… "have you done this to our gods, O Ibrahim?" He answered, "Nay, it was this one, the biggest of them, that did it: but ask them (yourselves) – provided they can speak."' (al-Anbiya': 62-63)

This is how Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him made them aware of the undeniable word of truth. They were only worshipping dumb inanimate objects that do not speak. 'And so they turned upon one another, saying, "Behold, it is you who are doing wrong."' (al-Anbiya': 64) However, they quickly realised the danger of this admission, and they returned to their usual stubbornness and obstinacy. Allah Glorified is He says, 'But then they relapsed into their former way of thinking and said, "You know very well that these (idols) cannot speak."' (al-Anbiya': 65)

At that point, Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him confronted them with this reality that they were trying to turn away from. He told them: 'Do you then worship, instead of Allah something that cannot benefit you in any way, nor harm you? Fie upon you and upon all that you worship instead of Allah! Will you not, then, use your reason?' (al-Anbiya': 66-67) That is why Allah Glorified is He refutes their ignorant ways: 'But (nay,) they worshipped deities other than Allah (hoping) to be succoured (by them)' (Ya Sin: 74). This was because these idols did not have the ability to give succour to those idolaters who worshipped them. Rather, it is the worshippers themselves that supported the idols.

On the Day of Resurrection Allah Glorified is He will gather them altogether. The worshipper will be gathered with that which he worshipped, so that they can confront one another. If the idol worshipper was resurrected by himself, he may probably wait for his false idols to help and defend him. Thus, they will be gathered altogether, as Allah Glorified is He says, 'How is it that (now) you cannot succour one another? Nay, but on that Day, they would willingly surrender (to Allah).' (as-Saffat: 25-26) Allah also says, 'And Allah will thus command: "Assemble all those who were bent on evildoing, together with others of their ilk and (with) all that they worshipped (besides Allah)."'

(as-Saffat: 22) They will be placed altogether in the fire, the idol worshipper and the worshipped idol. These idols will be fuel for the fire that will punish their ignorant worshippers.

After that, the context was then directed to Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him who the disbelievers stubbornly and obstinately denied. Allah Glorified is He says:

فَلَا يَحْزُنكَ قَوْلُهُمْ إِنَّا نَعْلَمُ مَا يُسِرُّونَ وَمَا يُعْلِنُونَ ﴿٧٦﴾

So [Prophet] do not be distressed at what they say: We know what they conceal and what they reveal [76] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 76)

Allah Glorified is He consoled His Messenger to put his mind at ease. Any consolation must have a consoler and a person being consoled. In this case, the consoler is Allah Glorified is He the One Who sent the messenger being consoled. Thus, Allah Glorified is He was comforting Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him in his times of difficulty. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He never left His messengers without support, and the trials and tribulations the believers experienced were only placed to purify their souls and elevate their creed. Thus, only the true believers carried the responsibility of the message and defended it.

That is why Allah Glorified is He says, addressing Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him: ‘However, be not grieved (yahzunka) by the sayings of those (who deny the truth)’ (Ya Sin: 76). The Arabic word yahzunka (grieved you) is derived from the word huzn (sadness). This is the soul’s regret when a person does not accomplish what they were hoping for, and when their objectives are apparently failing. If Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him was sad and his soul was dispirited, who was going to console and remove his grief? Allah Glorified is He the one who sent him, consoled him because He knows what they keep secret and what they declare openly.

Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Verily, We know all that they keep secret as well as all that they bring into the open’ (Ya Sin: 76). What were these people keeping secret? Those that confronted Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him fell into two categories. The first category confronted him with courage. They declared on their tongues what was in their hearts, which was that they did not believe in him. These people were the disbelievers. The other categories were those who believed in him with their tongues, but concealed their disbelief in their hearts. These people were the hypocrites. The meaning of the words: '...all that they keep secret' (Ya Sin: 76) could be referring to their intrinsic hypocrisy, while the words: '…as well as all that they bring into the open,' (Ya Sin: 76) could be a reference to their disbelief.

On the other hand, the meaning of the words: 'all that they keep secret' could, in fact, be referring to their knowledge that he was a trustworthy and genuine prophet, while the words: '…as well as all that they bring into the open' could be referring to their acts of disbelief. The evidence of their knowledge that Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him was truthful can be found in Allah's words: 'And in their wickedness and self-exaltation they rejected them, although their minds were convinced of their truth' (an-Naml: 14).

Some of these disbelievers did not even deny the Quran or object to it. Their only objection was that it was revealed to Prophet Muhammad himself, and that is why, as the Quran states, these disbelievers said: 'Why was this Quran not bestowed on some great man of the two cities?' (az-Zukhruf: 31)

Some disbelievers also entrusted Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him with their precious property. All of this was proof that they believed his trustworthiness. However, despite this, they openly declared words of disbelief. This disbelief in Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him was out of fear for their worldly authority along with their position of leadership and power. Prophet Muhammad's teachings came to decrease their transgressions and superiority, and to put an end to their mastery over the weak and impoverished people. Therefore, they stood against Prophet Muhammad's call with all their might despite their belief in his honesty.

The people in Medina were preparing to choose a king before the migration of Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him to their land.(1) When

---

(1) Ibn Hisham mentioned in As-Sira An-Nabawyyah (3/216) that the people of Ibn Abu Ubay had arranged pearls in order to crown him and make him their ruler. Then,=

Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him entered the city, the people gathered around him and the kingdom was dissolved before it was born. Thus, the worldly authority of the disbelievers disappeared. It also disappeared from the hands of the Jews, who were people of knowledge, wealth, and combat. All of this disappeared on the day the word of Islam was exalted.

The meaning of the words: '...all that they keep secret as well as all that they bring into the open' could also be a description that the actions of man have two main elements. The first element is the intention which is a secret that is conspired inside his heart. This is the basic belief that pushes the person to act. If it is translated into action, it thus comes out into the open. According to this meaning, Allah Glorified is He was informing Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him that He has the Absolute Knowledge of their corrupt concealed intentions as well as the shameful acts that these disbelievers and hypocrites declared. However, the matter will not just end with Allah's Knowledge. The consequence of this divine knowledge will be that Allah Glorified is He will punish the disobedient disbelievers and reward the obedient believers.

Therefore, this verse was instructing them to think deeply about their own affairs with Allah Glorified is He. It was a warning from the effects of this divine knowledge. That is why Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: 'And be not grieved by the sayings of those (who deny the truth). Behold, all Might and Glory belong to Allah alone.' (Yunus: 65)

After Allah Glorified is He stated His signs in the universe such as those signs in the earth, the sun, the moon, the orbits, the beasts and farm animals, He also mentions His signs in man himself. If the signs in the horizons surrounding them were not enough for them to turn to Allah Glorified is He then there were also signs within themselves that will not leave them.

Allah Glorified is He says:

= Prophet Muhammad arrived at Medina while they were doing this. Ibn Abu Ubay's heart was thus filled with hatred and enmity towards Prophet Muhammad. He entered Islam reluctantly and maliciously as a hypocrite.

أَوَلَمۡ يَرَ ٱلۡإِنسَٰنُ أَنَّا خَلَقۡنَٰهُ مِن نُّطۡفَةٖ فَإِذَا هُوَ خَصِيمٞ مُّبِينٞ ﴿٧٧﴾

Can man not see that We created him from a drop of fluid? Yet – lo and behold! – he disputes openly [77] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 77)

Allah's saying: 'Did man, then, not see' means, 'Does he not know'. This is because man did not literally see how he was created. Some people may ask, 'Who is the one who informed man that he was created by Allah'? Indeed, man knows this reality because no one in the entire universe has ever claimed to create him except Allah Glorified is He. Then, messengers came to us, including Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him who informed us that Allah Glorified is He created us. No reasonable person ever objected to this concept. Even the polytheists did not dispute it, and despite the many things that man claimed for himself, no man ever claimed that they created mankind.

The basic logical rule is that a claim can be confirmed for the one who makes it as long as there is no objection, otherwise, if this claim is not submitted to Allah Glorified is He then who is the creator of this world? If there was another creator, why has he not objected to the concept of Allah's divinity? Why has the other creator not demanded their rights concerning this creation? If that creator has become scared of confrontation or has not been made aware of this claim, he does not deserve to be a god.

We may notice that Allah Glorified is He says in the previous verses: 'Are they, then, not aware that it is for them that We have created, among all the things which Our hands have made, the domestic animals of which they are (now) masters.' (Ya Sin: 71), and in this verse, He says, 'Did man, then, not see (and become aware)' (Ya Sin: 77). In the former verse, he addressed the wider group of people in mankind, while in the latter verse he addressed an individual person.

Some scholars said that this verse was revealed concerning Ubay ibn Khalaf(1). He held on to the bone of an animal, crushed it into small bits in front of

---

(1) There are several narrations regarding the circumstances in which this verse was revealed and those are as follows:

- Revealed regarding Ubay ibn Khalaf, and this is the position of Mujahid, `Ikrima, `Urwah ibn Az-Zubayr, As-Suddi and Qatada. =

Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him and said, ‘Do you claim that your Lord will bring this to life again?’

Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him said, ‘Yes. He will bring you back to life and He will put you in the Fire.’ This verse could also be directed to mankind in the absolute sense, or for every denier of the concept of Resurrection, like Ubay ibn Khalaf.

Regarding His saying: ‘...from a [mere] sperm-drop…’ (Ya Sin: 77), empirical science didn not discover anything of this matter until only recently, trying, modestly, to reveal some of the secrets of the beginning and development of human life, that we did not know anything about before. The drop of sperm is the substance, the microbe, or the effective seed that brings about fertilization when it makes contact with the egg. The drop of sperm swims in a fluid: the semen that it lives in. That is why Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: ‘Was he not just a drop of spilt-out sperm.’ (al-Qiyama: 37)

Modern empirical science has confirmed that the drop of sperm is responsible for determining whether the child will be a male or a female. The egg is nothing other than a vessel. Therefore, the woman has no say in this matter, and the evidence is in Allah’s statement: ‘Was he not just a drop of spilt-out sperm, which became a clinging form, which Allah shaped in due proportion, fashioning from it the two sexes, male and female?’ (al-Qiyama: 37-39), i.e. the two sexes are from the drop of sperm. We said before: it is amazing that the ancient Arab women understood this reality that science only arrived at in modern times.

As for the Hadith of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him in this matter, it says that,: ‘If the man’s fluid ghalaba (prevails) over the woman’s fluid, the child will incline towards his father, and if the woman’s fluid = - Revealed regarding Al-`As ibn Wa`il, and this is a position of Ibn `Abbas.

- Revealed regarding `Abdullah ibn Ubay ibn Sulul, and it is another position of Ibn `Abbas. In his Tafsir, (3/581) Ibn Kathir said about the latter position: ‘This is rejected because the chapter is Meccan and `Abdullah ibn Ubay ibn Sulul was only in Medina. When everything is taken into equal consideration, these verses were revealed regarding either Ubay ibn Khalaf or Al-`As ibn Wa`il, or both, and in general, they apply to anyone who denies the Resurrection.

prevails the child, will incline towards his mother.'(1) They understood from this Hadith that determining whether a child is male or female depends on the fluid that comes first. However, when we consider the actual wording, the word ghalaba indicates predominance and precedence, and precedence can only be for the components that come from one drop of sperm, and are released in one direction. Therefore, they do not meet, and the meaning of yaghlib is that it comes first.

We said previously that now they are aware that when the egg comes out from the woman it causes a chemical change in her constitution, causing her body temperature to increase as well as change in her condition and heart rate. That is why they invented a thermometer to measure these changes, and with it the woman can know the time in which the egg goes down.

The drop of sperm is a microbe that is finite in its smallness. It can only be seen with a microscope. Allah have mercy on Al-'Aqqad(2) who described this smallness in a very precise manner. He said: 'Indeed the procreation of the entire world – meaning the drops of sperm that bring them all into existence – can be placed in half of a tailor's thimble. Thus, glory be to the Creator Who brings out of this tiny, finite drop of sperm a complete human being. From it He brings out solid bones and muscles that are partially solid and partially supple. From it we have cartilage, nerves, flowing blood, the brain and so forth.

(1) This Hadith is the response of Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to a question from 'Abdullah ibn Salam: 'Why does a child resemble its mother or its father?' He peace and blessings be upon him said: 'As for the child, if a man has sexual intercourse with his wife and gets discharge first, the child will resemble the father, and if the woman gets discharge first, the child will resemble her.' Ibn Salam then said: 'I bear witness that there is no Allah but Him and that you are the Messenger of Allah.' It has been narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (2938) from the Hadith of Anas and from Muslim in his Sahih (211) in the Book of Menstruation from the Hadith of Umm Salim: 'Indeed the man's fluid is thick and white, while the woman's fluid is thin and yellow. Whichever of them prevails and takes precedence then the child will come to resemble.'

(2) Abbas Mahmoud Al-Aqqad, a scholar of literature who produced several written works who originated from Dumiat. His ancestors moved to Al-Mahalla Al-Kubra and one of them was working in Aqada al-Harir, and thus he came to be known as Al-Aqqad. His mother was Kurdish. He was born in 1889 AD in Aswan and died in Cairo in 1963 at the age of 76. He is buried in Aswan. Az-Zirikli, Al-A`lam 2/366.

This is what happens in the material body. What is more amazing is that this body also contains an intellect that comprehends, a tongue that speaks and tastes, eyes that see, a hand that grasps, a nose that smells, fingertips that touch and legs with feet that take steps. All of this is from a drop of sperm, this microbe that cannot be seen by the naked eye, this drop of sperm that the Quran describes as being vile fluid, vile because it comes out from the same place as urine. It is discarded in the sewage system along with contaminants, and if it gets on your clothes you must wash it off. Yet, from this vile fluid man is created, and indeed he reaches the highest levels of transgression and tyranny. How?

They said: ‘It is because man has inherent good qualities and talents that he loves to display. When he is with those he loves, he is impressed with his beautiful appearance, his wealth or his intelligence and so forth. Thus, he tries to display these talents to them. If he is shown enmity then he has other talents for his enemies. With the enemy, he exerts all his talents to conquer his enemies. These are gifts and talents that are useful in situations of anger, animosity, and argumentation’.

That is why one of them said: ‘How many of Allah’s blessings are within me that I have praised him for which He gathers within me as three talents. The first is for me, the second is for my loved ones and companions and the third is for my enemy.

All of this is the meaning of ‘...then at once he is a clear adversary?’ (Ya Sin: 77) which means that after man was created from this drop of sperm and from this vile fluid; suddenly, he becomes ‘a clear adversary’ (Ya Sin: 77) meaning a fierce enemy. The adjective mubin ‘clear’ (Ya Sin: 77) means that he clearly displays the talents of enmity that he has. Man cannot be mubin for anyone else unless the feature is clear within him; for, as the proverb says, ‘he who lacks something, cannot give it’. A bad teacher is the one who cannot explain a piece of information to his student. This is because this piece of information is not clear for him in the first place. If the piece of information had been clear in his mind, he would have been able to explain it by any means.

Therefore, the meaning of ‘a clear adversary’ (Ya Sin: 77) is that he can display what is within himself very well. That is why you say: ‘I clarified it for you because it is clear for me’; ‘I was able to make it known for you because it has been made known to me' and 'I made you understand because I have understood'. They are, thus, two types of talents. In situations of enmity the talents of man are accomplished; and he exerts all of them; and he does not spare any of them. For in enmity he displays whatever he has: wealth, courage, tricks and so forth.

It is amazing that all of this is implicit within a drop of sperm. It is also amazing that man shifts this enmity within himself and his enmity towards his enemies to enmity towards His Lord and Creator.

That is why the True Lord illustrates this enmity, not just that of Ubay, the cause of revelation, but of everyone who is like Ubay:

وَضَرَبَ لَنَا مَثَلًا وَنَسِيَ خَلْقَهُۥ ۖ قَالَ مَن يُحْيِ ٱلْعِظَٰمَ وَهِيَ رَمِيمٌ ﴿٧٨﴾
قُلْ يُحْيِيهَا ٱلَّذِىٓ أَنشَأَهَآ أَوَّلَ مَرَّةٍ ۖ وَهُوَ بِكُلِّ خَلْقٍ عَلِيمٌ ﴿٧٩﴾ producing arguments against Us, forgetting his own creation. He says, 'Who can give life back to bones after they have decayed?' [78] Say, 'He who created them in the first place will give them life again: He has full knowledge of every act of creation [79] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 78 - 79)

We have discussed, before, the matter of striking a likeness and we said that darb (striking) is when one object is violently brought down into contact with another object. A condition therein is that the one striking is stronger than the one being struck. If not, then, the result will be the opposite. Ar-Rafi`i(1) Allah rest his soul said in this regard:

O he who mocks the misfortunes of fate
You are harsh with yourself, not with fate
O he who strikes the boulder with a stick
Have you struck the stick or have you struck the rock?

---

(1) Mustafa Sadiq Ar-Rafi`i, was a scholar of literature and a poet. He is originally from Tripoli in modern-day Lebanon. He was born in Bahtim in his maternal grandmother's house in 1881 AD and he died in Tanta in 1927 AD. His poetry was mostly introductory verses or lines, but his prose was first-class. His writings include Wahi Al-Qalam, Diwan Sh`ir and Ta`rikh Adab Al-'Arab.

Likewise, the striking of a likeness is the bringing into existence of something that comes into contact with something else, in order to clarify for you the real, decisive effect. When you doubt something, for example, it is clarified for you by way of an example or a likeness that cannot be doubted, and thus your mind understands. In this regard, we have His saying when He wants to clarify for us the falsity of idolatry, and the difference between it and monotheism. Allah says, ‘Allah puts forward this illustration: can a man who has for his masters several partners at odds with each other be considered equal to a man devoted wholly to one master? All praise belongs to Allah, though most of them do not know.’ (az-Zumar: 29)

Yes, a slave who has for his masters several disputing partners and a slave owned by one master are not equal, and likewise idolatry and monotheism are not equal. His saying: ‘And he strikes out a likeness for us…’ (Ya Sin: 78) is referring to Ubay ibn Khalaf, and the likeness that he struck was that he took a bone that had decayed, and he began to crush it in front of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying: ‘Do you claim, O Muhammad, that your Lord will bring this back to life after it turns to what you have seen’? Even if the verses were revealed regarding Ubay, they are certainly not restricted to him. Rather, they apply to anyone who denies the resurrection and refuses to believe in this matter.

The meaning of, ‘...and forgets his own creation…’ (Ya Sin: 78) is that if he reflected on himself and remembered his own creation, he would find the proof for what he is denying. Allah Glorified is He created you, man, from nothing, and thus you are brought into existence. When you die these remnants from you remain disintegrate and scattered in the earth. It is known, according to what our minds can perceive, that bringing into existence from that which already exists is easier than bringing into existence from nothing: ‘He is the One who originates creation and will do it again—this is even easier for Him…’ (ar-Rum: 27). The True Lord is addressing us in this verse according to our intellectual capacity and our logic, otherwise, it would not be said that something is easy and easier for Him. This can only be said with regards to human beings.

As for His words, ‘He says, “who can give life back to bones after they have decayed?”’ (Ya Sin: 78), they indicate that when this question is presented to the disbelievers who deny the resurrection they say: no one can bring the dead back to life. Why? It is because they are measuring the matter according to the incapacity of human beings, and not according to the absoluteness of the Creator's Power.

It is amazing that Allah Glorified is He has affirmed for man the attribute of creation. He says, '…Glory be to Allah, the best of creators' (al-Mu'minun: 14), while man rejects and denies Allah's ability to create. If your Lord does not refrain from granting the ability to create, do not begrudge Him for being the best of creators.

We said, before, that if you find an attribute of Allah Glorified is He being used to describe human beings, then, you must understand it within the framework of His being: 'There is nothing like Him...' (ash-Shura: 11) because Allah Glorified is He has a wajh (a face) but not like the faces we know; He has a yadd (a hand) but not like the hands we know and so forth. Allah Glorified is He is One and Unique in His Essence; One and Unique in His Attributes; and One and Unique in His actions. Allah Glorified is He exists and you exist, but your existence is not like His Existence. Allah Glorified is He is wealthy and you are wealthy, but your wealth is not like Allah's wealth. His wealth is inherent and is never separated from Him, while your wealth is given to you.

Allah Glorified is He is the Creator and you are a creator, but there is a difference between your creation and Allah's creation. You create from that which already exists while He creates from nothingness. Your creation is inanimate, without life, whereas Allah's creation has life: it grows, nourishes itself, multiplies and so forth. Thus, you are a creator, but your Lord is the best of creators. Your Lord has attributes of absolute perfection, and from them He pours forth over His creation and gives them some of His attributes, but He still has Absolute Power.

The meaning of 'having been in a state of decay' (ramim)' (Ya Sin: 78) is the state of the bones when they are old, decayed and disintegrated.

Then, the True Lord responds to this denier and his ilk: 'Say, "He who created them in the first place…"' (Ya Sin: 79). 'Created them (`Ansha`aha)…' (Ya Sin: 79), mean He created them from nothing, and He is going to bring them into being again from that which He initially created. His saying: '…in the first place…' (Ya Sin: 79) in response to this denier reveals that there is another instance, and another bringing to life other than the first. His words: '…He has full knowledge of every act of creation' (Ya Sin: 79) refer to the first creation and the second creation. Knowledge of the first creation indicates granting man attributes and talents within his essence, settling him in the earth and providing him with the Way that regulates his life therein.

With this way, He guides him to the path of goodness, warns him about the paths of evil, and clarifies for him the subsequent reward for each. Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He has Full Knowledge of the other creation in the Hereafter, i.e. He knows how to reward man according to all that he put forward (in the life of this world). Therefore, the meaning of '…He has full knowledge of every act of creation' (Ya Sin: 79) is that He has Full Knowledge of how to assign duties to him and how to reward him. The reward is commensurate with the duties assigned.

Muslim philosophers wanted to clarify this meaning for us. They said: 'When Allah wanted to create from nothingness, and before the sky and the earth existed, He said: 'O sky! Come out and be sky!', and thus it was. The same goes for the earth. Therefore, it is His Powerfulness that did, and it is the powerlessness of things that was done. So, what is the outcome of these two components? Indeed, both are existent and continuing; the powerfulness of the doer and the powerlessness of things'.

ٱلَّذِى جَعَلَ لَكُم مِّنَ ٱلشَّجَرِ ٱلۡأَخۡضَرِ نَارٗا فَإِذَآ أَنتُم مِّنۡهُ تُوقِدُونَ ﴿٨٠﴾

It is He who produces fire for you out of the green tree – lo and behold! – and from this you kindle fire [80]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 80)

The True Lord is putting forth to them another evidence of His Absolute Power: 'if you are in denial of the resurrection then look at this material sign that you witness'. The one who brings decayed bones back to life is also the one who produces from the green tree fire that you kindle. Thus, the green twig turns into flames. Greenness is proof of wetness and moisture. How does fire come from water? This sign is seen every day in Arab environments. It is known that firewood is the first fuel known to man and used by him properly because it is the purest of fuels. It is also healthy. It doesn not pollute the environment or harm it. It is for you to compare between firewood and petrol, for example. Then, you will realise the difference.

أَوَلَيْسَ ٱلَّذِى خَلَقَ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضَ بِقَٰدِرٍ عَلَىٰٓ أَن يَخْلُقَ مِثْلَهُم ۚ بَلَىٰ وَهُوَ ٱلْخَلَّٰقُ
ٱلْعَلِيمُ ﴿٨١﴾ إِنَّمَآ أَمْرُهُۥٓ إِذَآ أَرَادَ شَيْـًٔا أَن يَقُولَ لَهُۥ كُن فَيَكُونُ ﴿٨٢﴾

Is He who created the heavens and earth not able to create the likes of these people? Of course He is! He is the All Knowing Creator [81] When He wills something to be, His way is to say, "Be"– and it is! [82] (The Quran, Ya Sin: 81- 82)

This is advancement in evidence. After He mentions the sign of producing fire from the green tree He puts forward stronger evidence which is the creation of the skies and the earth. The skies are evidence of something high and fixed that does not change. The earth is tangible evidence for us; we witness it and we come into direct contact with it. The standpoint of this verse comes in another verse where the True Lord says, 'The creation of the heavens and earth is greater by far than the creation of mankind, though most people do not know it.' (Ghafir: 57)

If one of you said: 'Explain to us how the creation of the skies and the earth—despite the fact that they do not feel, speak or have knowledge and so forth—are greater than the creation of mankind', we say: 'Indeed, the creation of the skies and the earth is greater than the creation of mankind because from the time that Allah Glorified is He created them originally they have not changed, and they will remain as such until the Hour is established'. As for you, O man, you die. You die when you are a child, and you even die when you are an embryo in your mother's womb. You die in your youth and you die when you are are a decrepit old man. The utmost that man can reach if his life is lengthened in the life of this world is one hundred years or maybe a few years more. Then, how does your life span compare to the life span of the sun, the moon, or the earth? Have you ever seen a servant who has a longer life span than the one he serves?

We succeed one another in this universe as individuals, nations, and states; all disappear and come to an end, while the skies and the earth remain as they are, proud and mighty. No change happens to them. They never exit from the law of subjugation, in anything. From the time that Allah Glorified is He created this universe we have not seen a celestial body go out of its orbit, fail to comply with its appointed times or be prevented from carrying out its task.

This is the state of the inanimate objects in the skies and the earth, so what is your state, you who possess intellects? If we were to talk about material substance, it remains while you die. These inanimate objects support one another in meanings and values, while you differ amongst yourselves and fight with one another, so in what way are you better and greater creatures? That is why the True Lord responds in the form of a negative question: 'Is He who created the heavens and earth not able to create the likes of these people?' (Ya Sin: 81)

Then He says, 'bala (yes), indeed He is able,' and '…He is the All Knowing Creator.' (Ya Sin: 81) The word khallaq (creator) is a hyperbolic form of the word khaliq. This is in order to stress the matter for the one who denies it. Furthermore, He is 'The All Knowing' (Ya Sin: 81). He is the All Knowing of who He created.

Then, He says, 'Verily, when He wills something to be, His way is to say to it, 'Be'—and it is!' (Ya Sin: 82) This is a subtle indication from the True Lord for everyone who denies the Resurrection. It is as if Allah Glorified is He is saying to them: 'O you who deny Allah's Power to resurrect bones that have decayed, do you think that Allah creates by means of practice, in the same way that you create'? Allah Glorified is He is the Creator and He creates without practice. Rather he creates with the word 'Be!', or indeed He creates merely as He wills. If He wills something it is, without Him saying or commanding anything. The word 'Be!' is only to help us understand the matter.

We clarified the process before, by way of example—and for Allah is the highest similitude. We said: 'How can you, O man, deny Allah's Power when He has given you something that is similar within yourself? When you, for example, want to stand up from your seat what do you do? Do you command your muscles to move? Do you know which muscles will make you stand up, and what nerves govern this process'?

You simply stand because of your will to stand, and you have no say in the matter. The evidence is that a small child who does not know anything about the formation of his body stands up if he wants to stand. So, if things move for you—O man—without you telling them to do so; is it appropriate for you to deny this with respect to your Lord and Creator?

If you said: 'Why do I not command my limbs, and say to them 'Do this and that...' We say: 'The True Lord says 'Be!' to something because He knows that things will carry out His command. They will not act against what He wills. As for you, O man, are you confident that they will carry out your command if you command them? Indeed, you are not confident of this matter, based on the proof that when Allah Glorified is He strips you off this power your limbs no longer obey you. Thus, if you want to stand you cannot. The limbs are paralysed and cannot move anymore’.

So, we say that if a created being can control his limbs simply by his will, are we going to deem it as far-fetched that the Creator, the Most Exalted, controls this universe that has been created by Him?

The word ‘Be!’ is said by Allah Glorified is He to make it easier for us to understand this matter. He says it because things never miss to obey Him and compliance with His command. As for you, if you said the same word (Be) nothing would respond to you. That is why the True Lord says, explaining how the earth responds to His command: ‘Obeying its Lord as it rightly must.’ (al-Inshiqaq: 5) It is appropriate for the earth to listen and obey.

In His words, ‘...to say to it…’ (Ya Sin: 82), ‘it refers to the thing that has not come into existence yet. So, how does He address it when it is still non-existent? They said: ‘The Creator created everything in pre-eternity in a world called ‘Alam Al-Mithal’ (the world of analogies). So, the things do actually exist, but they await the command to become manifest and go out into the world of existence. That is why one of the knowers of Allah said: ‘they are matters that He reveals, but does not start’ (They do not have a start or an end). Allah the Exalted then says:

فَسُبْحَٰنَ ٱلَّذِى بِيَدِهِۦ مَلَكُوتُ كُلِّ شَىْءٍ وَإِلَيْهِ تُرْجَعُونَ ﴿٨٣﴾

So glory be to Him in whose Hand lies control over all things. It is to Him that you will all be brought back [83]
(The Quran, Ya Sin: 83)

We know from the previous verse that when the True Lord says ‘Be!’ things respond and obey Him. On the other hand, if man says the same word, nothing will respond to him. We said that if you find an attribute of Allah Glorified is He being used to describe human beings, then you must understand it within the framework of '...There is nothing like Him...' (ash-Shura: 11). Thus, it is natural for all these verses and chapters to be concluded with 'So Glory be to Him in Whose hands is the dominion of all things…' (Ya Sin: 83). That is to say: transcendent is He above resembling anyone in His Essence, in His Attributes, and in His Actions.

The word malakut (the dominion) (Ya Sin: 83) is from mulk (dominion) and the three radical letters mim, lam and kaf are used for four meanings. The first is maalik (owner) and he is the one who owns something, regardless of how insignificant it is. Even if the only thing he owns is the clothes on his back he is still called maalik. The second is malik (king), and he is the one who dominates the one who owns, i.e. he is in a position to administer him and his behaviour. The third is mulk (dominion) and it is when a king ascends in outward matters that the people acknowledge. The fourth is malakut which means concealed and not manifest mulk (dominion). It is stronger and more general than mulk.

Something could be from the world of al-malakutk, but then it moves to the world of al-mulk, such as things that were concealed and man discovered them or invented them, and thus they became witnessed. There are other things that always remain in the world of al-malakut and we do not know anything about them except in the Hereafter. This is the type that disbelievers deny. In this regard, we have His saying about the affair of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: 'In this way We showed Ibrahim (Abraham) [Allah's] mighty dominion over the heavens and the earth...' (al-An'am: 75).

Yes, Allah Glorified is He showed Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him the world of al-malakut because when He showed him the world of al-mulk and tested him, he passed the test with excellence, and he was successful in every stage of his life. He was successful when he was an old man and was commanded to slaughter his son Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him. He was successful when he was thrown in the fire. For this reason, he became worthy of being shown the secrets of the universe, and the world of al-malakut. It's is just as if you have amongst your children one righteous child in whom you see signs of superiority; you will distinguish him in a way which gives him preference over the rest of your children. Likewise, whoever becomes very good at his worship of Allah, Allah perfects His giving to him.

In this regard we also have the story that the Quran relates to us in the chapter of al-Kahf of the righteous slave whom Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him accompanied and learned from; the one of whom Allah Glorified is He says, ‘and found one of Our servants—a man to whom We had granted Our Mercy and whom We had given knowledge of Our own.’ (al-Kahf: 65)

This righteous servant was not a prophet, nor was revelation given to him, but despite that the Prophet learned from him. Why? It is because he took what the messenger had come with and applied it to himself. When Allah Glorified is He saw from him that he could be trusted with His methods and secrets He increased his knowledge and granted him from His own knowledge, and unveiled to him the secrets of al-malakut.

Have you not noticed that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him got angry at him when he made the hole in the ship and purposely made it defective, while it belonged to poor impoverished people? This is the world of al-mulk that the righteous servant knew about. As for his knowledge of the world of al-malakut, it is in His saying ‘...I damaged it because I knew that coming after them was a king who was seizing every [serviceable] boat by force.’ (al-Kahf: 79) Allah Glorified is He revealed to the righteous servant part of the world of al-malakut as he revealed to Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him the malakut of the heavens.

The word malakut carries the meaning of hyperbole, such as rahamut (great mercy), jabarut (exercise of absolute power) and rahabut (great fear), so there is thus hyperbole in mulk; but we notice amongst the scholars of Quranic recitation that one of them says, ‘malik yawm ad-din’ ‘Master of the Day of Judgement’ (al-Fatiha: 4), instead of malik (without any hyperbole). They said: ‘It is because the Day of Judgement is being discussed, and on this day, all of the mulk is for Allah Glorified is He and no one owns anything, not even the clothes that they wear’. In this regard, we also have the words we say in the call to prayer: ‘Allahu Akbar’ (Allah is the Greatest); the attribute Akbar is mentioned without any hyperbole, and not His name Al-Kabir (the Ever-Great) is not mentioned. How can this then, be the starting supplication of the prayer, which is the pillar of the faith, instead of the name? They said: ‘It is because the call to prayer takes people away from their work so that they can respond to the call of their Lord, and work has its consideration in Islam because it is man's duty in life. With it he achieves obedience to Allah and that is why the religion appreciates work and does depreciate it.

Allahu Akbar indicates that work is great and important, but Allah Glorified is He is Greater and the call for your Lord is, thus, more important. As for Al-Kabir (the Ever-Great), it is one of Allah's Names, and it means that everything other than Him is small. That is why the call to prayer contains the description and not the name.

His word malakut in His statement: 'So Glory be to Him in Whose hands is the dominion of all things…' (Ya Sin: 83) means what you see and what you do not see of al-mulk—what is hidden from you, then you reached and discovered by knowledge; that which we don not see until Allah Glorified is He informs one of us, His servants, of: 'He is the One who knows what is hidden. He does not disclose it except to a messenger of His choosing.' (al-Jinn: 26-27)

The truth is that the divine secrets and hidden things of the universe are not discovered by man but rather, they are unveiled for him. Indeed, for every secret in the universe that Allah Glorified is He wants to manifest there is a lifetime and a birthdate. If its birthdate coincides with your searching then it appears on your hands, and if not then Allah Glorified is He makes it manifest for you coincidentally at its appointed time, if you have not been looking for it. That is why they say, 'Indeed seventy-seven percent of life's discoveries have come about coincidentally'.

Allah says in the verse of Al-Kursi (the verse of The Throne): '...He knows what is before them and what is behind them, but they do not comprehend any of His Knowledge except what He wills...' (al-Baqara: 255). Thus, man only encompasses knowledge of a small portion of Allah's Knowledge, and he does not encompass this simple knowledge except by Allah's Knowledge and permission, and only when He gives permission for the birth and appearance of this thing.

His saying, '...and unto Him you all will be brought back!' (Ya Sin: 83) refers to the Day of Judgment. So, make sure you remember this reality. Whoever does not believe in the blessing of creation let him be instilled with fear of returning and going back. You were not created in vain and you will not be left without any purpose.

the chapter of

as Saffat

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of as Saffat(1) (Those Who Set the Ranks):

وَٱلصَّٰٓفَّٰتِ صَفّٗا ﴿١﴾ فَٱلزَّٰجِرَٰتِ زَجۡرٗا ﴿٢﴾
فَٱلتَّٰلِيَٰتِ ذِكۡرًا ﴿٣﴾ إِنَّ إِلَٰهَكُمۡ لَوَٰحِدٞ ﴿٤﴾

By those [angels] ranged in rows [1] Who rebuke reproachfully [2] And recite Allah's word [3] Truly your Lord is One [4] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 1-4)

The rhetorical device that Allah Glorified is He uses here is that of an oath. Allah Glorified is He is swearing upon the fact that, ‘Truly your Lord is One’ (as-Saffat: 4). The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him informed us of Allah’s Will regarding oaths. It is Allah’s wish that if we are to swear that we swear by Him alone. Nevertheless, we have seen in our studies that when the True Lord swears, He does so by one of His creations; sometimes He swears by His angels, sometimes by animals, sometimes by the mountains or the dawn and so on

The scholars said that this is because Allah Glorified is He may swear by whatever he wills to whomever He chooses. As for you and me we should swear only by Allah Glorified is He. To swear by something is a form of exalting that thing, and it is not appropriate for the believer to exalt any except Allah Glorified is He. It is incorrect to say, ‘by the life of so-and-so’ or ‘by so-and-so’s head’. If you want to swear you must swear by Allah Glorified is He as it has come to us in the Noble Hadith: ‘Whosoever swears, let him swear by Allah.’(1)

(1) This is the 37th chapter in the Noble Quran and has 182 verses. It is unanimously agreed that it is a Meccan chapter, as stated by Al-Qurtubi in his exegesis (8/5699). As-Suyuti mentions in Al-Itqan (1/27) on the authority of Ibn Ad-Daris in the chapter of Fada`il Al-Quran that the chapter of as-Saffat was revealed after the chapter of al-An`am and before the chapter of Luqman. On this basis, the chapter of as-Saffat would be the 55th chapter to be revealed.

If it happens that an oath has apparently been sworn by other than Allah Glorified is He know that this is not considered to be an oath, especially if it came from a scholar, or when the statement reveals an expectation that is based on certainty, such as one says, for instance, ‘by your father’s life, O so-and-so, do such-and-such’. This is not an oath; this is a musa`alah (a way of requesting). An oath is when you swear on something whether it happened or not. When one seeks the occurrence of something, however, it is called a request. Similarly, the True Lord says, ‘...be mindful of Allah, in whose name you make requests of one another and the wombs...’ (an-Nisa’: 1). He says, tasa`alun (make requests), and al-arham (the wombs). This means: ‘you request one another also by virtue of these ties of kinship caused by the wombs’. According to another way of recitation it is read bil-arham (by the wombs), in the genitive case (majrur) (‘bi’ which means by, causes the verb to be read as bil-arhami).

The True Lord swears by what He wills to whom He wills, whereas, you swear only by Allah Glorified is He. It may be that a thing is insignificant in your eyes, yet, its creator deems great, and has a role that you are unaware of. When Allah Glorified is He swears by such a thing He draws your attention towards its role and its importance. For example, when the revelation upon the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him paused for a while, the disbelievers did not look to the wisdom in that. The wisdom therein was that the process of revelation was hard upon the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him such that it would take all his strength, making his forehead perspire profusely(1). If revelation came down upon him while he was riding an animal it would groan and lay down (2) due to the weight of the revelation. As Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Surely, We will send down to you a weighty Message.’ (al-Muzzammil: 5)

---

(1) This was related by Muslim in his Sahih (1646) in the chapter Kitab Al-Iman in the third Hadith on the authority of 'Abdullah ibn ‘Umar who related that the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him found ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab on his mount swearing by his father, so the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him called them and said, ‘Truly Allah has forbidden you from swearing by your fathers; so whosoever swears oaths, let him swear by Allah or remain silent.’

The period when the revelation paused was a mercy for the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him a lightening of his burdens and a time for him to regain his composure. In addition, it caused him to long for the revelation, and so it resumed once again. The disbelievers however took no heed of this and said, ‘Surely Muhammad’s Lord qalah (has scorned him).’(3) Qalah means ‘He has been callous to him and abandoned him’. The self-contradiction that this statement contains is obvious; when called to faith they deny Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his Lord, but when an intermission in the revelation comes they say that his Lord has left him, thereby admitting that he does have a Lord!

For this reason, the True Lord chose to clarify this matter for them, manifesting their foolishness with the following oath which was revealed very appropriately at this time. It also contains a subtle indication of the link between the things sworn by and the issues sworn to. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘By the morning brightness and by the night when it grows still, your Lord has not forsaken you [Prophet], nor does He hate you, and the future will be better for you than the past; your Lord is sure to give you so much that you will be well satisfied.' (ad-Duha: 1-5)

(1) `Aisha Allah be pleased with her said, ‘I saw the Revelation come down upon him peace and blessings be upon him on an extremely cold day and when it had passed his brow was indeed perspiring profusely.’ i.e., the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was perspiring a great deal on a day that was unusually cold. Al-Bukhari related this Hadith in his Sahih (2, Kitab Bad` Al-Wahi).

(2) Al-Bukhari related it in his Sahih (4592) with a connected chain of transmission (mawsula) from the Hadith of Zayd ibn Thabit Allah be pleased with him that, ‘The verse, “Such of the believers as remain passive – other than the disabled – cannot be deemed equal to those who strive hard in Allah’s cause with their possessions and their lives...” (an-Nisa': 95), was revealed to the Messenger of Allah while his thigh was upon mine. It became so heavy for me that I feared that my thigh would be crushed.’

(3) Ibn Kathir relates in his Tafsir (4/532) on the authority of Jundub ibn 'Abdullah Allah be pleased with him who said, ‘Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him was a long time coming to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him and the polytheists began to say, “Muhammad’s Lord has left him.” So Allah revealed, “By the bright morning hours and the night when it grows still and dark. Thy Sustainer has not forsaken you, nor does He scorn you.” (ad-Duha: 1-3), to him.

The meaning of this is, 'You were worn out O Muhammad by the revelation and it was necessary for you take a rest so that your soul would come to desire and long for it. After you have rested your struggle to receive the revelation will be lightened and you will taste its sweetness once again and it will become easier for you'. The True Lord chose here to swear by something that is clear and present, with which no one could ever argue.

The disbelievers, surely, knew: '...the morning brightness' (ad-Duha: 1), when the sun is rising and sheds light on the world. Moreover, they were well acquainted with: '...the night when it grows still' (ad-Duha: 2), i.e. it becomes silent and tranquil. The point here is that when the bright morning hours come and the tranquil night follows it, are we to infer that the morning, with its brightness, will not return once again? No! Indeed, the morning will come again after you have rested from the tiredness caused by the day's work and have replenished your energy for another day.

The meaning of, '…and the future will be better for you than the past…' (ad-Duha: 4) is that when the revelation resumes it will be sweeter than the first time, lighter and easier to bear.

So, as we said, the True Lord swears by whatever He wills of His creation to teach us that these are magnificent things in the eyes of their creator, and that we have become heedless of aspects of their importance. He also swears by whatever He wishes of His creation to help us understand things unknown by means of things known to us.

In the first verse Allah Glorified is He says: 'By those [angels] ranged in rows' (as-Saffat: 1). The letter waw at the beginning of this verse is called waw al-qasm (the waw for oaths), like the letters ta`a and ba`a which are also used for oaths. We can swear an oath by saying wa Allah (by Allah), bi Allah or ta Allah. We can also identify a qassam (an oath)—without these 'letters for oaths'—by the lam at the beginning of jawab al-qassam (the thing sworn to); as in: 'innak la min al-mursalin', 'you [Muhammad] are truly one of the messengers sent' (Ya Sin: 3), which followed the oath: 'By the wise Quran' (Ya Sin: 3).

You do not swear about something initially, rather you make an oath if the person you are talking to denies what you say. So, you swear to emphasize the information. The strength of the oath and the emphasis you use depends on the strength of the denial. The True Lord says, for example, 'By the Day of Resurrection…' (al-Qiyama: 1) or 'I swear by this city, and you [Prophet] are an inhabitant of this city. [I swear] by parent and offspring, that We have created man or toil and trial.' (al-Balad: 1-4) Also in: 'Nay, I swear by the positions of the stars, a mighty oath, if you only knew that this is truly a noble Quran.' (al-Waqi'a: 75-76)

There are oaths in these last verses, as evidenced by the existence of jawab al-qassam (the thing sworn to), but why does the Quran put these oaths in the negative saying la (Nay) before the word 'uqsim' (I swear). The scholars say that the use of the negative, here, makes the meaning stronger than using the positive, for the oath comes only to emphasise the thing sworn to, and the meaning of 'Nay' is that this matter is clear, there is no need for an oath because an oath is to emphasise something that is doubted or denied. As for this matter, it is clear and despite this I will swear for you.

Regarding the meaning of, 'By those [angels] ranged in rows, who rebuke reproachfully and recite Allah's word' (as-Saffat: 1-3), the scholars say that 'those ranged in ranks' are the angels ranged in rows. As-Saff is the ordering of a group in such a way that there is no distinction between one individual and another. As-Saff does not merely refer to a group; it refers to a group that is disciplined and harmonious. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to straighten the rows when he was inspecting his forces before a battle. When he saw a man breaking rank and not standing in line, he poked him in the stomach so that he would set himself straight in the row. This man had deep love for the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. So, he said, 'You hurt me, O Messenger of Allah.' To which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'Here is my stomach, take vengeance from it.' So, the man came forward and kissed the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying, 'O Messenger of Allah, by Allah, I desire to be martyred and I would love my last contact in this life to be that of my body to have touched your noble body.'

The formation of ranks is an indication of orderliness, commitment, and preparedness to receive orders. Thus, the angels are arranged in ranks, awaiting orders so that each one may fulfil his role and duty.

When we consider the words derived from the root sad, fa`a and fa`a in the Quran, we find that they revolve around this meaning. Examples of this are evident in Allah's words: 'Therefore settle your plan, then come standing in ranks...' (Ta Ha: 64). Saffa means: grouped together and united. He also says: 'And your Lord has come and the angels, rank upon rank.' (al-Fajr: 22) The words 'saffan saffa' mean (rank upon rank).

Allah Glorified is He also says, 'Have they not seen the birds above them expanding (their wings) and contracting (them)? What is it that withholds them save the Most Merciful...' (al-Mulk: 19)? Saffatin, here, means: expanding their wings. How true this is! You see a bird in the sky spreading its wings and not moving them, and despite this, it does not fall. Similarly, you see it draw in its wings and it remains in its place. So, what is it that prevents it from falling? It is the Most Merciful who holds it up. It is as though there is in this upholding of the bird which we see and witness a proof of the truthfulness of His statement: 'Verily, it is Allah alone who upholds the celestial bodies and the earth, lest they deviate from their orbits) – for if they should ever deviate, there is none that could uphold them after He will have ceased to do so. But, verily, He is Ever-Forbearing, Much-Forgiving!' (Fatir: 41)

So, His upholding of the bird is an example of how He upholds the heavens, except that the former is short term while the latter is long term.

Allah Glorified is He also says about the angels in general, 'we are ranged in ranks.' (as-Saffat: 165), i.e. we wait, disciplined, waiting for commands. Here as-saff indicates order and that no individual seeks to outrank another. It also gives an indication of the awe in which they hold the One before Whom they are arranged. Another example is His statement about the bliss of paradise: 'cushions set in rows.' (al-Ghashiya: 15)

Some of the scholars are of the opinion that as-saffat has a wider meaning than this and that what is intended by it is the proclamation of Islam, the spreading of its message, its defence, the protection of the freedom for people to choose Islam and of fighting. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Allah truly loves those who fight in solid lines for His cause, like a well-compacted wall.' (as-Saff: 4). The word saffan means: 'in solid lines.' The meaning of, '... in His cause...' (as-Saff: 4) is: in order to proclaim His religion and to defend it in the face of enemies. The proclamation of the religion is the role of the scholars and its defence is the role of the soldiers on the battlefield. Both groups should be as one body, like a '…like a well-compacted wall' (as-Saff: 4). For this reason, Allah Glorified is He says, '...out of each community, a group should go out to gain understanding of the religion, so that they can teach their people when they return and so that they can guard themselves against evil.' (at-Tawba: 122)

Thus, a scholar does not go out to fight because his role is that of undertaking the propagation of the faith. The warrior on the other hand sacrifices his life and dies for the sake of the call to Islam, and it is this sacrifice that proves the truthfulness of the call because had it not been truly in the believer's soul, he would not have sacrificed himself for its sake. On top of this, his willingness to sacrifice his life is a proof of his belief in his going to a better place.

We are all familiar with the story of the companion of Prophet Muhammad who, while chewing a date, was listening to what the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him had to say regarding the reward of the martyr. He said to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him: 'Is there nothing between me and paradise except that I should fight these people and be killed by them?' 'Yes, Indeed.' Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied at which he threw away the date, considering chewing it to be too tardy, and rushed off to the battlefield.(1)

---

(1) On the authority of Jabir ibn `Abdullah Allah be pleased with him who said, 'A man asked the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him on the day of Uhud, 'If I were to be killed, where would I be?' 'In Paradise', he peace and blessings be upon him replied. At this, he threw away some dates that were in his hand and went and fought until he was killed.' This was narrated by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih (4046). Ibn Hajar said, 'I did not come across the name of the man. Ibn Bashkawal, however, claimed that it was `Umayr ibn Al-Hammam and sought to prove it through the Hadith of Anas related by Muslim that mentions `Umayr ibn Al-Hammam. It is clear in the Hadith of Anas Allah be pleased with him however that what is mentioned therein occurred on the day of Badr, so it appears that they are two different stories that happened to two separate people, and Allah Glorified is He knows best.'

Thus, fighting in Allah’s Cause is either with one’s tongue or one’s spear, but it must be known that the one who fights with a sword does not carry it so that he can force non-believers to believe, for there can be no compulsion in religion. Rather, he does so to protect his freedom and his ability to choose this religion. The proof of this is that many countries were conquered by Islam and yet the peoples stuck to their beliefs and religions.

The unity of the ranks mentioned in these verses does not apply only to the fighters on the battlefield, but it is just as applicable to those who carry the message. These scholars must also be as one body in their call to Islam, undivided by difference of opinion. They must hold fast to that which is muhkam (decisive) of Allah’s words, and they must not accuse each other of disbelief regarding that of it which is mutashabih (susceptible of different interpretations).

As for Allah’s words: ‘who rebuke reproachfully’ (as-Saffat: 2), the scholars say that this is the job of the angels. They drive back the devils who try to eavesdrop. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘we used to sit in places there, listening, but anyone trying to listen now will find a shooting star lying in wait for him.’ (al-Jinn: 9)

Before the advent of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him the devils used to go up to the heavens to eavesdrop for news. Allah Glorified is He allowed them to pick up some bits of information which they conveyed to their associates among mankind, yet, they added falsities to the information they had and then told people of these things pretending to know the unseen. When Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent, they were prevented from eavesdropping, and Allah Glorified is He made them subject to shooting stars which would strike and burn them.

If one were to ask, ‘How can this be when we see the many stars stay as they are, not falling from the sky’? We say, ‘Among the stars, there are those that beautify the sky and those that strike the devils. The proof of this is in Allah’s words: ‘We have adorned the lowest heaven with stars, and made them a safeguard against every rebellious devil: they cannot eavesdrop on the Higher Assembly, pelted from every side, driven away, they will have perpetual torment.’ (as-Saffat: 6-9)

As for Allah’s words, ‘and those who recite Allah’s word’ (as-Saffat: 3), the scholars said that this refers to the angels that brought the revelation down to the messengers peace be upon them for they recite it to them after they have brought it down from Allah Glorified is He.

Other scholars understood a different meaning from, ‘By those [angels] ranged in rows’ (as-Saffat: 1), from which other meanings for ‘who rebuke reproachfully, and those who recite Allah’s word’ (as-Saffat: 2-3) can be derived. They said that ‘By those [angels] ranged in rows’ (as-Saffat: 1) refers to the believers and the rows they form in their prayers, for they are the foundation of the religion and a symbol of social cohesion and unity.

That is why the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘Straighten your rows, for indeed, straightening the rows is from the perfection of the prayer.’(1) He peace and blessings be upon him also said, ‘Indeed, Allah does not look at the crooked row.’(2) Lining up in rows in the prayer prevent break away from others and indicate discipline, submission to Allah and standing humbled in front of the True Lord. So, just as the angels are arranged in rows, so you, O believers are also arranged; and for each one there are forms of worship and a form of prayer.

So, once we have straightened our rows and are standing ready for Allah Glorified is He we start our prayer by saying, ‘I seek refuge in Allah from the accursed Satan’, in a way of driving Satan away. Hence, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘By those [angels] ranged in rows, who rebuke reproachfully’ (as-Saffat: 1-2). The meaning of ‘and those who recite Allah’s word’ (as-Saffat: 3) is what we recite after of Allah’s words: ‘Praise belongs to Allah, Lord of the Worlds, the Lord of Mercy, the Giver of Mercy.’ (al-Fatiha: 3-2)

What we have discussed so far was the oath; so what is that is being sworn to? The oath has been taken regarding Allah’s words: ‘truly your Lord is One’

---

(1) Al-Bukhari related it in his Sahih (723) and Muslim in his Sahih (433) in the chapter of Kitab As-Salat – Bab Taswiyat As-Sufuf (28). Both of them related it on the authority of Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him.

(2) Among the Hadiths that have been related along these lines is the Hadith that Ahmad related in his Musnad (2/97) and Abu Dawud in his Sunnan (1/178) on the authority of Abdullah ibn ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him that the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Straighten the lines and bring the shoulders together, fill the gaps and go easy on the arms of your brothers, and do not leave any spaces for the Devil.’

(as-Saffat: 4). In addition to the fact that this statement is jawab al-qassam (the answer to the thing sworn to), Allah Glorified is He has emphasised it further by adding the word truly. He, then, emphasised it even further by adding the letter lam: la wahid (is One). This is because this affirmation is the basis of the religion and the essence of belief. The true Allah Glorified is He is One and the Guardian of all of this. We have said earlier that wahid (One) is not the same as ahad (singular), for Wahid means that there is no other like Him, whereas Ahad means that He is not composed of parts; He is One in His Essence.

Then, the True Lord says:

رَّبُّ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ وَمَا بَيْنَهُمَا وَرَبُّ ٱلْمَشَٰرِقِ ﴿٥﴾

Lord of the heavens and earth and everything between them, Lord of every sunrise [5] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 5)

In another verse Allah says, ‘Everything in the heavens and on Earth, everything between them, everything beneath the soil, belongs to Him.’ (Ta Ha: 6) That which is ‘beneath the soil’ is what we need to search for in order to discover, moving it, as we said before, from the concealed world to the seen world.

Here Allah Glorified is He says, ‘…Lord of the sunrises’ (as-Saffat: 5). In another place He says, ‘...by the Lord of the sunrises and sunsets...’ (al-Ma’arij: 40). Thus, the True Lord leaves some space for the use of terms that are actually intimations leading to the gain of an intellectual grasp. So, as long as there are sunrises there must be sunsets per contra. This is because the sun does not rise on a people except that it sets on another. Thus, we call this inseparableness.

When we explore these two words in the Book of Allah Glorified is He we find that sometimes they are used in the singular al-mashriq and al-maghrib, ‘He is Lord of the east and west...’ (al-Muzzammil: 9), sometimes in the dual, al-mashriqayn and al-maghribayn, ‘[He is] Lord of the two sunrises and Lord of the two sunsets’ (ar-Rahman: 17) and sometimes in the plural, al-mashariq and al-magharib, ‘...the Lord of the sunrises and sunsets...’ (al-Ma’arij: 40). This is because when Allah Glorified is He is addressing one person in one place he says al-mashriq and al-maghrib because one place has one east and one west. If there are several places then there are several mashariq (sunrises) and magharib (sunsets). We can see that within one country, for example, the sunset in Cairo is not the same as the sunset in Alexandria. If we then look to the whole globe, we realise that there are an infinite number of points of sunrise and sunset; in every half of a degree there is a new point of sunrise and a new point of sunset.

Due to the wisdom of the Creator in making the earth turn upon itself, and around the sun, is that it spreads the necessities of life all over the planet. Were the sun to stay facing just one place that place would be scorched, and if it were to remain absent from any sun that place would freeze up. The result of this movement is that the True Lord is worshipped in every way always. We have stated previously that at any given time, there are people praying the dawn prayer, people praying the noon prayer, others praying the afternoon prayer, the evening prayer, and the night prayer. So, the prayer continues throughout the day and the night.

As for His words: '[He is] Lord of the two sunrises and Lord of the two sunsets.' (ar-Rahman: 17), the scholars say that al-mashriqayn to the east and the west or to the sunrise in summer and the sunrise in winter.(1)

Allah Glorified is He then says:

إِنَّا زَيَّنَّا ٱلسَّمَآءَ ٱلدُّنۡيَا بِزِينَةٍ ٱلۡكَوَاكِبِ (٦) وَحِفۡظٗا مِّن كُلِّ شَيۡطَٰنٖ مَّارِدٖ (٧)
لَّا يَسَّمَّعُونَ إِلَى ٱلۡمَلَإِ ٱلۡأَعۡلَىٰ وَيُقۡذَفُونَ مِن كُلِّ جَانِبٖ (٨) دُحُورٗاۖ وَلَهُمۡ عَذَابٞ وَاصِبٌ (٩)

We have adorned the lowest heaven with stars [6] and made them a safeguard against every rebellious devil [7] they cannot eavesdrop on the Higher Assembly – pelted from every side [8] driven away, they will have perpetual torment [9]
(The Quran, as-Saffat: 6 - 9)

How true this is! When we look at the sky at night we find it adorned with glittering stars. In these stars are secrets and wonders that the illiterate Bedouin was aware of. He knew the star, its name, its place, and its movement. Moreover, he used it to guide him in his travels through the desert. It is as Allah Glorified is He says: ‘and landmarks. And by the stars they find the right way.’ (an-Nahl: 16)

---

(1) On the authority of Ibn `Abbas Allah be pleased with him who said, 'The sun has a place of rising in the winter and a place of setting in the winter, and it has a place of rising in the summer and a place of setting in the summer, distinct from its place of rising in the winter and distinct from its place of setting in the winter.' It was related by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (7/695) and he attributed it to Sa`id ibn Mansur, Abd ibn Humayd, Ibn Jarir, Ibn Mundhir and Ibn Abu Hatim.

When we reflect upon these stars in the sky we see that Allah Glorified is He desired to have mercy upon us by protecting us from the heat of the sun, while leaving some light that guides us at night; for these stars radiate light in the same fashion as the sun.

The stars have another role, ‘and made them a safeguard against every rebellious devil:’ (as-Saffat: 7). That is to say, these stars protect us from the devils because they come down upon them and burn them. This type of stars is called nayazik (meteors). As for the stars that ornament the sky, they remain as they are, for they have no role to play in this matter. The stellar bodies that have been set aside for the rebellious devils will however decrease in number.

Al-Marid (rebel) refers to the one who turns against the path of his Lord following in the footsteps of Satan. Among his offspring are those who take the same stances that Satan took in regard to Adam peace be upon him. If someone were to ask, ‘Allah wants his path to encompass the whole world so that peace, safety, and tranquillity may encompass it also, then why did he create Satan to rebel against Him’? We say that He did it to strengthen the believer’s faith in the face of opposition. If there were no opposition, what distinction would there be if all creation are believers and all are obedient? Hence, the reason behind this is to purify the people of faith and to put them to the test. By such means we will know those who are steadfast; for it is they who will carry the message of Islam so that it might endure until the Last Hour. Such a message can only be carried by people of resolution.

The True Lord says, ‘they cannot eavesdrop on the Higher Assembly, pelted from every side’ (as-Saffat: 8). Let us consider that these verses come after Allah’s oath by the angles ‘who rebuke reproachfully’ (as-Saffat: 1). We said that one of the meanings of az-zajirati zajra is: the angels who drive the devils back from eavesdropping on the highest council from where they used to take some pieces of information and pass them on to their associates among the soothsayers, who would add many untruths to it in order to lead people astray.

Incidents of eavesdropping were numerous before the advent of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him but when he was sent, Allah Glorified is He prevented them from it and subjected them to shooting stars that would come down upon them and drive them back. As the Quran tells us, ‘We used to sit in places there, listening, but anyone trying to listen now will find a shooting star lying in wait for him’ (al-Jinn: 9). This was to ennoble the Message of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and prevent the devils from introducing any falsifications that might corrupt people’s beliefs. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘who rebuke reproachfully’ (as-Saffat: 1).

One of the strange things about the word az-zajr (driving back) is that it has two meanings. The sentence zajartu insan means ‘I prevented a man’ from doing something. Zajartu ad-da’ means ‘I drove the animal onwards’. An example of the latter is the poet’s saying:

Woe to us, two intimates, a promise between us,
But this one has his nest, and that one another,
But when my yearning for reunion became too pressing,
I drove my horses to fly and not canter.

An example of the former would be the verses:

There remains not between us any room for love,
I forbade you from obscenities and you forbade me to advice.

In short, the meaning is that these devils have been prevented from listening to any news from above since the advent of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him yet they try, but the angels prevent them and send down shooting stars upon them.

In Allah’s saying, ‘And are pelted from every side’ pelting refers to being assailed with meteors such that each shot is accurate. ‘Repelled’ means they are reprehensible, rejected, and scorned. ‘And for them is a constant punishment’ it will be enduring and unchanging. He has described the suffering as being lasting because it comes between him and the execution of his goal of eavesdropping on, and gleaning news from above.

إِلَّا مَنْ خَطِفَ ٱلْخَطْفَةَ فَأَتْبَعَهُۥ شِهَابٌ ثَاقِبٌ ﴿١٠﴾

If any [of them] stealthily snatches away a fragment, he will be pursued by a piercing flame [10] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 10)

Thus, some of these rebels will indeed manage to snatch some news; they will not however be able to escape with it nor convey it to their associates. Snatching is a type of taking possession without right. Each one of us has property and possession of it, and nothing negates that possession except if someone takes it away from us through some sort of transgression or oppression. Transgression and oppression have many means such as snatching, which is to take something away from someone very quickly, such that they see you but are unable to stop you because the thing is distant; like a small child snatching something from a shop and running off. If the owner is present and able to grab the offender but the latter fights and overcomes him and takes the thing, then this is called wringing. If the offender takes the thing without the owner's knowledge it is called robbery. If he has been put in charge of the wealth and he takes some of it is called embezzling. These are all ways of taking possession of wealth without right. Thus, the devils snatch some news and try to flee with it but how wrong they are; 'pursued by a burning flame' will come down upon them. The meaning of 'piercing' is that it will penetrate the atmosphere until it reaches its target as quickly as possible. (1)

If one were to say, 'Why are they not prevented from eavesdropping in the first place'? The scholars said there is a difference between someone being prevented from something in the first place, and being permitted to get his hands on it but not fulfil his goal or benefit from it. Allah allows them to actually hear some news but then the angels and the meteors instantly bear down upon them from every direction. In this way, their affliction is greater. They are afflicted by the trouble to eavesdrop, the attempt to flee and the resulting exhaustion, in addition to the failure to benefit from what was heard.

---

(1) It is related on the authority of Ibn `Abbas Allah be pleased with him that he said, 'Indeed a Jinni will come to eavesdrop. If he manages to overhear something he is assailed by meteors. He says to the one following him, "It was such and such."' This was related by As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur (al-A'raf: 80) and he attributed it to Ibn Jarir and Ibn Mundhir.

فَٱسۡتَفۡتِهِمۡ أَهُمۡ أَشَدُّ خَلۡقًا أَم مَّنۡ خَلَقۡنَآۚ إِنَّا خَلَقۡنَٰهُم مِّن طِينٖ لَّازِبِۭ ﴿١١﴾

So [Prophet], ask the disbelievers: is it harder to create them than other beings We have created? We created them from sticky clay [11] (The Quran*, as-Saffat:* 11)

Allah's saying, 'inquire of them' is a command from Allah Glorified is He to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. When a man is setting out to do something and is ready to embark upon a course of action yet he does not know how to go by it, he goes to someone who is more knowledgeable than he is and seeks his opinion and the strength to carry out the job. So, it is as though he was weak and desired to strengthen himself with another's opinion. So, it is as though the True Lord Glorified is He has trusted them to give their opinion and provide the answer. For Allah Glorified is He knows that the opponents will find nothing but the truth to reply with. Allah Glorified is He does not state the answer Himself for this reason; rather, He has them provide it by way of confirmation. A statement is something that can be believed or denied whereas confirmation cannot be denied by anyone. For this reason, it is said, 'confirmation is the master of proofs'.

The question, 'Then inquire of them, [O Muhammad], "Are they a stronger [or more difficult] creation or those [others] We have created?"' means, 'was their creation a greater affair than that of the heavens and earth'? Allah does not provide the answer because it is so obvious. It could only be that the creation of the heavens and the earth is greater and mightier than their creation. Because of this, Allah Glorified is He says in another verse, 'The creation of the heavens and earth is greater than the creation of mankind, but most of the people do not know.' (Ghafir: 57) If one needs proof in this matter, then ponder the creation of oneself and the creation of the heavens and the earth. Even though the heavens and the earth are at your disposal, they are older than you and will outlast you. Since Allah first created them, they have remained unflinching. As for man, he may die in childhood, in youth or in senility. He dies and he leaves his legacy behind for the coming generations to inherit. Heaven and earth on the other hand are greater and mightier because they are enduring creations and they are subjugated by choice. They said, 'We have come willingly.' (Fussilat: 11)

Hence, they chose to be subservient. Allah Glorified is He also says, ‘Indeed, we offered the Trust to the heavens and the earth and the mountains, and they declined to bear it and feared it; but man [undertook to] bear it. Indeed, he was unjust and ignorant.’ (al-Ahzab: 72) There is a difference between the ability of a person to take responsibility upon himself and his ability to fulfil it. One may take a responsibility upon oneself and intend to fulfil it but cannot guarantee that one will do so, for perhaps circumstances might change, or something might overtake you that comes between you and its completion. That is why the heavens and the earth held back from accepting the aforementioned trust, abandoning what they wanted for what their Lord wanted, and were thus subservient. So, they, too, were given a choice, the difference being that they made their choice with one word which extended to all time. Man, however, chose to always be choosing to do, or not to do. Moreover, the heavens and the earth and in-between of creatures, planets, bodies, and constellations move in a well-planned, precise order, never differing or deviating. ‘The sun and the moon [move] by precise calculation. And the stars and trees prostrate.’ (ar-Rahman: 5-6) ‘It is not allowable for the sun to reach the moon, nor does the night overtake the day, but each, in an orbit, is swimming.’ (Ya Sin: 40) As for man, he stumbles in his life and opposes the way of his Lord, turning away from the path that has been laid out for him. So, which of these creations is more magnificent, greater in its formation, and more correct in its performance? These disbelievers are unable despite their disbelief, to say other than, ‘the heavens and the earth are greater and mightier than the creation of man’.

Another example of this is: ‘And if you asked them who created them, they would surely say, “Allah.”’ (az-Zukhruf: 87), and…, if you asked them who created the heavens and earth, they would surely say, “Allah.”’ (az-Zumar: 38) These are all realities that cannot be denied, even by the disbelievers. Then the True Lord Glorified is He gives them another example of the truth of this matter saying, ‘Indeed, We created men from sticky clay.’ This is their origin, so where do they stand in comparison to the heavens and the earth?

The True Lord Glorified is He is telling us here about the first creation of man, ‘Then inquire of them, [O Muhammad], “Are they a stronger [or more difficult] creation or those [others] We have created?” Indeed, We created men from sticky clay.' Adam peace be upon him was created out of clay and Eve was created after him. The Quran tells us the story of the creation of Adam, but Allah Glorified is He suffices with saying, 'and of it created its mate' (an-Nisa': 1) when describing the creation of Eve.

The scholars said that 'and of it' means 'of the same sort of creation', so it is possible that Eve was created out of clay as was Adam or was created from one of his ribs. In any case, we return to an origin of clay. Allah Glorified is He creates whatsoever He wills.

So, the first man, Adam peace be upon him was created from clay, and of his sort was his wife created. Then came Adam's offspring after he moved on from his earthen nature and became human. So we, even though we come from a human lineage, still have our origin in clay. If one were to ask, 'Where is his earthen nature'? He has taken a different form that bears no resemblance to earth; for if he washes with water he does not dissolve and disintegrate as clay does?'

We would say it is necessary that man, be he the first man or his offspring, return back to his original source, which is clay. Man bears children and multiplies by means of the sperm of the male and the egg of the female, but where did these two come from? From blood; and blood is produced from food; and food comes from the earth and clay. Thus, whatever the case, we are created from clay. The only difference is that in one case there is an intermediary and in the other there is not. The True Lord Glorified is He alerted us to this matter in His saying, 'We will show them Our signs in the horizons and within themselves until it becomes clear to them that it is the truth.' (Fussilat: 53)

We did not witness the process of creation; we were only informed of it by Allah. Thus, we know that man was created from clay that underwent these stages, until Allah breathed into it the spirit and filled it with life.

Then there is another thing; when the body of man, created from clay and nourished by food that comes from clay, was analysed by scientists, they found that it is composed of 16 amino acids, the first of them is oxygen, then carbon, then hydrogen, then nitrogen etc. These are the same elements that agricultural soil which gives us our food is composed of. So here is another proof of Allah's Truthfulness.

بَلۡ عَجِبۡتَ وَيَسۡخَرُونَ ﴿١٢﴾ وَإِذَا ذُكِّرُواْ لَا يَذۡكُرُونَ ﴿١٣﴾
وَإِذَا رَأَوۡاْ ءَايَةٗ يَسۡتَسۡخِرُونَ ﴿١٤﴾

You marvel as they scoff [12] take no heed when they are warned [13] and resort to ridicule when they see a sign [14] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 12-14)

What was it that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him wondered about? He was surprised by their rejection and disbelief despite the clarity of the cogent proofs of the truthfulness of the case for faith. We furnished them proof upon proof, but they still disbelieved. That is why Allah says in another place, addressing His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him ‘And if you are astonished, [O Muhammad] - then astonishing is their saying.’ (ar-Ra‘d: 5)

Allah Glorified is He is confirming Muhammad’s astonishment. The meaning is therefore, ‘If you are astonished Muhammad, it is because what they said was indeed astonishing’. But who considers this astonishing? It is possible that the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was astonished and it is possible that Allah Glorified is He was too. So, does Allah Glorified is He gets astonished as we do? The scholars maintained it is true, and the proof of which is that this verse has another reading that affirms the speaker is Allah Glorified is He. Further proof of this can be found in the Hadith, ‘Your Lord is amazed by the young man who has no sensual passion.(1)’ Why? Because he has gone against general human nature, or has overpowered his lower self and controlled it, such that he does not do what other young men do. This is something extraordinary. Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He is astonished by this behaviour and He rewards it with an extraordinary reward.

We have already said that if we find an attribute that is shared between ourselves and the True Lord Glorified is He then we must look at it in the light of the verse, ‘there is nothing like unto Him’ (ash-Shura: 11). Of this sort is

---

(1) On the authority of `Uqba ibn `Amir who said, ‘The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said, “Truly Allah is amazed at the young man who has no sensual passion.”’ It was related by Ahmad in his Musnad (4: 151) and Ibn Abu `Asim in As-Sunna (1: 250) Al-Haytami mentioned it in Majma` Az-Zawa`id (10: 270) and attributed it to Ahmad, Abu Ya`la and At-Tabarani and said that, ‘its chain of narration is good.’

His saying, ‘Indeed, the hypocrites [think to] deceive Allah, but He is deceiving them.’ (an-Nisa’: 142) And His saying, ‘But they scheme, and Allah schemes. And Allah is the best of schemers.’ (al-Anfal: 30) Beware therefore of saying, ‘Allah is deceptive’ or ‘Allah is a schemer’ because there is a difference between Allah’s names and the actions that Allah has attributed to Himself. Scheming, for instance, is a human action by which cheating, deception and enmity are intended so that one might get to the end of one’s desires. Such scheming is then met with other scheming that seeks to obscure it or be even more devious than it. Scheming is full of convolutions and artifices to cover one’s evil deeds from one’s enemy. This is human’s scheming for one another. If, however, Allah schemes against you, then nothing can save you from His design. That is why Allah says Glorified is He, ‘And Allah is the best of schemers.’

As for Allah’s saying, ‘while they mock’ the meaning is that: you are astonished by their denial and disbelief despite the clarity of the proofs, and they mock both you and your astonishment.

‘And when they are reminded’ with more signs and proofs to guide them, ‘they remember not’ they do not look to them but instead turn away and persist in their denial. ‘And when they see a sign’ a new proof, ‘they ridicule’, i.e. they go to extremes in their mockery. In the verse before this one, Allah says, ‘they mock’ but in this one, He says, ‘they ridicule’. This is evidence that among these disbelievers are people whose hearts are affected by Allah’s signs and proofs. When their hearts are softened, their plots against Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him are lessened. They suffice themselves with denial instead of mockery because rejection has different levels. One person will refuse to do what you tell him but another will refuse you and then mock you. Those mentioned in the latter verse do not suffice themselves with mocking the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; ‘they ridicule’ means that they want to make those who are not mocking mock. There is a difference between one who mocks and one who seeks to induce mockery. We do not say as some of the orientalists do that this is repetition in Allah’s speech.

وَقَالُوٓاْ إِنۡ هَٰذَآ إِلَّا سِحۡرٞ مُّبِينٌ ﴿١٥﴾

Saying, ‘This is no more than blatant sorcery [15]
(The Quran, as-Saffat: 15)

Magic as we said is to create an illusion about reality; the magician makes it appear to you that something is real. Magic does not change the reality of the thing; only the one looking at it is affected. Allah Glorified is He says regarding Pharaoh’s sorcerers: ‘they cast a spell upon the people’s eyes.’ (al-A‘raf: 116) And, ‘their [magic] ropes and staffs seemed to him to be moving rapidly.’ (Ta Ha: 66)

So we ask how then is Muhammad’s preaching or the faith that He calls people to magic? The rebuttal of this calumny is clear and easy. If Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was able to cast spells on people to make them believe in his message, and did so on those who believed in him, why then did he not cast a spell on you? Thus, we can see that this is a false accusation that has no substance.

Then they go back to asking about the issue of the resurrection, trying to throw doubt on it. It is however one of the basis of religion without which faith cannot subsist.

أَءِذَا مِتۡنَا وَكُنَّا تُرَابٗا وَعِظَٰمًا أَءِنَّا لَمَبۡعُوثُونَ ﴿١٦﴾
أَوَءَابَآؤُنَا ٱلۡأَوَّلُونَ ﴿١٧﴾ قُلۡ نَعَمۡ وَأَنتُمۡ دَٰخِرُونَ ﴿١٨﴾

‘What! After we have died and become dust and bones, shall we really be raised up again [16] along with our forefathers? [17] Say, ‘Yes indeed, and you will be humiliated’ [18] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 16-18)

It is strange that they should deny the resurrection after all the proofs we have given them. Even if they rejected our proofs and disbelieved in them, have they not heard from past nations and previous revelations that the resurrection is true? We can see this is just arrogance and obstinacy in accepting the truth. For this reason, the Quran strikes a parable for them and evidence of the truthfulness of this information about the resurrection. He puts this story in the context of the previous nations: ‘Or [consider such an example] as the one who passed by a township which had fallen into ruin. He said, “How will Allah bring this to life after its death?” So Allah caused him to die for a hundred years; then He revived him. He said, “How long have you remained?” The man said, “I have remained a day or part of a day.” He said, “Rather, you have remained one hundred years. Look at your food and your drink; it has not changed with time. And look at your donkey; and We will make you a sign for the people. And look at the bones [of this donkey] - how We raise them and then We cover them with flesh.” And when it became clear to him, he said, “I know that Allah is over all things competent.”’ (al-Baqara: 259)

This is a true story as the Quran has told us of it, and it relates to the previous nations so that it might be a proof of Allah’s Power to raise the dead. It is the story of a man searching for the truth. Allah made him an example for himself first and foremost, and then for those that came after him. When he passed the village and it was in this decrepit state, it seemed unlikely to him that it and its people could be brought back to life once again. Allah Glorified is He made him die so that He could show him how He brings the dead to life. When the man said, ‘I have remained a day or part of a day’ he told the truth, and when Allah said: ‘Rather, you have remained one hundred years’ He told the truth. How? Because the bones of the donkey which had turned to dust showed it had been a hundred years, whereas his food which remained unchanged showed that it had only been a day or less. This is not strange, so long as the doer is Allah, the One Who contracts and the One Who expands. He is the Only One Who could bring together these seeming opposites. He can shorten time for one person and yet stretch it for another. Did He not order Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him to strike the sea with his staff such that the water on each side became like a huge mountain. He also ordered him to strike the rock with his staff such that twelve springs burst forth from it. This is raw power. It is also strange that they should ask about their ancestors even though there is but one resurrection. Their asking, ‘And our forefathers [as well]?’ is a proof of their confusion. Perhaps they thought that those who had died recently were ‘fresh’ so to speak, and that it would be they who would be raised, but that it would be impossible for those who had died a long time ago to be resurrected.

Allah replies to them saying, ‘Say!’ i.e., tell them Muhammad at the top of your voice, ‘Yes! They will be raised’. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him speaks as a trusted person, for he has been commanded to do so by Allah, who is completely capable of resurrecting the creation. ‘Yes, and you will be [rendered] contemptible.’

You will be small, humbled, and humiliated in recompense for your arrogance, obstinacy, and disputation regarding the truth in this life. Allah Glorified is He says in another place, ‘But they, that Day, are in surrender.’ (as-Saffat: 26)

فَإِنَّمَا هِىَ زَجۡرَةٞ وَٰحِدَةٞ فَإِذَا هُمۡ يَنظُرُونَ ﴿١٩﴾ وَقَالُواْ يَٰوَيۡلَنَا هَٰذَا يَوۡمُ ٱلدِّينِ ﴿٢٠﴾
هَٰذَا يَوۡمُ ٱلۡفَصۡلِ ٱلَّذِى كُنتُم بِهِۦ تُكَذِّبُونَ ﴿٢١﴾

Just one blast and — lo and behold! — they will look [19] and say, ‘Woe to us! This is the Day of Judgement’ [20]
[It will be said], ‘This is the Day of Decision, which you used to deny [21] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 19 - 21)

Regarding the verse ‘But they, that Day, are in surrender’, it refers to resurrection. ‘Only one shout’ means one blast enough to wake them from their graves, ‘And at once they will be observing’ because We will go to each one and wake him saying, ‘wake up so-and-so’. The resurrection that you deny is easy for us; it will be no trouble at all. The shout by itself will not resurrect the dead; rather, it is permission for the angel to go and do his job. It is like the bell that announces the start of work. After it, ‘at once they will be observing’, that is, instantly. As soon as they stand up out of their graves, they will look here and there, for they will see amazing things, the likes of which they have not known and will be suddenly faced by the things they denied in this world. The Quran says in another verse, ‘O our Lord! We have seen, and we have heard’ (as-Sajda: 12); this is the first verse in the Quran to mention sight before hearing. The first thing to hit them will be the unprecedented sights and so they will stare at them. So they will see this spectacle, ‘They will say, “O woe to us! This is the Day of Recompense.” [They will be told], “This is the Day of Judgement which you used to deny.”’

It is they who will say this, lamenting and wailing over themselves. It is not something we will say, it will be them. The realities have now been revealed to them and the corruption of their thought and lies have been exposed, as well as the vehemence and obstinacy they displayed in this world. The first thing that will become clear to someone then will be the corrupt nature of his thought and the evil of his deeds. The first person he will blame will be himself, and he will lament over it. ‘This is the Day of Recompense.’ This is the recompense that they did not accept in this world but now they must acknowledge it.

Alternatively, this could mean that, ‘this is the day that religion benefits one’, as one might say to one’s child when going to an examination, ‘This is the day you have been revising for; the day in which nothing will benefit you except the revision you have done. Then they say, ‘This is the Day of Judgment which you used to deny.’

Judgment can only happen when there is some kind of dispute. The dispute in this case is between the messengers and those of their people who belied and opposed them. Disputation such as this is not solved by argumentation, because these disbelievers are steeped in obstinacy and vehemence. The use of the sword may also fail to end it in that the oppressor may die and yet justice has not been done. So, there must come a day of retribution and distinction in these quarrels. It is for this reason that a certain man said, ‘By Allah, an oppressor will not die until Allah takes His revenge from him’. Someone replied to him, ‘How could this be? So-and-so commits a great deal of oppression but we do not see anything happen to him’. ‘By Allah’, he replied, ‘after this abode is another in which he who excels will be rewarded for his excellence and he who does wrong will be repaid for his evil’. So, yes indeed, such a day is necessary, for otherwise a lot of the oppressor would be better than that of the oppressed.

ٱحْشُرُوا۟ ٱلَّذِينَ ظَلَمُوا۟ وَأَزْوَٰجَهُمْ وَمَا كَانُوا۟ يَعْبُدُونَ ﴿٢٢﴾ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ
فَٱهْدُوهُمْ إِلَىٰ صِرَٰطِ ٱلْجَحِيمِ ﴿٢٣﴾ وَقِفُوهُمْ ۖ إِنَّهُم مَّسْـُٔولُونَ ﴿٢٤﴾

[Angels], gather together those who did wrong, and others like them, as well as what-ever they worshipped [22] beside God, lead them all to the path of Hell [23] and halt them for questioning [24] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 22-24)

That is, gather all those together in the fire, ‘those who committed wrong, their kinds, and what they used to worship other than Allah.’ Thus, the assembled are of three types: those bent on evil doing (as a recompense); others like them and the things that they worshipped in place of Allah. Here the word ‘kinds’ means their partners in this life, like the wife who assists her husband in his oppression. An example of this would be the wife of Abu Lahab. An alternative meaning could be those like them and their companions who misguided them and lead them astray.

‘And what they used to worship other than Allah’ refers to the idols that they worshipped in place of Allah. They, too, will be gathered in the Fire so that the disbelievers might see the false gods they attached themselves to and worshipped precede them into the fire. Their hopes of salvation will be shattered. It will also expose the corruption of their ideas, in that they worshipped idols that could neither harm nor benefit them; this will be further clarification for them.

This clarification is expanded harshly in Allah’s saying: ‘and guide them to the path of Hellfire.’ Can being thrown into the fire be termed ‘guidance’? The meaning is ‘Show them the way to Hell’, mocking and deriding them.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says, ‘And stop them; indeed, they are to be questioned’, i.e. stop them for interrogation and accounting. This questioning, however, shall be individual, not collective. Each one of them will be questioned and interrogated alone. The scholars say regarding the questioning that people come to rebuke themselves before Allah comes to rebuke them; as soon as they see the resurrection and the place of accounting, they reproach themselves and start to regret at the time when regret no longer benefits.

مَا لَكُمْ لَا تَنَاصَرُونَ ﴿٢٥﴾ بَلْ هُمُ الْيَوْمَ مُسْتَسْلِمُونَ ﴿٢٦﴾

“Why do you not support each other now?” [25] no indeed!
They will be in complete submission on that Day [26]
(The Quran, as-Saffat: 25-26)

This question is also by way of mockery and ridicule. That is to say, ‘What is the matter with you now? Can you not help each other like you did in the world’?

The masses following their leaders and the leaders organising their followers, how similar they are in this situation to the proverb which says, ‘birds of a feather flock together' or the saying, 'The miserable and the hopeless will be united'. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says after this, 'But they, that Day, are in surrender'; they are humbled, disgraced and humiliated. People say, 'he raised the white flag', meaning he had no strength left to defend himself, no logic or evidence. He is now submissive, small and humbled, awaiting Allah's Judgement upon him.

وَأَقْبَلَ بَعْضُهُمْ عَلَىٰ بَعْضٍ يَتَسَآءَلُونَ ﴿٢٧﴾ قَالُوٓاْ إِنَّكُمْ كُنتُمْ تَأْتُونَنَا عَنِ ٱلْيَمِينِ ﴿٢٨﴾ قَالُواْ بَل
لَّمْ تَكُونُواْ مُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿٢٩﴾ وَمَا كَانَ لَنَا عَلَيْكُم مِّن سُلْطَٰنٍۭ بَلْ كُنتُمْ قَوْمًا طَٰغِينَ ﴿٣٠﴾

And they will turn on one another accusingly [27] They will say,
'You came to us from a position of power' [28] They will say,
'No! It was you who would not believe [29] we had no power over you – and you were already exceeding all limits [30]
(The Quran, as-Saffat: 27-30)

One should reflect upon this dialogue between the followers and their leaders. After their collective failure has become apparent and the realities that they denied for so long in the world have been revealed, they now attempt to shift the burden of responsibility on each other and start to argue about it. 'They will say', i.e. the followers, 'Indeed, you used to come at us from the right.' The right-hand side is the direction of goodness; this is why the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him ordered us to prefer the right-hand side(1) in all things. We greet, eat, work, and write with it, because it is respected and honoured. Even the Arabs of old used to take good omens from the right-hand side if a bird flew in that direction.

The right is also the side of strength. Most people use their right-hand side, and are stronger with it. One time we were asked about people who use their left hands, should we prohibit them from that? We said that whether one uses one's right or left hand is not merely a case of what one is used to, rather, it is also an aspect of one's genetic makeup. There is a centre in the body which is responsible for distributing strength. Some people's strength is distributed more to the right, and so his right is stronger than his left, some people are the opposite, and in some people their strength is distributed evenly, they can work just as well with their right or left. These people are known as ambidextrous, and 'Umar Allah be pleased with him was one of them. All these meanings are present in the meaning of this verse. ‘They will say, “Indeed, you used to come at us from the right’, i.e. from the direction of truth and goodness so that you might divert us from it; or by way of strength and power to force us to do things; or through oaths, meaning that you would swear to us that that was the right way, none other.

(1) It was related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [168, 426, 538] on the authority of `Aisha Allah be pleased with her who said, 'The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him used to begin with his right with his sandals, when dismounting, in his ablutions and in all his affairs.'

The leaders then respond to the followers, ‘Rather, you [yourselves] were not believers’ meaning we did not ruin your faith and lead you to disbelief, rather, you were already, by nature, disbelievers. All we had to do was point the way and you were following us, ‘And we had over you no authority.’ Authority can either be through strength and force of action or it can be the power of argument to convince somebody to disbelieve. So, they are saying, ‘we had neither physical power over you nor a powerful argument to convince you, ‘but you were’ by your very nature, ‘a transgressing people’ overstepping the boundaries in misguidance and disbelief. This is the lesson Satan teaches to his followers in the next world when he disowns them and give up responsibility. Allah tells us, ‘And Satan will say when the matter has been concluded, “Indeed, Allah had promised you the promise of truth. And I promised you, but I betrayed you. But I had no authority over you except that I invited you, and you responded to me. So do not blame me; but blame yourselves.”’ (Ibrahim: 22)

فَحَقَّ عَلَيْنَا قَوْلُ رَبِّنَآ إِنَّا لَذَآئِقُونَ ﴿٣١﴾ فَأَغْوَيْنَٰكُمْ إِنَّا كُنَّا غَٰوِينَ ﴿٣٢﴾
فَإِنَّهُمْ يَوْمَئِذٍ فِى ٱلْعَذَابِ مُشْتَرِكُونَ ﴿٣٣﴾ إِنَّا كَذَٰلِكَ نَفْعَلُ بِٱلْمُجْرِمِينَ ﴿٣٤﴾

Our Lord’s sentence on us is just and we must all taste the punishment [31] We led you astray as we ourselves were astray [32] On that Day they will all share the torment [33] this is how We deal with the guilty [34] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 31-34)

Allah’s saying, ‘has come into effect’ means it has come to pass; ‘upon us’, i.e. the leaders and their followers; the punishment has become necessary for all of them.

One should reflect upon their saying, ‘indeed, we will taste [punishment].’ They did not say ‘we are being punished’ or ‘we are being burnt’. Punishment or burning can end at any time, while tasting continues and lasts. This meaning is made clear in Allah’s saying, ‘Every time their skins are roasted through We will replace them with other skins so they may taste the punishment.’ (an-Nisa’: 56) It has been discovered in these times that the skin is the locus of pain, not the brain. The proof of this is that if one takes an injection for instance, one feels pain as the needle punctures the skin but after that, no more. This is a reality that Allah Glorified is He has outlined for us in His saying, ‘Every time their skins are roasted through We will replace them with other skins.’ Why? ‘So they may taste the punishment’ because pain is experienced by the skin.

Regarding their saying, ‘And we led you to deviation’, it means, ‘we showed you the ways of error and misguidance’. The one in error is the one who strays from the path of truth and good. ‘Indeed, we were deviators’, means ‘If we ourselves were lost and misguided, why should we leave you to have faith and guidance. You too must drink from the same cup as us’. This is the logic of their teacher, Satan. When he disobeyed Allah and was cast out from His Mercy, he swore that he would misguide the offspring of Adam peace be upon him along with himself so that they might be like him in loss and misguidance. Then Allah Glorified is He brings this confrontation between the people of falsehood to a close and confirms the reality that, ‘So indeed they, that Day’, i.e. the Day of Judgement, ‘will be sharing in the punishment.’ This is our way with the people of misguidance, ‘Indeed, that is how We deal with the criminals.’ Those are who deny the primary basis of faith, Divine unity. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He describes them in the following verse saying:

إِنَّهُمْ كَانُوٓا۟ إِذَا قِيلَ لَهُمْ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا ٱللَّهُ يَسْتَكْبِرُونَ ﴿٣٥﴾ وَيَقُولُونَ أَئِنَّا
لَتَارِكُوٓا۟ ءَالِهَتِنَا لِشَاعِرٍ مَّجْنُونٍۭ ﴿٣٦﴾ بَلْ جَآءَ بِٱلْحَقِّ وَصَدَّقَ ٱلْمُرْسَلِينَ ﴿٣٧﴾

Whenever it was said to them, ‘There is no deity but God,’ they became arrogant [35] and said, ‘Are we to forsake our gods for a mad poet?’ [36] ‘No: he brought the truth and confirmed the earlier messengers [37] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 35 - 37)

‘They,’ i.e., the disbelievers whom Allah Glorified is He described as criminals, ‘when it was said to them, “There is no deity [worthy of worship] but Allah” were arrogant', i.e. they would refuse to believe or accept it out of arrogance. 'And were saying, "Are we to leave our gods for a mad poet?" We would give up worshipping them for the sake of a mad poet or because he called us to do so. It is very strange that the Arabs, given that they were an oral nation, giving great value and appreciation to even a single word, when they know fully well the meaning of the word and the meaning of worship. Deity refers to something that is worshipped, but by what right are these idols worshipped? What did they order you to do? From what did they prohibit you? Where is the guidance that they brought you? Indeed, they knew that these were dead objects that could neither harm nor benefit them. They worshipped them because of the natural inclination towards religion that man has. Man, by his nature, is religious; he desires to draw closer to a power greater than himself to which he can flee when trouble strikes, a power that will help him to be patient and endure events. They found these deities to be ones that imposed no responsibilities and made no demands and thus they worshipped them instead of Allah. It is also strange that, given they were an oral nation, they failed to differentiate between Allah's Speech in the Quran and poetry, for they were the most knowledgeable of people regarding its rhymes and metres. How can poetry compare to Allah's Speech in the Quran?

Similarly, incomprehensible is how they could accuse the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of being insane, when they were fully acquainted with him, his attributes, his character, and his life among them before he was elected to prophethood. How distant insanity is from the one who has embodied all the finest qualities and most gracious characteristics. Madness is that a person acts in ways that are unintelligible. The crazy man does not differentiate between things; he does not know what is beneficial or what is harmful.

It is for this same reason that Allah Glorified is He says here, 'Rather', a word that is for contradiction of the preceding speech. 'The Prophet has come with the truth', i.e. that which is firm and unchanging; 'and confirmed the [previous] messengers' regarding the path of Allah.

Allah says:

إِنَّكُمْ لَذَآئِقُوا۟ ٱلْعَذَابِ ٱلْأَلِيمِ ﴿٣٨﴾ وَمَا تُجْزَوْنَ إِلَّا مَا كُنتُمْ تَعْمَلُونَ ﴿٣٩﴾

You will taste the painful torment [38] and be repaid only according to your deeds [39] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 38 - 39)

In the preceding verses, Allah Glorified is He related the speech of the leaders of the oppressors to their followers but emphasis this meaning here except that here the type of tasting is specified, 'Will be tasters of the painful punishment.' This grievous suffering is not oppression or transgression, rather, it is the recompense for what they did previously, 'although you shall not be requited for aught but what you were wont to do' (as-Saffat: 39), and 'And you will not be recompensed except for what you used to do.' After this description of the people of disbelief and enmity, the obstinate, criminals and the clarification of their outcome and what awaits them of recompense, the True Lord Glorified is He follows this with a description of the believers who were sincere in their worship of Allah. This coupling of two opposites is one of the styles of the Quran, as for instance, in Allah's saying, 'Indeed, the righteous will be in pleasure. And indeed, the wicked will be in Hellfire.' (al-Infitar: 13-14) It is through their opposites that things become clear. When one mentions something after its opposite, its good qualities become apparent, as in the saying of the poet (1) describing his beloved:

The face like the dawn is white,
The hair black like the night,
Two opposites improved when brought together,
For each shows up the good in its other (2)

That is why the True Lord Glorified is He speaks of what He has promised the true believers after what He has mentioned of the recompense of the oppressors and deniers, so as to generate remorse in them, that it may be an extra punishment added to their suffering in the fire.

إِلَّا عِبَادَ ٱللَّهِ ٱلۡمُخۡلَصِينَ ﴿٤٠﴾ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ لَهُمۡ رِزۡقٞ مَّعۡلُومٞ ﴿٤١﴾ فَوَٰكِهُۖ وَهُم مُّكۡرَمُونَ ﴿٤٢﴾
فِي جَنَّٰتِ ٱلنَّعِيمِ ﴿٤٣﴾ عَلَىٰ سُرُرٖ مُّتَقَٰبِلِينَ ﴿٤٤﴾ يُطَافُ عَلَيۡهِم بِكَأۡسٖ مِّن مَّعِينِۭ ﴿٤٥﴾
بَيۡضَآءَ لَذَّةٖ لِّلشَّٰرِبِينَ ﴿٤٦﴾ لَا فِيهَا غَوۡلٞ وَلَا هُمۡ عَنۡهَا يُنزَفُونَ ﴿٤٧﴾

Not so God's true servants [40] They will have familiar provisions [41] fruits – and will be honoured [42] in gardens of delight [43] seated on couches, facing one another [44] A drink will be passed round among them from a flowing spring [45] white, delicious to those who taste it [46] causing no headiness or intoxication [47] (The Quran*, as-Saffat:* 40 - 47)

What preceded this was a discussion of the recompense of the disbelievers, but this is an exception; 'But not the chosen servants of Allah', those whom Allah Glorified is He has made true and chosen to obey and worship Him. 'Those will have a provision determined' i.e., in the hereafter because the sustenance of this world is unknown. A person may strive and tire himself out in this world and yet be deprived of the fruits of his labour; his crops may fail and he may come out at a loss in his trade. We have an apportioned sustenance in this world, but we do not know what it is. In the next world, however, one's sustenance is specified and known, is unaltered by circumstances and never fails to materialise. This is the hereafter and one is with the Ultimate Cause Glorified is He. We defined sustenance earlier as being 'everything that one benefits from', even something prohibited that one partakes of is considered part of one's sustenance. That is why Allah Glorified is He says, 'O you who have believed, eat from the good things which We have provided for you.' (al-Baqara: 172)

The subject then moves to some of the wonderful details of this sustenance. The most important part of one's sustenance is the essential nutrition by which one's life is maintained, after that come the luxuries that make one's life easier. Here, however, the True Lord Glorified is He does not mention the necessities, He only speaks of the luxuries above, and beyond them; 'Fruits; and they will be honoured.' Even though in several other places He mentioned the necessities and then followed them with the fruits and luxuries, such as His saying, 'That they may eat of His fruit. And their hands have not produced it...' (Ya Sin: 35). So why did Allah suffice Himself with mentioning only the fruits here? The scholars say that it is because the speech here refers to the hereafter. Eating in the hereafter is not out of need for food, it is only for the pleasure and luxury of eating.

Alternatively, it could be said that, as long as Allah Glorified is He has guaranteed the luxuries for you, it goes without saying that He has guaranteed one's essential nutrition. As for Allah's saying, 'and they will be honoured' it means that the food will not just be thrown down before them as hay is thrown down for animals, for we have no intention to honour animals when feeding them. Rather, the sustenance of the believers will be provided in such a way that '…they will be honoured' in 'gardens of pleasure' because this is the provision of a lover for His beloved.

They are 'On thrones facing one another.' They will not be burdened with the troubles of visiting one another. The thrones that they sit on will be facing one another such that if one desired to visit his brother he would immediately find him in front of him without needing to go anywhere. This is something which has been guaranteed. 'There will be circulated among them a cup [of wine] from a flowing spring.' In another verse, Allah Glorified is He has further described those who will carry these cups, 'There will circulate among them young boys made eternal. With vessels, pitchers and a cup [of wine] from a flowing spring.' (al-Waqi'a: 17-18) This cup could refer to the wine or to the goblet into which the wine (from a flowing spring) is placed. This wine is then described as being 'clear' (as-Saffat: 46), and clear wine was considered to be the best type among the Arabs. It is 'White and delicious to the drinkers.' Allah did not say here delightful; rather, He said 'delicious', i.e. it is, in and of itself, delicious. It is as though deliciousness has been embodied in this drink. Allah Glorified is He described the wine of the hereafter as, 'delicious to the drinkers, so as to differentiate between it and the wine of this world. We see in films that the alcoholic beverages of this world are not drunk for pleasure, for the people put a tiny bit in a cup and then they consume it in one go, drinking it reluctantly because of its awful taste. If, however, the alcoholic beverages of this world are not drunk for the pleasure of consuming them, why do people do so? They drink because of the effect it has of impairing the intellect, the guarding of one’s actions, etc. They want to break out and be free of this guardian. For this reason, the best types of alcohol in their reckoning, and we seek refuge with Allah, are those that render one careless among other things. As for the wine of the hereafter, the only thing it has in common with that of this world is the name. The wine of the hereafter is delicious, you feel it when you drink it, and you take it slowly, sip by sip, so that you can savour its sweetness. It does not corrupt one’s intellect; ‘no bad effect is there in it, nor from it will they be intoxicated.’ It will not distort one’s mind. Effect ‘…is there in it, nor from it will they be intoxicated.’ Among the types of alcohol is that which is purgative when swallowed, such that it will cause the contents of the stomach to be expelled. As for the wine of the hereafter, it does not cause such sickness. An alternative meaning of ‘nor from it will they be intoxicated’ could be that their intellects are not sapped by it and they do not get intoxicated by it as they do on the wine of this world.(1) Allah then says:

وَعِندَهُمۡ قَٰصِرَٰتُ ٱلطَّرۡفِ عِينٞ ﴿٤٨﴾ كَأَنَّهُنَّ بَيۡضٞ مَّكۡنُونٞ ﴿٤٩﴾

With them will be spouses – modest of gaze and beautiful of eye [48] like protected eggs [49]
(The Quran, as-Saffat: 48 - 49)

This is a description of the women in paradise. They will be: ‘...modest of gaze...’ (as-Saffat: 48). This means that these women look at none but their husbands. We have previously said that a man may give the most expensive things he possesses as a gift to another, such as a car, house, or clothes. As for one’s wife, none accepts that any other person looks at her due to her high status as a person attached to his wife. Similarly, a man does not like his wife to look at other men. This is one of the traits of the women in paradise; they are ‘...modest of gaze...’ (as-Saffat: 48). In another verse, wives are described as: '...Fair ones reserved in pavilions.' (ar-Rahman: 72) This means that they are chaste and reserved only for their husbands. Allah guards the beauty of women and ensures that society will nurture chaste women so that people's lineages may be preserved and noble. These are the standard traits for believing women in the worldly life and will be the same in the Hereafter. Allah comforts husbands regarding this peculiarity, as no one will share him his wife in the Hereafter, even by a glance.

(1) Ibn `Abbas Allah be pleased with him said that it means ‘they will not get intoxicated.’ Mujahid said it meant, ‘It will not cause any deficiency in their intellects.’ This was related by Hunad, `Abd ibn Hamid and Ibn Abu Hatim. It is also related on the authority of Sa`id ibn Jabir that it means, ‘there is no harm in it nor anything unpleasant.’ This was related by `Abd ibn Hamid, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abu Hatim, As-Suyuti mentioned these narrations in Ad-Durr Al-Manthur [7: 88].

The Arabic word 'in is the plural of the word `ayna (having wide beautiful eyes), and the Arabs consider wide and beautiful eyes and small mouths as features of beautiful women.

The phrase: 'With them...' (as-Saffat: 48) means 'in their possession', as they are from the pleasures of paradise. If one needs anything from them, he gains it; if not then he may leave them, yet they will remain waiting for him. Allah describes them saying: 'like protected eggs.' (as-Saffat: 49) The word bayd is the plural of the word baydah (an egg) which refers to an ostrich egg[1] because they are the biggest eggs which have the best colour. It is said that the person who shelters beauty in his tribe that he shelters its egg. Therefore, eggs here are described as being so protected that no one has touched it.

فَأَقْبَلَ بَعْضُهُمْ عَلَىٰ بَعْضٍ يَتَسَآءَلُونَ ﴿٥٠﴾ قَالَ قَآئِلٌ مِّنْهُمْ إِنِّى كَانَ لِى قَرِينٌ ﴿٥١﴾
يَقُولُ أَءِنَّكَ لَمِنَ ٱلْمُصَدِّقِينَ ﴿٥٢﴾ أَءِذَا مِتْنَا وَكُنَّا تُرَابًا وَعِظَٰمًا أَءِنَّا لَمَدِينُونَ ﴿٥٣﴾

They will turn to one another with questions [50] One will say, 'I had a close companion on earth [51] who used to ask me, "Do you really believe that [52] after we die and become dust and bone, we shall be brought for judgement?" [53] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 50 - 53)

We have known the argument that runs between the disbelievers in the fire. In these verses, Allah tells us about the dialogue that takes place between the people of paradise. They ask each other about what happened to the oppressors and deluded people and where they are.

[1] Al-Hasan and Ibn Zayd said, 'They are like ostrich eggs. The ostriches protect them with feathers from the wind and the dust. They are yellowish white, which is the best colour for women's complexion.' This was narrated by Al-Qurtubi in his exegesis [8/5719] and As-Suyuti mentioned it in Ad- Durr Al-Manthur (7/89) attributing it to Ibn Abu Hatim on the authority of Zayd ibn Aslam.

‘One of the people of Paradise will say: “I had a close companion on earth who used to ask me, ‘Do you really believe that after we die and become dust and bone, we shall be brought for judgement?’”” (as-Saffat: 50-53) The question which was asked by the believer’s companion indicates belying and denial of resurrection and judgement.

قَالَ هَلۡ أَنتُم مُّطَّلِعُونَ (٥٤) فَٱطَّلَعَ فَرَءَاهُ فِي سَوَآءِ ٱلۡجَحِيمِ (٥٥) قَالَ تَٱللَّهِ
إِن كِدتَّ لَتُرۡدِينِ (٥٦) وَلَوۡلَا نِعۡمَةُ رَبِّي لَكُنتُ مِنَ ٱلۡمُحۡضَرِينَ (٥٧)

Then he will say, ‘Shall we look for him?’ [54] He will look down and see him in the midst of the fire [55] and say to him, ‘By God, you almost brought me to ruin! [56] Had it not been for the grace of my Lord, I too would have been taken to Hell [57] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 54-57)

The Quran creates such an image of this scenario that one can almost see and hear. While the people of paradise are busy asking each other about the misguided ones that they knew in the world, one of them looks and sees an acquaintance that denied the resurrection and judgement and tried to mislead him amongst the people of the fire. Therefore, he asks his Companions to look at such-and-such who is in the fire. ‘He will look down and see him in the midst of the fire.’ (as-Saffat: 55) The person seen in the fire has not hope to be saved. Upon seeing this, the believer remembers the blessing which Allah has bestowed on him, as He has saved him from the abyss of misguidance, to which his companion wanted to lead him. He addresses him, saying: ‘...By Allah, you almost brought me to ruin...’ (as-Saffat: 56) along with yourself, ‘Had it not been for the grace of my Lord...’ (as-Saffat: 57) the grace of saving me. ‘...I too would have been taken to Hell.’ (as-Saffat: 57) This means that he would have been among those whom the angels have gathered for punishment. At this point, the believers’, joy due to their faith increases as well as their gratitude and recognition of Allah’s blessings. Nothing can disturb their joy except the fear that they will eventually die and lose this bliss. So they say:

أَفَمَا نَحْنُ بِمَيِّتِينَ ﴿٥٨﴾ إِلَّا مَوْتَتَنَا ٱلْأُولَىٰ وَمَا نَحْنُ بِمُعَذَّبِينَ ﴿٥٩﴾
إِنَّ هَٰذَا لَهُوَ ٱلْفَوْزُ ٱلْعَظِيمُ ﴿٦٠﴾ لِمِثْلِ هَٰذَا فَلْيَعْمَلِ ٱلْعَٰمِلُونَ ﴿٦١﴾

Then he will say [to his blessed companions], 'Are we never to die again after our earlier death? [58] Shall we never suffer? [59] This truly is the supreme triumph! [60] Everyone should strive to attain this [61] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 58 - 61)

Thus, they are apprehensive about losing this bliss asking each other, 'Are we never to die again after our earlier death?' (as-Saffat: 59) They wonder whether they will die again or not; 'Shall we never suffer?' (as-Saffat: 59) They ask whether there will be anything else for which they will be called to account or punished. His hope is to remain in this state of bliss so that he does not miss it either by death or by any other change for the worse. 'This truly is…' (as-Saffat: 60) continuous and everlasting bliss, which will not be followed by reckoning or punishment. That is '...the supreme triumph.' (as-Saffat: 60) There can be no doubt that this is a goal that everyone should strive to attain. 'Everyone should strive to attain this.' (as-Saffat: 61) Allah gives us an account of these events that will take place in the afterlife in order to clarify for the effect of faith and the result of good deeds. He describes for us the events that will take place in the Hereafter so that we may take a lesson from them. Any deed that leads to such a blissful end can easily be done no matter how troublesome or tiring, as this will incur no loss.

أَذَٰلِكَ خَيْرٌ نُّزُلًا أَمْ شَجَرَةُ ٱلزَّقُّومِ ﴿٦٢﴾ إِنَّا جَعَلْنَٰهَا فِتْنَةً لِّلظَّٰلِمِينَ ﴿٦٣﴾
إِنَّهَا شَجَرَةٌ تَخْرُجُ فِىٓ أَصْلِ ٱلْجَحِيمِ ﴿٦٤﴾ طَلْعُهَا كَأَنَّهُۥ رُءُوسُ ٱلشَّيَٰطِينِ ﴿٦٥﴾

Is this the better welcome, or the tree of Zaqqum [62] which we have made a test for the evildoers? [63] This tree grows in the heart of the blazing fire [64] and its fruits are like devils' heads [65] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 62 - 65)

These verses state the bliss of paradise and the punishment of the fire. It states again the description of hell and its punishments: 'Is this...' (as-Saffat: 62) the bliss of paradise stated above '...the better welcome...' (as-Saffat: 62), as a place of stay and hosting. An-Nuzul is the place that is prepared for an unexpected guest which has all the necessities of life such as food, drink, etc. Therefore, a hotel is called a nuzul. Hotels with all the facilities for relaxation are prepared by people for other people, so how could one imagine what Allah could prepare for people. Hospitality depends on the abilities of the host.

'...or the tree of Zaqqum' (as-Saffat: 62); what is the tree of Zaqqum? Allah describes it, saying: 'which we have made a test for the evildoers' (as-Saffat: 63). The Arabic word fitnah means tribulation and punishment. 'This tree grows in the heart of the blazing fire.' (as-Saffat: 64) This tree shows Allah's Absolute Power, so one should not ask about how the tree grows in the middle of the fire because the One Who has created it is Allah Glorified is He. This should be viewed in the framework of Allah's transcendence above the rules of creation.

Its fruits seem to be the heads of the devils. However, we have not seen the heads of devils. Therefore, some orientalists who try to find fault with the Quran wonder that Allah likens something unknown to us with something also unknown. We have not seen either the Zaqqum tree or the heads of the devils. Comparisons are made to clarify one thing by means of another. What is the benefit of comparing something unknown with another unknown thing? We say in reply that the human brain has the faculties of memory, recall, and imagination. A person first sees something, and then it is recorded in his memory at the part of consciousness. Then, he can recall that thing. As for imagination, it can take fragments of reality and create a new image that does not exist in reality. In the case of this verse: they 'are like devils' heads' (as-Saffat: 65), though you have not seen a devil's head, your imagination can create so horrible image for it that will be quite satisfactory to clarify the difference between the welcome that Allah has prepared for the believers in paradise and this tree the fruits of which resemble the devils' heads. Allah has intended to compare between these two images and to give you the warning during the time when recompense is witnessed, not the time when denial is possible.

The tree of Zaqqum is a malignant tree that can be found in the region of Tuhama. Its odour is rank and its taste bitter. Allah has mentioned it as a likeness for the tree that grows in the heart of hell. Scholars say that this tree is a chastisement for those being punished because they used to deny the resurrection and life after death, so Allah has made this grow in the midst of hell and carry their food, as their food is only its fruits. Trees imply water and greenery, and it is obvious that water and fire cannot be combined. This is a glimpse about the Absolute Power that they deny in the worldly life. Therefore, the presence of this tree in the midst of hell and the disbelievers' subsistence on its fruits and need for it is chastisement for them due to their denial of the resurrection. This reminds us of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him when he was thrown into the fire, yet Allah made it cool and safe for him, as Allah stopped the fire's feature of burning.

Allah Glorified is He wants to make sure that people understand the repulsive nature of this tree, even though the Arabs already know a tree by this name. They know its rank nature, foul smell, and evil taste. They know its paltry fruit, but no one has seen a fruit that is like the devils' heads. Thus, the objective is to reveal its evil nature and give people's imagination every opportunity to envisage its foul character. The fruit of any tree is the most beautiful part of the tree. As for this fruit, it is like devils' heads. A person can imagine how ugly, offensive, and repulsive it is. It is well known that the Arabs believed that the devils have the ugliest appearance, while the angels have the finest and most beautiful appearance. An example that explains this point is what the women said about Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him: '...Perfect is Allah! This is not a man; this is none but a noble angel.' (Yusuf: 31) The Quran took the beliefs of the Arabs into account in this metaphor; it uses an unknown image, but it is something that all people can imagine according to their standards of ugliness. If it used a specific example whose ugliness is known to all people, it would be likely that while some people would consider it to be ugly, others would not. Allah Glorified is He desired to create an image that would be considered ugly by everybody, as no one considers the devil as beautiful. If we bring all the caricaturists in the world and ask them to draw a picture of the devil, each one will draw the ugly image he has in his mind. You will not find two pictures that exactly resemble each other. Therefore, the fruit of the tree of Zaqqum is compared to the devils' heads in order to implant the idea of ugliness in everybody's mind. This image can make this tree repulsive to anyone.

The word al-tal` originally refers to the calyx that envelops the fruit in its beginning. It also refers to the sheath that encloses the fruit of the palm and its like. When the stalks come out and the shape of the fruit becomes plain, these fruits are called balah (dates) so long as they are green.

Dates have three stages: The first relates to their size; when they reach their final size, their colour is neutral, then they become red or yellow. During this stage, it is said the dates have become `affar or zahw (white or shiny). The second stage is when the dates become red or yellow, they are now known as busr. The third stage is relevant to their consistency, whether they become tender or dry, according to the environment. If it is hot and dry, the busr will be dry and will be called tamr (dates). If the environment is cool and humid, the dates will remain moist and are named rutab.

Then Allah says:

فَإِنَّهُمۡ لَأٓكِلُونَ مِنۡهَا فَمَالِـُٔونَ مِنۡهَا ٱلۡبُطُونَ ﴿٦٦﴾ ثُمَّ إِنَّ لَهُمۡ عَلَيۡهَا
لَشَوۡبٗا مِّنۡ حَمِيمٖ ﴿٦٧﴾ ثُمَّ إِنَّ مَرۡجِعَهُمۡ لَإِلَى ٱلۡجَحِيمِ ﴿٦٨﴾

They will fill their bellies eating from it [66] then drink scalding water on top of it [67] then return to the blazing fire [68] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 66 - 68)

Necessity will force them to have recourse to something so grievous and hateful to them because they will have no other food. ‘They will fill their bellies eating from it...’ (as-Saffat: 66). When they have filled their bellies with it, the fire therein will increase, so they will want a drink to extinguish this fire, but their drink will be boiling water (we seek refuge with Allah). ‘Then drink scalding water on top of it.’ (as-Saffat: 67). The Arabic word `ash-shawb means something mixed or blended, and hamim is boiling water. In another verse, their drink is called ghislin.(1) When they eat and drink, they will return to their punishment. ‘Then return to the blazing fire.’ (as-Saffat: 67) Allah clarifies the reason for this punishment and painful end, as this is only recompense for what they did.

---

(1) Allah Glorified is He says: ‘nor any food except from the discharge of wounds.’ (al-Haqqa: 36) The word ghislin means the suppuration of the people of the fire. At-Tafsir Al-Muyassar

إِنَّهُمۡ أَلۡفَوۡاْ ءَابَآءَهُمۡ ضَآلِّينَ ﴿٦٩﴾ فَهُمۡ عَلَىٰٓ ءَاثَٰرِهِمۡ يُهۡرَعُونَ ﴿٧٠﴾

They found their forefathers astray [69] and rushed to follow in their footsteps – before the disbelievers [70] [of Mecca] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 69 - 70)

Their forefathers were misguided and they imitated them and hurried to follow their footsteps. '…and rushed to follow in their footsteps…' (as-Saffat: 70). The word yuhra`un is in the passive tense, as its subject is not mentioned. Had this haste to follow their fathers been on their part, Allah would have said yahra`un. This shows that something is driving them to imitate their forefathers, and Allah does this to show us how aggressive evil is, as it involves no responsibility for a person and no barriers against his passions. Therefore, people rush into it and seek it. As for the path of truth and guidance, people do not tend to rush toward it because it restrains their passions and limits them to the framework that Allah has laid down. Thus, they imitate their fathers, even though they know they are astray, so that they may flee from legal responsibility. Allah let them take upon themselves: 'And [mention] when your Lord took from the children of Adam - from their loins - their descendants and made them testify of themselves, [saying to them], "Am I not your Lord?" They said, "Yes, we have testified." [This] - lest you should say on the day of Resurrection, "Indeed, we were of this unaware." Or [lest] you say, "It was only that our fathers associated [others in worship] with Allah before, and we were but descendants after them. Then would You destroy us for what the falsifiers have done?" (al-A'raf: 172-173) The Quran states their acknowledgement in many verses.

Allah Glorified is He says, 'And when it is said to them, "Follow what Allah has revealed," they say, "Rather, we will follow that which we found our fathers doing...."' (al-Baqara: 170) But Allah Glorified is He refutes them saying: '...Even though their fathers understood nothing, nor were they guided?' (al-Baqara: 170)

Allah Glorified is He reveals that they are lying concerning these claims. If they followed their ancestors in general, they would follow the path of their forefather Adam peace be upon him. If they had done so, their offspring would have imitated them, and people would have continued to follow Allah’s religion. However, those people were only controlled by their passions and were conquered by their desires which diverted them from the path of their Lord and Creator. Is there not a person amongst them who is aware of this misguidance, refuses to follow it and searches for guidance?

وَلَقَدۡ ضَلَّ قَبۡلَهُمۡ أَكۡثَرُ ٱلۡأَوَّلِينَ ﴿٧١﴾ وَلَقَدۡ أَرۡسَلۡنَا فِيهِم مُّنذِرِينَ ﴿٧٢﴾
فَٱنظُرۡ كَيۡفَ كَانَ عَٰقِبَةُ ٱلۡمُنذَرِينَ ﴿٧٣﴾ إِلَّا عِبَادَ ٱللَّهِ ٱلۡمُخۡلَصِينَ ﴿٧٤﴾

Most men in the past went astray [71] even though We sent messengers to warn them [72] See how those who were warned met their end! [73] Not so the true servants of Allah [74]
(The Quran, as-Saffat: 71-74)

Allah’s saying: ‘Most men in the past went astray’ (as-Saffat: 71) means that these people were not the first misguided people, as many of their predecessors went astray. This indicates that only a minority were believers while the majority were misguided. ‘Even though We sent messengers to warn them.’ (as-Saffat: 72) This means that Allah did not leave them in heedlessness, as He sent them messengers to warn them. There is immunity in the human soul that protects man from errors and sin, even if he is separated from people. If this immunity becomes weak and he goes against Allah’s path, then the self-reproaching soul will call him to account and reprimand him until he repents. If he becomes used to sin and his self-reproaching soul becomes weak, he is no longer able to deter himself, and then society deters him by enjoining righteousness upon him and forbidding him from evil. The society that offers counsel through its members is described by Allah’s saying: ‘...advised each other to truth and advised each other to patience.’ (al-’Asr: 3) There is a difference between the Arabic words wassu and tawasu. The later means that the members of the society advise one another. Even a religious and believing society has members who differ in their uprightness and application of Allah’s religion. There will always be people who become weak and go astray or become heedless, so they must find those in the society who will deter them and remind them so that they may return to the right way. If a society loses its deterrents and corruption becomes widespread, Allah sends a new messenger with a new revelation. We know that messengers bring both glad tidings and warnings, but in the following verse, Allah mentions the warning: ‘Even though We sent messengers to warn them.’ (as-Saffat: 72) Scholars say that warding off harm is prioritised over bringing benefits. To clarify this issue, if someone throws an apple at you while another throws a rock at you, there is no doubt that you would defend yourself against the rock before taking the apple. Allah’s saying: ‘See how those who were warned met their end.’ (as-Saffat: 73) means that Allah urges those people to reflect upon the consequences of this warning; the messengers of Allah warned everyone, but did all people benefit from the warning? No, rather, some benefited from this warning and others turned away. Allah brings the following exception after this verse: ‘Not so the true servants of Allah.’ (as-Saffat: 74) The people whom Allah chose and purified to worship and obey Him benefit from the warning. After Allah tackled the prophets in general, saying, ‘Even though We sent messengers to warn them.’ (as-Saffat: 72), Allah mentioned them in some detail, saying:

وَلَقَدْ نَادَىٰنَا نُوحٌ فَلَنِعْمَ ٱلْمُجِيبُونَ ﴿٧٥﴾ وَنَجَّيْنَٰهُ وَأَهْلَهُۥ مِنَ ٱلْكَرْبِ ٱلْعَظِيمِ ﴿٧٦﴾
وَجَعَلْنَا ذُرِّيَّتَهُۥ هُمُ ٱلْبَاقِينَ ﴿٧٧﴾ وَتَرَكْنَا عَلَيْهِ فِى ٱلْءَاخِرِينَ ﴿٧٨﴾ سَلَٰمٌ عَلَىٰ نُوحٍ فِى ٱلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٧٩﴾
إِنَّا كَذَٰلِكَ نَجْزِى ٱلْمُحْسِنِينَ ﴿٨٠﴾ إِنَّهُۥ مِنْ عِبَادِنَا ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿٨١﴾ ثُمَّ أَغْرَقْنَا ٱلْءَاخَرِينَ ﴿٨٢﴾

Noah cried to Us, and how excellent was Our response! [75] We saved him and his people from great distress [76] We let his offspring remain on the earth [77] We let him be praised by later generations [78] ‘Peace be upon Noah among all the nations!’ [79] This is how We reward those who do good [80] he was truly one of Our faithful servants [81] We drowned the rest [82] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 75 - 82)

However, why does Allah begin with Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him? Scholars said that his call to Allah was similar to that of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Allah Glorified is He says, ‘He has ordained for you of religion what He enjoined upon Nuh (Noah) and that which We have revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and what We enjoined upon Ibrahim (Abraham) and Musa (Moses) and `Isa (Jesus) - to establish the religion and not be divided therein...' (ash-Shura: 13). Allah Glorified is He enjoined the instructions of religion upon Nuh (Noah) and other prophets. Some of these prophets were higher than him in rank, yet Allah has mentioned Nuh (Noah) first then the other prophets. The scholars said that Nuh (Noah) had some peculiarity in terms of the environment he found himself in and the people who believed in him. Those who believed in him were saved in the Ark, and were the only ones who existed in the whole world at that time. Therefore, it is as though his message was for all people because of these specific circumstances. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him on the other hand brought a message for all people but in non-specific circumstances.

In Allah's saying: 'Nuh (Noah) cried to Us …' (as-Saffat: 75), the word nadana (cried to us) which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse indicates that Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him used every possible means to call his people, yet he did not succeed. This is proved by his saying in another verse: 'And Nuh (Noah) said, "My Lord, do not leave upon the earth from among the disbelievers an inhabitant. Indeed, if You leave them, they will mislead Your servants and not beget except [every] wicked one and [confirmed] disbeliever."' (Nuh: 26-27) Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him made this supplication against his people after despairing of them, and finding that the means that he may use to persuade his people to believe were insufficient. Therefore, he turned to Allah because He was the Only One capable of saving him from them. Therefore, he called Allah, Who sent him as a messenger, to help him and not to forsake him. This is the natural response of anyone seeking help; when a person faces danger which he cannot ward off by himself, he seeks help from the closest people to him. If he does not find anyone close to him, he will seek the help of someone distant. If he does not find anyone to help him, he asks Allah to help and save him. Then the response to this call comes: '…and how excellent was Our response!' (as-Saffat: 75) As Nuh (Noah) made an excellent supplication, he received an excellent response. Allah did not say: 'and how excellent was my response' because Allah answered Nuh (Noah) with His forces in the universe: the air, water, and angels. '...And none knows the forces of your Lord except Him...' (al-Muddaththir: 31). The result of this response was: 'We saved him and his people from great distress' (as-Saffat: 76). The orientalists wondered about this point as Allah caused

Nuh's (Noah's) son to die. In another verse, the story of Nuh (Noah) and his son, who disobeyed him and drowned with the other disbelievers. Nuh's (Noah's) intercession for him did not work: '...My Lord, indeed my son is of my family; and indeed, Your promise is true; and You are the most just of judges.' (Hud: 45)

This confusion is a result of the fact that many people forget that the real son ship with regard to prophets is not that of blood, but that which is relevant to faith. Therefore, Allah replied to Nuh (Noah) saying: '...O Nuh (Noah), indeed he is not of your family; indeed, he is [one whose] work was other than righteous...' (Hud: 46).

The criteria with regard to the prophets' sons are belief and faith, not blood and lineage. Thus, if one studies this verse closely, he will see that Allah does not reject him personally, rather, He rejects his deeds: '…he is [one whose] work was other than righteous...' (Hud: 46). Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him also said in this regard, 'People will not come to me with their deeds, while you come to me with your ancestry and noble lineage.'(1) The phrase, '…from great distress' (as-Saffat: 76) refers to drowning. The Arabic word karb is something hateful that one cannot repel by oneself or with the help of those around him. If one has some kind of plan to get himself out of trouble, this is not called a karb. The calamity in this verse is furthermore described as being 'great', as no one is able to repel it. Water was pouring down and burst forth from beneath the ground until it covered the mountain peaks. Therefore, there was no way out.

It is well known that water is the mainstay of all living things and one of Allah's greatest blessings upon us, but if Allah wills, He can make water a punishment and a means of punishment. We have seen in the story of Prophet Musa (Moses) how Allah saved Musa (Moses) by means of water and destroyed Pharaoh with the very same water. Then, Allah's saying: '…We let his offspring remain on the earth' (as-Saffat: 77) refers to those who were with him on the Ark, and had believed in him. Allah's saying, 'We let him be praised by later generations.' (as-Saffat: 78) means that he was praised by all people coming after him.[1] 'Peace be upon Nuh (Noah) among all the nations.' (as-Saffat: 79)

(1) It is narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him that the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'O Fatima, rescue thyself from the fire, for I have no power (to protect you) from Allah in anything except this that I would sustain relationship with you.' Related by Muslim in his Sahih (204), Book of Faith

When we listen to the story of this prophet who bore many difficulties for the sake of calling to Allah, and spent a long time doing so, far beyond the lives of normal people, all people should invoke peace upon him. This means that we ask Allah to grant him peace and safety. 'This is how We reward those who do good.' (as-Saffat: 80) Allah's way with His prophets is that He makes them victorious and let people praise them after their death. 'He was truly one of Our faithful servants.' (as-Saffat: 81) Then, Allah says: '…We drowned the rest.' (as-Saffat: 82), which refers to the disbelievers; the word 'rest' indicates contempt and disdain for them.

وَإِنَّ مِن شِيعَتِهِۦ لَإِبۡرَٰهِيمَ ﴿٨٣﴾ إِذۡ جَآءَ رَبَّهُۥ بِقَلۡبٖ سَلِيمٍ ﴿٨٤﴾ إِذۡ قَالَ لِأَبِيهِ وَقَوۡمِهِۦ
مَاذَا تَعۡبُدُونَ ﴿٨٥﴾ أَئِفۡكًا ءَالِهَةٗ دُونَ ٱللَّهِ تُرِيدُونَ ﴿٨٦﴾ فَمَا ظَنُّكُم بِرَبِّ ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٨٧﴾

Abraham was of the same faith [83] he came to his Lord with a devoted heart [84] He said to his father and his people, 'What are you worshipping? [85] How can you choose false gods instead of the true God? [86] So what is your opinion about the Lord of all the Worlds? [87] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 83 - 87)

Allah's says, 'Ibrahim (Abraham) was of the same faith.' (as-Saffat: 83) Ibrahim (Abraham) was of the same faith of Nuh (Noah) and one of his followers who followed his footsteps. The word shi`a which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse refers to people who follow and believe in a person's ideas; they try to carry his message to everyone else, and are willing to bear harm for this sake. The name of the sect 'Shi`a' derived its name from this meaning. The difference between the Shi'a and s*hiu`iyyah* (communism) is very obvious.

(1) Al-Qurtubi said in his exegesis of this verse (8/5729) that Allah caused him to be praised in each nation, as he is beloved to all. Even among the Magians there are those who say he was Afridun.' It was related that the word means 'strifer' or the like.

Why does Allah Glorified is He start the line of prophets with Nuh (Noah) then Ibrahim (Abraham)?

Allah Glorified is He says: '…he came to his Lord with a devoted heart.' (as-Saffat: 84) The reason is the devotion of his heart, as this is the basis of belief and religion. The natural disposition upon which Allah created people is based on righteousness and purity. If some corruption afflicts this natural disposition, then it is done by man. Therefore, Allah has praised Ibrahim (Abraham) for his devoted and pure heart, as Allah says, '…he came to his Lord with a devoted heart.' (as-Saffat: 84) His heart remained unchanged since it was first created. As he maintained the devotion and purity of his heart during the worldly life, he will be rewarded in the Hereafter, 'The Day when there will not benefit [anyone] wealth or children. But only one who comes to Allah with a sound heart.' (ash-Shu'ara': 88-89) He maintained this initial state of the purity and devotion of heart by adhering to Allah's path. Thus, he will meet Allah with a pure heart in the afterlife. Accordingly, Allah Glorified is He described Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him with the best possible description. Allah's saying: 'he came to his Lord…' (as-Saffat: 84), implies that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) did not wait for a messenger to come and invite him, rather he drew close to Allah, reflected on the heavens and earth until he was guided to Allah. When Allah introduced Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) to the believers, he said: 'Indeed, Ibrahim (Abraham) was a [comprehensive] leader, devoutly obedient to Allah...' (an-Nahl: 120). We know that Allah created a variety of gifts and distributed them amongst people, so that everybody has some special gift. Accordingly, necessity will bind people with one another. As for Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him he had the talents of a complete nation. Therefore, he deserved to be shown Allah's mighty dominion of the heavens and the earth. All people are satisfied with the material world, but Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him surpassed this world to the Realm of Dominion because he had stripped himself of certainty in anyone but Allah. The proof is that when he was thrown into the fire and the angel came to offer him help saying, 'Do you need anything?' Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) replied out of faith and certainty, 'Nothing from you', although it was in a time of difficulty and suffering. Allah's saying: 'He said to his father and his people, "What are you worshipping?"' (as-Saffat: 85) indicates Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) purity and devotion of heart. He had something he was pleased with and loved, so he desired to transfer it to other people, especially his relatives, as they are the most deserving of one’s goodness. Therefore, the first people Ibrahim (Abraham) called to Allah were his father and his people. ‘He said to his father and his people, “What are you worshipping?”’ (as-Saffat: 85) The phrase li`abih is mentioned ten times in the Quran, one of which is relevant to Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him in Allah’s saying: ‘[Of these stories mention] when Joseph (Joseph) said to his father, “O my father, indeed I have seen [in a dream] eleven stars and the sun and the moon; I saw them prostrating to me.”’ (Yusuf: 4) The other nine are relevant to Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him starting from the chapter of al-An`am to the chapter of al-Mumtahanah. One of these nine instances combines the name with the description, saying: ‘And [mention, O Muhammad], when Ibrahim (Abraham) said to his father Azar, “Do you take idols as deities? Indeed, I see you and your people to be in manifest error.”’ (al-An‘am: 74)

In the other eight, the word li`abih (to his father) is mentioned without the name Azar. Thus, the name ‘Azar’ mentioned in this verse to indicate that if one qualifies a description with a name, then that description must be shared with another one with a different name. For example, imagine you desired to ask about somebody and you met his son in the street, you would say, ‘Is your father around’? This is because his real father could possibly be meant by this question. However, if one asks, ‘Is your father Muhammad around’? In this case, no doubt that you intend his uncle because you gave him a name to remove any confusion between the two examples

Therefore, Azar was not Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) real father; rather, he was his uncle. There is nothing strange about this because the Quran refers to the uncle as a father, as in Allah’s saying: ‘Or were you witnesses when death approached Ya`qub (Jacob), when he said to his sons, “What will you worship after me?” They said, “We will worship your Allah and the Allah of your fathers, Ibrahim (Abraham) and Ismail (Ishmael) and Ishaq (Isaac) - one Allah. And we are Muslims [in submission] to Him.”’ (al-Baqara: 133) It is well known that Prophet Ismail (Ishmael) was Ishaq’s (Isaac) brother, yet Allah described him as a father to Prophet Ya`qub (Jacob).

When calling his uncle and his people, Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him asked them: '...What do you worship?' (ash-Shu'ara': 70) And in another verse: '…What are you worshipping?' (as-Saffat: 85) And, '...What are these statues to which you are devoted?' (al-Anbiya': 52) The questions in the verses under discussion: '…What are you worshipping? How can you choose false gods instead of the true Allah?' (as-Saffat: 85-86) are incredulous questions which are more effective than statements because while a statement can be denied outright, a question forces the opponent to acknowledge the issue. The word al-ifk which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means the worst type of lies, as there are various levels of lies.

The scholars say that we must consider the object of the lie. If it concerns the most sublime truth relevant to the Divine Entity, it is considered the worst type of lie; as what is done by a person who claims that Allah has a partner. If the lie concerns a human being, its seriousness depends upon to the person the lie is relevant to. Thus, when `Aisha Allah be pleased with her was falsely accused and slandered, Allah called this incident 'ifk' because of the repulsive nature of the accusations and the lofty rank of the person to whom this lie is relevant. Allah Glorified is He says, 'Indeed, those who came with falsehood are a group among you...' (an-Nur: 11). One of the meanings of ifk is to reverse its reality. For example, Allah says, 'And the overturned towns He hurled down.' (an-Najm: 53) The meaning of the verse under study is: Do you want false gods instead of Allah? 'So, what is your opinion about the Lord of all the Worlds?' (as-Saffat: 87) He asks them what they think about Allah. What aspect of His Divinity is it that displeases them? How do they deceive themselves and turn away from Him when He is the Lord of the worlds? Allah Glorified is He says, 'O mankind, what has deceived you concerning your Lord, the Generous.' (al-Infitar: 6) Someone once said that it is as though Allah has dictated the reply to people: What has deceived people regarding their Lord is His Graciousness. In this regard, there is a story of a man who saw another praying in haste. He said to him, 'By Allah, if you owed somebody five dirhams, would it be okay to give them to him all worn out'? The man replied, 'By Allah, if he is gracious, he will accept them without considering whether they are worn out or not'. Allah Glorified is He is surprised by those people who ascribe partners to Him although they are given clear evidence that such a claim is false. Something can only be surprising when it contradicts with the way it should be. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says at the beginning of the chapter of al-Baqara: ‘How can you disbelieve in Allah when you were lifeless and He brought you to life; then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you [back] to life, and then to Him you will be returned.’ (al-Baqara: 28) Their attitude is surprising and incomprehensible.

Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him started to actualise Allah’s saying: ‘And thus did We show Ibrahim (Abraham) the realm of the heavens and the earth...’ (al-An‘am: 75). We have previously clarified the difference between the Arabic words milk, mulk and malakut.

Allah Glorified is He says:

فَنَظَرَ نَظْرَةً فِي ٱلنُّجُومِ ﴿٨٨﴾ فَقَالَ إِنِّي سَقِيمٌ ﴿٨٩﴾ فَتَوَلَّوْا۟ عَنْهُ مُدْبِرِينَ ﴿٩٠﴾ فَرَاغَ إِلَىٰٓ
ءَالِهَتِهِمْ فَقَالَ أَلَا تَأْكُلُونَ ﴿٩١﴾ مَا لَكُمْ لَا تَنطِقُونَ ﴿٩٢﴾ فَرَاغَ عَلَيْهِمْ ضَرْبًۢا بِٱلْيَمِينِ ﴿٩٣﴾
فَأَقْبَلُوٓا۟ إِلَيْهِ يَزِفُّونَ ﴿٩٤﴾ قَالَ أَتَعْبُدُونَ مَا تَنْحِتُونَ ﴿٩٥﴾ وَٱللَّهُ خَلَقَكُمْ وَمَا تَعْمَلُونَ ﴿٩٦﴾

Then he looked up to the stars [88] He said, ‘I am sick,’ [89] so [his people] turned away from him and left [90] He turned to their gods and said [91] ‘Do you not eat? Why do you not speak?’ [92] then he turned and struck them with his right arm [93] His people hurried towards him [94] but he said, ‘How can you worship things you carve with your own hands [95] when it is Allah who has created you and all your handiwork? [96] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 88 - 96)

Allah’s saying about Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: ‘Then he looked up to the stars.’ (as-Saffat: 88) refers to the first step Ibrahim (Abraham) took towards the Realm of Dominion. The look he took was not just a fast glance; rather, it was a thoughtful, examining gaze. The verb nadhar here carries the meaning of close and careful examination. For example, the saying, ‘mas`ala fiha nazhar’ (This issue needs reflection). The singular of the word *nujum (*stars) is najm which refers to anybody in the sky that emits light and does not reflect the light of the sun. Accordingly, the sun is a star. Allah’s saying: ‘Then he looked up to the stars.’ (as-Saffat: 88) indicates that it was a long and reflective look, as it included the planets, the moon and the sun. Thus, Allah expanded upon this look in another verse in the Quran, saying: ‘And thus did We show Ibrahim (Abraham) the realm of the heavens and the earth that he would be among the certain [in faith]. So when the night covered him [with darkness], he saw a star. He said, “This is my lord.” But when it set, he said, “I like not those that disappear. And when he saw the moon rising, he said, “This is my lord.” But when it set, he said, “Unless my Lord guides me, I will surely be among the people gone astray. And when he saw the sun rising, he said, “This is my lord; this is greater.” But when it set, he said, “O my people, indeed I am free from what you associate with Allah. Indeed, I have turned my face toward He who created the heavens and the earth, inclining toward truth, and I am not of those who associate others with Allah.”’ (al-An‘am: 75-79) Thus, Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) look at the stars was long and deliberative because it lasted from the rising of the planet until its setting, then from the rising of the moon until its setting, and from the rising of the sun until its setting. When Ibrahim (Abraham) saw that these things should not be worshipped, he said: ‘…I am sick…’ (as-Saffat: 89). Some scholars regard this as one of the artifices that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him practised upon his people, telling them that he was sick. They considered this illness to be physical,(1) but what he meant was that he was psychologically sick, as he was preoccupied with the unbearable burden of his people’s denial of Allah as a god. This issue exhausted him and gave him sleepless nights. This is the sickness that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him is mentally exhausted from over the people’s denial of Allah’s Divinity. Thus, Ibrahim (Abraham) was not looking at the stars searching for evidence to convince himself, rather he was looking for concrete proofs to convince his people.

What caused him to say to his people: ‘…I am sick’ (as-Saffat: 89)? Scholars said that this day was a festival in which Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) people gathered and he said that in order to find a chance to demolish the idols. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘so [his people] turned away from him and left.’ (as-Saffat: 90) They left him. ‘He turned to their gods and said, “Do you not eat?”’ (as-Saffat: 91) The Arabic word ragh, means ‘went quietly’ so that no one would see him or ‘slip away’ like someone who wants to leave a gathering without being noticed. He took two steps then stopped. He hid behind something, and then he went away.

(1) They believed that his saying: ‘I am sick’ (as-Saffat: 89) meant that he was afflicted with the plague. Therefore, Allah said after this verse: ‘so [his people] turned away from him and left.’ (as-Saffat: 90) Ibn Abu Hatim related that Sufyan said regarding the verse: ‘I am sick’ (as-Saffat: 89) means afflicted with plague; people used to flee from those afflicted with the plague.’ Ad-Dur Al-Manthur by As-Suyuti, [7: 100]

Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him slipped away in order to destroy their idols. Before he did so, he mocked them: ‘…Do you not eat? Why do you not speak?’ (as-Saffat: 91) But they did not answer, so he said: ‘Why do you not speak?’ (as-Saffat: 92) ridiculing them.

Then, he struck them: ‘then he turned and struck them with his right arm.’ (as-Saffat: 93) We mentioned previously that the right is the side of strength, as Allah says: ‘They will say, “Indeed, you used to come at us from the right.”’ (as-Saffat: 28) from the direction of power and compulsion. This means that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him started to smash them with all his strength. This breakage made a loud noise that some of the people heard it: ‘people hurried towards him.’ (as-Saffat: 94)

When he saw them: ‘But he said, “How can you worship things you carve with your own hands?”’ (as-Saffat: 95-96) His question here indicates amazement and disbelief. He asked them how they worship a god that they have carved from stone with your very own hands. Surely, they know better than anyone else about this. When they saw an idol falling, they placed it back up in its place; when it was broken, they fixed it, and when the rain swept it away and it rolled in the mud, they pulled it out. How can such an idol be worshipped instead of Allah the True Lord, Who created them and all that they knew?

Certainly, they had no answer to this question, nor any way to refute Ibrahim (Abraham) except by force. They had no logic or proof which they could use to defend their gods.

قَالُوا۟ ٱبْنُوا۟ لَهُۥ بُنْيَـٰنًا فَأَلْقُوهُ فِى ٱلْجَحِيمِ ﴿٩٧﴾
فَأَرَادُوا۟ بِهِۦ كَيْدًا فَجَعَلْنَـٰهُمُ ٱلْأَسْفَلِينَ ﴿٩٨﴾

They said, ‘Build a pyre and throw him into the blazing fire.’ [97] They wanted to harm him, but We humiliated them [98] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 97 - 98)

We all know the story of the fire into which they lit and threw Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. This was their plan to deal with Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham). However, Allah would not abandon Ibrahim (Abraham), so He saved him from this plan. ‘Indeed, they are planning a plan. But I am planning a plan.’ (at-Tariq: 15-16)

Allah’s saying: ‘…but We humiliated them’ (as-Saffat: 97-98) does not mean that they were humiliated because they were disbelievers, but because they sought to overtop Ibrahim (Abraham) and were able to throw him into a blazing fire. Therefore, they thought that they overtopped him.

The reality of the situation was revealed to them shortly, as Allah’s major sign happened. If Allah willed, He would not let them catch Ibrahim (Abraham), or let rainfall in order to put the fire out, but Allah wanted to refute their arguments. Had Ibrahim (Abraham) fled from them, they would think that he would have been burnt if he had been caught. Had it rained they would have thought that it was a natural phenomenon out of their control. However, Ibrahim (Abraham) was thrown into the fire but he was saved because of Allah’s Command to the fire: ‘Allah said, “O fire, be coolness and safety upon Ibrahim (Abraham).”’ (al-Anbiya’: 69)

It is Allah’s Command to the fire in its natural state and with its normal attributes to be cool and safe upon Ibrahim (Abraham) only. Allah said, ‘O fire, be coolness and safety upon Ibrahim (Abraham).’ (al-Anbiya’: 69) What happened to the fire is similar to the tree of Zaqqum which appeared to be a green tree but, in fact, it was a burning fire.

This is how Allah Glorified is He humiliated them and made their scheme ineffective. They schemed and Allah schemed but a scheme is merited on the basis of its architect.

وَقَالَ إِنِّي ذَاهِبٌ إِلَىٰ رَبِّي سَيَهْدِينِ ﴿٩٩﴾ رَبِّ هَبْ لِي مِنَ ٱلصَّٰلِحِينَ ﴿١٠٠﴾
فَبَشَّرْنَٰهُ بِغُلَٰمٍ حَلِيمٍ ﴿١٠١﴾

He said, ‘I will go to my Lord: He is sure to guide me [99]
Lord, grant me a righteous son [100] So We gave him the good news that he would have a patient son [101]
(The Quran*, as-Saffat:* 99 - 101)

When Ibrahim (Abraham) found that there was no benefit in calling his people to believe in Allah, he said: ‘…I will go to my Lord: He is sure to guide me.’ (as-Saffat: 99) The meaning here is that he is going to advocate Allah’s religion, as his Lord is always with him and omnipresent. It can also mean that he was emigrating for the sake of Allah to another place where he would find people that respond to his call. As long as he was emigrating for the sake of his Lord, He would guide him to a good and appropriate place for his calling to Allah.

Then Ibrahim (Abraham) supplicated his Lord saying: ‘…Lord, grant me a righteous son.’ (as-Saffat: 101) This means that he supplicates his Lord to give his righteous offspring. When a prophet desired to have offspring, he did not merely want it as an extension of his lineage, or to have someone to leave inheritance for him. A prophet desired children to continue his calling to Allah after his death. Thus, Prophet Zakaryya (Zechariah) peace be upon him said: ‘Who will inherit me and inherit from the family of Ya`qub (Jacob). And make him, my Lord, pleasing [to You].’ (Maryam: 6)

It seems that it was difficult for Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him to accept that his life would not be long enough to continue calling to Allah’s religion, so he asked Allah to satisfy his desire by giving him a son to bear the responsibilities of prophethood after his death.

He said: ‘…Lord, grant me a righteous son.’ (as-Saffat: 100) What Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) said indicates that he wanted his offspring as well as other people’s offspring to be righteous. Therefore, his Lord answered his supplication: ‘So We gave him the good news that he would have a patient son.’ (as-Saffat: 101) The Arabic word halim which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse, refers to the person who is not provoked by anger and remains patient as much as he can. Hilm (forbearance) can also mean leaving stubbornness and dispute even when one is right.

It was related that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'I guarantee a house in paradise for one who gives up arguing, even if he is in the right....'(1) This person will have a palace in the outskirts of paradise and another in its middle, why? Because he believes that his Lord is Ever-Living and the Sustainer of [all] existence, neither drowsiness nor sleep overtakes Him. Therefore, He will judge between all people in all disputes and will give the oppressed his due right from the oppressor. People always resort to a powerful person to judge in their disputes. In the Egyptian dialect we say, 'The one who has a father should have no worries', so what about the one who resorts to his Lord? Thus, it is out of Allah's Mercy that He enables His slaves to sleep to the extent that makes them feel relaxed, so that they become energetic for their work. He also asks them not to worry about anything, as their Lord does not sleep.

Regarding Allah's saying: 'so We gave him the good news that he would have a patient son' (as-Saffat: 101), good news of something is usually given before this thing comes into existence. Allah describes him as a patient during his childhood. Forbearance is usually found in rational adults who can assess things properly. Thus, the distinction here is that this boy will be forbearing even while he is still a boy.

This forbearance was indeed manifested in the first major test that he faced, when his father said to him: '...Ibrahim (Abraham) said, "My son, I have seen myself sacrificing you in a dream. What do you think?"' (as-Saffat: 102) The boy's response at the time when his father said these words needs contemplation. The boy said: ‘Father, do as you are commanded and, Allah willing, you will find me steadfast.’ (as-Saffat: 102) This is forbearance manifesting at this young age.

(1) It was related by Abu Dawud in his Sunnan (4800) on the authority of Abu `Umama Allah be pleased with him who said that Messenger Muhammad said: 'I guarantee a house in paradise for one who gives up arguing, even if he is in the right; and I guarantee a home in the middle of paradise for one who abandons lying even for the sake of fun; and I guarantee a house in the highest part of paradise for one who has good manners.' Rabd Al-Jannah, which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the Hadith, refers to the area around the edge of paradise like, for example, the buildings that lie around a city under its walls. It is also said that it means the middle of paradise. Lisan Al-'Arab under the root rabada

When the boy was old enough to work with his father, Abraham said, ‘My son, I have seen myself sacrificing you(1) in a dream. What do you think?’ He said, ‘Father, do as you are commanded and, God willing, you will find me steadfast [102] When they had both submitted to God, and he had laid his son down on the side of his face [103] We called out to him, ‘Abraham [104] you have fulfilled the dream.’ This is how We reward those who do good [105] it was a test to prove [their true characters] [106] We ransomed his son with a momentous sacrifice [107] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 102 - 107)

The sequence here does not deal with Hajar peace be upon her nor her bearing of Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him rather, it moves directly to his reaching the stage of being able to share in his father’s endeavours. Allah Glorified is He then says, ‘And [one day,] when [the child] had become old enough to share in his [father's] endeavours…' (as-Saffat: 102), because it is the True Lord Glorified is He who is speaking and narrating.

(1) There is some question as to who the one to be slaughtered was, Ismail (Ishmael) or Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon them and there has been considerable disagreement regarding it. Al-Qurtubi mentions in his exegesis [8/5739-5741] three different positions the third of which, that of Az-Zajjaj, was that Allah is the one Who knows best who it was, but he was inclined to believe it was Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him. Ibn-Kathir, on the other hand, mentions in his exegesis [4/14-19] the proofs of each party. He proceeds to refute the proofs of those who claim it was Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him and insists that the true and correct position is that it was Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him. It is even in the Torah that Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him was 13 years older than Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him and that Ibrahim (Abraham) was ordered to sacrifice his only virgin son. He also rejected the sayings that were attributed to the Companions. Whoever desires the details can look them up in their place. `Adil Abu Al--Ma`ati.

One of the aspects of rhetoric is to elide what is known of the sequence and this is one of the characteristic features of the Quran. In the story of Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him and the Hoopoe, Allah the Exalted says, 'Go with this my letter and convey it to them; and thereafter withdraw from them and see what [answer] they return.' (an-Naml: 28) He then removes much from the sequence of events and says, '[When the Queen had read Sulaiman's (Solomon's) letter,] she said: "O you nobles! A truly distinguished letter has been conveyed unto me."' (an-Naml: 29) He does not undertake to describe the journey of the Hoopoe, nor the way in which the address was sent to the queen.

Similarly here, 'Whereupon We gave him the glad tiding of a boy-child gentle [like himself] And [one day,] when [the child] had become old enough to share in his [father's] endeavours' (as-Saffat: 101-102). The fact that he has become old enough to share in his father's endeavours is evidence of his being the answer to Ibrahim's (Abraham's) prayer peace be upon him. The child was born and became old enough to help his father in his affairs. There is a difference between saying 'he reached the age of work', generally and 'he became old enough to share in his father's endeavours', because a boy is not given work to do except in accordance with his abilities, his strength, health, and capacity. At this time, Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him became old enough to share in just his father's endeavours because his father would be gentle and not task him with more than he could bear of good deeds and chores. The boy would do what he could and would leave what he could not to his father. Had he been with someone else he may well have charged him with more than he could handle.

So, when the boy reached this stage, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him said, 'O my dear son! I have seen in a dream that I should sacrifice you…' (as-Saffat: 102). The meaning here is that, 'I saw in a dream that I am required to sacrifice you', not that the sacrifice was accomplished in the dream and that the matter is finished. The evidence for this is Ismail's (Ishmael's) reply, '… [Ismail (Ishmael)] answered: "O my father! Do as you are bidden. You will find me, if Allah so wills, among those who are patient in adversity!"' (as-Saffat: 102)

We should pause to reflect upon this manifestation of pure forbearance, and the eminence of his reply in this awesome test. '[Ismail (Ishmael)] answered: "O my father! Do as you are bidden…"' (as-Saffat: 102), he did not say, 'do as you like'; because his obedience to his father here is subsumed under his obedience to Allah the Exalted. He understands full well that his father is taking his orders from Allah, even if this order did come in the form of a vision. Hence, he knows, despite his youth, that the visions of the prophets are true revelation.

Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him calls his son, '…O my dear son (ya bunayy) …' (as-Saffat: 102), in the diminutive (at-tasghir); the Arabic word bunayy (dear son) is the diminutive of ibn (son); he did not merely say 'ya ibni; (my son). In this way, he reassured him of his paternal affection. He presented this test to his son while full of love and compassion for him, for his was still small. It is well known that the tenderness of a parent is in direct proportion to the needs of the child. That is why the Arabic woman said, when asked which of her children were most beloved to her she replied, 'The sick one until he gets better, the absent one until he returns and the smallest one until he gets bigger.'(1)

Thus, his saying, 'O my dear son (ya bunayy)' (as-Saffat: 102) means 'I am not treating you here as an equal but as a child who needs his father's affection, so take these orders in conjunction to my heartfelt paternal compassion'.

Ibrahim's (Abraham's) saying, 'consider, then' (as-Saffat: 102), means think and reflect, 'what would be your view' (as-Saffat: 102), i.e. about your vision. It thus appears that there are two things sought of this child; one relating to his father and one relating to his father's Lord. So, in: 'O my father, do as you are bidden…' (as-Saffat: 102). 'Do' relates to his obedience to his father, and: 'as you are bidden' (as-Saffat: 102) relates to his obedience to his father's Lord.

(1) This is attributed to Hudha ibn-`Ali Al-Hanafi to Khosrou in Al-`Iqd Al-Farid by Ibn-`Abd Rabbu, Al-Kamil by Al-Mubarrad, Al-Mustaqsa Fi Amthal Al-`Arab by Az-Zamakhshari, and in Majma` Al-Amthal by Al-Maydani. It is also attributed to Ghaylan ibn-Salama Ath-Thaqafi in Al-Aghani by Ab Al-Faraj Al-Asfahani and in Muhadarat Al-`Udaba` by Ar-Raghib Al-Asbahani.

Then Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him confirms that, despite his youth, he understands the circumstances of this test saying, '…you will find me, if Allah so wills, among those who are patient…' (as-Saffat: 102), i.e. in the face of this tribulation, Allah's saying, 'But as soon as the two had surrendered themselves…' (as-Saffat: 103) refers to Allah's Commandment; each one had submitted his reins, as it were, to Allah. Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was ready to sacrifice, and Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him was ready to yield, saying to his father, '…you will find me, if Allah so wills, among those who are patient…' (as-Saffat: 102).

Ibrahim's (Abraham's) tribulation is multiplied this time. He was tested when he was a youth, when he was thrown into the fire, and he passed the test. This time he is being tested as an old man; he now has a child in his old age, he is more beloved to him than his own self, and he has been ordered to kill him.

It was possible for Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him to kill him while he was unaware, without telling him about the whole affair but he wanted him to share in the reward, for otherwise he would be sacrificing him for no reason and it would torment his heart.

Allah's saying, 'and Ibrahim (Abraham) had laid him down on his face' (as-Saffat: 103) means that he put him down on his forehead, or face down. The scholars say that this was the result of consultation with his son, so that his father would not see his son's face while he was slaughtering him, and thus be overcome by compassion and not fulfil the sacrifice. Thus, it was that the boy helped his father to fulfil his duty and fully manifested his submission.

So, the boy is lain out on the earth and his father has a knife in his hand and is actually trying to sacrifice his son; and which son is this? It is his only son whom he was given in old age.

The tribulation here is not so much that his son would die but that his father was to slaughter him with his very own hand; it would not be at the hand of some other person. Further that he was sacrificing him based upon a vision, not a clear order. That is why we said his tribulation was multiplied, for it had many aspects. Yet Ibrahim (Abraham) and his son peace be upon them passed the test successfully and thus deserved to have Allah say of him, 'Verily, Ibrahim (Abraham) was a man who combined within himself all virtues…' (an-Nahl: 120).

So, when Ibrahim (Abraham) and his son peace be upon them reached this degree of submission: ‘We called out to him: ‘O Ibrahim (Abraham)!”’ (as-Saffat: 104) It is as though Allah was monitoring the submission of these two slaves who had been truthful to Him. Hence reprieve came to them from Him. ‘We called out to him: “O Ibrahim (Abraham)! You have already fulfilled [the purpose of] that dream-vision!” Thus, verily, do We reward the doers of good; for, behold, all this was indeed a trial, clear in itself.’ (as-Saffat: 104-106), i.e. ‘Restrain your hand, O Ibrahim (Abraham), from sacrificing your only son’. This was nothing but a trial; clearly severe upon Ibrahim (Abraham) and his son peace be upon them yet illuminating because it manifested the strength of Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) belief when taking orders from Allah, even though they may be difficult and harsh, and his yielding and obedience to those orders. The tribulation of his son who had to submit and obey was the same.

Then the ransom came: ‘And We ransomed him with a tremendous sacrifice’ (as-Saffat: 107). The word dhibh (sacrifice) here refers to the thing sacrificed (madhbuh), and that was the ram that Allah Glorified is He sent down as a replacement for Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him.

وَتَرَكۡنَا عَلَيۡهِ فِي ٱلۡأٓخِرِينَ ﴿١٠٨﴾ سَلَٰمٌ عَلَىٰٓ إِبۡرَٰهِيمَ ﴿١٠٩﴾
كَذَٰلِكَ نَجۡزِي ٱلۡمُحۡسِنِينَ ﴿١١٠﴾ إِنَّهُۥ مِنۡ عِبَادِنَا ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ ﴿١١١﴾

And We let him be praised by succeeding generations [108]
‘Peace be upon Abraham!’ [109] This is how We reward those who do good [110] truly he was one of Our faithful servants [111] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 108 - 111)

Thus, did Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him earn this rank among all the nations who came after him; that all should pray for him peace be upon him whenever he is mentioned saying, ‘Peace be upon Ibrahim (Abraham)!’ (as-Saffat: 109) Had Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him actually sacrificed his son it would have become an example for those who came after him, and people would have sought to draw closer to Allah by sacrificing their sons. But because Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was patient and submitted to the command of his Lord, Allah gave him reprieve. He and his son were relieved of this tribulation and consequently we too were all relieved of this matter. Hence, every time he is mentioned we say, ‘peace be upon him’.

Allah’s saying, ‘Thus do We reward the doers of good (al-muhsinin)’ (as-Saffat: 110) means that just as we treated Ibrahim (Abraham) we treat every muhsin (doer of good). The muhsin is the one who does not stop at what has been made obligatory for him but goes beyond that to add more of the same. The True Lord Glorified is He has made five prayers obligatory upon us through the course of the day and the night, whoever adds to that has a portion of ihsan (excellence). Similarly, Allah has made zakat obligatory upon us, whoever gives wealth over and above this has a portion of ihsan (excellence). Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of adh-Dhariyat, ‘[But] behold, the Allah-conscious will find themselves amid gardens and springs, enjoying all that their Lord will have granted them [because], verily, they were doers of good in the past.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 15-16), i.e. they gave more than was obligatory upon them of the same kind.

Then Allah Glorified is He mentions some of the ways to perform such excellence: ‘They would lie asleep during but a small part of the night, and would pray for forgiveness before the dawn and [would assign] in all that they possessed a due share unto such as might ask [for help] and such as might suffer privation.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 17-19) The ‘doer of good’ earns this reward because by giving more than was sought of him he has shown that he loves what he has been tasked with, and that he knows that Allah has tasked him with less than he deserves and so he has given more.

وَبَشَّرْنَٰهُ بِإِسْحَٰقَ نَبِيًّا مِّنَ ٱلصَّٰلِحِينَ ﴿١١٢﴾ وَبَٰرَكْنَا عَلَيْهِ وَعَلَىٰٓ
إِسْحَٰقَ ۚ وَمِن ذُرِّيَّتِهِمَا مُحْسِنٌ وَظَالِمٌ لِّنَفْسِهِۦ مُبِينٌ ﴿١١٣﴾

We gave Abraham the good news of Isaac – a prophet and a righteous man [112] and blessed him and Isaac too: some of their offspring were good, but some clearly wronged themselves [113] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 112 - 113)

All these gifts are the consequence of the surrender mentioned in the verse: ‘But as soon as the two had surrendered themselves to [what they thought to be] the will of Allah, and Ibrahim (Abraham) had laid him down on his face' (as-Saffat: 103). The trial that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him underwent was composed of three points: losing the son which had come to him in old age, that he was to kill him with his own hand and that he should kill his son based upon a vision. The reward that came to him thus came in proportion to the difficulties that he faced in these tests.

'And We ransomed him with a tremendous sacrifice' (as-Saffat: 107). The ransom mentioned here was Ismail's (Ishmael's) ransom; such that he might live and not be sacrificed. After this Allah Glorified is He gave Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him more in the form of Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him; 'And [in time] We gave him the glad tiding of Ishaq (Isaac), [who, too, would be] a prophet, one of the righteous' (as-Saffat: 112). Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him was also a prophet. In another verse Allah Glorified is He says, '…and, after Ishaq (Isaac), of [his son] Ya`qub (Jacob)' (Hud: 71). Ya`qub (Jacob) peace be upon him was also a prophet. All this good then was the result of his submission to Allah the Exalted and contentment with His judgement. The poet(1) spoke the truth when he said:

Submit to your Lord in His judgement, He judges with wisdom,
And so you may be safe and benefit.
Remember the Friend of Allah, sacrificing his son,
When his Creator said, 'And when they had submitted'.

Allah increases His gifts saying, 'and We blessed him and Ishaq (Isaac)…' (as-Saffat: 113). When the True Lord Glorified is He speaks of their descendants however He says, '…but among the offspring of these two there were [destined] to be both doers of good and such as would glaringly sin against themselves' (as-Saffat: 113), i.e. there would be good and evil sorts among his descendants.

In these verses, the story of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him is related to us in brief such that not everything has been mentioned. We should mention here the conflict between the religions regarding the person who was to be sacrificed. The Muslims believe that it was Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him and the non-Muslims say it was Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him. This latter opinion however is to be rejected for a number of reasons:

(1) This poetry is by Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi Allah rest his soul.

Firstly, had it been Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him the sacrifice, ransom and what relates to them of ceremonial rights would be those of the locale which in the case of Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him was the Levant. Yet they were those of the Arabian Peninsula where Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him was born and raised. This is a location-based proof that the one to be sacrificed was Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him.

Secondly, we have a proof from the Hadith of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him when he said, ‘I am the son of the two to be sacrificed’. These ‘two to be sacrificed’ means the two who were ransomed from sacrifice. The first of these was `Abdullah, the father of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. His father ransomed him with a sacrifice of a hundred camels. As for the second, it was Ismail’s (Ishmael’s) Lord who ransomed him with a ram.

If others reject these proofs because they do not believe in them then we must give them proof from their own books, for people will only trust that which they have faith in. If a Muslim were to swear to a non-Muslim by al-Lat and al-`Uzza (Pre-Islamic idols that were worshiped), the latter would not believe him because he knows that Muslims do not believe in them and people only swear by things they esteem. However, if you said, ‘by Allah!’ then he would believe you.

That is why we have the following proof from the Torah for the non-Muslims, because that is what they believe in. Allah has preserved for us in the previous books some things which support that which has come in the Quran. These things are still present today; it is as if Allah blinded them to them so that there would remain in their own books proofs to the reality which they deny.

They should read Genesis 2: 22, ‘Then He said to Ibrahim (Abraham) “Take now your only son, and go to the Mount of Moriah, and present him there as a burnt offering to me.”’ When was Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him an only son, given that he was born when Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him was 14 years old? In chapter 24 of Genesis we read, ‘Ismail (Ishmael) was 14 years old when Ishaq (Isaac) was born.’

وَلَقَدۡ مَنَنَّا عَلَىٰ مُوسَىٰ وَهَٰرُونَ ﴿١١٤﴾ وَنَجَّيۡنَٰهُمَا وَقَوۡمَهُمَا مِنَ ٱلۡكَرۡبِ
ٱلۡعَظِيمِ ﴿١١٥﴾ وَنَصَرۡنَٰهُمۡ فَكَانُواْ هُمُ ٱلۡغَٰلِبِينَ ﴿١١٦﴾ وَءَاتَيۡنَٰهُمَا ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ
ٱلۡمُسۡتَبِينَ ﴿١١٧﴾ وَهَدَيۡنَٰهُمَا ٱلصِّرَٰطَ ٱلۡمُسۡتَقِيمَ ﴿١١٨﴾ وَتَرَكۡنَا عَلَيۡهِمَا فِي
ٱلۡأٓخِرِينَ ﴿١١٩﴾ سَلَٰمٌ عَلَىٰ مُوسَىٰ وَهَٰرُونَ ﴿١٢٠﴾ إِنَّا كَذَٰلِكَ
نَجۡزِي ٱلۡمُحۡسِنِينَ ﴿١٢١﴾ إِنَّهُمَا مِنۡ عِبَادِنَا ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ ﴿١٢٢﴾

We also bestowed Our favour on Moses and Aaron [114]
We saved them and their people from great distress [115]
We helped them, so they were the ones to succeed [116]
We gave them the Scripture that makes things clear [117]
We guided them to the right path [118] We let them be praised by succeeding generations [119] Peace be upon Moses and Aaron! [120] This is how We reward those who do good [121]
truly they were among Our faithful servants [122]
(The Quran*, as-Saffat:* 114 - 122)

This is the succession of the 'Resolute' among the messengers. Having told us of Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him the Quran now tells us of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him. 'Thus, indeed, did We bestow Our favour upon Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron)' (as-Saffat: 114). Allah Glorified is He gave Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them a great gift whereby he made the pair of them messengers to the children of Israel; He also gave them the gift of victory when He made them triumphant over Pharaoh and his armies.

'And We saved them and their people from the awesome calamity' (as-Saffat: 115), i.e. Pharaoh himself. Allah described him as 'the awesome calamity' because Pharaoh was a man who did not reign over his people like a king, but rather as if he were a god. He formed schemes against Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and against his people in Egypt, such that he used them as servants, labourers and magicians.

The word pharaoh is used to describe the kings of ancient Egypt; each of them was called a pharaoh. Despite this in the chapter of Yusuf the ruler of Egypt is referred to as Al-`Aziz. Why? The scholars say that after the Rosetta stone was deciphered we learnt that when the Hyksos invaded Egypt there were kings there, not pharaohs. When the Pharaohs took over the children of Israel fell into the service of Pharaoh because they have previously been aligned with the Hyksos, so Pharaoh and his helpers persecuted them.

'And We saved them and their people from the awesome calamity' (as-Saffat: 115), i.e. Pharaoh, and also The Exodus, when they set out with Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and Pharaoh and his army caught up with them and surrounded them by the sea, such that the sea was in front of them and Pharaoh's army was behind them. This situation was very similar to the situation of Tariq ibn-Ziyad during the conquest of Andalucia when he said, 'Verily the sea is in front of you and the enemy is behind.'

When this happened the children of Israel felt certain that Pharaoh would get them and said to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him '…Behold, we shall certainly be overtaken [and defeated]!' (ash-Shu'ara': 61) because all available evidence pointed to this conclusion. According to the laws of nature they were done for, yet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and his Lord worked according to a different law. Musa (Moses) peace be upon him began to say at the top of his voice, 'No!' meaning, 'no we are not done for'. He said it on the basis of his trust in his Lord and his storehouse of faith: 'He replied: "Nay indeed! My Lord is with me, [and] He will guide me!"' (ash-Shu'ara': 62), and indeed relief came at that very instant. His Lord ordered him to strike the sea with his stick, and the rest of the story is well known.

Then Allah Glorified is He says, 'And succoured them, so that [in the end] it was they who achieved victory.' (as-Saffat: 116); what a victory it was! There is a considerable difference between beating one's enemy and yet he remains alive and well, and beating him in such a way that he is wiped off of the face of the earth. In the events between Musa (Moses) and Pharaoh Allah Glorified is He passed an irrevocable judgement on Pharaoh and his army.

Then Allah Glorified is He says, 'And We gave them the Book that made [right and wrong] distinct (mustabin)' (as-Saffat: 117). The Arabic word mustabin in this verse means that which reaches the acme of clarification. The 'Book' referred to is the Torah. The True Lord Glorified is He described the Torah in another place saying, 'And, indeed, We vouchsafed unto Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) [Our revelation as] the standard by which to discern the true from the false, and as a [guiding] light and a reminder for the Allah-conscious.' (al-Anbiya': 48)

Allah's saying, 'and guided them the straightway' (as-Saffat: 118) means the path of uprightness that leads to Allah Glorified is He via the shortest possible route. 'And left them thus to be remembered among later generations: Peace be upon Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron)!' (as-Saffat: 119-120), i.e. we caused them to be remembered well by those who came after them such that all those who hear the story of Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them their trials and their steadfastness upon the truth pray for peace upon them. 'Thus do We reward the doers of good '(as-Saffat: 121), i.e. Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them.

It is well known that Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him became a prophet by means of Musa's (Moses's) request when he said to his Lord, 'And my brother Harun (Aaron) – he is far better in speech than I am. Send him with me, therefore, as a helper, so that he might [more eloquently] bear witness to my speaking the truth: for I fear indeed that they will give me the lie.' (al-Qasas: 34) Allah Glorified is He answered Musa's (Moses's) prayer and aided him by means of his brother Harun (Aaron), making the two of them as one messenger to the children of Israel. The Quran clarifies this issue for us that they were indeed as one messenger. Allah Glorified is He says, 'And Musa (Moses) prayed: "O our Lord! Verily, You have granted splendour and riches, in the life of this world, unto Pharaoh and his great ones – with the result, O our Lord, that they are leading [others] astray from your path! O our Lord! Wipe out their riches, and harden their hearts, so that they may not attain to faith ere they see the grievous suffering [that awaits them]!"' (Yunus: 88) The True Lord Glorified is He replies to them saying, 'Accepted is your prayer…' (Yunus: 89), even though it was Musa (Moses) peace be upon him alone who prayed to Allah. [Allah] answered: 'Accepted is your prayer…' (Yunus: 89), i.e. Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them because in the realm of prophethood they are one; neither can be separated(1) from the other; the prayer of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him is the prayer of Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him.

(1) This is according to Ibn-Kathir in his Tafsir, was the opinion of Abu Al- `Aliya, Abu-Saleh, `Ikrima, Muhammad ibn Ka`b Al-Qarzi, and Ar-Rabi` ibn Anas. [2/429]

Some scholars sought to make this matter easier to understand, explaining it by saying that Allah Glorified is He answered Musa (Moses) peace be upon him saying, ‘Accepted is your prayer’ (Yunus: 89) because while Musa (Moses) peace be upon him prayed Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him said ‘Amen’ and the one who says amen is in reality one of those praying. Then Allah Glorified is He says of Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them ‘for those two were truly among Our believing servants.’ (as-Saffat: 122)

The Quran then moves to speak about another prophet, Prophet Elijah peace be upon him:

وَإِنَّ إِلۡيَاسَ لَمِنَ ٱلۡمُرۡسَلِينَ ﴿١٢٣﴾ إِذۡ قَالَ لِقَوۡمِهِۦٓ أَلَا تَتَّقُونَ ﴿١٢٤﴾ أَتَدۡعُونَ بَعۡلٗا
وَتَذَرُونَ أَحۡسَنَ ٱلۡخَٰلِقِينَ ﴿١٢٥﴾ ٱللَّهَ رَبَّكُمۡ وَرَبَّ ءَابَآئِكُمُ ٱلۡأَوَّلِينَ ﴿١٢٦﴾

Elijah too was one of the messengers [123] He said to his people, ‘Have you no fear of God? [124] How can you invoke Baal and forsake the Most Gracious Creator [125] Allah, your Lord and the Lord of your forefathers? [126]
(The Quran, as-Saffat: 123 - 126)

The name Ilyas (Elijah) peace be upon him is generally written with a sin at the end, but it can also be written using the actual name of the letter sin at the end instead; it thus becomes Ilyasin. Thus, there are two names for this one noble prophet; we can refer to him as Ilyas or Ilyasin. He is not however to be confused with Alyasa peace be upon him.

These verses clarify that Ilyas came to renew the belief in Allah, not to bring a Divine Law. He came to rectify the pinnacle of belief which is faith in the necessarily existent Allah; the One Who alone is to be supplicated. Indeed, the whole procession of Divine Messages since Adam peace be upon him came to correct this relationship between the creation and their Creator.

To this end He reminds you that He is the Creator and the All-Provider; that He is the All Knowing, the All-Powerful, the Wise, the Almighty etc. It is

He who has created you and bestowed His blessing upon you so that you might accept His commands gladly and turn to Him in tranquillity. If your worship of Him is not the result of the blessings He has given you and prepared for you before your existence, then it will not be out of fear of His punishment when you return to Him.

In Allah's saying, '…Will you not (ala) remain conscious of Allah?' (as-Saffat: 124), the Arabic word (ala) will you not is used to encourage and incite people to piety. It can also be used to make offers, as when one says, 'Would you like such-and-such'? Allah's saying, 'Will you invoke Baal…' (as-Saffat: 125), refers to an idol named Baal, 'and forsake' (as-Saffat: 125), i.e. neglect, '…the best of artisans" (as-Saffat: 125).

When the True Lord Glorified is He describes Himself as: '…the best of creators' (as-Saffat: 125), it means that He Glorified is He does not begrudge his slaves the attribute of being creators. Hence the person who reflects on creation and invents something beneficial for society is a creator because he made something new that did not previously exist. While he is a creator, Allah is the best of creators because He creates things out of pure nothingness; we however can only create things using pre-existent materials. Allah's creation contains life, growth and movement, etc. whereas our creations are immotile and stuck in a fixed state and we have previously differentiated between these two.

We may pause to reflect here: The True Lord Glorified is He upbraids them for worshipping idols and leaving the worship of Allah, but He did not say, 'and forsake Allah', rather, He said, '…and forsake the best of creators' (as-Saffat: 125). He mentioned an attribute that arouses adoration and proves His right Glorified is He to be worshipped. Allah Glorified is He continues as if they had asked, 'and who is the best of creators?' saying, 'Allah, your Lord and the Lord of your forebears of old?"' (as-Saffat: 126) 'I am the best of creators, I am your Lord and the Lord of your forefathers, the One Who deserves to be worshipped'. But what was their answer?

فَكَذَّبُوهُ فَإِنَّهُمۡ لَمُحۡضَرُونَ ١٢٧ إِلَّا عِبَادَ ٱللَّهِ ٱلۡمُخۡلَصِينَ ١٢٨
وَتَرَكۡنَا عَلَيۡهِ فِي ٱلۡأٓخِرِينَ ١٢٩ سَلَٰمٌ عَلَىٰٓ إِلۡ يَاسِينَ ١٣٠
إِنَّا كَذَٰلِكَ نَجۡزِي ٱلۡمُحۡسِنِينَ ١٣١ إِنَّهُۥ مِنۡ عِبَادِنَا ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ ١٣٢

But they rejected him. They will be brought to punishment as a consequence [127] not so the true servants of God [128]
We let him be praised by succeeding generations [129]
Peace be to Elijah! [130] This is how We reward those who do good [131] truly he was one of Our faithful servants [132]
(The Quran, as-Saffat: 127 - 132)

Allah says, ‘But they gave him the lie…’ (as-Saffat: 127), like all the peoples unto whom messengers came, seeking to take them from darkness to light. It is inevitable that messengers should be rejected; the corrupt and those who benefit from corruption reject them, and the leaders of the people and their dignitaries reject them so that their leadership, power, and exploitation of the weak may continue. ‘But they gave him the lie: and therefore they will most surely be arraigned [on Judgment Day]’ (as-Saffat: 127), i.e. on the Day of Judgement the angels of punishment will gather them together. The meaning then is: ‘Do not think that you will escape Our grasp because you will be brought back to Us’. Allah Glorified is He also says in this vein, ‘Did you, then, think that We created you in mere idle play, and that you would not have to return to Us’ (al-Mu’minun: 115). Allah’s saying, ‘excepting only [those who were] Allah’s true servants’ (as-Saffat: 128) refers to those whom He chose to obey and worship Him.

This brief story about this noble prophet is then brought to a close in the same way as those that preceded it: ‘and him We left thus to be remembered among later generations. Peace be upon Ilyas (Elijah) and his followers! Verily, thus do We reward the doers of good for he was truly one of Our believing servants!’ (as-Saffat: 129-132) We understand from these closing verses that ihsan (doing good) is an offshoot of faith, meaning that nobody can be a muhsin (a doer of good) without having faith first.

This is how the Quran has summarised the story of this prophet for us and clarified that he came, not with a legal system, but to rectify people’s belief.

He came to correct the foundation upon which life is based. Indeed, this was the task of all messengers since Adam peace be upon him. Allah created Adam peace be upon him the father of mankind, as His vicegerent on earth. Man being Allah's vicegerent on earth means that he performs duties on earth for the True Lord Glorified is He. In order that he might carry out these duties, Allah granted him certain attributes similar to His. Yet these attributes are gifts that have been granted; they are not fundamental attributes of the vicegerent; this is why the Creator can take them away at any time. Allah the Exalted, however, is the Necessarily Existent, the Most High and it is His Quintessence that is characterised by these attributes. Allah is Powerful and extends power to you from His Power; He is Wise and grants you wisdom from His Wisdom so that you may use it in your daily interactions. Allah is Over-Powering and He grants people authority to discipline those who are under their command so that their affairs may run correctly. He also grants people mercy so that they might be gentle with the weak and the needy.

Another of the attributes that the necessarily existent True Lord gives us is existence from His Existence. Indeed, He grants existence to innumerable individuals in their innumerable variations. Allah Glorified is He gives us an incidental existence from His fundamental existence. If one looks to the defects that afflict people in their limbs or senses, one will see that, be it in their outward appearances or their inner dispositions, they were put there by Allah the Exalted. Why? Because as man's creator has informed us, 'Nay, verily, man becomes grossly overweening whenever he believes himself to be Self-Sufficient' (al-'Alaq: 6-7). An example of this would be a child with his father. If the father gives his son a monthly allowance, one will notice that the boy is only desirous to see his father once a month. If, however, he gives him it day by day the boy will come and loiter unduly around his father every day. He will present himself regularly so as to get the money for which he hopes. One may see him in the morning come to his father and say, 'Father, Iam going to school'. It is need that has brought him to love his father.

It seems necessary to explain here the philosophy behind these needs which demand a solution. It is these needs which cause one to turn to one's Lord. Reality confirms this. We see that much of the time people do not turn to their Lord and do not rectify their relationship with their Creator except when something goes wrong and circumstances become difficult. When someone finds no help but His Lord then he cries out, ‘O Lord!’, ‘O Allah’!

So, the Creator grants the vicegerent some of His attributes but these attributes remain temporal, impermanent gifts. That is why human beings die unborn or as children, as young, middle-aged or old men. This subject helps us to understand the Noble Hadith: ‘Allah created Adam in his image; his height was 60 cubits’(1). It is possible for the first pronoun ‘his’ to refer to Allah. The meaning would thus be that Allah Glorified is He created Adam peace be upon him in His image but not His reality. An image is that which captures a moment in a certain pose that one is then fixed in. Thus, the creation mentioned in this Hadith does not mean that Adam peace be upon him received any of Allah’s true attributes; rather, he received an image, as it were, of them. The reality is everlasting but the attributes of Adam peace be upon him were not.

It is also possible that the pronoun ‘his’ refers to Adam. The meaning would thus be, ‘Allah Glorified is He created Adam peace be upon him in Adam’s image’, for Allah the Exalted did not create Adam peace be upon him as a foetus that was subsequently born and grew into a child and then a young man; rather, his initial creation was in the form of a fully-grown man. Thus, we see that both interpretations are possible.

There is also a significant difference between one who creates and one who creates one who creates. To clarify this, imagine a small child who cannot move a table from its place. A strong man could easily move it, yet he cannot transfer his strength to a weak person so that the latter can do it on his own. He can only transfer the effect of his attribute, he took his burden from him and carried it but the child remained weak and unable to lift it.

One of the amazing aspects of Allah’s creation and His gifts is that He Glorified is He creates from His Power another power and gives it to us, so that we ourselves are able to work with our own hands. Creation can volunteer and help the weak one and act on his behalf, but he remains weak. As for the Creator Glorified is He he gives the weak one strength to act on his own.

(1) Al-Bukhari relates this Hadith in his Sahih [Kitab Al-Isti`dhan 5873] and Muslim in his Sahih [3741]. An-Nawawi said in his explanation of this Hadith, ‘The obvious interpretation of this narration is that the pronoun in the words ‘suratih’ (his image) refers to Adam peace be upon him and that the intended meaning is that Adam peace be upon him was first created in the image that he had while upon the earth and that he died upon. That image was that he was 60 cubits tall, and that he did not develop by stages as his descendants do. His image in paradise was the same as his image on earth, he did not change.’

We should not forget though, that these attributes are granted to us, they are not part of our fundamental nature. Our existence is not inceptive, rather, we are vicegerents and by necessity we must remain in the care of the One Who appointed us such. Woe be to the one who tries to deviate from his Master, for He will strip him of the factors of his appointment.

One should know, when seeing those who have been afflicted or disabled in some way, by blindness or lameness, etc. that the Creator Glorified is He wants you to notice them so that you remember that your existence is not inceptive, only appointed. You are only something so long as the One who appointed you is with you. If He were to abandon you, you would cease to exist. One of the blemishes of man is that he considers himself to be inceptive. Were he to remember his place and the reality of his existence his affairs would be rectified.

Some people look at these afflictions as if they were deformities and see therein no wisdom. The reality is that they were created for some purpose that Allah the Exalted desires. They are a means of showing people that they should not be deluded just because they have healthy limbs, and that they should uphold the remembrance of Allah, the Creator. As we said, it is need that drives one.

We see that the traffic police will take a newly destroyed car and then put it in a prominent place so that everyone can see it, and thus be deterred from driving at foolish speeds. This car is an example and a means of clarification placed just so for a reason. It is quite comprehensible that they would destroy a car intentionally, given the trade-off between destroying one car and saving millions of lives.

When one sees a person with a defect one should say, ‘All praise is for Allah Who made me healthy in regard to your affliction’(1), and look to Allah’s blessings upon one, of which one is so often heedless.

(1) It is related by At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan [3421], and Ibn-Majah in his Sunnan [2892] on the authority of `Abdullah ibn `Umar Allah be pleased with them that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘Whoever sees someone with an affliction and says, “All=

Someone may ask what the sin of such a person was that Allah should make him a reminder for others. We would say that if they knew what he was given to substitute it then they would desire to be like him. We should remember that Allah gives people with defects other characteristics to substitute for their loss. We have a proverb, 'The disabled man is a force to be reckoned with'. Perhaps you have seen a man with no arms thread a needle with his feet or a blind child memorise the entire Quran at the age of six. Allah took away his sight but gave him insight. These are things that normal people cannot accomplish.

We said previously that if a man crippled in one hand were to hit you with that hand you find it to be a lethal blow. This arm is always resting and does no work so it has more strength than a healthy one. If it comes into action all his strength would be in this arm.

Of our brothers whom Allah has tested by removing their sight we can only say that they are potential storehouses of knowledge! Why? They can achieve levels of knowledge of which the sighted are incapable. This is because the visual distractions around us distract those who can see. As for the blind, he has nothing to distract him, so his faculties of perception are always free and ready to receive. On top of that he is unable to read so he jumps at the opportunity to have someone read to him and listens avidly. He listens so keenly to what he hears that he doesn not need to hear it again. That is why one of them(1) said,

I was blinded a babe, and in blindness is acumen,
Insightful became I, of knowledge a depot,
The light left my eye, contributing to my hearts
Knowledge, and what people wasted I got.(2)

= praise is for Allah Who made me healthy in regard to your affliction, and preferred me over many of those he created a great deal" will be saved from that affliction as long as he lives, whatever happens.'

(1) He was Bashshar ibn-Burd Al-`Uqayli. Born in 95 A.H. he was originally from Turkistan and was blind. He grew up in Basra and went on to Baghdad and lived during both the Umayyad and `Abbasid caliphates. He was accused of being a heretic and died while being lashed in 167 A.H. He was buried in Basra. Al-Mawsu`a Ash-Shi`riyya.

(2) These two couplets are from Bahr (meter) Al-Wafir that has four couplets in total. They are as follows:
I was blinded a baby, and in blindness is acumen, =

When we see people who are disabled or otherwise afflicted we tend to look at our completeness instead of the gifts they have been given as substitutes, but as we previously said, the person who composed the world-famous symphonies was deaf(1) and Tamerlane (Timur the Lame) as well, who conquered much of the world and won many famous battles, was lame.

When the true believer sees others whom Allah has tested, he does not arrogate himself above them or judge them by means of his own health; instead he humbles himself before them. He knows that this deficiency is compensated for by something else, so he asks himself, ‘I wonder in what way he distinguishes himself and is better than me’? By means of this stance all people become equal.

So, man should always remember the reality that he is not inceptive in creation but Allah’s vicegerent. How similar this is to deputation, i.e. when you choose another to represent you in something specific. If he then thinks that he is your representative in everything then he will misrepresent you. That is why sensible people, when choosing representatives, do so in accordance with necessity so that the representative does not infringe upon or abuse their rights.

The rectification of the world and of people’s affairs is predicated upon this principle of vicegerency. The original state of man is that he is a vicegerent who is in need of the One Who appointed him. Feelings of independence usually lead us to forget this. But need drives and disposes us towards the One Who placed us here.

When Allah Glorified is He created Adam peace be upon him to be His vicegerent on earth, did He send him down into the world to carry out his duties in populating the earth and uncovering Allah’s secrets in the universe without preparing him for this mission? How could this be possible when we = Insightful became I, in knowledge perceptive,

From eye to heart the light passed, combined
With it, and what people wasted I did find.

(1) Beethoven, the German composer. He was the most pre-eminent musician in the development of classical music. He presented his first piece when he was eight years old. He began to lose his hearing in his thirties, but this did not affect his production which in fact increased in this period and was marked by an increase in creativity.

ourselves take, for instance, a sports player who we teach, prepare, and train just so that he can play a game? We spend money on him and correct his errors until he reaches the level required of him. What do you think would be the case then when it comes to the duty of populating the earth?

The True Lord Glorified is He prepared Adam peace be upon him for his duties. He placed him in a garden containing anything he might desire: 'And We said: "O Adam, dwell you and your wife in this garden, and eat freely thereof, both of you, whatever you may wish; but do not approach this one tree, lest you become wrongdoers."' (al-Baqara: 35) This is how the Creator defined Adam's way of living in paradise. He made it permissible for him to eat of whatever he willed, with the exception of one tree. Thus, we can see that what is permissible is plentiful, indeed uncountable, while what is forbidden is limited. This is Allah's way in life. The legal basis for things is permissibility with the exception of those things for which a clear ruling exists prohibiting them and it is confined to those particular things.

Let us pause here to reflect upon the legal caution advised in Allah's saying, '...but do not approach...' (al-Baqara: 35). Allah did not say, 'Do not eat....' The thing that was prohibited here was approaching the tree because one's closeness to the prohibited tempts you until you fall into it. This is why we find the Quran articulates commandments in the following manner: '... These are the bounds set by Allah; do not, then, transgress them...' (al-Baqara: 229). As for prohibitions they articulated in a manner like the following: '...These are the bounds set by Allah: do not, then, approach them...' (al-Baqara: 187). When wine was forbidden in Islam it was not just its drinking that was forbidden, rather, everything that is related to it was prohibited, be it buying, selling, transport or production, even being in the same place as it. Why? To block the means that leads to and tempts one into it.

When the True Lord Glorified is He clarifies the lawful and the forbidden for us, His commands and His prohibitions, He turns our attention to an important issue. It is as though He says to us: 'If you stand firm on this way your life will be safe and sound, free of troubles and hardships; but if you overstep the bounds then you will see the emergence of defects in society, be they behavioural, economical, societal, or whatever'.

In the story of Adam peace be upon him eating from the tree there is an indication of this matter. How? When Adam peace be upon him stood firm upon his Lord’s way and kept His commandments he lived a healthy life with no defects, but when he strayed and listened to Satan’s whispers, and ate from the tree he was forbidden from, his nakedness was revealed to him for the first time. This is because when he was obedient he was eating from the menu of his Lord, a menu that was tuned to the needs of his body such that nothing would remain of faeces to pass out of it. But when passion came into the matter and he obeyed Satan, he corrupted the diet that had been prepared for him; faeces formed in his digestive system and he felt something strange in his body for the first time. He was then shocked to find an opening in his body from which a foul, evil-smelling substance passed out. Hence Adam peace be upon him perceived that this was nakedness and should be covered. So, he took some leaves off a tree to cover his nakedness and conceal his private parts. Allah the Exalted says, ‘...But as soon as the two had tasted [the fruit] of the tree, they became conscious of their nakedness; and they began to cover themselves with pieced-together leaves from the garden. And their Lord called unto them: “Did I not forbid that tree unto you and tell you, that verily, Satan is your open foe?”’ (al-A'raf: 22)

We have witnessed during the wars that a soldier can survive on a small loaf of bread and that this will provide him with a sufficient meal. It does not however produce a significant amount of faecal matter. This thus reduces the amount of time the soldier needs to spend eating and going to the toilet.

The story of Adam peace be upon him and his eating from the tree is representational of Allah’s laws; as long as they are upheld, the state of the country and its inhabitants will be upright and defects and evil deeds will not manifest in society. If therefore we see a defect emerge in society, be it in regard to knowledge, economics, society, behaviour etc. we can be certain that some article of Allah’s Law has been abandoned. This being the case, we must then search out the problem and, if it is within our capacity, try to remedy it on our own first. Allah the Exalted says, ‘...Verily, Allah does not change men’s condition unless they change their inner selves...’ (ar-Ra'd: 11).

Adam peace be upon him fell into disobedience after Allah had clarified for him what He had permitted and forbidden for him. He explained Satan’s enmity toward him and that this enmity had existed since Allah commanded him to prostrate and he refused. Despite all this however, Adam peace be upon him listened to Satan's whispers. He should have used the intellect he was gifted with and thought about what Satan (Iblis), his enemy, intended when he said, '...Your Lord has but forbidden you this tree lest you two become [as] angels, or lest you live forever' (al-A'raf: 20). So if whoever eats from this tree will live forever and never die, why then do you not eat from it Satan? Did you not say to Allah the Exalted '...Grant me a respite till the Day when all shall be raised from the dead' (al-A'raf: 14)? In this we find a hint at the obligation to reflect upon the devil's whispers and to refuse to submit to them.

So, Adam's time in paradise was a period of preparation to be a vicegerent. When his disobedience occurred, Allah wanted to move him out of paradise and send him down to an earthly life to perform the duties of his vicegerency in light of his previous experience.

It is as though Allah said to him, 'Take what you will of the permissible, and distance yourself from the prohibited. Be wary of Satan for he is still your enemy and will continue to whisper to you in an effort to lead you into disobedience as he did the first time. Do not therefore listen to him, for he is your enemy and he will lead you from a blessed life to an unhappy one, just as he took you from the paradise of maintaining My commandments and prohibitions.' 'And thereupon We said: "O Adam! Verily, this is a foe unto you and your wife: so let him not drive the two of you out of this garden and render you unhappy."' (Ta Ha: 117) Notice that Allah did not say, 'and render you (both) unhappy'.

The True Lord Glorified is He put a sign in these verses from the very beginning of creation so that it might solve a problem that the world still discusses until now and will continue to do so. This is the issue of women going out to work and being equal with men, of women wanting to assert themselves, etc.

It is a strange thing that women should seek extra responsibilities and take on the duties of men, at a time when men are not taking any of their duties or burdens. Men do not get pregnant, give birth, or nurse children. So, women take on the duties of men and add them to their own specific duties that men are unable to undertake; this is a form of oppression of women.

Allah's saying to Adam peace be upon him '...and render you unhappy' (Ta Ha: 117) reveals that since the beginning of creation unhappiness, toil, trouble, work and the burden of responsibility have been the lot of man, while the woman is the mistress of her house, respected and honoured. This situation has been passed down through generations of our society without deception or obscurity. Even now when a young man wants to propose to a girl, her guardian will stipulate upon him, 'Will you make her a lady and not a labourer?', i.e. will you make her safe, the mistress of her household, or do you intend to make her go out and work?

Some people say, 'How could Adam peace be upon him be disobedient given that he was a Prophet? That would make him like Satan! For both then disobeyed Allah'! To this we say that Adam peace be upon him was disobedient during this period of preparation, a period during which mistakes are not punished, but rather corrected. In school the teacher corrects the pupil's mistake with red ink without taking him to account for it. This continues until the end of year examinations, and it is then that he is called to account for any errors he makes. So, when Adam peace be upon him made his mistake, he was in a period of preparation, and Allah corrected his error.

Secondly, Adam peace be upon him was not a prophet at this time. Adam peace be upon him was created to be the father of the human race, and they were to be divided into two sorts: Those who were chosen, i.e. the messengers, and those who were not chosen, i.e. the peoples of the messengers. Thus, in the beginning Adam peace be upon him represented both sorts. His experience came to exemplify both the disobedience of mankind and the sinless nature of the prophets. He made a mistake and Allah corrected him. Then he repented and Allah relented towards him and elected him. This reflects the general state of mankind. Allah Glorified is He says, '...And [thus] did Adam disobey his Lord, and thus did he fall into grievous error' (Ta Ha: 121). This is an indication of what will happen among mankind. 'Thereafter, [however,] his Lord elected him [for His Grace], and accepted his repentance, and bestowed His guidance upon him' (Ta Ha: 122). Hence, the election and divine protection from sin came after the initial incident because Adam peace be upon him was to characterise all mankind. He exemplified the disobedience of man and he exemplified the sinless nature of the prophets.

This vicegerent came into a world that was created for him before he existed. It was not that Allah Glorified is He created it and then looked to see whether it lacked anything, and thus created Adam peace be upon him in a way that suited the task that he was to perform of populating the earth. Allah Glorified is He says, 'He brought you into being out of the earth, and made you thrive thereon...' (Hud: 61).

Further, the True Lord Glorified is He did not make the basic acts of worship, i.e. the pillars of Islam, the entirety of life; rather, he made them like recharging stations that help in one's daily business. To whoever would say that Islam is these pillars; we perform them and that is it, we would say, no! It is by means of these pillars that one is to take strength from Allah so that one may be productive in one's daily business. Islam is far broader than these five pillars. The proof of this is in Allah's saying in the chapter of al-Jumu`a, 'O you who have attained to faith! When the call to prayer is sounded on the day of congregation, hastens to the remembrance of Allah, and leaves all sales: this is for your own good, if you but knew it.' (al-Jumu'a: 9) So, He has called them and taken them from their work, the acme of their daily business. This is their selling. Selling is obviously connected to buying except that the former is stronger, that it why it is mentioned alone. Why did Allah tell us to leave buying and selling? The scholars say it is because Allah Glorified is He is the Creator of human nature and He knows that people when initiating a purchase are not so keen. They are keen however when it comes to selling and they put great effort into it. That is why when someone in the family asks you to buy something for them you may sometimes procrastinate and delay it, and when you go and find the shop shut you are quietly happy. If, however you were trying to sell something, then you are ever so eager to sell it off. Why? Because the buyer is paying and the seller is receiving. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He mentioned selling because it is the fruit of one's business.

Allah Glorified is He then says, 'And when the prayer is ended, disperse freely on earth and seek to obtain [something] of Allah's bounty' (al-Jumu'a: 10). So, He took you from your work to pray and, when the prayer was done, He returned you to your work and endeavour.

When we reflect upon the phrasing of the Hadith, ‘Islam is built upon five pillars’(1), we see that these five are the supporting edifice upon which Islam stands; the building is not the same as the thing it is built upon. Are the buildings that we live in made of foundations and pillars alone? Thus, Islam is not the five pillars, Islam is more than that. These pillars are the charging station that your Lord summons you to. From your interaction with Allah you take the spiritual sustenance to help you to perform your daily business. An example of this is a battery when you take it to the recharger. We do not benefit from it while it is in the recharger, but we charge it so that we can use it after that.

It is from the wonders of Allah’s Mercy that He made visiting these ‘human rechargers’ a legal responsibility that must be performed. It is as though Allah the Exalted is saying to us, ‘You must come to Me five times throughout the day and the night because you are My creation and the Creator knows best what is good for his creation’. Imagine a creation that turns away from its creator five times every day and night, could it be in any more perdition? This is if the creator is a human, so what then would be the case if he were the Creator and Lord of mankind Glorified is He.

The human artisan fixes his creations with something material like a nail or a piece of bandage. The Creator Glorified is He however fixes His creation without recourse to materials. This is because the engineer and his works are material things and hence need to be fixed with materials. The Creator Glorified is He on the other hand is unseen and so when He fixes some defect in you He does so in an unseen way so that you neither see it nor feel it.

So, we must understand the religion as it really is and realise that we all have a role to play. If Allah puts someone above you, you should realise that He did so for your benefit. His being over you means that he must render you some service, while at the same time he will not benefit from you.

The one who does a job well will undoubtedly benefit himself and benefit others, as opposed to the one who does nothing well. In this vein, there is a saying amongst farmers that says, ‘the carpenter’s door is off its hinges’. The carpenter shows his skill when he is working for others because he gets paid for it, but when it comes to himself he lowers his standards. Thus, when you see one who is above you, you should not envy or hate him, rather hope for an increase for him and wish him well. Some of that good will assuredly returns upon you, and his elevation will come back to you in the form of services he renders you.

(1) Al-Bukhari relates in his Sahih [8] and Muslim in his Sahih [16] on the authority of Ibn `Umar Allah be pleased with them who said, ‘The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, “Islam is built upon five things: Testifying that there is nothing worthy of worship other than Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah, the establishment of the prayer, the giving of zakat (obligatory charity), Hajj and fasting during Ramadan.”’

When I was with the farmers, if one of our cows or buffalos died everyone would be saddened to the extent that once we saw a group crying over a calf that had died. We were very surprised at this, for people may cry if one of their own dies, but over an animal?! We later learned that this calf was the one that turned the water wheel and irrigated the ground that everybody ate from, and brought out the good therein. This was in the countryside; we would not buy cucumbers, Jew’s mallow (an herb), okra and many other things, rather things were given as gifts, and not sold.

A gift given to creation returns its benefits upon all creation. When you see someone who has more wealth than you, wish an increase for him because the good of his wealth will inevitably come back upon you. When you see someone who performs work better than you can, do not hate him because you will need him to improve your work, even if such is hateful to you. Or, despite your differences with him you may try to get him to work for you because you know the quality of his work. Thus, you go to him out of your own self-interest. In this way, the desired balance in society is achieved and the affairs of creation are established on the basis of need.

If one reflects upon oneself as Allah the Exalted says, ‘just as [there are signs thereof] within your own selves: can you not, then, see?’ (adh-Dhariyat: 21) One will see that this balance exists between one’s limbs. The right hand for instance takes care of certain duties that are appropriate to it, while the left hand takes care of other duties that are more appropriate to it. The right hand is for honourable and respectable deeds, while the left hand is for those that are not. Usually the right hand is stronger than the left, more agile and more precise.

Look for instance at when you want to cut your fingernails. You cut the fingernails of your left hand with your right and they come out nice and trim, as opposed to the fingernails of the right hand cut by the left. Thus, we can see, the talents of the right hand came back to benefit the left, while the weakness of the left hand affected the right. This helps us see that completion and perfection is achieved in creation through the assistance of others.

When the True Lord Glorified is He created man as His vicegerent, he gave him a form that suits his purpose. The first aspect of this form is the senses with which he perceives things. They are named the five manifest senses. They are said to be ‘manifest’ out of caution, for one will find that there are other senses that science will identify.

It has in fact been discovered that men have senses other than these five, such as the sense by which one knows one is hungry, the sense of perspective by which one perceives the distance between two objects, and the muscular sense by means of which one knows the weight of something.

When we reflect upon the five well-known senses we find that legal responsibility comes according to the nature of these senses. Each sense in man and each limb have its own work, meaning the performance of its role. The heart works by making intentions, the tongue by speaking, the ears by listening, the nose by smelling, the hand by touching and the eye by seeing. These things are their work.

We need to differentiate between the work and the doing. When we say ‘doing’ we mean as opposed of speaking, which is the work of the tongue. Allah, says, ‘O you who have attained to faith! Why do you say one thing and do another?’ (as-Saff: 2) So speech, the work of the tongue, has a division all its own, while the rest of the senses share a division. Speech is with tongue while ‘doing’ is with the other senses. Why does the tongue alone take half while the other half is divided between all the other senses? The scholars say it is because speech is how the messengers convey what is sought from us so that we may do it. It is also how we convey our desires to others so that they may fulfil them. Thus, all actions or ‘doings’ are in the service of speech. Allah’s way did not come to us except by means of speech, for it is this that carries the commandment to the senses so that they may enact it.

Work is not necessarily the work of muscles; it may well be spiritual in nature, such as the work of the heart which is forming intentions as we said. It is the Sacred Law which presides over these senses and defines the framework within which they may work considering what is permissible and impermissible.

The role of the senses is to perceive the world around and then present that information to the intellect which then compares and filters the information. It knows that this is good for such-and-such, while that is good for something else. After this filtering, it passes the information to the heart so that it might form a belief about it. The word `aqida means something that has been tied up so that it does not come undone; it is not open to argument by the intellect after having been settled upon. Imagine a small child who is taken in by the beautiful appearance of fire. He tries to touch it and he gets burnt. He feels real heat for the first time and he forms a conclusion or a belief that fire burns, so he does not go near it again. He lives the rest of his life upon this principle or belief. He does not need to try it again to be sure. At the very time this belief takes root in the heart it starts to pump it with the blood until it travels through the whole body and permeates every limb and saturates it. This explains the Noble Hadith, '...if it is sound, the whole body is sound, but if it is corrupt, the whole body is corrupt. Indeed, it is the heart.'(1)

After creating the limbs and the senses for man the True Lord Glorified is He created the desires. These are an essential part of you. They are a permanent and indispensable part of your being. Despite this, a desire may harass you until it takes you beyond its purpose. This is when the Sacred Law must intervene to limit its recalcitrance and return it to the balance for which Allah created it.

The Sacred Law intervenes in order to refine and elevate the desire, not to repress it and eradicate it. The desire to eat for instance maintains one's life. In this case, what is sufficient was described by the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him when he said, 'A few morsels are enough to keep the son of Adam's back straight.'(2)

---

(1) Al-Bukhari relates it in his Sahih [52] and Muslim in his Sahih [1599] on the authority of An-Nu`man ibn Bashir Allah be pleased with him.

(2) This was related by Ahmad in his Musnad [4/133] and At-Tirmidhi in his Sunnan [2380] on the authority of Al-Miqdam ibn-Ma`di Yakrib. The wording of the Hadith is, 'The human being fills no container worse than his stomach. A few morsels are enough to keep the=

One should not go beyond this for it will lead to Luttony and indigestion. The love of discovery is a desire that Allah created so we might reflect upon creation and search for the secrets He has placed throughout it. If one leaves this framework and starts to seek out others' faults and to spy then the desire has gone beyond its role. This is where the Sacred Law comes in to elevate it and return it to its proper balance.

The most vicious of man's desires is the sexual one, especially in youth. This is a desire that Allah placed in man to sustain progeny and preserve the species. This is why the desire for sex was created. The Sacred Law seeks to preserve this desire in combination with its Creator's methodology so that things stay decent. This is because offspring is the prime treasure to be preserved if lineage is to remain pure and honourable.

We have previously differentiated between legitimate offspring that are attributed to the parents and illegitimate offspring. We explained how the former is received with kindness, joy, love, and care whereas the latter is met unenthusiastically and with distaste. The mother may well think of getting rid of the child, even abandoning it in the street.

For this reason, the religion encourages families to be built in a sound fashion, with pride and dignity; to be built in the shade of Allah's word and methodology, as this will ensure the soundness of one's progeny. Thus, one's offspring comes forth and one has no doubts over its origin. One cares for it and raises it in the best possible way. This is the goal of the Sacred Law.

We also talked previously about the difference between the lawful and the prohibited in this realm, and we mentioned the Noble Hadith, 'The permissible has cut off the nose of jealousy.'

So, this desire was created in the human soul for a purpose and it is to remain within the framework for which it was created. What happens however is that many people take it beyond its purpose. It is surprising that people oppress animals in this regard when they say openly, 'this is animal passion'. Such a saying indicates a lack of understanding of the nature of animals, for animals do not take their desires beyond the limits that Allah has created. This is why we do not see a female animal get pregnant and then let another male have her again. Similarly, the male smells her and when he realises she is pregnant he turns away from her. Is this the animal passion that we mean by this phrase? No. It is a human affair. You can compare between animal nature and human nature and you will see it is quite amazing the way man deviates in this matter from his intended path.

---

= son of Adam's back straight. If he really must do so, then a third for his food, a third for his drink and a third for air.' At-Tirmidhi said it is a good sound Hadith.

It is from the wisdom of the Creator Glorified is He that He bound the desire for sex and procreation with pleasure. Offspring brings responsibility, consequences, and other demands and, were there not pleasure to encourage men, they would feel no need for it and would turn away.

The True Lord Glorified is He presents the believer with a single methodology which comprises paired opposites such as pride and humility. The believer is not always proud by nature, nor always humble. Rather, it is circumstances that dictate to him whether to be proud or humble. Humility and lowliness are for his Muslim brothers, while pride and arrogance are to be shown to those who are obstinate among the disbelievers. As Allah the Exalted said in his description of the Prophet peace be upon him and the believers, ‘Muhammad is Allah’s Apostle; and those who are [truly] with him are firm and unyielding towards all deniers of the truth, [yet] full of mercy towards one another...’ (al-Fath: 29). Thus, they are firm and unyielding and yet full of mercy at the same time, and in this is a proof that the believer is not content with his own desires unless they fulfil the criterion of the Creator of desires.

Among the other characteristics of the human constitution in addition to the senses and the desires is that Allah created in him emotions. Emotions are feelings the causes of which are unknown. That is why you meet one person and you feel at ease with him, while another you dislike, just like that, even though you do not know him. Why do you like one and not the other? That is because of emotions. This is why someone loves his son even if he is an idiot; he loves him because of his emotions. If your enemy has an intelligent son, you may love him by means of your intellect. This is why the True Lord Glorified is He did not make the emotions an area of legal responsibility. Prophet Muhammad peace be upon him clarified this when he said to his companions, and among them was 'Umar Allah be pleased with him ‘None of you truly believes until I am more beloved to him than his mother, his father and his own self.’(1) 'Umar Allah be pleased with him was struck by this and said, ‘O Messenger of Allah, you are more beloved to me than my mother and father, my son and my wealth, but my own self O Messenger of Allah?’ So the Prophet peace be upon him repeated it another time until 'Umar Allah be pleased with him realised that it was a matter of resolution, and that the Prophet peace be upon him must mean another sort of love, other than the one 'Umar Allah be pleased with him meant, i.e. intellectual love. At this, 'Umar Allah be pleased with him said, ‘Now, O Messenger of Allah’, meaning, now you have become more beloved to me than my mother and father, more beloved to me than my son and my wealth, and more beloved to me than my very own self.’

So, what is intended by love of the Prophet peace be upon him is intellectual love, because had it not been for him peace be upon him we would not have sought guidance or reached it, and had it not been for him we would have been destroyed. So, you love Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as you love bitter medicine. You do not love it through your emotions but through your intellect. That is why 'Umar Allah be pleased with him understood that the love that was legally binding was intellectual. If after that it turns into emotion and personal love then this is another level, higher than the first.

The Quran teaches us this in Allah’s saying, ‘...and never let hatred of anyone lead you into the sin of deviating from justice. Be just: this is closest to being Allah-conscious...’ (al-Ma‘ida: 8), i.e. you must not let hatred for a people lead you to be unjust towards them or oppress them. Hence hatred is not something forbidden because it is an emotional matter. So, love that you will and hate whom you will, but woe to you if you let your love or hatred carry you to be unfair such that you overstep the bounds with the ones you love or oppress the ones you hate.

---

(1) On the authority of the grandfather of Zahra ibn-Mu`bid, who said, ‘We were with the Prophet peace be upon him when he took the hand of `Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him who said, ‘O Messenger of Allah, I swear by Allah that you are more beloved to me than everything except my own self.’ The Prophet peace be upon him said, ‘By Him in whose hand is my soul, none of you truly believes until I am more beloved to him than his own self.’ `Umar replied, ‘By Allah, you are now more beloved to me than my own self.’ To which the Prophet peace be upon him replied, ‘Now `Umar!’ It was narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad [4/236].

Emotions in this form are essentially uncontrollable, and are therefore outside the sphere of legal responsibility because you do not know why your emotions lead you to love or hate something.

When we examine the senses, the desires and the emotions we find that the senses are obvious and well known; the eyes see, the ears hear, etc. Similarly, the desires are manifested in their causes and effects; when you get hungry you look for food, and when you want your family you draw close to them. Emotions however are out of sight and hidden. That is why the Quran illustrates them with a parable not of men, nor yet of animals or plants but rather of inanimate objects. Read Allah's saying regarding the outcome of the disbelievers of Pharaoh's people, 'and neither sky nor the earth shed tears over them...' (ad-Dukhan: 29). It is obvious that shedding tears is a manifestation of emotion. Can the sky cry? Can the earth cry? Yes, they are sensitive and can cry. It is as though they say to these disbelievers, 'Go! For no-one is sorry on your behalf'. Had this not been so, Allah would not have negated crying on their behalf. Why do we consider such to be unlikely when the earth and the sky are two of Allah's creations, ready to do His bidding? Did the True Lord Glorified is He not say, '...and there is not a single thing but extols His Limitless Glory and praise: but you [O men] fail to grasp the manner of their glorifying Him...' (al-Isra': 44)?

Thus, there is nothing too amazing in the fact that inanimate objects should rejoice when they find someone who joins them in their glorification and thus unites with the rest of creation in doing so. Neither is it too amazing that they should be sad, and that they should cry when people go astray from the correct order of things. In this way, we see that to say that the heavens and the earth did not cry over the destruction of Pharaoh's people is entirely possible, as it would be to say that they were filled with joy at the guidance of Pharaoh's wife, Asiya. So, we repeat, the heavens and the earth have emotions and sensitivities, they love and hate, and they cry and rejoice.

`Ali Allah be pleased with him made this matter clear for us when he said, 'When the believer dies, two places cry for him, a place in the sky and a place on earth. As for the place in the sky, it is the place to which his good works would be raised, and it cries because now it is deprived of receiving good speech and works. As for the place on earth, it is his place of prayer.'(1)

This was a necessary introduction to the story of Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him upon which we now embark with Allah's saying:

وَإِنَّ لُوطًا لَّمِنَ ٱلۡمُرۡسَلِينَ ﴿١٣٣﴾ إِذۡ نَجَّيۡنَٰهُ وَأَهۡلَهُۥٓ أَجۡمَعِينَ ﴿١٣٤﴾ إِلَّا عَجُوزٗا فِي ٱلۡغَٰبِرِينَ ﴿١٣٥﴾
ثُمَّ دَمَّرۡنَا ٱلۡأٓخَرِينَ ﴿١٣٦﴾ وَإِنَّكُمۡ لَتَمُرُّونَ عَلَيۡهِم مُّصۡبِحِينَ ﴿١٣٧﴾ وَبِٱلَّيۡلِۚ أَفَلَا تَعۡقِلُونَ ﴿١٣٨﴾

Lot was also one of the messengers [133] We saved him and all his family [134] except for an old woman who stayed behind [135] and We destroyed the rest [136] You [people] pass by their ruins morning [137] and night: will you not take heed? [138] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 133 - 138)

The task of Lut (Lot) peace be upon him when calling his people was indeed most taxing. For this reason, he is mentioned seventeen times in the Quran in the nominative and genitive cases and a further ten times in the accusative case. His task was taxing because he peace and blessings be upon him came to rectify the most violent of desires in the human being, the desire for sex.

Would that this desire had taken its natural course with these people, namely men desiring women, but this were a deviant sexual desire, with men desiring men, for which there was no precedent. No one had ever committed this newly invented and heinous crime before them. As Allah the Glorified and Exalted says on the tongue of Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him '...Will you commit abominations such as none in all the world has ever done before you?' (al-A'raf: 80)

We have said previously that every man has freedom regarding his own particular self. This freedom however has limits when we involve others. So, I have freedom regarding myself, I have freedom regarding my family and I have freedom with the people in the street generally, but each has his limits and his duties. When a man shuts the door of his room upon himself, his freedom is broader because there is no one with him to limit his freedom. If he leaves his room and goes to the sitting room, though, his freedom becomes somewhat narrower due to the presence of his wife and children. If he goes out into the street with the general people, then his freedom is even more restricted because everyone that he interacts with in the street has freedom too, and the freedom of others restricts his freedom. Hence if you go, for example, to an informal assembly where your friends and brothers are, you do not go all dressed up and exercise the best manners. This is how the people of Lut (Lot) began to boast of their obscenities, and it got worse until it reached the point that they would actually do them in their assemblies. Allah the Glorified and Exalted says, '... you commit these shameful deeds in your [open] assemblies ...' (al-'Ankabut: 29), i.e. things that one should not do even in secret, they did openly in their assemblies. This is forbidden by the Sacred Law, even if it is with your wife who is permissible for you, for one is not to approach his wife except in the home.

(1) Ibn Kathir relates in his Tafsir [4/142] that a man asked `Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him 'Do the heavens and earth cry over anybody? 'He replied to him, 'You have asked me something that no-one has ever asked me before. There is no slave of Allah except that he has a place of prayer on earth and a place where his good works go up in the heavens.'

Thus, when some people claimed that a man is free to seek pleasure with his wife wherever he wills, taking this understanding from Allah's saying, 'Your wives are your tilth; go, then, unto your tilth as you may desire ...' (al-Baqara: 223). We would say to them, 'You have been heedless of the meaning of the word "tilth" harth in this verse. Al-Harth refers to land that is ready to be sown with seed. Similarly, one's wife is to be approached in the place where the child is to be born. If it is another place where a child is not brought from, then this is unlawful. So, if Islam prohibits such a deed with one's wife, what is one to imagine about doing it with another man?!'

Similarly, just as Islam has prohibited the deeds of the people of Lut (Lot), a man approaching a man, it has prohibited a woman to be with a woman, and this is known as lesbianism, and we seek refuge with Allah the Glorified and Exalted from this. This prohibition is based upon an analogy with men.

Thus, the Sacred Law corrects the deviant desires that can manifest in relationships between two men, two women or a marital relationship between a man and his wife, and He puts down deterrent laws for this matter. Why is this? This is due because this deviancy harms the youth and the civilisation of the world; Allah the Exalted wants his vicegerent on earth to be clean and noble so that they might be qualified for this vicegerency.

Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him was mentioned 27 times in the Quran because of the weight of the duty he was given, while Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him despite his importance in the procession of messengers and despite his wondrous creation, is mentioned only 25 times.

I personally have taken many scholars and writers to task over the fact that in Arabic language they call this disgusting deed Al-luwat and its perpetrator a luti, linguistically ascribing this crime and its perpetrator to the Prophet of Allah Lut (Lot). It is a grave error and a repulsive thing to ascribe this ugly and obscene deed to a Prophet of Allah who came to eradicate it and rectify the behaviour of these people. They say in defence that they are only following the rules of Arabic speech for ascription, as a poet (1) said,

Mention one, ascribing him to a group,
Even if he does not resemble one of them, through coinage (2)

That is to say, they are the people of Lut (Lot) by ascription, yet there is in language a phenomenon known as ‘coinage' (An-naht). We can coin from Lut's (Lot’s) name another word that will refer to these people as the perpetrators of this action, yet distinctly removed from Prophet Lut (Lot) himself. Nevertheless, it is a repulsive thing to make such a word a title for this obscenity.

These verses that we are now dealing with recall the story of Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him and his people. They cover a fragment from the latter parts and end of his story, where Allah Glorified is He saves the believers and destroys the disbelievers, along with its beginning where Lut (Lot) peace be upon him meets his uncle Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. Allah the Glorified and Exalted says, ‘Thereupon [his brother’s son] Lut (Lot) came to believe in him and said, "Verily, I [too] shall forsake the domain of evil [and turn] to my Sustainer, for verily, He alone is Almighty, Truly Wise!"' (al-'Ankabut: 26)

---

(1) He was Abu ‘Abdullah Jamal Ad-Din ibn Malik, the author of Al-Alfiyya fī An-Nahw, one of the leading scholars in the field of Arabic language. He was born in Jayan in Andalusia in the year 600 AH. He moved to Damascus and died there in the year 672 AH at the age of 72. He authored many books relating to Arabic language.

(2) This is line 878 in Al-Alfiyya. It is from Bahr (meter) Ar-Rajz and it comprises 1002 lines.

This is a portion of the story and not merely repetition as some people claim. The stories in the Quran are not told in one fell swoop, rather, they come in various snapshots, each one mentioned at the time appropriate to it.

Again and again a number of superficial people take issue with the story of Musa's (Moses') staff and charge the Quran with repetition, but this is only the result of their limited understanding of Allah's Book. The first time he threw it was to familiarise himself with it as Allah the Almighty wanted to try it out just between himself and his Lord. The proof of this is Allah's question to him, 'Now, what is this in your right hand, O, Musa (Moses)?' (Ta Ha: 17) Allah the Glorified and Exalted knew full well what was in his right hand, yet He wanted to acquaint him with it. This is why Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him gave such a long reply. 'He answered, "It is my staff. I lean on it, and with it I beat down leaves for my sheep. Also, [many] other uses have I for it."' (Ta Ha: 18) Then Allah Glorified is He told him to cast it down, 'He said, "Throw it down, O, Musa (Moses)!' So, he threw it—and lo, it was a snake, moving rapidly. He said, "Take hold of it and fear not. We shall restore it to its former state."' (Ta Ha: 19-21)

So, Allah the Exalted desired to train Musa (Moses) so that when the time came to throw the staff down in front of Pharaoh, he would see it turn into a real snake and would thus be ready for it and not be frightened. The other time he was commanded to throw the staff down was in front of Pharaoh and his sorcerers. So, the former was one time, and the latter was another time.

Had Allah the Almighty willed, He could have told the whole story as He did with Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him perhaps to perfect the weaving of the narrative, as literary critics say, and perhaps because the admonition and message of the story would be deficient if it were not told in its entirety. Stories in the Quran are not a historical account as such, nor are they for our entertainment; rather, they deliver messages and admonitions. For Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they were a consolation. The task of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when faced with the obstinacy, enmity, stubbornness and disbelief of his people, necessitated that Allah the Exalted strengthened him constantly. Every time he needed strengthening, verses would be revealed to him, bringing an appropriate gleaning from the procession of messages. Then Allah the Glorified and Exalted would console His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him by reminding him that because he was the master and Seal of the Messengers sent to all peoples until the end of time, it was inevitable that he would face increased troubles from his people.

We have previously given an example of this when we said that in July 1952 we witnessed a revolution. We still celebrate it every year and listen to the story of what happened, yet each year we realise something new regarding these events and learn new lessons.

Thus the stories in the Quran came in snapshots at the appropriate times to strengthen Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; Allah says, '... [It has been revealed] in this manner so that We might strengthen thy heart thereby, for We have so arranged its component parts that they form one consistent whole.' (al-Furqan: 32)

Thus, Allah Glorified is He says regarding Lut (Lot): 'And, behold, Lut (Lot) was indeed one of Our message-bearers; [and so,] when [We decreed the doom of his sinful town] We saved him and his household ahlahu, except an old woman who was amongst those who stayed behind, and then We utterly destroyed the others.' (as-Saffat: 133-136); He did so by pelting them with stones.

Regarding the word ahlahu (his household), Al-ahl can be used to refer to a man's close relatives, or it can be used to refer to his wife. Allah the Almighty informs us in this verse that He saved Lut (Lot) peace be upon him and his entire family, but he makes an exception of his wife: 'except an old woman who was amongst those who stayed behind' (as-Saffat: 135). In another verse, He says: '... all but your wife. She will indeed be amongst those that stay behind.' (al-'Ankabut: 33) The word ghabirin (those who stay behind) is the plural of ghabir, and this word can be used to refer to two opposite meanings. It can mean something that has passed or finished, and it can mean something which remains. In reference to Lut's (Lot's) wife it carries both meanings; she was of the ghabirin in the sense that she was amongst those who were left behind to be destroyed, and she was of the ghabirin in the sense that she was amongst those who remained waiting for the punishment to come.

Then, Allah the Glorified and Exalted reminds us that the stories in the Quran are not narrated for our entertainment but so that we might take a lesson and an admonition from them. Allah says: ‘And, verily, [to this day] you pass by the remnants of their dwellings …’ (as-Saffat: 137); this is in reference to Sodom: ‘…at morning-time and by night. Will you not, then, use your reason?’ (as-Saffat: 137-138) Indeed, Arabs used to pass by them on their journeys and trading expeditions during the summer and winter and see the remains of their houses.

This was a brief gleaning, like an urgent telegraph of the story of Prophet Lut (Lot) peace be upon him and his people. Similar to this is the story of Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him.

وَإِنَّ يُونُسَ لَمِنَ ٱلْمُرْسَلِينَ ﴿١٣٩﴾ إِذْ أَبَقَ إِلَى ٱلْفُلْكِ ٱلْمَشْحُونِ ﴿١٤٠﴾
فَسَاهَمَ فَكَانَ مِنَ ٱلْمُدْحَضِينَ ﴿١٤١﴾ فَٱلْتَقَمَهُ ٱلْحُوتُ وَهُوَ مُلِيمٌ ﴿١٤٢﴾
فَلَوْلَآ أَنَّهُۥ كَانَ مِنَ ٱلْمُسَبِّحِينَ ﴿١٤٣﴾ لَلَبِثَ فِى بَطْنِهِۦٓ إِلَىٰ يَوْمِ يُبْعَثُونَ ﴿١٤٤﴾

Jonah too was one of the messengers [139] He fled to the overloaded ship [140] They cast lots, he suffered defeat [141] and a great fish swallowed him, for he had committed blameworthy acts [142] If he had not been one of those who glorified God [143] he would have stayed in its belly until the Day when all are raised up [144] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 139 - 144)

The first thing to notice in this verse is that Allah the Exalted affirms in these verses that Prophet Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him was a messenger: ‘And, behold, Yunus (Jonah) was indeed one of Our message-bearers’ (as-Saffat: 139). Let us take and consider this fact before delving into his story in order to understand it in light of it and so that, even if nothing happened that was unbecoming of a messenger in your eyes, you would know that these events do not detract from his status as a messenger. The One Who sent him bore witness to his being a messenger and did not strip him of his rank after what happened, so when you hear his story, do not say to yourself that what he did was unbecoming of a messenger because you are not more jealous on behalf of Allah's religion than Allah Himself.

Look at Allah's saying: 'when he fled like a runaway slave onto a laden ship' (as-Saffat: 140). The word abaq means he ran away, not in an absolute sense, but as a slave running away from his master. It was not as someone running away from a man who had hired him, or as a son running away from his father, for these are not considered to be fleeing ubuq. The word abaq has connotations of complete slavery to the highest master. Hence, Allah the Glorified and Exalted was his Master, and he was His slave because a slave is a property; he actually belongs to his master when he takes him captive. Yes, this is indeed the truth because the life of a slave is spared by means of this ownership. Instead of being killed in battle, he was taken prisoner and became a slave. He does not become a slave until he is taken captive and, so long as he has been taken captive and is under his captor's power, he could be killed. Thus, Allah Glorified is He made him a possession in order to spare his life.

There is no need, therefore, to compare freedom and slavery. If you want a comparison, compare slavery with death. If you gave a slave a choice between living with and serving his master and being killed, he would choose slavery. Hence, slavery is not a fault in Islam; rather, it is a favour that Islam has rendered to these people.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not come to establish slavery or to increase the number of slaves; he came to place rules upon slavery and to reduce its sources. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came when slavery was widespread in society, to the extent that there were 23 different sources that slavery sprang from. So what did Islam do? It put a stop to all these sources and left behind only one, the captive of a war endorsed by the Sacred Law. Then, it started to count the cost of slavery and clear the way for the liberation of slaves as we see in expiations and supererogatory acts. If, however, one has committed no sin which necessitates expiation through the freeing of a slave, then he is not obligated to free a slave and may keep any that he has and treat them kindly.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him laid down the regulations for us when it comes to dealing with slaves when he said, 'They are your brothers.

Allah has put them in your power. So, whomever Allah has put of a brother in his power let him feed him from what he eats, dress him as he dresses, and not give him more work than he can cope with. If he should give him more than he can cope with, then let him help him with it.'(1)

This is the decree of Islam regarding slaves. Islam maintained in bondage those taken in a war sanctioned by the Sacred Law because they are our enemies, surrounding us and fighting us, and would happily take our children from us, so it is necessary to respond kindly. They take some of us captives, and we take some of them captives; they ransom their captives so we ransom our captives; they free them so we free them, etc. Therefore, if one reflects on this matter, he will find that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not come to institutionalise slavery; rather, he came to institutionalise the freeing of slaves.

Allah's saying regarding Prophet Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him 'when he fled …' (as-Saffat: 140), is not finding fault with him because the word abaq means that he recognised that he was a slave of his Lord. This is but a snapshot of the story, and the full details are not related in this verse; instead, they come in another chapter so that we might realise that this is not some mechanical exercise. These snapshots are chosen for their appropriateness, and each comes in its place for a reason. Prophet Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him has a whole chapter named after him, yet his name is mentioned in it only once, whereas his whole history is related in other chapters that are not named after him.

The meaning of abaq is that he fled from his Master or that he left his people without his Lord's permission. This matter is detailed in Allah's saying, 'And [remember] him of the great fish...' (al-Anbiya': 87), which refers to Prophet Yunus (Jonah), '...when he went off in wrath mughadib...' (al-Anbiya': 87). The word used in this verse, mughadib, has a different meaning to the word ghadib. Mughadib implies reciprocation; he is angry and his antagonist is angry, too. It is like saying, 'Muhammad participated with 'Ali'; it is the same as saying, ''Ali participated with Muhammad.' As for the word ghadib, it means he was angry on his own.

(1) This is related by Al-Bukhari in his Sahih [6050] on the authority of Abu Dharr and also by Muslim in his Sahih [1661] in the chapter Kitab Al-Iman—Bab It'am Al-Mamluk Mimma Ya'kul.

However, with whom was he angry? The other party in this verse is the people who belied and harmed him in ways he could not bear. He was not angry with his Lord; rather, he was angry with his people and at the same time hoped that his Lord would pardon him in this matter. This is why Allah the Glorified and Exalted says after this: '... did he think that We had no power over him (lan naqdir 'alayhi) ...' (al-Anbiya': 87). Some people(1) understood Allah's saying 'lan naqdir' (we had no power) to be related to Allah's Power, but God forbid that a Prophet of Allah could think that Allah the Exalted did not have power over him or that he would not return him to his people. Rather, the meaning of lan naqdir in this verse is 'we would not constrain his affair'(2) as in Allah's saying: '... and let him whose means of subsistence are scanty (qudir 'alayhi rizquhu) spend in accordance with what Allah has given him ...' (at-Talaq: 7). This was thus a belief in the mercy of the One Who sent him and that He the Most High would not restrain him from expressing his emotions when he left his people without permission from his Lord.

The ship was fully laden, and this indicates to us that this boat had a specific capacity which was not to be exceeded, for otherwise, it would be in danger of sinking according to Archimedes' rule that explains how things float. It is upon this principle that submarines are designed. The word submarine means something that goes under the water because its weight is greater than that of the water it displaces. This is why they say, 'Lighten it and it will float.'

Since the boat was fully loaded and the number of passengers was more than the boat could carry, the captain decided to throw one of the passengers overboard to lighten the load. They drew lots and it fell to Prophet Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him so they threw him into the sea, and a fish subsequently came and swallowed him. This is the meaning of, 'And then they cast lots…' (as-Saffat: 141), which means that he entered into the ballot with them: '… and he was the one who lost (min al-mudhadin)' (as-Saffat: 141). The mudhad is the one who loses in a deal, the deal in this case being the ballot, where he came to be the one to be cast into the sea.

---

(1) This was related by 'Awf from Al-Hasan Al-Basri. The implied meaning is 'thinking we had no power over him?' Ibn Al-Jawzi said in Zad Al-Masir when explaining this verse, 'So, looking at it this way, it is a question in which the letter (alif) has been elided, and it does refer to power. It could be conceived of as referring to power except as a question, and I know of no other explanation except it being an incredulous question (istifham inkar).'

(2) This was the opinion of 'Ata' according to what Ibn Al-Jawzi mentioned in Zad Al-Masir.

The casting of lots is a way of making choices that frees a captain of a ship from being accused of prejudice or favouritism. The drawing of lots is a matter of pure destiny; there is no way for desires to interfere, and it is proves the impartiality of a particular judgment. This is why we often have recourse to this method with small children. We let a child choose, for example, from several pieces of paper. Why is this? Because he cannot differentiate between them, thus his choice is made by destiny, free of volition.

Allah's saying, 'And then they cast lots…' (as-Saffat: 141) gives us a principle for society that helps us to avoid grudges and frees us of constrained situations. If there is something that will not suffice all the people seeking it, it is not right for the person in charge of it to discriminate between them; due to the fact that when someone else makes the decision, it can give rise to turbulence in people's hearts. When casting lots, however, the choice falls to destiny and no one has any say in it.(1)

This is a method that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had recourse to when he entered Medina, and the people crowded round him, each one wanting to take the reins of his camel so that he could take him to his house. What was Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to do when he did not wish to hurt anyone's feelings? He decided the matter by saying of the camel, 'Leave it, for it is under orders.' Thus, he freed himself from the decision and left the matter to Allah the Glorified and Exalted and His decree. The camel then kept walking until it knelt down in front of the house of Banu Najjar.(2)

(1) Al-Qurtubi mentions an important point in regard to this verse in his exegesis [8/5765] and that is that it is not permissible to use this verse as a proof of the permissibility of drawing lots to throw a human being into the sea. He said, 'This was specific to Yunus (Jonah) and his time as a preparation for the realisation of his proof as well as increasing his faith. It is certainly impermissible to kill someone who has been disobedient or to throw him in the sea or in a fire. Rather, he may only be reprimanded or suffer the capital punishments of the Sacred Law (Al-hudud) in accordance with his crime.' Abu Bakr Aj-Jassas also stated explicitly that this ruling was specific to Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him in the book Ahkam Al-Quran printed by Dar Al-kutub Al-'Ilmiyya [3/497].

(2) It is related by Ibn Hisham in As-Sira An-Nabawiyya [2/112, 113] that each of Banu 'Awf, Banu Bayada, Banu Sa'ida and Banu Al-Harith wanted to take the reins of = Someone might ask if a boat would really sink or float because of just one person making it lighter or heavier. To which we would reply, 'Yes.' Have you not heard of ‘the straw that broke the camel’s back’? When you load a camel, you do so, on the basis of what it can carry. If you put one stick too many on it, it will have to kneel down because of the weight. The reality is that it is not actually the single stick or straw that breaks the back of the camel, but the whole load of sticks. The last straw is just the thing that tipped the scales and took it to the point where it became unbearable. Prophet Yunus' (Jonah’s) ship was just the same, such that avoiding sinking meant throwing someone overboard. The death of one is preferable to the death of everyone.

We learn from this case in point that when danger threatens a group, it is permissible for one of them to repel it, and it is casting lots which decides who will be the one.

Then Allah the Glorified and Exalted says, ‘…whereupon the great fish swallowed him, for he had been blameworthy.’ (as-Saffat: 142) Blame is a form of criticism. There is a difference between something deserving blame and something deserving punishment. Prophet Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him did something for which he was criticised by his Lord. It is as though Allah the Exalted said to him, ‘Indeed, you were hasty when you grew tired of your people and left them because of the initial harm that came to you from them. You should have been patient and endured the harm for the sake of your mission.’ So blame is a form of criticism, but it does not reach the level of punishment.

Usually criticism does not arise between lovers because they want to preserve the affection between them; this is why a poet said,

As for reproach between lovers, it is nothing,
For love can be healthy and true despite reproach.(1)

It is obvious that people reproach only the ones that they care for in order to maintain their companionship.

= Prophet Muhammad’s camel. He said to them, ‘Get out of its way, for it is under orders.’ It went until it knelt on the land of Banu ‘Adiyy ibn An-Najjar.

(1) This line is from a poem by poet laureate, Ahmad Shawqi. He died in 1932 at the age of 66. This is the beginning of a poem with twelve lines, in the meter of (Bahr Al-Kamil). [Al-Mawsu‘a Ash-Shi‘riyya]

So, to recap, there are numerous things here that prove our point about Prophet Yunus (Jonah): the first of them is Allah's saying, 'when he fled like a runaway slave...' (as-Saffat: 140) which means a slave of Allah. Then, '...thinking that We had no power over him...' (al-Anbiya': 87) means that we would not restrain him; this was his optimistic opinion of Allah. Then, '…for he had been blameworthy' (as-Saffat: 142); Allah the Almighty found fault with him only for something he did that was not correct for a prophet, and this is evidence of affection.

Concerning Allah's saying, 'And had he not been of those who [even in the deep darkness of their distress are able to] extol Allah's limitless Glory (Al-musabbihin), he would indeed have remained in its belly till the Day when all shall be raised from the dead' (as-Saffat: 143-144). The word At-tasbih (extolling Allah's Glory) means to declare Allah to be absolutely above everything (At-tanzih Al-mutlaq). So his being from amongst those who extol Allah's limitless Glory means that although he was being scolded, he was not punished or harmed. Had it not been for his faith and glorification, he would have remained in the fish's stomach until the Day of Resurrection.

This issue of the Prophet Yunus (Jonah) being upbraided by Allah the Almighty for leaving and abandoning his people just because they belied him and were stubborn reminds us of Allah's custom with His messengers, i.e. aiding them and succouring them: 'Behold, We shall indeed succour Our apostles and those who have attained to faith, [both] in this world's life and on the Day when all the witnesses shall stand up.' (Ghafir: 51) This victory, however, can be delayed, even though Allah the Glorified and Exalted is perfectly capable of granting them victory from the very first. Allah the Most High however desires two things from this: The first is that corruption worsens and becomes widespread so that people will feel constrained and consequently look for the truth and for goodness and that they will work towards it. The second is that Allah the Exalted can put those who believe in the messengers to test and distinguish those of them who are steadfast and capable of bearing the troubles of the mission thereafter. Thus, the postponement of victory is not a setback for messengers or an abandonment of them, for Allah the Glorified and Exalted would not send a messenger only to abandon him.

فَنَبَذْنَٰهُ بِٱلْعَرَآءِ وَهُوَ سَقِيمٌ ﴿١٤٥﴾ وَأَنۢبَتْنَا عَلَيْهِ شَجَرَةً مِّن يَقْطِينٍ ﴿١٤٦﴾
وَأَرْسَلْنَٰهُ إِلَىٰ مِاْئَةِ أَلْفٍ أَوْ يَزِيدُونَ ﴿١٤٧﴾ فَـَٔامَنُوا۟ فَمَتَّعْنَٰهُمْ إِلَىٰ حِينٍ ﴿١٤٨﴾

But We cast him out, sick, on to a barren shore [145] And made a gourd tree grow above him [146] We sent him to a hundred thousand people or more [147] They believed, so We let them live out their lives [148] (The Quran, as-Saffat: 145 - 148)

Let us note at the onset that Allah the Glorified and Exalted says, '…whereupon the great fish swallowed him …' (as-Saffat: 142), attributing the action to the fish, but in this verse when talking of Yunus' (Jonah's) salvation, the action is attributed to Allah the Glorified and Exalted . He says, 'But We caused him to be cast…' (as-Saffat: 145) which means he was thrown out '…on a desert shore…' (as-Saffat: 145), i.e. on a vast area of empty ground '…sick [at heart] as he was' (as-Saffat: 145); this means that he was sick or worn out from the troubles he encountered in the fish's stomach. Alternatively, it could mean he was sick from thinking about what happened between his people and himself. Thus, it could mean either physical sickness or spiritual sickness.

His Lord however did not leave him alone on this piece of deserted land after he had been regurgitated by the fish and was in this unhealthy state. In many ways, he was like a newly born baby. Allah the Glorified and Exalted caused a creeping plant (shajarat al-yaqtin) to grow for him: 'and caused a creeping plant to grow over him [out of the barren soil].' (as-Saffat: 146) This is a plant with broad leaves which the scholars identify as being a pumpkin (Al-qar'). It covered and sheltered him, protecting him from flies and insects, for he had come out surrounded by substances from the fish's stomach which made him all sticky, impeding his skin from breathing and impeding his health. This is why when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was asked about shajarat al-yaqtin,(1) he said, 'It is the plant of my brother Yunus (Jonah).'(2)

---

(1) Any plant that does not stand on a trunk, such as the gourd, the melon or the colocynth is called yaqtin by Arabs [Ibn Jarir At-Tabari in his exegesis of this verse, vol. 22]. Az-Zujaj said, 'The derivation of the word Al-yaqtin is from the word qutun by virtue of place, which means it grows there and is thus on the pattern of yaf'il. It is also said that it is a foreign word. [Fath Al-Qadir, vol. 6 by Ash-Shawkani in his exegesis of verse 136 of the chapter of as-Saffat].

(2) Ibn Hajar said in Fath Al-Bari in the chapter Kitab Al-At'ima, Hadith 5064 that Muslim related this Hadith with the following wording, 'and he used to like pumpkin'.=

The pronoun ‘him’ in the words ‘alaih over him refers to Prophet Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him and means that this plant grew after the fish had thrown him onto the land and was not present there before that.

So, the fish swallowing Prophet Yunus (Jonah) was a Mercy from Allah to him, compared to him being lost in the vast sea, thrown about by waves, along with no one knowing what had become of him. As for the fish, it had a will of its own, could keep him safe, and cast him out onto the land. Thus, this series of events was a Mercy from Allah the Glorified and Exalted to Prophet Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him.

Then Allah the Glorified and Exalted says, ‘And [then] We sent him [once again] to [his people,] a hundred thousand [souls] or more, and [this time] they believed [in him]–and so We allowed them to enjoy their life during the time allotted to them’ (as-Saffat: 147-148). It is as though Allah the Almighty is telling us, ‘Beware of thinking that what happened with Yunus (Jonah) detracted from his Message or made us change our mind about him as a messenger, for he was sent to ‘… a hundred thousand [souls] or more’ (as-Saffat: 147). The words ‘a hundred thousand' in this verse could be a broad expression meaning a huge number since during times gone by one thousand was the largest number that people knew.

When, after she fell captive, the Muslims wanted to ransom the daughter of Khosrau,(1) Azin; they offered the one into whose lot she had fallen so many thousands, and he agreed. His companions asked him after the deal was done, ‘Why did you not ask for more than that? They could have paid a huge sum for her.’ He replied, ‘By Allah, if I knew of a number greater than a thousand, I would have said it.’

As for Allah’s saying, ‘… or more’ (as-Saffat: 147), are we to infer that the Allah the Glorified and Exalted did not know the exact number of people there?

= An-Nasa’i related it as follows, ‘He used to like pumpkin and would say, “Indeed, it is the plant of my brother Yunus (Jonah).”' Ibn Juzay said, ‘He chose to mention the pumpkin because it has large leaves and cool shade, and flies do not go near it. Yunus' (Jonah’s) skin was in such a state when he came out of the sea that it could not tolerate flies. This was part of Allah’s gentleness and His plan.’

(1) The story of paying the ransom for the daughter of Khosrau

No, of course He knew it, and had He wished, He would have stated it precisely, but His saying, '… or more' (as-Saffat: 147) is not to indicate an increase as such; rather, it is to confirm the number of the preceding one hundred thousand. It is like the one who says, 'I gave so-and-so his due and more.' He is not talking so much about the increase as he is confirming the base number, and that it was not deficient. This is because the number 'a thousand' can be used to refer to a number that is nearly a thousand, like nine hundred and ninety-nine. Thus, to reiterate, the increase in this verse is a confirmation of the full number.

Then, Allah the Glorified and Exalted says: 'and [this time] they believed [in him], and so We allowed them to enjoy their life during the time allotted to them' (as-Saffat: 148). As long as any form of enjoyment is restricted in time, in Allah's eyes, it ends, for it is but the pleasure of this world. When the enjoyment of this world ends for a believer, however, he moves on to that which is better than it. Thus, one should not say, 'Allah ends the believer's pleasure' because the end of the pleasure of this world takes him to the delights of the next world. One's enjoyment in this world is limited to the length of his life in it as well as his abilities and opportunities. As for the delights of the Afterlife, they are ongoing and are granted in accordance with the abilities of the Bestower. This particular one is taken straight from the pleasures of this world to the delights of the next is pure munificence. Thus, Allah's saying, '…during the time allotted to them' (as-Saffat: 148), is to be understood as a kindness from Him.

After this Allah the Glorified and Exalted moves on to another matter.

فَٱسۡتَفۡتِهِمۡ أَلِرَبِّكَ ٱلۡبَنَاتُ وَلَهُمُ ٱلۡبَنُونَ ﴿١٤٩﴾ أَمۡ خَلَقۡنَا ٱلۡمَلَٰٓئِكَةَ إِنَٰثٗا وَهُمۡ
شَٰهِدُونَ ﴿١٥٠﴾ أَلَآ إِنَّهُم مِّنۡ إِفۡكِهِمۡ لَيَقُولُونَ ﴿١٥١﴾ وَلَدَ ٱللَّهُ وَإِنَّهُمۡ لَكَٰذِبُونَ ﴿١٥٢﴾

Now [Muhammad], ask the disbelievers: is it true that your Lord has daughters, while they choose sons for themselves? [149] Did We create the angels as females while they were watching? [150] No indeed! It is one of their lies when they say [151] 'God has begotten.' How they lie! [152]
(The Quran, as-Saffat: 149 - 152)

In Allah's saying, 'And now ask them to enlighten you (fa 'staftihim) …' (as-Saffat: 149), the word istafta means to seek an opinion like the word futya. The word Al-futya literally means ‘the limit of strength’, and from this are derived the words Al-fata (a youth) and Al-futuwwa (chivalry). The word istafta means to seek that which will strengthen one’s ability to have an opinion (fatwa). If someone does not know the religious ruling in a particular case, he asks about it and seeks a fatwa, i.e. having been weak in an area of the religion, he seeks to become strong in that matter. Other examples of words derived from this root can be seen in Allah’s saying: ‘Said some [of them]: "We heard a youth (fata) speak of these [gods with scorn]. He is called Ibrahim (Abraham)."’ (al-Anbiya’: 60) Also, regarding the people of the cave, He says, ‘... Behold, they were young men (fitya) who had adhered to faith in their Sustainer ...’ (al-Kahf: 13) which means that they were not old men. It is remarkable that they should have full faith in the prime and vigour of their youth, for this is a time when strong desires and passions are to be expected. This is why it is narrated in a Hadith, ‘Your Lord wonders at the youth who has no passion.’

Allah the Almighty has clarified for us in standards by which we judge societies that there are twelve types of people: six of them are beloved, and six are hateful, and we seek refuge with Allah the Glorified and Exalted. Of the beloved are those who are loved and those who are loved more, and amongst the hateful are those who are hated and those who are hated more. Allah the Glorified and Exalted says in a Qudsi Hadith, 'I love three, and My love for three is greater: I love the obedient old man, yet my love for the obedient young man is greater; I love the generous rich man, yet my love for the generous poor man is greater; I love the humble poor man, yet my love for the humble rich man is greater.' These six types are those beloved to Allah, and you can deduce from their opposites those who are those hated by Allah, and we seek refuge with Him.

So, the obedient young man is more beloved to Allah the Glorified and Exalted because he has lustful urges, along with their excuses and their vigour, but he nevertheless conquers them and treads a path of piety. This is opposed to the old man whose lusts have passed away, and his urges have weakened. The generous rich man and the humble poor man are similar to this. These three types represent the pinnacle of progress in a society, and the pinnacle of Allah’s vicegerency on earth. Imagine a society where the youth are obedient, the poor are generous and the rich are humble! The next level down is a society where the old men are obedient, and the rich are humble and generous. The next level down is a society that is hateful to Allah, and with Him we seek refuge.

So, 'And now ask them to enlighten you (fa 'staftihim)…' (as-Saffat: 149), means, 'Ask them for their opinion, for it will strengthen your argument.' This is why we say to the Mufti whom the people like to take fatwa from, 'The people want you to strengthen them with your opinion, so do not take them down the easy road, since, by doing so, you will encourage them to take dispensations, and by that you will not strengthen them but weaken them. Rather give them the correct ruling, for in that they will find true strength.'

Why does Allah the Exalted tell Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to seek the opinion of his people? The scholars say that it is because when a matter is ever so clear to a speaker, he says to himself, 'I need not judge this matter. Rather, I will let my opponent judge.' Why is this? Since he is certain that, if his opponent thinks about the matter, he will find that there is only one answer. It is like when someone denies some good, you have done for them and you say to them, 'I'll settle for your judgement. Tell me, did I not stand by your side on such-and-such a day?' Thus, you frame the issue as a question because you know the answer he must give. If, however, you just state the matter plainly, it can be accepted or denied.

This is why Allah the Glorified and Exalted used a question in His argument of this case: 'And now ask them to enlighten you. Has your Sustainer daughters, whereas they would have [only] sons?' (as-Saffat: 149) This is an incredulous question, i.e. 'How could you say this?' Because they said that the angels are Allah's daughters, and then they said that Allah the Glorified and Exalted has a son. How could this be since when one of them is given the good news of a daughter, his face turns dark and his is angry, and he retreats from people because of the bad news he has been given? Then, he thinks, 'avoiding all the people because of the [alleged] evil of the glad tiding which he has received. [And debating within himself:] Shall he keep this [child] despite the disgrace (Al-hun) [which he feels over it], or shall he bury it in the dust? O, evil indeed is whatever they decide!' (an-Nahl: 59)

Allah's saying, '... shall he bury it in the dust ...' (an-Nahl: 59) refers to one being alive since the emotions of parenthood mean that a parent cannot bear to strangle his child with his own hands or to see it die. This is why they would get rid of them by burying them in the ground so they could not see them.

In another place Allah the Exalted says, 'Yet, [as to themselves] when one of them is given the news [of the birth of a female child], the like of which [sex] he ascribes to the Most Gracious [Allah], his face becomes gloomy, and he is choked with inward grief. [Is he your god] who is brought up in the midst of ornaments and who is unable to make a clear expression [to an argument] and a plain speech in disputation [and discussions].' (az-Zukhruf: 17-18) This means that: do you ascribe to Allah the Almighty those who are raised in luxury and adornment, namely daughters, yet you would take sons for yourselves who can work, strive, and bear hardship? This is why Allah judged this matter to be an outrageous and unfair distribution. Allah the Glorified and Exalted says, 'Why for yourselves [you would choose only] male offspring, whereas to Him [you assign] female. That, lo and behold, is an unfair division (qisma diza)!' (an-Najm: 21-22) Let us look at this word (diza) unfair in this verse. By Allah, had it come in other than the Quran, it would have been heavy on the tongue and unpalatable, yet in its context in Allah's speech it is natural and fluid. Why is this so? Thus it is so because it has been put there to express this astonishing and unjust judgement, something that could only be properly articulated by means of this strange word which rings like a bell in one's ear.

Then Allah the Glorified and Exalted says, 'Or is it that We have created the angels female, and they [who believe them to be divine] have witnessed [that act of creation]?' (as-Saffat: 150) So, you are wrong. Indeed, in both cases, this is the most idiotic folly. The first is that you say the angels are female, and the second is that you desire males for yourselves, leaving Allah with daughters. Who was it who told you that the angels were female? Sons and daughters only come from marriage and procreation, but angels do not get married nor do they procreate or be described as male or female.

Moreover, whoever wishes to say that angels are female should have knowledge of their creation. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And [yet] they claim that the angels, who in themselves are but beings created by the Most Gracious, are females. [But] did they witness their creation? This false claim of theirs will be recorded, and they will be called to account [for it on Judgment Day]!' (az-Zukhruf: 19) He also says in the chapter of al-Kahf: 'I did not make them witnesses of the creation of the heavens and the earth, nor of the creation of their own selves, and neither do I [have any need to] take as My helpers those [beings] that lead [men] astray.' (al-Kahf: 51) It is Allah Who is informing us of this reality. '... And neither do I [have any need to] take as My helpers those [beings] that lead [men] astray.' (al-Kahf: 51) This is referring to 'assistants' in the process of creation, and this exposes those who want to come and talk about creation as if they witnessed it, saying that the angels are female, that men are descended from primates and all their other assertions.

Allah Glorified is He warns us of them to give us a natural immunity to their views. It is sufficient for us to know that this matter is from the unseen, and they can have no knowledge of it, except that which comes from the Creator. Nevertheless, He the Almighty has put signs in the universe that clarify the truth of the events we did not witness.

Allah the Exalted negates their prattle with His saying: 'And in everything have We created opposites, so that you might bear in mind [that Allah alone is one].' (adh-Dhariyat: 49) Each species stands on its own, and nothing evolves from anything else. Allah the Glorified and Exalted also says, 'Limitless in His Glory is He Who has created opposites ...' (Ya Sin: 36).

As for angels, they have a special constitution to which duality is inappropriate; they are neither male nor female, and they do not eat, drink, or sleep, etc. If someone thinks that this is irrational then just put it with the other things which we believe in of the unseen that are irrational and we have been informed of by our Lord. These unseen matters of which Allah has informed us are evidence of our faith in the One Who informed us of them.

Then Allah the Glorified and Exalted moves to another case by saying: 'O, verily, it is out of their own [inclination to] falsehood that some people assert, "Allah has begotten [a son]", and verily, they are lying [too, when they say]' (as-Saffat: 151-152). So, their insolence towards Allah the Almighty does not stop at them describing the angels as female, nor at their ascribing daughters to Allah the Glorified and Exalted but they go on to insult Him by saying, 'Allah has begotten [a son] …' (as-Saffat: 152). It is though Allah Glorified is He is loosening the reins on these arrogant people and giving them space until He says something that will expose their lies. Since they say, '... Allah has taken unto Himself a son ...' (al-Baqara: 116) and yet now they say, 'Allah has begotten a son'; there is a big difference between these two statements. 'Allah has begotten a son' attributes a child directly to Allah the Glorified and Exalted whereas, 'Allah has taken into Himself a son' means that He did not give birth, but He adopted a son. He did not have a child, and then He took one. Allah the Exalted refutes their saying, 'Allah has begotten a son' in His statement: 'Say: He is the One God. God, the Eternal, the Uncaused Cause of All Who Exists. He begets not, and neither is He begotten, and there is nothing that could be compared with Him' (al-Ikhlas: 1-4). Furthermore, He refutes their saying, '... Allah has taken unto Himself a son ...' (al-Baqara: 116), when He says, '... no consort has He ever taken unto Himself, nor a son!' (al-Jinn: 3)

Let us look at this matter of adopting children in view of our own reality. Why do people want or strive for a son? Why are we sad when we fail to produce offspring and anxious when the child is late? The scholars say it is because a child is an extension of his father and his posterity. This is why a man rejoices at his son. He rejoices even more at his grandson because while the son guarantees his posterity for another generation, his grandson guarantees it for two. What a strange place the world is! How we wrangle over it and cling on to it, even just to be remembered. If the world does not last for you, then how will you benefit from other peoples' worldly matters?

The poet Shawqi may Allah have mercy on him spoke of this issue when he had a grandson and rejoicing in the matter, said,

Guarantee for yourself after death your memory,
For to be recalled is another life for man

There can be no doubt that Shawqi does not intend a son by 'memory', rather, he means righteous works and a beneficial influence that immortalise the remembrance of the one who performs them.

So, a man needs a son because when he dies, his son will carry his name and memory. As for Allah the Exalted He is everlasting, undying. 'Abd Al-Muttalib found that none of his sons were surviving, so he pledged to Allah that if He gave him some sons he would sacrifice one of them to Him as an offering. Men need children so that they can have descendants. There are some who say, ‘If I die, who will mourn over me?’ Glory be to Allah! All you have guaranteed is that you will be mourned and that your son after you will be mourned; it is just one dying after another.

Yes, indeed, these are the reasons why we need sons and why we strive for them. As for Allah the Almighty though, He is Ever living and never dies, so how would a son benefit Him, and why would He adopt one when the dominion of the heavens and the earth belong to Him?

This is why Allah the Glorified and Exalted replies to them, ‘Had Allah willed to take unto Himself a son, He could have chosen anyone that He wanted out of whatever He has created ...’ (az-Zumar: 4). Had He so willed, He would have elected whoever He wanted; He would choose, not you. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him however was decorous in his worship of his Lord, and this is why he said, ‘Say [O, Prophet]: "If the Most Gracious [truly] had a son, I would be the first to worship him!"’ (az-Zukhruf: 81) This means that if the Most Merciful were to have a son, and He informed us of such, then I (Prophet Muhammad) would be the first to believe in him.

In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says as an answer to them: ‘Although it is inconceivable that the Most Gracious should take unto Himself a son!’ (Maryam: 92) So Allah the Most High has not adopted a son. It is not appropriate for Him to do so, and it never will be. There can be no concept of parenthood or childhood in relation to Him. He is everlasting and never dies such that He would need a son to perpetuate His memory. He is free of all need of His creation, and the heavens and the earth belong to Him. All people are His created beings and His dependants; He does not need descendants as you do.

Allah the Glorified and Exalted says, ‘... no consort has He ever taken unto Himself, nor a son!’ (al-Jinn: 3) This means that He has no spouse such that He could have children. So these are all fabrications and lies against Allah the Glorified and Exalted which is why He ascribed falsehood to them, and then lies in an emphatic form in His saying: ‘O, verily, it is out of their own [inclination to] falsehood that some people assert, "Allah has begotten [a son]", and verily, they are lying' (as-Saffat: 151-152).

However, why is one described as falsehood and the other as lying? The scholars say it was to preserve the temporary authority that they had before Islam for themselves, the temporary authority that gave them leadership and grandeur. It is well known that the Jews in Medina had a considerable status when it came to money, knowledge and war and that they awaited victory over the disbelievers through Prophet Muhammad, but '... whenever there came unto them something which they recognised [as the truth], they would deny it...' (al-Baqara: 89). Why was that so? That was due to them realising that he would take away their authority.

Allah the Exalted named their lies (ifk) falsehood because this word refers to intentional one. Inventing lies intentionally is called ifk because it is an inversion of reality. Similarly, Al-Mu'tafika was a village that Allah the Glorified and Exalted turned upside down, along with its inhabitants, and on account of this it was given this name.

Intentionally lying inverts reality because if a man states a case, this case is said to be a linguistic association. If this is preceded by an actual association that agrees with a certain given speech, then the speech is true. If its relationship to the speech is non-existent, then it is a lie. Lies come in degrees. The biggest and worst of them are falsehoods told of Allah the Glorified and Exalted in matters that are unambiguous, or in the basic tenets of belief in Him. Telling lies in this case is no small matter; it is not like telling a lie about a few pounds, for example; rather, lies in this field are at the very pinnacle of belief.

'O, verily, it is out of their own [inclination to] falsehood that some people assert Allah has begotten [a son]' (as-Saffat: 152). So they actually attributed a son directly to Allah the Glorified and Exalted not just the adoption of a son. This is why He judges them by saying: '… and, verily, they are lying [too, when they say]' (as-Saffat: 151-152). Yet, this is a statement, and while there is no doubt that a statement from Allah the Most High is truthful, intellectually a statement is open to confirmation or denial. For this reason Allah Glorified is He grasps them with another rhetorical device from which they will find no escape. He confirms His speech in the minds of the reciters and those listening and forces them to admit it. He says,

أَصْطَفَى ٱلْبَنَاتِ عَلَى ٱلْبَنِينَ ﴿١٥٣﴾ مَا لَكُمْ كَيْفَ تَحْكُمُونَ ﴿١٥٤﴾ أَفَلَا تَذَكَّرُونَ ﴿١٥٥﴾

Did He truly choose daughters in preference to sons? [153]
What is the matter with you? How do you form your judgment? [154] Do you not reflect? [155]
(The Quran, as-Saffat: 153 - 155)

The letter hamza at the beginning of the verb 'He has chosen (astafa)...' (as-Saffat: 153) is the one that makes a sentence into a question (hamzat al-istifham). This is an incredulous question because Allah Glorified is He is the Creator of sons and daughters. Why would He choose the weaker of the two sexes when He created them both?

These claims are rationally unacceptable and the case is clear. This is why Allah the Almighty then poses another two questions in wonder at their speech, 'What is amiss with you and your judgment? Will you not then take heed? (as-Saffat: 154-155) In other words, why not use your intellects? The case is clear-cut. We have already outlined how Allah the Exalted instead of using a statement, asks them questions so that they might provide the answers themselves by way of confirmation, and confirmation is the master of proofs, as they say. A statement, however, can be either believed or denied on an intellectual level. Thus, this is rational evidence that voids their claims. The problem is that minds may differ about rational evidence. This is why Allah now takes us to evidence from revelation. Perhaps, they have a Book they study that clarifies this issue:

أَمْ لَكُمْ سُلْطَٰنٌ مُّبِينٌ ﴿١٥٦﴾ فَأْتُوا۟ بِكِتَٰبِكُمْ إِن كُنتُمْ صَٰدِقِينَ ﴿١٥٧﴾

Do you perhaps have clear authority? [156]
Bring your scriptures, if you are telling the truth [157]
(The Quran, as-Saffat: 156 - 157)

Having refuted their claims with rational evidence, Allah the Most High now refutes them with proof relating to revelation. The word sultan (evidence) in this verse could mean either an authoritative proof or authority in terms of power and strength. The difference between the two is that the former convinces an opponent, and he yields willingly. As for the latter, he is forced and yields against his will. Thus, the meaning is that they have no authority, neither proof nor power. Similar to this is Allah's saying, quoting Satan (Iblis) on the Day of Judgement, '...Yet, I had no power (sultan) at all over you. I but called you, and you responded to me...' (Ibrahim: 22); in other words, I (Satan) could not to force you to obey me, nor did I have any proof to convince you with; rather, you already had an inclination to misguidance and disobedience.

Allah's saying, 'Produce, then, that divine writ of yours, if you are speaking the truth!' (as-Saffat: 157) means that if you have some authority for what you say, then bring your Book, namely, one which has been revealed to you by Allah that informs you of these things.

وَجَعَلُواْ بَيْنَهُۥ وَبَيْنَ ٱلْجِنَّةِ نَسَبًا ۚ وَلَقَدْ عَلِمَتِ ٱلْجِنَّةُ إِنَّهُمْ لَمُحْضَرُونَ ﴿١٥٨﴾
سُبْحَٰنَ ٱللَّهِ عَمَّا يَصِفُونَ ﴿١٥٩﴾

They claim that He has kinship with the jinn, yet the jinn them- selves know that they will be brought before Him [158]
God is far above what they attribute to Him [159]
(The Quran, as-Saffat: 158 - 159)

The word Al-jinna (hidden forces) has a kasra on the letter jim. The word Al-janna is similar to this but has a fatha on the jim. These words, along with the words jinn and majnun, are all derived from the root jann, which means to be hidden. The 'hidden forces' referred to in this verse are the angels and are so named because they are hidden from our sight. Similarly the word Al-janna (garden) is named thus because its plants and trees hide the one who enters it. Alternatively, it could be said to be because it protects the one who enters it by providing for all his needs, such that he does not need to leave it for anything. The majnun (insane person) is so named because his intellect is obscured.

The meaning in this verse is that they asserted a relationship between Allah the Almighty and the angels when they said angels were Allah's daughters: '…although [even] these invisible forces know well that, verily, they [who thus blaspheme against Allah] shall indeed be arraigned…' (as-Saffat: 158); what this means is that angels know that polytheists will be summoned to punishment.

Then, Allah Glorified is He replies to them, declaring His transcendence above resembling His creation by saying, ‘Limitless is Allah in His Glory, above anything that men may devise by way of definition!’ (as-Saffat: 159) The phrase, subhan Allah (limitless is Allah in His Glory) is something we think of all the time regarding anything that might lead us to imagine that Allah the Glorified and Exalted resembles His creation. Allah’s transcendence is something that was present before there was anyone to declare it. The word subhan refers to the absolute transcendence of Allah, before He created anyone to declare such. Then when He created the creation, it glorified Him. Allah the Glorified and Exalted says, ‘All that is in the heavens and all that is on earth extols Allah’s limitless Glory, for He alone is Almighty, Truly Wise.’ (al-Hashr: 1) and ‘All that is in the heavens and all that is on earth extols Allah’s limitless Glory...’ (at-Taghabun: 1); in other words, they are constantly glorifying Him in the present and into the future until the Day of Judgment, and so long as this transcendence of Allah the Almighty is affirmed before creation and after it, on a continual basis from the past, in the present and into the future, then be warned, O, most noble of created beings, for whom the whole creation was made, against not also being of those who glorify Him or of deviating from this harmonious creation in its glorification: ‘Extol the limitless Glory of your Sustainer’s name, [the glory of] the All-Highest’ (al-A‘la: 1). Thus, the meaning of ‘Limitless is Allah in His Glory, above anything that men may devise by way of definition!’ (as-Saffat: 159) is that Allah the Glorified and Exalted is transcendent above the lies and assertions of these polytheists and that He is transcendent above having any kind of relationship with the angels.

إِلَّا عِبَادَ ٱللَّهِ ٱلْمُخْلَصِينَ ١٦٠ فَإِنَّكُمْ وَمَا تَعْبُدُونَ ١٦١
مَآ أَنتُمْ عَلَيْهِ بِفَٰتِنِينَ ١٦٢ إِلَّا مَنْ هُوَ صَالِ ٱلْجَحِيمِ ١٦٣

The true servants of God do not do such things [160] and neither you nor what you worship [161] can lure away from God any [162] except those who will burn in Hell [163]
(The Quran, as-Saffat: 160 - 163)

The exception in Allah’s saying, ‘Not thus, however, [behave] Allah’s true servants’ (as-Saffat: 160) is from those mentioned in His saying: ‘…verily, they [who thus blaspheme against Allah] shall indeed be arraigned…' (as-Saffat: 158). Allah the Exalted has exempted His true servants from being associated with those who are summoned for punishment. Allah Glorified is He then says, 'for verily, neither you [blasphemers] nor the objects of your worship' (as-Saffat: 161); this means that those other than Allah 'can cause anyone to fall prey to your temptation' (as-Saffat: 162). Furthermore, neither you nor the deities you worship in place of Me can seduce any of My creation away from Me; you cannot pervert Allah's creation. It is said, 'So-and-so seduced so-and-so's wife', which means he corrupted her. Thus, the meaning of the verse is that you are unable to corrupt the state of affairs between Myself and My angels.

How could it be otherwise when angels were only created so that they might love and worship Me? 'They extol His limitless Glory by night and by day, never flagging [therein].' (al-Anbiya': 20) How could you corrupt them when they are free of you and your worship of them and when they in fact curse you? How could you possibly seduce them away from Allah the Glorified and Exalted ?

In another verse, Allah Glorified is He refutes their arguments by saying: 'Those whom they call upon [apart from Him, thinking them to be a means of gaining nearness to Allah] themselves seek nearness to their Lord and solicit His favour (even) those of them who are nearest [to Allah are still competing to be closer to Him] and hope for His mercy ….' (al-Isra': 57) This verse indicates that those whom they worship besides Allah the Almighty desire for themselves to get closer to Him. In another verse, Allah Glorified is He orders Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to say: 'If there were with Him gods as they say, then certainly they would have been able to seek a way to the Lord of power.' (al-Isra': 42)

You cannot, then, seduce those whom you worship away from their Lord because they are sincere in their worship of Him and compete with one another to get closer to Him.

Allah's saying: 'unless it be such as rushes towards the blazing fire [of his own accord]!' (as-Saffat: 163) means that they can only seduce those of mankind who are content with their worship and who will, therefore, end in hellfire. To reproach idol worshippers, Allah the Exalted informs them that they will not be punished in the hellfire except with the very stones they used to worship, which they will find with them in it. It may be asked, ‘What is wrong with such stones that they worshipped to be brought with them in the Hellfire?' In response, Allah Glorified is He states in the following verses:

وَمَا مِنَّآ إِلَّا لَهُۥ مَقَامٌ مَّعْلُومٌ ﴿١٦٤﴾ وَإِنَّا لَنَحْنُ ٱلصَّآفُّونَ ﴿١٦٥﴾ وَإِنَّا لَنَحْنُ ٱلْمُسَبِّحُونَ ﴿١٦٦﴾

[The angels say], ‘Every single one of us has his appointed place [164] we are ranged in ranks [165] We glorify God [166]
(The Quran*, as-Saffat:* 164 - 166)

When such stones are heated up to be used as a punishment for polytheists, they are not treated as such as a punishment for a misdeed they did, but due to that being their assigned place and they execute Allah’s Commandments against these rebels: 'And there is none of us but has an assigned place' (as-Saffat: 164). ‘An assigned place’ mentioned in the verse means a rank and a status. The angels are of different ranks and levels; the least of them is not envious of the highest, and the highest have no contempt for the lowest because such places were assigned to them by Allah’s Decree which they revere. This is a lesson for us to learn; that everyone should respect the rank and status of others. Respecting people of senior ranks alludes to the fact of honouring Allah’s Decree Who placed them in a higher position, even if they happened to be once in a lower one. The world, as I mentioned earlier, is not mechanically determined; rather, everything is created according to Allah’s Decree and Wisdom.

It is as though the angels say, ‘How could we be Allah’s daughters? How could we be worshipped besides Allah when we ourselves have been made subservient to His worship? We are His forces, lined up awaiting His orders: ‘and most surely we are they who draw themselves out in ranks’ (as-Saffat: 165); this means that we stand in ordered rows. Standing in rows are an indication of orderliness and an expression of discipline and commitment. To this effect, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was narrated to have said, ‘Indeed, Allah does not look to the crooked row.’(1) This is because you are standing in front of Allah the Almighty and thus, you should show Him proof of your commitment, cohesion, and equality.

(1) It is recommended for the Imam (who leads prayer) to order the rows to be straightened and the gaps to be filled before starting to pray. Anas ibn Malik Allah be pleased with him=
